MS. SAGER: I understand, and the only reason I’m couching it that way is the question, as phrased, is ambiguous. But I’ll object to the question as calling for information that is not published.

THE COURT: All right. I’ll sustain that under the shield law for this hearing.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Have you ever had a discussion with Ronald Konitzer about the possibility of interviewing the Arvizo family?

A. Yes.
Q. When did that discussion take place?
A. It took place the week after the Debbie Rowe interview.
Q. When was the Debbie Rowe interview?
A. I believe, from my recollection, it was March of 2003.
Q. Were you at the Debbie Rowe interview?
A. Yes, I did the Debbie Rowe interview.
Q. Are you the person who asked Debbie Rowe questions in that interview?
A. Yes.
Q. You’ve told the police that interview was not scripted, correct?
MS. SAGER: Your Honor, and I’d again object that this is not published information.
MR. ZONEN: And I would also interject an objection that it exceeds the scope of the direct examination.
THE BAILIFF: You guys have to use the microphone.
MR. ZONEN: I would object that it exceeds the scope of the direct examination.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Was the Debbie Rowe interview scripted?

MS. SAGER: Same --
MR. ZONEN: Objection; exceeds the scope of the direct examination.
MS. SAGER: Also unpublished, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Sustained on both grounds.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Was Ronald Konitzer at the Debbie Rowe interview?
MS. SAGER: Objection, Your Honor. Calls for unpublished information.
THE COURT: Sustained under the shield law.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Now, you said, in response to the prosecutor's questions, that Mr. Konitzer referred to the Arvizo family leaving Neverland Ranch, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And your first response to the prosecutor's question was that Konitzer told you that they had disappeared from Neverland Ranch, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. After being further asked questions by the prosecutor, you said that Konitzer had used the word "escape," right?

A. I said I believed he had used the word "escape." I remembered it.

Q. You didn't use the word "escape" when you first responded to the prosecutor's question about what Mr. Konitzer had said, right?

A. I think I did. I think it was all within the same sentence, from my recollection.

Q. You said "disappear," did you not?

A. That was part of it, too.

Q. Now, how long did your discussion with Konitzer take place on that particular occasion?

MS. SAGER: Objection, Your Honor. Calls for unpublished information.

THE COURT: All right. Sustained under the shield law.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Were other things said by Mr. Konitzer to you on the occasion when you claim he made that statement?

MS. SAGER: Same objection, Your Honor. Calls for unpublished information.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: How long did that discussion last?

MS. SAGER: Same objection, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you say something to Mr. Konitzer in that discussion?

MS. SAGER: And I'll object, Your Honor, to the extent that it calls for information that has not been published. It was one word, I believe, Mr. Drew has published, which I'll let him answer.

THE COURT: All right. Answer the one, the word, following your attorney's instructions.

MS. SAGER: If you recall.

THE WITNESS: I don't. I don't remember.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Where did the discussion take place?

MS. SAGER: Same objection, Your Honor. Calls for unpublished information.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Who else was there with you and Konitzer?

MS. SAGER: Same objection, Your Honor. Also assumes facts not in evidence.

THE COURT: Under the shield law objection, I'll sustain the objection.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Was anyone else there with you and Mr. Konitzer?

MS. SAGER: Calls for unpublished information, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you arrange for the discussion where you claim Mr. Konitzer made that statement?

MS. SAGER: I believe it's vague, Your Honor, but it's information that is published, so I'll let the witness answer, if he recalls.

THE WITNESS: Yes, I was trying to get an interview, so I think I -- I think I made the phone call, because I'm pretty dogged about that usually.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Where were you when you made the phone call?

MS. SAGER: Calls for unpublished information, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you call Konitzer's number?

MS. SAGER: Same objection, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, I believe at this point it's pretty clear I wouldn't be able to cross-examine the witness on any of this; we would be prejudiced. And I believe, under the Delaney case, the witness should be disqualified from testifying. I’m not being allowed to cross-examine on anything regarding the bona fides of what he said and in what context it was said, who was there, where it took place.

And again, I would refer the Court to the holding in the Delaney case. All we have to show is a reasonable possibility the information will materially assist the defense. And the material assistance would be in examining the veracity, the motives, the bias of this witness.

MS. SAGER: And, Your Honor, I believe under the Foss case, that disqualification of the witness is the appropriate measure to take rather than allowing any counsel to get into information that clearly is protected by the shield law, so that even published information should not be presented if then, to allow cross-examination, would delve into constitutionally protected information.

THE COURT: Mr. Drew?

THE WITNESS: Uh-huh.

THE COURT: I’m looking at the testimony you’ve already given. What I want to do is read to you what you said about the -- just that one sentence is all we’re talking about. I want to read to you that sentence, and I want to ask you a couple of questions about why you said that sentence.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

THE COURT: But to do that, I want to read it to you, so I’m going to ask you to listen to this:

The question by Mr. Zonen was, “What specifically did he say with regard to the disappearance of this family? “Would it be helpful if the witness was given a transcript of the television program? We can do that.”

I say something, and then Mr. Zonen says something.

And then Mr. Zonen says, “Well,” as a question mark, and you say, “It’s a simple enough question, I think. I was told that they had disappeared, that they couldn’t keep them there anymore.”

There’s some objections.

And you say, “And I believe the word

‘escaped’ was used. But again, I don’t -- I can’t say word for word. But from the best of my recollection, yes, I heard the word ‘escape.’” First of all, what you’ve already answered, does that accurately reflect your recollection of that conversation?

THE WITNESS: Uh-huh. Yes.

THE COURT: What is your -- if you can answer this, what is the failure of your recollection about the word “escaped”?

THE WITNESS: No, it’s to the best of my recollection. When I was talking to Mr. Konitzer, I was simply trying to get -- I was on a deadline trying to get an article done, so I wasn’t paying attention word for word, knowing that in a trial two years later I would have to remember each part of it. I remember the tone of his conversation more than I remember even the exact words.

THE COURT: Okay. Thanks.

Mr. Mesereau, is there anything in the police reports that you have that you would like to represent to me --

MR. MESEREAU: First of all, Your Honor, as the Court knows, in many of my prior cross-examinations of witnesses, I have asked them when they -- excuse me, if they ever met with any representative of the Santa Barbara Sheriff’s Department; who initiated the meeting; what was said; who said what; did the sheriffs say anything to you about the case?

And the reasons are obvious. We want to establish if, in fact, the prosecution or its agents have tried to infect any witness with information of a specific nature or give them a perspective on the case or try and indoctrinate them in some way. We also want to establish if the witnesses have said anything to the sheriffs which suggests a desire to be involved in this case or a desire to --

THE COURT: I think you didn’t let me finish my question.

MR. MESEREAU: Oh. I’m sorry. Pardon me.

THE COURT: The question I wanted to ask, is there anything in the police reports that he said in the interview with the sheriff's department or any law enforcement people that you want to show me or advise me of? You know, as opposed to the questions that you would ask, any information contained therein that you believe is, you know, material that would --

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, Your Honor. I mean, first of all --

THE COURT: -- materially assist your defense if he were to testify to it?

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, Your Honor. There is the business relationship between this witness and Schaffel and Konitzer, as I would like to establish, is that he had a relationship with them. He was involved in their efforts to make money off of Michael Jackson. The --

THE COURT: That's -- just to be clear now, that's in the police report?

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, Your Honor. He conducted the Debbie Rowe interview. He was working out of Schaffel's residence. He was promised he could interview the Arvizo family. He had a financial interest in working with Schaffel and Konitzer. He then was apparently told, "You're not going to be interviewing the Arvizo family because they left Neverland."

And then the question is, what kind of relationship did he continue to have with them? What money did he expect to make? Who was supposed to pay him for doing all of this? Did he think he was going to be involved in the FOX contract? He did tell the sheriffs that he saw, in fact, a FOX contract at Schaffel's residence during the approximately three-week period of time that he worked out of Mr. Schaffel's residence.

And the question would be, why did he look at the contract? How did he know it said $7.5 million from FOX? What interest did he think he had? Has he had a falling-out with Konitzer? When did he last talk to any of these people?

He did not obtain this so-called quote in isolation, and he didn't obtain it in a casual, unexpected occurrence or meeting. He obtained it, if he did, within the context of an ongoing business relationship with Konitzer and Schaffel, who the prosecution allege are unindicted co-conspirators. And the motives for coming forward and making this allegation on T.V. and in court are fertile ground for cross-examination where the scope of cross-examination is very broad to show any type of financial motive, financial bias, or a bias to say anything that hurts his former co-business partners, which in fact they were. So we would be severely hamstrung if we could not go into these relationships and these motivations.

Now, he told the police that when he interviewed Debbie Rowe, he was working out of Schaffel's residence for approximately three weeks. He said that during that period of time, he saw the FOX contract. He just told the Court that when he got this information from Konitzer, he had a deadline. How did that deadline relate to why he was talking to Konitzer to begin with? What project were they still involved in, if any?

And clearly his police interview, which was conducted by him, as I said before, on a voluntary basis, talks about how he met these characters, how he stayed in contact with them, where he called them from, how the interview with the Arvizos he thought he was going to do related to the interview with Debbie Rowe. It's all part of the same package.

And, Your Honor, there are tapes where he and Debbie Rowe complain about Schaffel and Konitzer. There is the issue of his falling-out with them. It's all interconnected.

THE COURT: Okay. Do you want to be heard, Mr. Zonen?

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, the police report in this matter is four pages of text, and I think it would be appropriate for the Court to review it, and I would invite the Court to review it to make the determination as to whether -- would you like me at the podium?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. ZONEN: The Court specifically made the inquiry as to whether or not there’s information contained in the police report as might justify extensive cross-examination of this witness with regards to information given by the witness to detectives in the course of that interview.

Rather than debate what is and what isn’t, it’s a very brief report. It’s only four pages of large script. And I would ask that the Court read it to make a determination as to whether or not that would assist the Court in its judgment.

Once again, the prosecution is offering one sentence in this case. It’s a conversation that took place between this witness and another person, one of the unindicted co-conspirators, to the extent this that person said to this witness, “They’ve left,” and the words of how they left. It’s effectively one or two sentences.

I do not believe that that warrants and justifies extensive cross-examination on the relationships and interrelationships between each of the five unindicted co-conspirators and this witness and any of the co-conspirators among themselves at any point in history. I also don’t believe it justifies an examination into his involvement in the interview with Debbie Rowe, which was an entirely separate interview and separate people involved.

As to the question of what he can be cross-examined on in the course of the interview with the -- the “interview” -- the two-sentence conversation with Mr. Konitzer, I think that he can be cross-examined on information that would shed light on what was going on at that time and the accuracy of that statement, and it is a statement that is relatively noncontroversial. It is not the type of thing that a thorough examination of the relationships of these parties would necessarily disprove or as to motivation.

And so I believe that until the defense satisfies the burden, which they have, for the purposes of showing that there is information out there, and they’re not simply on a fishing expedition, but that there is concrete information that would somehow show that this statement was never made, or, if it was made, had a different meaning, or in fact was a statement that's entirely different from what it was as it's represented by this witness, and I believe that they can do that within the limitations of the Court and within the limitations imposed by the shield law.

I have the report to turn over to the Court, if that's permissible.

MR. MESEREAU: If I may, Your Honor, there are other reports as well. There's a number of pretext phone calls where he discusses the same issues identified in that police interview.

I suspect Miss Sager is going to say they're privileged, but they do relate to the same facts. They give us a good-faith basis, in addition to what I just told the Court, to inquire into his relationship with Konitzer and Schaffel, and what his expectations were, what happened to the money he thought he was going to get, et cetera.

I think the Court would have to look at those as well. There aren't that many of them and I have them with me. I also have transcripts of those pretext phone calls.

THE COURT: And do both of you agree and stipulate that I can review those reports in conjunction with reaching a decision on this?

MR. ZONEN: Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Would you provide those to me?

MR. MESEREAU: Yes.

MS. SAGER: Your Honor, we have not been provided with those reports, and for purposes of arguing this motion, it would greatly assist me, if the Court is going to consider them, if we also were allowed to review them.

THE COURT: Certainly.

MR. ZONEN: I will do so.

THE COURT: You can step down. There's no sense in sitting there while we're trying to figure this out.

MR. ZONEN: How clean are your copies?

MR. MESEREAU: They're pretty clean.

MR. ZONEN: Do you just have yellow highlights?

MR. MESEREAU: Yeah, but also -- there are transcripts as well.

MR. ZONEN: You don't have material written into them?

MR. MESEREAU: Not really, no.

MR. ZONEN: Okay.

MR. MESEREAU: It may take a moment. I'm just trying to staple these reports together, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

I think what I'd like to do, Lieutenant, would it work all right, when I take these back to read, if I declare a recess? And then you can -- so these folks don't have to sit in here? Is that all right? And then we can bring them back in. It looks like I'm going to be a few minutes reading.

LIEUTENANT McKINNY: That's fine, Your Honor.

THE COURT: That would give them five minutes' notice to bring them back into the courtroom, or let them, excuse me, back in the courtroom.

MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, I might add that this witness's name comes up in other reports dealing with interviews with other individuals and investigations into other individuals. Information regarding this witness was seized at Schaffel's house, for example.

So I don't want to suggest that the scope of examination or the good-faith basis for questions about his relationship with these people are purely based on what I'm giving you. There's other stuff, too.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MESEREAU: May I approach?

THE COURT: Yes.

All right. Then we'll take this recess.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: Counsel, would you like to retrieve the police reports?

THE BAILIFF: I can get them.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. The Court is going to make the following order: That the Court finds that the probative value of the statement offered by Mr. Drew is questionable; that if the statement was introduced into evidence, the statement might lend itself to proving somewhat the conspiracy, but the only value I see of the statement -- the only evidentiary value of the statement would be to prove Konitzer’s state of mind, which is not Mr. Jackson’s state of mind, and may very well not be appropriate to admit under any circumstances. Because even though it’s a co-conspirator’s state of mind, it would be unlikely helpful in proving Mr. Jackson’s involvement. It wouldn’t prove his involvement.

In addition to that, there is some real vagueness in the statement as recalled by the witness, since he does not recall exactly what was said, but more the sense of what was said, and isn’t sure where the word “escaped” fit in.

Considering these items, in balancing under Delaney, the Court does not believe that the shield law is overcome in this case. The shield law then remains in effect.

That effectively bars the defense from cross-examination on the statement which I’ve already determined to have some questionable value. Therefore, the Court finds the only appropriate remedy is to deny the People’s request to admit the statement.

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, we have no further witnesses for the day.

THE COURT: What I would like to do is excuse the jury. There’s two ways to do that. Probably the cruelest way would be to --

MR. ZONEN: Send the bailiff in there?

THE COURT: -- file them in here and then tell them. In fact, I don’t think I could face them.

(Laughter.)

THE COURT: No, I better face them, though.

Let's bring them in.

MS. SAGER: Your Honor, is Mr. Drew excused?

THE COURT: I'll be a man about this.

Yes. You're excused.

MS. SAGER: Thank you.

THE COURT: It's my custom to not be on the bench when the jury comes in, so I think I'll leave.

(The following proceedings were held in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: Good afternoon.

THE JURY: (In unison) Good afternoon.

THE COURT: (To counsel) You tell them.

(Laughter.)

THE COURT: Because of rulings that I've made today, we have no further witnesses.

I am advised by the District Attorney that they have two days left in their case, Monday and Tuesday, and they will be full days, without delays.

So I apologize for keeping you here all day today like this. I didn't anticipate, of course, the length of time that was going to be involved, and I tried very hard not to do that to you.

I know how crummy it is to sit back there and not have anything to do and not know what's going on, and it's just one of my things I just don't do. And we have gone through a lot of days without doing that to you, so I'll try to get through a lot more before it happens again.

So I'll see you next week.

Court's in recess.

(The proceedings adjourned at 1:25 p.m.)

THE COURT: Good morning, everyone.
THE JURY: (In unison) Good morning.
THE COURT: Call your next witness.
MR. SNEDDON: Good morning, Your Honor. Before we get started this morning, we have some records that we want to move into evidence. I've discussed it with Mr. Sanger.

And the first set of records involves the documents that have been marked as Exhibits 200 through 218 for identification. We have the custodian of records certification from the Turnberry Inn, and we would move at this time that the documents 200 through 218 be admitted into evidence as business records and duly certified.

MR. SANGER: No objection.

THE COURT: They're admitted, 200 through 218.

MR. SNEDDON: In addition to that, Your Honor, we would be moving that the records that are No. 255 through 258, which again bear the custodian's certification from the Beverly Hilton Hotel, be admitted into evidence as Items 255 through 258.

MR. SANGER: No objection.

THE COURT: They're admitted.

MR. SNEDDON: And then one other item of business, Your Honor, that we will complete at the break, but I wanted to bring to the Court's attention, we have some records that have been produced pursuant to a subpoena duces tecum from the Calabasas Inn & Country Suites, which are documents 219 through 222. And while there are copies in the Court's original, we want to be able to check the ones that came in to make sure they're exactly like the ones that are in the document, and we'll do that during the break.

And we'll be offering those later after Mr. Sanger and I have had a chance to review it, but I'd like just a stipulation that the clerk can provide that to us to examine during the course of the break.

THE COURT: Do you agree, Mr. Sanger?

MR. SANGER: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. That will be the order.

MR. SNEDDON: Thank you very much, Your Honor.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Good morning, Your Honor. The People call Beverly Wagner.

THE COURT: When you get to the witness stand, please remain standing.

Look over here. Face the clerk, raise your right hand.

BEVERLY WAGNER

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Sure.

My name is Beverly Wagner. B-e-v-e-r-l-y. W-a-g-n-e-r.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Good morning, Miss Wagner.

A. Good morning.

Q. Who do you work for, please?

A. U.S. Bank.

Q. What do you do for U.S. Bank?

BAILIFF CORTEZ: Your microphone, sir.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m sorry.

Q. What do you do for U.S. Bank?

A. I’m the bank manager at the bank.

Q. Which bank?

A. Right now I’m at the 4th and Wilshire office.

Q. In the year 2003, did you work at a different branch?

A. Yes.

Q. What branch was that?

A. The 23rd and Santa Monica branch.

Q. And were you branch manager for that particular branch?

A. Yes.

Q. That second branch, what is the city that that’s located in?

A. Santa Monica --

Q. Okay.

A. -- California.

Q. What is the branch that you worked at in 2003? Where was that? What city was that in?

A. 2221 Santa Monica Boulevard in Santa Monica.

Q. In Santa Monica, all right. Very good. May I approach, Your Honor?

THE COURT: You may.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm going to show you two exhibits, which appear to be copies of checks. The first one has been marked as People's Exhibit 418, page three. It appears to be a check from Neverland Valley Entertainment dated April 2nd, 2003. Do you recognize that check?

A. Yes.

Q. How is it that you recognize that check?

A. From the name on the account and the routing number for U.S. Bank, and the account number.

Q. All right. Did you participate personally in the cashing of that check as branch manager for U.S. Bank?

A. Yes.

Q. And were you working at the Santa Monica branch at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you -- how is it that you personally participated in the cashing of that check?

A. This is way above the approval limit for a branch manager, and I had to get authority to even cash the check, so it had to come through my hands.

Q. How much is that check for?

A. One million dollars.

Q. And can you tell me in what manner that check was cashed? In other words, was it deposited? Was it -- did the bank disburse those funds in other methods? Tell me exactly how the individual cashed that check.

A. Cash.

Q. They walked in with this check and walked out with one million dollars in cash?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the bank have to make any special arrangements to put together that much money in cash?

A. Yes.

Q. How much advance time is necessary for an individual to notify the bank that it will need to have certain funds on hand for a large cash disbursement like this?

MR. SANGER: Objection; relevance.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: A minimum of about seven days.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

THE COURT: What’s the exhibit number, Counsel?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It’s --

THE CLERK: 418.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: -- 418, page three.

THE COURT: Thank you.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. I now show you Exhibit 419, page three. Did you also participate in the cashing of that check?

A. Yes.

Q. That check is for how much?

A. $500,000.

Q. And did the same individual who cashed this first check cash that second check?

A. Yes.

Q. Was this check also cashed for currency?

A. Yes.

Q. So the individual walked in with this check and walked out with $500,000 in U.S. currency?

A. Yes.

Q. The individual who cashed these two checks, what is his name?

A. Fred Schaffel.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: If I may ask Madam Clerk to help me find a photograph.

If I can just have a moment, Your Honor.

Q. Miss Wagner, I show you People's Exhibit 16. Do you recognize that individual?
A. Yes.
Q. Who is that?
A. Fred Schaffel.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you. I have no further questions.
THE COURT: Cross-examine?
MR. SANGER: Thank you, Your Honor. Do you want to take your book there? Are the exhibits up there?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yeah.
MR. SANGER: Excuse me one second. May I confer with counsel? Do you have the official exhibit book there?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes.
(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)
MR. SANGER: May I proceed, Your Honor?
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. SANGER: Thank you.

CROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. SANGER:
Q. Miss Wagner, how are you?
A. I'm good, thank you.
Q. You were the branch manager at the 2nd and Santa Monica branch, is that what you said?
A. The 23rd and Santa Monica branch.
Q. 23rd. I can't read my handwriting. Sorry.
A. Okay.
Q. In any event, is that a branch where Frederic Marc Schaffel had one or more accounts?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How many accounts did he have?
A. I believe it was three.
Q. Okay. And you produced records for his accounts, correct?
A. Pardon me?
Q. You produced records for his accounts to the Court?
A. Um -- what -- I'm not sure what records you're talking about.

Q. Okay.
A. Oh, yes. For -- yes, we did. U.S. Bank. Yeah. I’m sorry.
Q. Yes. I believe -- the District Attorney referred to you at one point as a custodian of records?
A. Yes.

Q. Excuse me. So you were responsible for having records sent to the Court --
A. Yes, sir.
Q. -- at some earlier time?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. And now you’ve identified two checks. And you’re telling us on these two checks, Exhibits 418 and 419, page three in each one, that you personally participated in those transactions?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. So you remember Mr. Schaffel coming in and getting cash for those two checks; is that correct?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. All right. Now, you see my client, Mr. Jackson, sitting there, correct?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Okay. Did Mr. Jackson come in the bank?
A. No.
Q. Have you ever seen Mr. Jackson before in person?
A. No.
Q. All right. Now, with regard to Mr. Schaffel and the records you produced, is it true that in his three accounts during, let’s say, the first six months of 2003, that millions of dollars went through his accounts?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m going to object to reference to records that are not exhibits in this case as well as beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Well, let’s put it this way: You -- as the branch manager and as the custodian of records, you reviewed the records before they were sent up here, right?

A. Not fully.

Q. Okay. Were you aware that Mr. Schaffel was a customer of the bank?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And you knew that personally; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you knew it personally in part because you cashed these two checks for him, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have other dealings with him?

A. No.

Q. So the two times you really remember seeing Mr. Schaffel in person were with regard to these two checks; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. All right. A little hesitancy. You may have seen them --

A. More than twice, yes.

Q. But the two that stick out in your mind were these two, I take it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I guess what I'm getting at is, to cash these checks, you had to make sure he really was a customer of your bank, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. And had he been a customer of your bank for a long time?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And during the course of his being a customer for your bank, did you conclude that he was trustworthy as far as dealing with him on these two rather large checks?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, the checks were drawn on an account that's called Neverland Valley Entertainment; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was it your understanding that Mr. Schaffel was the signatore on that account?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there anybody else who was a signatore on that account?

A. Yes.

Q. Who else?

A. Michael Jackson.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson ever sign any checks, to your knowledge, or sign any documents whatsoever on that account?

A. Yes.

Q. Other than the signature cards?

A. I'm not sure.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: All right.

Q. Did you review the records to determine whether or not Mr. Jackson ever signed anything other than the signature cards on that account?

A. No, sir.

Q. All right. And you did not verify Mr. Jackson's signature other than it was on the signature card; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. In other words, he didn't come in and sign in your presence?

A. No.

Q. You ended up looking in your records and you saw a signature card that appeared to have a signature for Michael Jackson; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And other than that, all of your dealings, as far as you know, were with Frederic Marc Schaffel, is that correct, on these accounts?

A. No.

Q. Were there other people that may have come in?

A. Not come in. But that I spoke with.

Q. Spoke with. Okay. All right. And you do not know what happened to this money after Mr. Schaffel walked out of the bank with it; is that correct?

A. No.

MR. SANGER: All right. And I have no further questions.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Were Michael Jackson and Frederic Marc Schaffel the only two authorized individuals as far as to remove funds from this account?

A. Yes.

Q. And you said you spoke to someone else other than Marc Schaffel about these accounts. Who was that?

A. I think at one time I spoke with Michael.

Q. Do you remember what that was about?

MR. SANGER: I'm going to object. That calls for hearsay. Calls for hearsay and there's a lack of foundation.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Offered as an admission.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled. You may answer.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Do you remember what that was about?

A. No. Not really.

Q. Did it have something to do with this 8321 account?

MR. SANGER: I'm going to object. That's leading and no foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Thank you very much.

MR. SANGER: No further questions.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

THE COURT: Call your next witness.

MR. NICOLA: The next witness will be Craig Bonner.

THE COURT: You may be seated. You're still under oath.

CRAIG BONNER

Having been previously sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. NICOLA:

Q. Good morning, Sergeant Bonner.

A. Good morning.

Q. With respect to your investigation in this case, did you have occasion to gather, sort and analyze telephone records and subscriber information?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Do you see the stack of phone exhibits sitting on counsel table? I believe they’re 450 through 459.

A. Yes, I’m quite familiar with them.

Q. Do you recognize those exhibits?

A. I’m quite familiar, yes.

Q. And did you play a role in putting those exhibits together and analyzing the information that was contained within them?

A. I did.

Q. Can you briefly and generally explain to the jury the process that was used to -- the initial step used in getting a handle on the information that’s in those exhibits?

A. Yes. Basically we obtained quite a number of telephone records through search warrant and subpoena. We amassed those records and brought them into a computer database, used that computer database to compile and sort those records into a format where we could begin to see patterns of calls and who was calling whom.

We then utilized that information to cut out the unnecessary material, or the material which we could not substantiate through other evidence, and we have brought that together now into exhibits that will show just those phone calls that are pertinent, and we have done that in a visual manner as well as in a document that will back up that visual manner.

Q. Okay. I think we missed a step. With respect to the information that was generated and you created a spreadsheet from it, can you explain to the jury how you verified the information that was in your spreadsheets?

A. The computer database basically put together a list of the calls that it said occurred between our involved parties to ensure that that list was correct. We then went into those records, which are the actual records sent by the phone companies, and we verified each and every call that the computer said occurred, and we have noted where that call occurs within those records.

Q. Okay. Did you prepare some exhibits for court today to demonstrate your testimony?

A. I did.

Q. As soon as I finish marking the last of these pages I'll show you the exhibit, okay? I apologize.

I'll ask you whether you reviewed the records from the Turnberry Resort - and I'll show you those documents in a minute - while you were conducting your phone analysis?

A. That's correct.

Q. Did you review records from The Beverly Hilton? And I'll also show you those exhibits in a minute.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you examine the record from Huntel with respect to air-ground communication for a flight occurring on February 7th of 2003?

A. Yes, I did.

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Detective Bonner, with the Court's permission, I'd like to approach and show you Exhibits No. 859 through No. 882.

MR. SANGER: Excuse me. Let me just see what we have here.

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel

MR. SANGER: All right. Go ahead.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: I ask if you recognize Exhibit 859?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What does 859 contain?

A. 859 is the visual chart documenting telephone calls between the involved parties on February 5th, 2003.

Q. Is there also a document behind the visual chart?

A. There is. It’s an Excel spreadsheet, which is the verification of each call that is claimed on the visual chart.

Q. And did you create or cause to be created these charts?

A. I did.

Q. And did you cause to be created 859 through 882?

A. I did.

Q. Okay. Now, with respect to testifying about the contents of these exhibits, 859 through 882, did you delegate some other of your colleagues to assist you?

A. I did.

Q. And which exhibits will you be testifying to today, if you could please the tell jury now?

A. I will testify to 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 871, 875, 876, 877, 878 and 879.

Q. Okay. With respect to Exhibit Nos. 859 through 867, are those telephone charts and spreadsheets between the period of February 5th of 2003 and February 16th of 2003?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Exhibit 871, is that the chart and the spreadsheet for February 20th of 2003?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And with respect to Exhibits No. 875 through 879, do those cover the dates of March 5th, 2003, through March 9th of 2003?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Turning your attention to Exhibit No. 859, would you briefly describe for us in general terms what is depicted on the chart?

A. This chart depicts a number of calls that occur between various individuals that have came up during this investigation, including Frank Cascio, Marc Schaffel, Jay Jackson, Evelyn Tavasci, as well as a number of telephones that come back registered to the Turnberry Resort in Florida.

Q. Okay. And do the numbers and links on that chart accurately reflect the information that you gleaned from the telephone records you've testified about previously?

A. That's correct.

Q. And does the information supporting the links you make on Chart 859 provided in the Excel spreadsheets an accurate depiction of what is on the charts?

A. That is correct.

MR. NICOLA: Your Honor, I would move 859 into evidence at this time.

MR. SANGER: I have a concern about foundation and relevance as to all of the entries, but I'll submit it at this point subject to cross-examination.

THE COURT: All right. I'll admit them.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: I'd ask you the same questions about Exhibits 860 through 867. Do each of those charts represent individuals that came up in your investigation, including the people you just mentioned, and link telephone calls between phones registered in their names?

A. That's correct.

Q. And do each of those exhibits also contain a spreadsheet supporting the information you placed on the flow chart?

A. That is correct.

MR. NICOLA: Your Honor, at this time we'd move 860 through 867 into evidence as well.

MR. SANGER: Same objection, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. They're admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: I have the same question about Exhibit 871 and Exhibits 875 through 879. Do each of the charts in those exhibits accurately reflect the telephone calls between the phones listed on the charts that are connected to individuals in this investigation, and is there an Excel spreadsheet accompanying each chart supporting the information that's in the charts?

A. That's correct.

MR. NICOLA: We'd move 871 and 875 through 879 into evidence, Your Honor.

MR. SANGER: Same objection.

THE COURT: All right. They're admitted.

MR. NICOLA: Madam Clerk, may I have the Turnberry records that were just admitted, please?

I believe they're 200. Thank you.

May I approach the witness, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Detective Bonner, I'm going to hand you a binder containing records from the Turnberry, Exhibits 200 through 218, and I'd ask if you'd review that.

And when you're finished, please tell us whether you recognize the contents and whether you used the contents in generating your charts and spreadsheets?

A. I recognize these charts as being the hotel records for the Turnberry Resort. And we utilized these charts in that they are the documents within our charts, in that they contain telephone records.

Q. Okay. Do you recognize the exhibits?

A. Yes.

MR. NICOLA: Your Honor, may I have "Input 4," please, and may I publish?

THE COURT: Yes.

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Detective Bonner, I'm going to place on the Elmo what appears to be Exhibit 859; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Okay. Just starting in the upper left-hand corner, where there’s a little telephone symbol and the name “Frank Cascio,” can you just give all of us a very general description of what is intended to be depicted in this exhibit?

A. Absolutely. What we have again are a number of individuals whom we have determined through our investigation to be involved or associated with Mr. Jackson, including Mr. Cascio, Mr. Schaffel, Evelyn Tavasci, Chris Carter, Debbie Rowe, and these are the hotels -- the Turnberry Hotel records that we have just spoke of, and these are calls between these individuals.

Here we have telephones that belong to Frank Cascio, telephones that belong to Mr. Schaffel, and we have indicated that there are nine telephone calls that occurred between telephones belonging to Mr. Cascio and Mr. Schaffel, and each one of these links tells the same information.

We have three calls that occurred between telephones belonging to this, which is Evelyn Tavasci’s home telephone number, and Frank Cascio’s telephone numbers.

We have one call that occurred between Jay Jackson’s telephone number and Evelyn Tavasci’s home telephone number.

We have one call that occurred between the Presidential Suite at the Turnberry, which was under the name of Fred Macy, to Jay Jackson’s telephone number.

And again, each one of these links tells you that there is a call that occurred between phones belonging to this person and a phone over here, and the number of calls is indicated in the link.

Q. Okay. I’m going to put up the first page of the spreadsheet behind the chart for 2-5-03.

MR. SANGER: That’s part of --

MR. NICOLA: That’s a part of 859.

MR. SANGER: Part of 859.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: I’m only going to put up a portion of it, Detective, just so we’re not publishing a bunch of home numbers.

Could you please describe what is intended by the numbers and the headings across this exhibit, please?

A. Okay. Starting over on the left, we have this number right here, (702) 234-9059. That is a telephone number that came back registered to Christopher Carter, which is indicated in the next one. And then we have the date of the call, which is 2-5-2003. We have the time of the call, which is at 2322 hours, 11:22 p.m. We have the duration of the call, one minute. We then have the number that he dialed, (201) 213-0763, which comes back registered to Frank Cascio. This is the source of that information that's detailed right here, which is -- came from T-Mobile records. This is the exhibit number which corresponds to one of those exhibits. This is the tab number within that exhibit. And this is the page number at which this record can be found within this exhibit.

Q. Okay. So the Chris Carter to Frank Cascio call occurring at 11:22 p.m. on February 5th, 2003, is found in the T-Mobile exhibit, which is 452, under the first tab, and under the page marked 11 of 23?

A. That's correct.

Q. Is that how all of the entries in all of these spreadsheets work?

A. Fundamentally. Different records have different means by which we were able to identify specific calls. Some of them actually had an exact call number to correspond to that call. And in that case we gave that exact call number to go along with it.

Q. Okay. Did you index the phone calls from the hotel records the same way?

A. Similarly, yes.

MR. NICOLA: If I may, Counsel, the second page.

MR. SANGER: Same exhibit?

MR. NICOLA: Same exhibit.

MR. SANGER: All right.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Would you turn to page two of your spreadsheet, and please go to the line with the heading “Macy Presidential”?

THE COURT: What number exhibit is the spreadsheet?

MR. NICOLA: This exhibit is also Exhibit 859, Your Honor.

Q. Do you see on the bottom line up there?

A. I do.

Q. Is that the entry for the Presidential Suite at the Turnberry Isle Resort?

A. That’s correct.

Q. I’m going to blow it up just a little bit so we can see portions of it. This doesn’t want to focus.

Okay. How about we do it like this, Detective?

Okay. So the time of the call from the Turnberry Isle, from the Presidential Suite to Major Jackson, occurred at what time in the morning?

A. 0958 hours, or 9:58 a.m.

Q. And that’s Florida time, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And when you indexed the hotel records, you referenced the exhibit, correct, 202 in this case?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And then what does the T794, page six, mean in the last column?

A. T794 is a reference number that is on the documents pertaining to the Fred Macy Presidential Suite, and page six indicates that that particular telephone call is found on page six of the documents labeled T794.

Q. Okay. Would you turn to the Turnberry exhibit, please, 202, find the page where that phone call is and remove it for me, please.

MR. SANGER: What exhibit number?

MR. NICOLA: This is 202, page six.

Q. I’m going to put on the screen Exhibit 202, page six. And the call that you’re referring to, is that the first entry for the date of 2-5 on this exhibit?

A. Yes. The first telephone call entry.

Q. Okay. And that appears to have lasted for 27 minutes?

A. Correct.

Q. And is that represented on your chart by the link between Fred Macy Presidential Suite and Jay Jackson?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Okay. I’d like to flip this over to page five, if I may.

These appear to be phone entries for the date of February 4th, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. With respect to the bottom two telephones -- telephone entries ending in 6162, one at 1935 hours and one at 2054 hours, do you recognize those numbers from these exhibits?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And who do those belong to?

A. Those belong to David Ventura. That would be Janet Arvizo’s parents.

Q. Okay. If we could go to the date of February 6th, please. Just have that ready.

I’d like to finish discussing these records for the 5th.

Finishing up with Exhibit 859, Detective, with your pointer, please, and with respect to the call from -- the calls from Frank Cascio to Marc Schaffel, over what period of time did those occur?

A. I’ll have to refer back to the spreadsheet.

Q. Please do.

A. Okay. The first call I have is in the early morning hours, specifically right before 1 a.m., and the last call I see is after 9 p.m.

Q. And did a number of these calls last for two minutes or more?

A. Yes.

Q. And did one of them last 15 minutes?

A. Yes. One call at 1:00, a little after 1 p.m.

Q. How many times did Mr. Cascio call the home of the defendant’s personal assistant, Miss Tavasci?
A. Three times.
Q. And over what period of time did those calls occur?

A. Again, the first call occurred -- I’m sorry. The first call occurred at 3:42 p.m. The last call occurred a little after 9 p.m.
Q. So those are within the times that Mr. Cascio was ringing Mr. Schaffel?
A. That’s correct.
Q. Or at least his phone was calling Mr. Schaffel’s phone?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. In the bottom left-hand corner, there’s a symbol that says, “Tavasci, Evelyn, MJJ Prod, Unit 1.” Can you explain that for the jury, please?
A. That is a phone record. We took the naming of that right off of the phone record, which is a Nextel record.
Q. Is that a telephone number of (310) 864-7791?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. And are all the calls either going to or coming out of your flow chart for that telephone number, the 7791 number?
A. I’m sorry, what was the question?
Q. Are all the numbers going to that Unit 1 number and going out to the same number, the 7791 number? Do you understand? You don’t.
A. No.
Q. The calls from Chris Carter --

A. Okay.
Q. -- to the Unit 1 number, and the calls from Frank Cascio to the Unit 1 number, those are all to the same number, the 7791 number, correct?
A. Correct, the one for -- that’s indicated as Unit 1.
Q. Okay. And there are other Tavasci, Evelyn,

MJJ Production phones later on that have different telephone numbers, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. That's why I was asking about this one. The calls in between Chris Carter and the Turnberry Resort and Marc Schaffel going to the link in the bottom right, the Turnberry Isle Resort, are those incoming or outgoing calls; do you know?

A. Those are both outgoing from the individual, i.e., Marc Schaffel or Chris Carter, going to the Turnberry Resort.

Q. Okay. And the Andy Brandon room in the middle, is that the only room where both the Cascio phones and the Schaffel phones were connected during this period of time?

A. On that date, that's correct.

Q. Can you tell us the period of time in which the calls between Schaffel and the Brandon room occurred, please?

A. Okay. With regard to Andy Brandon room to Marc Schaffel, I have the first call at about 10:40 in the morning, and ending at right after 10 p.m.

Q. All day long?

A. All day long.

Q. With respect to the call between Major Jackson and Evelyn Tavasci's home, can you tell us whether Mr. Jackson called Miss Tavasci or whether it was the other way around?

MR. SANGER: Well, I'm going to object. We're referring to an individual making a call as opposed to somebody at one phone calling somebody at another phone.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: With respect to the phone call between the Evvy Tavasci phone and the Jay Jackson phone, can you tell us which way that call went?

A. Okay. That was Evelyn Tavasci's telephone calling Jay Jackson's telephone.

Q. And how long did that -- how long was that call?

A. Three minutes.

Q. And was that after the call between the Fred Macy Presidential Suite and the Jay Jackson phone?

A. That appears to be prior to.

Q. In Pacific time or Eastern time, Sergeant Bonner?

A. That would have been Pacific time.

Q. So it's listed as 7:27 Pacific time?

A. It actually -- yeah, 7:27 a.m. Pacific, which would be after, I'm sorry.

Q. Okay. So the call from the Presidential Suite came first, and then the call from the Tavasci home came second?

A. That's correct.

Q. Okay. If you could please turn to Exhibit 860. I'm going to put this chart up. And briefly if you could summarize this chart for the jury, using your laser.

A. Okay. As with the previous date, we're again showing the connections of telephone calls between telephones belonging to various individuals identified throughout this investigation. Again, we have Frank Cascio, Marc Schaffel, Evelyn Tavasci, Christopher Carter, Hamid Moslehi, David Ventura, that's Janet Arvizo's parents, Jay Jackson, Deborah Rowe, and again, telephones at the Turnberry Resort.

Q. Can you tell us, please, when the first call between the Cascio phone and the Schaffel phone occurred?

A. The first call that I have between the Cascio phone and the Schaffel phone occurs slightly before 1 a.m. at 0039 hours.

Q. And your chart indicates there were 19 calls between the two phones?

A. That's correct.

Q. And did those last essentially throughout the day?

A. Yes. The last call occurred a few minutes before midnight at 2351 hours.

Q. With respect to the calls between the Cascio phone and the rooms named "Stressler" and "Franklin" at the Turnberry, starting with the Stressler room, can you tell us whether that was incoming or outgoing?

A. It’s an outgoing call from the Stressler room to Frank Cascio’s telephone.

Q. What about the Franklin room?

A. Again, that would be an outgoing call from the Franklin room to the Cascio telephone.

Q. And the calls between the Brandon room and the Schaffel phone?

A. That is an outgoing call from the Brandon room to Schaffel’s telephone.

Q. Do you have a time for the phone call between the Schaffel phone and the Deborah Rowe phone?

A. 2116 hours.

Q. Which direction was that call going?

A. That was from Deborah Rowe to Marc Schaffel’s telephone.

Q. Okay. From Ms. Rowe’s phone to Mr. Schaffel’s phone?

A. That’s correct.

Q. You show two calls between the Schaffel 8340 phone and phones registered to David LeGrand?

A. Correct.

Q. And can you tell us when the first phone call was?

A. The first phone call was at 1:48 p.m.

Q. And how long did that last?

A. Five minutes.

Q. And the second phone call?

A. Was at 2:30 p.m., again for five minutes.

Q. Okay. With respect to the calls from the Gavin Franklin room to Janet’s parents and the Jay Jackson phone, it’s a little blurry from here. Can you tell us how many calls there were from the Franklin room just to Janet’s parents?

A. There were eight calls.

Q. Were there two rooms registered under Gavin?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And in your Excel spreadsheet, did you separate the rooms out?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. Do you know how many calls came from either room, and if you could give us the room designation?

A. There are two room designations. One would be T597, the other would be T309. With regard to T597, I have six of those calls to the Venturas' residence coming from T597, and I have two of the calls coming from T309.

Q. Is Room T597 Exhibit 216 in the Turnberry book?

A. That's correct.

Q. Would you please remove the page that contains the phone calls you're referring to? Sergeant Bonner, I'm going to put page one of Exhibit 216 on the board and I'll blow that up. Okay. The calls, at least two of the calls, between Room T597 registered under Gavin Franklin, are those right in the middle of the exhibit?

A. Yes, right here.

Q. Okay. And the first call lasted four minutes and the second one four minutes?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And those are the first phone calls for the 6th, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Showing you page two of the same exhibit, the last call to the 6162 number on the 6th is 11:53 p.m., top line?

A. Yes. All this is -- this one appears to be at straight-up midnight, so depending on which day you want to count that one to.

Q. I count midnight as tomorrow.

A. Either one.

Q. That will work, okay. And then the bottom three numbers, those are Jay Jackson?

A. Correct.

Q. And they're dated 2-6, but clearly they occur after midnight, right?

A. Correct.

Q. So did you put those on the charts for 2-7?

A. I would have put these on 2-7, that's correct.
Q. Can you tell us, please, at what time the Cascio phone and the phone registered to Mr. Jackson's personal assistant, Miss Tavasci, what time those occurred?
A. The first call occurred at 5:34 p.m.; the second call at 8:17 p.m.
Q. And shortly after getting -- shortly after the phone call between Cascio and Tavasci, after the first one, were there two calls immediately to Mr. Schaffel, 1750 and 1757?
MR. SANGER: I'm going to object, again.
MR. NICOLA: To the Schaffel phone, excuse me.
MR. SANGER: No foundation.
MR. NICOLA: I'll rephrase.
THE COURT: Is that the same objection as using the phone instead of the person?
MR. SANGER: Yes, sir.
THE COURT: All right. Sustained.
MR. SANGER: There are actually several numbers as well.
MR. NICOLA: Okay.
Q. Between -- let me start this over.

After the phone calls between the Cascio phone and the Tavasci phone, were there two phone calls immediately following -- to the Schaffel phone from the Cascio phone?
A. There were two calls, one to one number associated with Schaffel and another to another number associated with Schaffel. The first one at 1750. The second one at 1757 hours, or 5:50 and 5:57 p.m.
Q. Okay. So the 5:57 one lasted for seven minutes?
A. That's correct.
Q. If we could turn to Exhibit 861, those are phone calls occurring on the 7th of February, correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. Okay. Again, you've mapped calls from the Turnberry out to other individuals?

A. Correct.

Q. There is a “Fred Macy, regular room,” kind of in the middle of this exhibit. Can you explain to us what you mean by that?

A. There were two different rooms that were registered to Fred Macy. One was the Presidential Suite that cost several thousand dollars a night. There was also a Fred Macy room that was a room that cost about $400 a night, which is what all of the other rooms cost. These are two separate records, and to designate that, we had “Fred Macy Presidential” and “Fred Macy regular room.”

Q. Okay. And the calls from the -- the rooms, the individual rooms at the Turnberry and the phone registered to Mr. Christopher Carter, were all those outgoing calls?

A. No. They are, with the exception of this call right here, where there’s one call. That is an incoming call from Carter’s -- or a telephone associated with Carter to the Turnberry Isle Resort.

Q. Okay. But the individual rooms are all outgoing calls, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. You can’t see incoming calls on the individual room bills; isn’t that right?

A. No.

Q. Okay. And the Turnberry Isle Resort number, that’s the main line?

A. Yes.

Q. The calls from Schaffel -- the Schaffel phone, excuse me, to the Turnberry Isle Resort, are all those going from Schaffel to the Turnberry Isle?

A. This specific connection right here, these are calls from Schaffel to the Turnberry. However, these two are not.

Q. Okay. And the call from the Chris Franklin room to Neverland Valley Ranch, can you tell us whether that occurred before or after the outgoing call to the Chris Carter phone? You can look at your records.

A. Let me just clarify that. You want to know whether or not this call here occurred before or after that call there?

Q. No. There are two calls coming out of the Chris Franklin room, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. One to the Neverland Valley Ranch?

A. Okay.

Q. Okay. And the other one to the Chris Carter phone?

A. Correct.

Q. Which one occurred first, please?

A. Okay.

The first call occurred to the Neverland Valley Ranch at 9:06 a.m.

Q. What time was the second call?

A. It occurred at 803 p.m.

Q. I placed in front of you Exhibit No. 850.

Do you recognize that document?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What is that?

A. This is a billing record for air-to-ground telephone calls that occurred on an Xtra Jet flight on February 7th, 2003.

Q. And does it appear that calls were made from that flight to the phone registered to Janet's 8346 parents?

A. Yes, there were three calls.

Q. And did those occur in time after the ten calls from the Gavin Franklin rooms to the phone at Janet's parents?

A. The telephone calls on the airplane occurred after the telephone calls from the Gavin Franklin room.

Q. Okay. Do those -- did they occur -- did the phone calls from the aircraft occur after the phone calls from the Gavin Franklin rooms to the Jay Jackson phone?

A. They occurred after.

Q. And were there also phone calls placed from that aircraft to numbers registered to Neverland

Valley Ranch?

A. Yes, there were.

Q. Two of them?

A. Yes.

Q. And how long did those calls last?

A. I have one for one minute. And one for two minutes.

Q. And the three calls that were placed from the aircraft to the phone at Janet's parents' house, were they interspersed with the calls to the Neverland phone or did one group come before the other?

A. They were interspersed.

Q. Sergeant Bonner, if you could turn to Exhibit No. 862, please, and the supporting chart.

MR. SANGER: That's 2-8?

MR. NICOLA: 2-8.

Q. Do you have this? If you could please describe each one of the phones and monikers you've given them on this exhibit, please, 2-8. Exhibit 862 for February 8th of 2003.

A. Okay. Starting in the top left, we have a cellular telephone that came back -- the records said -- indicated MJJ Productions, Miko Brando. We then had another phone that came back to Evelyn Tavasci, MJJ Productions, Unit 1. This one came back to just MJJ Productions, Evelyn Tavasci, without a unit number. This was a telephone registered to Christopher Carter. These were telephone lines that came back to Neverland Valley Ranch. These are telephone lines that came back to Marc Schaffel. Telephones associated with Debbie Rowe. Telephones associated with Frank Cascio. Telephones associated with Vincent Amen. Telephones associated with Christian Robinson, under the business name Site LLC. And a telephone associated with Rudy Provencio.

Q. With respect to the contacts between the Cascio phone and the Vince Amen phones, if you could find those in your records, please.

A. Okay. I have those.

Q. Could you tell us what time the first call between those two phones occurred?

A. The first time is 11:13 a.m.

Q. And that was a call for three minutes?

A. Correct.

Q. Which direction did it go?

A. From Amen to Cascio.

Q. And the second phone call?

A. Occurred at 2:47 p.m., again, from Amen to Cascio.

Q. And that was a one-minute call, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. With respect to the call between the Cascio phone and the Neverland Valley Ranch number, would you tell us what time that occurred?

A. The first call occurred at five -- correction, 11:48 a.m.

Q. The call between the Chris Carter phone and the Neverland Valley Ranch phone, can you tell us what time that occurred, please?

A. At four -- or, correction, 2:44 in the morning.

Q. Was there a call between the Cascio phone and the phones at Neverland Ranch at around that same time?

A. That's correct. There was a call at 2:34 a.m. from Neverland Ranch to Cascio.

Q. And that showed as an incoming call on Mr. Cascio's phone record, correct?

A. That's correct.

THE COURT: All right. We'll take our break.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: Go ahead.
MR. NICOLA: Thank you, Your Honor.
Q. Sergeant Bonner, with respect to the call between --
BAILIFF CORTEZ: Microphone, sir.
MR. NICOLA: Thank you.
Q. Sergeant Bonner, with respect to the call between the Cascio phone and the Neverland Valley

Ranch phones occurring at 1544, or 3:44 in the afternoon, was that a four-minute call?

A. That was a four-minute call.

Q. Okay. And were there also calls between the Cascio phone and the Neverland Ranch phone that occurred from between 35 and 45 seconds, in addition to that one?

A. I see two other calls.

Q. Okay. And did they last for that period of time, between 35 and 45 seconds?

A. Correction, I'm sorry. There's three other calls. Yes, 35 seconds and 45 seconds.

Q. If you could turn to the next exhibit in order, please, Exhibit 863.

MR. SANGER: Which is what, 2-12?

MR. NICOLA: 2-12.

Q. Is that 2-12, Detective?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, to your knowledge, was February 12th the day the Arvizos left Neverland Ranch the first time?

A. I believe it is about that time frame, yes.

Q. And beginning at the upper left-hand corner, please, can you indoctrinate the jury as to the individual names you have up there by those phones?

MR. SANGER: I'm not sure "indoctrinate" was the correct word, so I object.

THE COURT: All you do is quibble.

(Laughter.)

THE COURT: Is that an objection?

MR. SANGER: It's an objection.

THE COURT: All right. Sustained.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Could you explain, please?

A. Absolutely. The first phone we have is a telephone number that is registered to the Law Firm of Geragos & Geragos. We then have a telephone that is registered to Ann Kite, a telephone that is registered to Azia Pryor. And the telephone number that is registered to David Ventura, Janet Arvizo's parents. Again, we have telephones that are registered to Frank Cascio and telephones that are registered to Marc Schaffel. We also have a telephone registered to Christopher Carter, Neverland Valley Ranch, and a couple of telephones associated with Evelyn Tavasci’s residence. One is the primary, another is a secondary line. We then have a telephone registered to Hamid Moslehi.

Again, one registered to Christian Robinson under the business name Site LLC. A telephone associated with Vincent Amen. And a telephone associated with David LeGrand.

Q. Beginning right in the middle of the chart -- maybe it will show clearer if I blow that up. Well, that wasn’t the right button.
Is that a “38” between the phones of Mr. Cascio and Mr. Schaffel?
A. That’s correct.
Q. Okay. When did the first of the 38 phone calls between the two phones occur?
A. The first call that I have is at 0024 hours, or shortly after midnight.
Q. And how long did that call last?
A. One minute in length.
Q. Was there another call from the Cascio phone to the Schaffel phone immediately thereafter?
A. Yes, there was.
Q. And at what time?
A. 0025 hours. Four minutes.
Q. How long did that last?
A. Four minutes.
Q. Was there another one immediately after that?
A. We then jumped to 0037 hours for one minute.
Q. Next?
A. 0039 for nine minutes.

Q. Was that one outgoing or incoming to the Cascio phone?
A. The last two were actually incoming calls.
Q. Okay. What about the next call?
A. That’s an incoming call at 0047 hours.
Q. How long did that last?
A. For seven minutes.

Q. And the next call?

A. Again, an incoming call at 0054 hours for two minutes.

Q. And that's going from the Schaffel phone to the Cascio phone, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Is there another call from Schaffel phone to Cascio phone?

A. Yeah, at 0056. I have a two-minute incoming call from the Schaffel phone to the Cascio phone.

Q. Was there another call after that?

A. 0058 hours. Again, an incoming call from the Schaffel phone to the Cascio phone for five minutes.

Q. Can you tell us when the next call between a Schaffel phone and a Cascio phone occurred?

A. We then skip to 10:52 a.m.

Q. And which direction is that call going?

A. That is, again, an incoming call from a Schaffel phone to a Cascio phone for six minutes.

Q. Immediately after the incoming call from 8359 Schaffel phone to Cascio phone, was there a call placed from the Vinnie Amen phone to a Marc Schaffel phone? Take a look at 11:01.

A. That's correct, I have a call at 1101 hours for two minutes, and this is a direct call from Vincent Amen to Marc Schaffel.

Q. You mean their phones, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And at 11:02 p.m., was there a one-minute call between Frank Cascio's phone and Vince Amen's phone?

A. That's correct. For one minute. Again, this one would be Cascio calling Amen.

Q. And immediately after that, at 11:03, was there a call from the Cascio phone to the Chris Carter phone?

A. That's correct. One minute. It's an outgoing from Cascio to Carter's phone.

Q. Was there a phone call between the Cascio phone and the Vince Amen phone at 11:06?

A. That's correct. It's an outgoing call from

Frank Cascio’s phone to Vincent Amen’s phone for four minutes in length.

Q. And at the same time was there an incoming call from the Marc Schaffel phone to Frank Cascio’s phone, again at 11:06?

A. That’s correct. I have a three-minute incoming call on Cascio’s phone from a phone registered to Marc Schaffel.

Q. When was the next call between Vince Amen -- Vince Amen’s phone, excuse me, and Frank Cascio’s phone?

A. At 1113 hours for one minute.

Q. And that was from a Cascio phone to an Amen phone?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Was there a call placed between Marc Schaffel phone and the phone belonging to Ann Kite?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. Do you also know her as Ann Gabriel?

A. Yes.

Q. What time was that phone call and how long did it last, please?

A. The first call was at 11:40 a.m. for 11 minutes in length.

Q. If you could find the record for Frank Cascio/Marc Schaffel at 12:41.

A. Okay. I have that.

Q. You’ve got it? Okay. The call between Frank Cascio’s phone and Marc Schaffel’s phone at 12:41, how long did that last?

A. Three minutes.

Q. Okay. And then at 1312, 1:12 in the afternoon, was there a call placed between a phone belonging to Frank Cascio and Chris Carter? Chris Carter’s phone, excuse me.

A. That’s correct, a one-minute call.

Q. And immediately after that, was there a seven-minute call placed by the Frank Cascio phone to Neverland Valley Ranch?

A. Correct, at 1313 hours for seven minutes.

Q. After that phone call, was there a call placed from the Frank Cascio phone to the firm Geragos & Geragos?

A. Correct. At 1333 hours.

Q. And after the phone call to Geragos & Geragos, was there a call between Frank Cascio's phone and the home of defendant Jackson's personal assistant, Evelyn Tavasci?

A. Correct, at 1343 hours.

Q. How long was that call?

A. One minute in length.

Q. Was there another call placed exactly one minute after that?

A. Correct. At 1344 for three minutes.

Q. To the home of Evelyn Tavasci?

A. Correct.

Q. After that three-minute phone call, was there a call between the Frank Cascio phone and the Marc Schaffel phone?

A. Which call were you interested in?

Q. 1348 hours.

A. That's correct, for two minutes 11 seconds.

Q. So the call at 1344 to the home of Evelyn Tavasci from the Cascio phone lasted three minutes, and then the next call from the Cascio phone was to the Schaffel phone at 1338, which lasted for two minutes, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. With respect to the link between the Evelyn Tavasci home number and the phone registered to Mr. Moslehi, did that occur at 2:11 in the afternoon, 1411?

A. Correct. 2:11 for one minute.

Q. Were there additional phone calls between the Frank Cascio phone and the Geragos & Geragos phone? Specifically at 1527 and 1542 in the afternoon.

A. That's correct. The first at 1527 was a 55-second incoming call. The second at 1542 was a five-minute 54-second call.

Q. And in between those two calls to the Geragos phones from the Cascio phone, was there a call by the Cascio phone to the Marc Schaffel phone at 1540?

A. That’s correct. I have a one-minute call between the Cascio phone and the Schaffel phone.

Q. Was there a call placed from a Schaffel phone to the phone of David LeGrand at 1547 hours?

A. That’s correct. Three minutes in length.

Q. And at 1727 hours, is that the next phone call between the Cascio phones and the Schaffel phones?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Did that last for seven minutes?

A. Yes, that was seven minutes in length.

Q. And shortly after that phone call at 1742, was there an incoming call from the second home line of Mr. Jackson’s personal assistant to the phone registered to Frank Cascio?

A. That is correct. For one minute and ten seconds.

Q. Are there additional phone calls between Ann Kite -- between the Ann Kite phone and the Marc Schaffel phone in the evening, approximately 8:24?

A. 6:24 p.m.

Q. Okay. How long did that call last?

A. Four minutes in length.

Q. Now, with respect to the 19 calls between the Cascio phone and the Amen phone, and the 38 calls between the Cascio phone and the Schaffel phone, did one group of phone calls occur before, after, or interspersed with the others?

A. They were interspersed.

Q. Throughout the entire day?

A. Correct.

Q. If you could turn your attention to the phone call between the Christian Robinson phone and the Moslehi phone. If you could find that.

A. I have it.

Q. Which direction was that phone call in?

A. Christian Robinson contacting Hamid Moslehi’s phone.

A. Correct. At 8:06 p.m. for a little over one minute.

Q. One minute, or one hour 33 minutes?

A. I’m sorry. One hour 33 minutes.

Q. Okay. Do you know which direction that call went?

A. That call was from the Venturas’ residence to Azia Pryor’s phone.

Q. Okay. If you could turn your attention to Exhibit -- 863 or 864, which one’s next?

A. 864.

MR. SANGER: What’s that, 2-13?

MR. NICOLA: That’s 2-13, Counsel.

Q. Without trying to indoctrinate, could you explain for the jury what’s on that?

A. Again, we have telephone numbers that are associated with the various individuals. I believe all of these we’ve already spoke of. Hamid Moslehi, Christian Robinson, Vincent Amen, Evelyn Tavasci, David Ventura, Janet’s parents, Frank Cascio, Neverland Valley Ranch, Azia Pryor, Marc Schaffel, Ann Kite, the law offices of Geragos & Geragos, and Deborah Rowe Jackson.

MR. MESEREAU: Excuse me.

MR. NICOLA: Bless you.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: If we could go to the bottom right-hand corner specifically with respect to the phone calls between the Ann Kite phone and the Geragos & Geragos phone, how many were there? Because we can’t quite see it.

A. Four.

Q. And in which direction?

A. All four calls were from Ann Kite to the law offices of Geragos & Geragos.

Q. Is that five calls between the Ann Kite phone and the Schaffel phone?

A. That’s correct.

Q. With respect to the four calls between the Ann Kite phone and the Geragos & Geragos phone, what was the shortest call?

A. One minute in length.

Q. And there were two of those?

A. Correct.

Q. Was there also a six-minute call and a two-minute call respectively?

A. Again, as with the other ones, we have a number of telephone numbers that are associated with individuals that have came out during this investigation. And we start with Vincent Amen, Hamid Moslehi, David LeGrand, Frank Cascio, Marc Schaffel, Christian Robinson, Ann Kite, the Law Offices of Geragos & Geragos, Evelyn Tavasci, David Ventura, and Azia Pryor.

A. That’s correct. Two minutes in length.

Q. Okay. Are there also a number of calls between the Ventura phone and the Azia Pryor phone?

Q. And are they going in one direction or both directions, generally?

A. They’re going in both directions.

Q. And what time is the first call between those two phones, please?

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I’m going to object at this point. I’ve been waiting, but it does seem that this is cumulative, and the relevance in these details -- I’ll object on relevance.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: The first call occurred at 2:20 p.m., one minute in length, from the Ventura residence to the Azia Pryor telephone.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Do you have an entry there marked 1250 in the morning?

Q. One minute 30 seconds?

A. I'm sorry, one hour 30 minutes. They're numbers.

Q. You bill like phone companies, in reverse. And when was the last call between the Ventura phones and the Azia Pryor phones for the 14th?

A. The last call I have is at 11:40 p.m. for two minutes in length from the Ventura phone to the Azia Pryor phone.

Q. Okay. And in total, there was contact between the LeGrand phone and the Kite phone just one time?

A. Correct.

Q. And two times between the Kite phone and the Geragos & Geragos phones that day?

A. Correct.

Q. If you could please continue to Exhibit 866, the chart for February 15th. And please explain this exhibit for the jury, please.

A. It's a little off center.

Q. Okay.

A. Okay. Again, we have a number of individuals who we have identified as being associated with this investigation, and these are telephones that are associated with those individuals: Hamid Moslehi, Rudy Provencio, Vincent Amen, Marc Schaffel, Frank Cascio, Neverland Valley Ranch, Ann Kite, Law Offices of Geragos & Geragos, Evelyn Tavasci, Jay Jackson, a second line into Evelyn Tavasci's residence, David Ventura and Azia Pryor.

Q. Was the first call between the Cascio phone and the Jay Jackson phone at 2:11 in the morning?

Look on page two, four up from the bottom.
A. The David Ventura phone.
Q. Oh, I’m sorry. Was that the first of five calls to the David Ventura phone at 2:11 in the morning?
A. Correct.
Q. And can you tell us when the first call was between the Cascio phone and the Jackson phone that morning, that day?
A. The first call I show is at 10:17 a.m. from the Jay Jackson phone to the Cascio phone.
Q. Of the 14 calls between the Jay Jackson phone and the Frank Cascio phone, how many of them lasted more than one minute?
A. 11 of them.
Q. Was there a call between the Frank Cascio phone and the Geragos & Geragos phone that day as well?
A. Yes, there was.
Q. And what time was that?
A. That occurred at 2:45 p.m., for 44 seconds, from Cascio to Geragos phones.
Q. And prior to that phone contact between the Cascio phone and the Geragos & Geragos phone, was there a 15-minute phone call beginning at 1424 hours between the Cascio phone and the Jay Jackson phone?
A. That’s correct.
Q. And immediately after the phone call between the Cascio phone to the Geragos & Geragos phone, were there two more calls placed between the Cascio phone and the Jackson phone?

A. Correct. At 1501 and 1502, first one for one minute and the second one for three minutes.
Q. And at the end of the three-minute call at 1502 between the Cascio phone and the Jackson phone, was there a call between Frank Cascio’s phone and Marc Schaffel’s phone?
A. That’s correct, at 1505 hours for three minutes.

Q. Of the three calls between the Cascio phone and the Tavasci home phone, can you tell us what time the first call was?

A. The first call occurred at 5:45 p.m., six minutes in length.

Q. And which direction was that call going?

A. That was from Cascio to the Tavasci phone.

Q. At that same time, at 5:45 p.m., was there a call from the Vince Amen phone to the same Frank Cascio phone that dialed the Evvy Tavasci home phone?

A. That's correct. It was seven minutes in length from Amen to Cascio.

Q. And at the same time, the Cascio phone called the Tavasci home?

A. Correct.

Q. And that was for six minutes?

A. Correct.

Q. Is that what's known as a three-way call, Sergeant?

A. It is potentially a three-way call.

Q. Immediately after that call between the Amen/Cascio, Cascio/Tavasci phones, was there a call placed from the Cascio phone to the Schaffel phone?

A. That's correct. I have a two-minute call at 1755 hours from the Cascio phone to a Schaffel phone.

Q. Okay. And then were there two calls after that between the Cascio phone and one of the Evelyn Tavasci home phone numbers and the Cascio phone and the other Tavasci home number, the second line, at 1825 and 1843 hours?

A. That's correct. I have the first call at 1825 hours for three minutes and 33 -- correction, three minutes and 36 seconds, and that is from the Cascio phone to the Tavasci, Evelyn, home phone. And the second call is at 1843 hours, one minute 47 seconds in length, and that goes from the Cascio to the Evelyn Tavasci second home line.

Q. At 1851 hours, was there a phone call between the Cascio phone and the Jay Jackson phone?

A. That's correct. Two minutes in length.

Q. This would be the call immediately after the call from Cascio's line to the second home line at Evvy Tavasci's?

A. A few minutes later, correct.

Q. Okay. And that was a two-minute call?

A. Correct.

Q. At the end of that phone call at 1853 was there another call placed from the Cascio line to the same Jay Jackson line?

A. That's correct. We have a call at 1853, for 17 minutes in length.

Q. And at the end of that call, at 1910 hours, was there another call placed from the Frank Cascio phone to the Jay Jackson phone?

A. Correct. Three minutes 19 seconds in length.

Q. And immediately after that call, was there -- excuse me. Were there two calls placed from the Frank Cascio phone to the Frank Schaffel phone?

A. Okay. Yes, we have one at 7:14 p.m., one minute in length. And another one at 7:16 p.m., four minutes in length.

Q. After the phone call at 7:16 p.m. between the Cascio phone and the Schaffel phone, did the phone belonging to Jay Jackson connect with a phone belonging to Frank Cascio, in that direction?

A. That's correct. At 8:43 p.m. for four minutes 15 seconds.

Q. Was there another call between the same two phones and in the same direction at 8:48 p.m. that lasted for two minutes?

A. Correct.

Q. And immediately after that phone call at 8:48, was there a call between the Frank Cascio phone and the Evvy Tavasci home phone?

A. That's correct, at 8:56 p.m., two minutes 28 seconds in length.

Q. Was there a call approximately ten minutes later from the Cascio phone to the Amen phone at 2108?

A. Correct. Six minutes in length.

Q. At the end of that six-minute call, was there a call between the Cascio phone and the Neverland Valley Ranch phone?

A. That’s correct. 2126 hours. That’s an incoming call from Neverland Valley to the Cascio phone, three minutes 41 seconds in length.

Q. If you could turn to Exhibit 867, please. And is that the chart for Sunday, February 16th, of 2003?

A. That’s correct.

Q. If you could explain to the jury what’s depicted in this exhibit, please.

A. Once more, we have a number of telephones that are associated with individuals that have came up during this investigation; namely, starting on the left, Chris Tucker, Vincent Amen, Rudy Provencio, Evelyn Tavasci, Azia Pryor, Neverland Valley Ranch, Marc Schaffel, Chris Carter, David Ventura, Jay Jackson, Frank Cascio, another call from Marc Schaffel, and Christian Robinson as Site LLC.

Q. With respect to the calls between the Cascio phone and the Jay Jackson phone, the chart shows a “2” over a “1.” Were there 21 calls between the two, or what?

A. No, there was not. That should indicate that there were two calls from one direction and one call from the other direction.

Q. Which direction were the two calls from?

A. From Jay Jackson to Frank Cascio. And one call from Frank Cascio to Jay Jackson.

Q. Okay. Can you tell us the time of the first call between Jay Jackson and the Frank Cascio phone?

A. The first call occurred at 4:32 p.m., four minutes in length, from Jay Jackson to Frank Cascio telephones.

Q. And when was the last call between the two phones?

A. At 11:26 p.m., two minutes 30 seconds in length, from the Frank Cascio phone to Jay Jackson phone.

Q. In between the first and last calls between the Jay Jackson phone and the Cascio phone, was there contact between the Cascio phone and the Neverland Valley Ranch phone?

A. The only call I'm showing was at 0100 hours.

Q. So there was not?

A. Correct.

Q. When was the first call between the Vince Amen phone and the Frank Cascio phone?

A. 0844 hours, or 8:44 a.m.

Q. If you could turn to Exhibit 871, I believe. Is that the chart for February 20th?

A. That's correct.

Q. Is it Detective Zelis who will have all the fun with the charts on the 17th, 18th and 19th?

A. That's correct.

Q. I placed Exhibit 871, or a reasonable likeness, up on the board. Do you know whether this date, February 20th, coincided with the filming of a rebuttal video?

A. That is my understanding, correct.

Q. Okay. And explain to the jury, please, what's depicted in this exhibit.

A. Again, we have icons which are associated with telephones registered to individuals that have came up during this investigation. Starting at the top left, we have Frank Cascio, Marc Schaffel, David Ventura, Jay Jackson, Evelyn Tavasci second line, Evelyn Tavasci's home line, Neverland Valley Ranch, Vincent Amen, the Turnberry Isle Resort, Christopher Carter and Rudy Provencio.

Q. If you could begin, please, with the phone calls between the Vincent Amen line and the Jay Jackson line, tell us what time the first call was placed.

A. The first call occurred at 10:02 a.m., two minutes in length, from Amen to Jackson.

Q. Would you look at the time stamp, 9:51 on your chart, please?

A. I'm sorry, they're out of order. 9:51 would be the first call.

Q. And the second call would be at 10:02 a.m.?
A. Correct.
Q. How many times did the Vince Amen phone contact the Marc Schaffel phone that day?
A. I have five calls.
Q. And was the first call placed at nearly one o’clock in the morning or just before one o’clock in the morning?
A. Five minutes prior, at 0055 hours.
Q. And how many times was there contact between the Vince Amen phone and the Frank Cascio phone that day? You could refer to the chart itself if it helps you.
A. I’m just double-checking. I have 31 calls.
Q. Was the first call a call that was placed between Frank Cascio’s phone and Vince Amen’s phone at 1:25 in the morning?
A. That’s correct.
Q. And how many times was there contact between the Cascio phone and the Schaffel phone on the 8381 morning -- on the day of the 20th?

A. I have 11 calls. And I have two -- two more, so a total of 13.
Q. Of the two calls between the Cascio phone and the Evvy Tavasci home phone, can you tell us whether they were going in one direction or both ways?
A. It appears they were going just from Cascio to Evelyn Tavasci.
Q. From the Cascio phone to the Tavasci phone?
A. Correct.
Q. And what time is the first call from the Cascio phone to the Tavasci phone?
A. At 1:26 p.m., three minutes in length.
Q. If you would please turn to the next exhibit that you have, which is No. 875 -- actually, before we leave 871, the chart shows seven calls between Neverland Valley Ranch and Frank Cascio’s number; is that correct?
A. That’s correct.
Q. And what time did those calls begin and in which direction were they going, please?

A. I believe each of these calls was an incoming call. I'm sorry, they're going both directions. And they start at a little after 2 p.m. and end a little after 9 p.m.

Q. Okay. Now you can turn to Exhibit 875, please.

MR. SANGER: Is that March 5?

MR. NICOLA: It's March 2.

THE WITNESS: March 5th.

MR. SANGER: March 5 is what mine says.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Is there an exhibit tag on March 2nd?

A. Yeah. It's not mine, though.

Q. Okay. I'm sorry. 875 is March 5th. And who's doing March 2nd, 3rd and 4th?

A. Chief Investigator Dave Saunders.

Q. I'm sorry. Is this a chart for Wednesday, March 5th?

A. It is.

Q. Okay. Explain to the jury what's on this exhibit, please.

A. Okay. Again, we have a number of icons that are associated with telephones that are registered to individuals that have came up during this investigation. Starting on the left, we have Frank Cascio, Neverland Valley Ranch, Evelyn Tavasci/MJJ Productions, another number, MJJ Productions/Miko Brando, Evelyn Tavasci home, Rudy Provencio, Paul Hugo and David LeGrand.

Q. Let's talk about the Frank Cascio phone and the Neverland Valley Ranch phone. Can you tell us when they first -- when they first begin and which direction they went?

A. They first started at shortly before 2 a.m.

in the morning, which was an incoming call from Neverland to Frank Cascio, and it ended at 6:15 p.m., again with an incoming call from Neverland to Frank Cascio. In between that we had two calls from Cascio to Neverland.

Q. Okay. Can you tell us what time the call between the Paul Hugo phone and the Rudy Provencio phone was?

A. Okay. That was at 2109 hours for one minute in length.

Q. And also between the Paul Hugo phone and the David LeGrand phone, please?

A. That was 2134 hours, or 9:34 p.m., for two minutes in length.

Q. Okay. If you could move to Exhibit No. 876, please. And if you could explain to the jury what's on this exhibit?

A. Okay. As with the other exhibits, we have a number of telephones associated with individuals and/or locations that have came up during this investigation. I'll start on the left. We have Paul Hugo, Marc Schaffel and Vincent Amen. We have Frank Cascio, Neverland Valley Ranch. This was a room at the Beverly Hilton that was registered under Christopher Carter. We have the MJJ Productions/Miko Brando phone, Evelyn Tavasci/MJJ Productions phone, Evelyn Tavasci second home line, and the Evelyn Tavasci home line.

Q. Could you turn to the exhibit book on your right, please, and find Exhibit No. 255? Are those The Beverly Hilton records?

A. These are.

Q. Okay. Exhibit 255, is that the room bill for Chris Carter, Room 429, from The Beverly Hilton?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Okay. Did the phone charge -- do the phone charges on The Beverly Hilton records include minutes?

A. I don't immediately recognize anything as being specific to length of call.

Q. And indeed, there are no minutes on your chart for The Beverly Hilton calls, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Do you show three calls going from The Beverly Hilton out of the Chris Carter room on the 6th to Ms. Evelyn Tavasci's home or second home numbers?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And what time is the first call?

A. I have two calls that occur at 1136 hours. One to the home line; the second one to the second home line.

Q. Okay. Can you remove the page you’re looking at in Exhibit 255?

MR. SANGER: Which one?

MR. NICOLA: March 5.

Q. Showing you page one of Exhibit 255, just generally the time stamp in the middle column on the left, for example, eleven-three -- 11:36, that’s the time that corresponds to the call in your charts, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And there’s nothing on the right that indicates the length of the time; isn’t that right?

A. I don’t recognize anything as being a length.

Q. Can you tell us at approximately what time the call between the -- between the Hugo phone and the Schaffel phone was, please?

A. 15 -- or 3:59 p.m.

Q. How long did that call last?

A. Two minutes in length.

Q. And can you tell us what time the calls between the Amen phone and the Schaffel phone were?

A. At 12:21 p.m. and 12:17 p.m., four minutes and three minutes respectively.

Q. And your records show the only place of relevance to your investigation that the Cascio phone called was the Neverland Valley Ranch line?

A. That’s correct.

Q. If you could move on to Exhibit 877, please. And is 877 the chart for Friday, the 7th of March, 2003?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Again, the only calls from Frank Cascio that you registered were to Neverland Valley Ranch?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Can you tell us what time the first call was and what time the last one was?
A. The first call occurred five minutes after midnight, at 0005 hours, and the last call occurred at 12:03 p.m.
Q. Sergeant Bonner, can you tell us about the middle icon, The Beverly Hilton Kenneth Morgan room?
A. As with the Chris Carter room on the previous day, this was a room at The Beverly Hilton which was registered under the name Kenneth Morgan.
Q. And in which exhibit did you find the Kenneth Morgan phone records from The Beverly Hilton?
A. It was under Exhibit 256.
Q. Would you find those in the exhibit book, please?
A. Done.
Q. Done. When was the first call made from that room and to what number?
A. The first call occurred on 3-7, 2003, at 9:21 p.m. to the Evelyn Tavasci home line.
Q. How many calls were placed to the Evelyn Tavasci home line from the Kenneth Morgan room?
A. On the 7th?
Q. Yes, please.

A. I have a total of four calls.
Q. And when was the last phone call between the Kenneth Morgan room and the Evvy Tavasci home?
A. At 9:51 p.m.
Q. Is there a room charge visible on Exhibit 256?
A. There is; in the amount of $850.
Q. Per night?
A. Correct.
Q. I believe the next exhibit is 878.
MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I’m going to move to strike the last answer for the purpose of objecting to the question. I didn’t know where he was going, but it’s not going anywhere and violates the Court’s rule -- ruling, the room charge.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. SANGER: Stricken?

THE COURT: Stricken.

MR. NICOLA: Stricken?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 878, is that March 8th? I haven’t put it up yet.

A. That’s correct.

Q. Okay. What do you have listed in Exhibit 878?

A. Again, we have icons representing telephones associated with individuals and/or locations that have came up during this investigation; namely,

Q. Are the phone calls between the Evvy Tavasci home and the Kenneth Morgan room also contained in Exhibit 256?

A. Yes, they are.

Q. And of the 12 calls you have listed, can you tell us which direction they were going?

A. All of those are outgoing calls.

Q. And over what --

A. From the Kenneth Morgan room to the Evelyn Tavasci room, or line.

Q. And over what period of time did those 12 phone calls span?

A. The first call I have occurs at 8:35 a.m. in the morning and the last call occurs at 6:57 p.m. in the evening.

Q. Were there calls from the Kenneth Morgan room to two other phones registered to Evvy Tavasci through MJJ Productions?

A. There were.

Q. And on the right-hand side of that exhibit appears to be the number “3” in the middle of a link. Can you tell us about that phone number, please, between the Kenneth Morgan room and the Evelyn Tavasci MJJ Production phone?

A. Okay. That is the -- the phone number is (818) 402-7087. It comes back registered to Evelyn Tavasci, MJJ Productions.
Q. And in the top center of the page, there's another telephone with the same icon. Is that a different number with the four connections?
A. Actually, I'm sorry, that -- the four is the 7087 number. The four calls were to that (818) 402-7087. And the three calls were to (310) 717-8984.
Q. The next exhibit in order, please, Exhibit 879. Is this the exhibit for Sunday, March the 9th?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. Can you tell us what time the phone call between the Cascio phone and the Evvy Tavasci second home line was?
A. It occurred at 11:34 p.m., and that was an incoming call from Tavasci to the Cascio line.
Q. Can you tell us about the phone calls between the Cascio phone and the Schaffel phone on that day?
A. I have two telephone calls from the Cascio phone to -- correction, one from the Cascio phone to the Schaffel phone. Another one that was an incoming from Schaffel to Cascio. First one was one minute prior to 7 p.m., and the second one was at 9:31 p.m.

Q. Can you tell us about the 12 phone calls between the Evvy Tavasci/MJJ Production phone and the Schaffel phone, please? Do you know when the first one occurred?
A. No. There appears to be an error.
Q. That should say "Neverland Valley Ranch"?
A. It should.
Q. Okay. Can you tell us what time the first call to Neverland Valley Ranch occurred?
MR. SANGER: I'm just going to object for the moment, that there is a reference to, "That should be Neverland Valley Ranch," and it's not clear what that reference is to.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: The 12 phone calls I was referring to should have been referred to as the Neverland Valley Ranch, correct?

A. That's correct.
Q. So the link between the Tavasci/MJJ Productions phone and the Marc Schaffel phone is incorrect; is that what you're saying?
A. That's correct.
Q. Okay. Were there any calls between the Schaffel phone and the Tavasci phone for that day?
A. No.
Q. Okay. So the 12 calls between the Tavasci/MJJ Production phone and the Neverland Valley Ranch phone began at what time that day?

A. 8:48 a.m.
Q. And what time did they cease?
A. At 8:19 p.m.
Q. Is the chart -- excuse me, is the spreadsheet behind the chart accurate, to your recollection?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. Okay. And is that how you realized the actual chart that's up on the screen is incorrect with respect to the link between the Evvy Tavasci phone and the Marc Schaffel phone?
A. That's correct.
Q. The call between the Amen phone and the Schaffel phone, what time did that occur, please?
A. At 1757 hours.
Q. And that was a one-minute call?
A. One-minute duration.
MR. NICOLA: Your Honor, I'll move to strike this chart, Exhibit 879.
It is 879, correct?
THE WITNESS: Correct.
MR. NICOLA: Pending correction.
MR. SANGER: Well, I object to that. It's been referred to in front of the jury, so it should remain. And they can present a corrected chart if they want.
MR. NICOLA: We can do that.
THE COURT: I think that's the way to do it.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Did that take you through your daily obligation?

A. It did.

MR. NICOLA: Thank you.

Your Honor, I have no further questions at this time.

THE COURT: All right. We’ll take our break and then you can do your cross.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Sanger, you ready?

MR. SANGER: Yes.

Before we do, I was right in the middle of trying to find Exhibits 451 and 458. They’re in a binder.

MR. NICOLA: The originals? They’re all right here.

MR. SANGER: There we go. All right. I’ll get to them in a minute.

May I proceed, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Okay. Some big-picture questions. First of all -- I don’t really want to go through the exact times of minutes of everything, but there are some big-picture questions.

First of all, in all these phone records that you analyzed, were you able to determine from the phone records whether or not Michael Jackson was ever on a single call?

A. No.

Q. And as to some of the other records, for instance, those pertaining to Marc Schaffel, Frederic Marc Schaffel, there are several telephone numbers associated with Mr. Schaffel, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you’re one of the lead detectives in this case, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Based on your investigation, during the period of time February and March of 2003, Mr. Schaffel had converted his house into an office; is that right?

A. It’s the first I’ve heard of it, but --
Q. Were you aware that he had a number of people working out of his house?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. And they had different offices set up in his house?
A. The interviews that I’ve conducted, basically people were working -- doing work out of his house, but not necessarily separate offices.
Q. Okay. All right. Now, I notice on the summary charts, sometimes, in fact most of the time, you included one-minute calls?

A. Correct.
Q. Sometimes you did not, correct?
A. Usually -- I mean, we tried to include everything that was a one-minute call.
Q. Okay. For instance - and I’ll find the chart here - but there was a chart, I believe, where you had not shown two calls from Jay Jackson’s house because apparently they were very short calls. They were one-minute calls.
MR. NICOLA: Objection. The question is vague.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Do you recall that?
A. I think I can clarify that. The records that were introduced into evidence show that those calls were actually less than 30 seconds in length, and that’s why we removed those calls from the overall count.
Q. All right. So some of these phone records -- you looked at phone records from various carriers and from hotels; is that correct?
A. Correct.
Q. And some of the carriers bill a call as a minute, no matter how long it takes?
A. Correct.
Q. If it’s under a minute, I should say, of course.

A. Yes.

Q. And sometimes the carrier will show a specific number of seconds; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now, another big-picture item, if we can. There are some calls that you showed were placed to the law firm of Geragos & Geragos?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And some of those calls -- and we can go through if you want, but some of those calls were a minute or less, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Do you have any reason to believe that the caller was able to get through the receptionist and to an attorney there?

A. I wouldn’t necessarily think an incoming call less than a minute, but an out -- I’m sorry, an incoming call from Geragos to the cell phone could result in a connection in less than a minute. However, I would highly doubt that a call from the cell phone to Geragos would probably result in a call.

Q. In other words, his law firm has a receptionist; is that correct?

A. I would assume so.

Q. Okay. And there are a number of people that work at his law firm besides Mr. Geragos himself?

A. That’s correct.

Q. All right. Another overall question. When there are phone calls that are placed to -- they’re coming into a place like the Turnberry or one of the other hotels, those calls go to a switchboard; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And then the switchboard would send the calls to particular rooms or particular staff people or guests or whatever, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And so, number one, you have no way of determining where those calls ended up, correct?

A. Other than to say they went to the Turnberry itself, no.
Q. That’s right. As far as you could trace it, it got to the reception desk, and then where it went from there we don’t know?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. And once again, if there’s a one-minute call to one of those hotels, there’s no reason to believe that the call actually got completed to a guest in the hotel?
A. Not necessarily, no.
Q. Okay. All right. One more overall question here. You mentioned Rudy Provencio in your analysis, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. And the first call that you show Rudy Provencio was involved in was on February the 8th of 2003; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.
Q. And there are some other references to Mr. Provencio from time to time being involved in phone calls after that date, correct?
A. That’s correct.
Q. But you have no phone calls showing that Rudy Provencio was involved in making or receiving calls from any of the people involved in this investigation before February the 8th, 2003, correct?
A. Not that has made it into these exhibits.
Q. Well, based on your analysis of the records and everybody else that was helping you - right? --
A. Correct.
Q. -- you have no indication that Rudy Provencio talked to anybody on the phone associated with this case before February the 8th, 2003; is that correct?
A. Again, I’d have to -- to say that it’s based within these exhibits, no, there is not. However, I am aware that there are some records that did not make it into the computer to get analyzed with this, and I can’t tell you whether or not there are or are not calls in those records.

Q. Okay. So you’re saying -- you’re leaving the door open that, you know, there’s some other records, but you did your best job at analyzing what you thought was important for this case, right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Okay. And you tried to put in all the phone calls that you thought would be important to the investigation, right?

A. Correct.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Now, let me ask if I can retrieve from the District Attorney, I think I need the original of 451 and 458.

MR. NICOLA: Help yourself.

MR. SANGER: May I walk around here?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Now, Detective Bonner, did you prepare these charts, these actual charts that you have shown?

A. I had them prepared, correct.

Q. Okay. And some of these were finalized just this morning or late last night; is that correct?

A. Late last night.

Q. Okay. So we were handed the final versions of some of them just this morning. They were handed to the defense this morning, correct?

A. I don’t know when you were handed. I do know that we finalized them late last night.

Q. All right. Did you do a chart for February the 4th, 2003?

A. No.

Q. Were you aware that there were telephone calls relating to some of the people in this case on February the 4th, 2003?

A. Yes.

Q. And specifically let me ask you if those were from the SBC Pac-Bell phone records, or, I don’t know anymore, AT&T phone records?

A. I’d have to refer to the records.

Q. Okay. I’m sorry, just one second. Okay. Let me get you the original.

All right. May I approach the witness, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: I’m going to show you Exhibit 451 and I’ve turned it to Tab No. 6, and see if you’re oriented as to what that is.

A. Okay. This is a telephone record, a Pacific Bell telephone record for the Jay Jackson line, (213) 739-9279, and it shows two calls on February 4th to a phone number ending in 1861.

MR. SANGER: And, Your Honor, with your permission, may I put a copy of that one page up?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: All right. This is 451, Tab 6.

Q. All right. And that -- the two calls that I’m referring to there say, “FE04.” Is that February 4th? Is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. 6:11 p.m. and 6:14 p.m.; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. It says -- oh, thank you. There’s a point up there, I think we all know but -- all right. And it says, “Reseda.” Is that where it’s going or where it came from?

A. I believe that’s where it’s going to.

Q. And that’s the phone number that it’s going to, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And this is the phone number that it’s coming from; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. And both of those phone calls were four minutes apiece?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. The phone that this was coming from was Jay Jackson’s phone; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. The phone number it’s going to is whose phone?

A. I don’t immediately recognize that number.

Q. All right. Let’s see if we can figure it out here.

If you turn to Tab 9, please, and look at those documents and see if those are the types of documents that would assist you in determining who is assigned a particular phone number.

A. It is. That phone number, (818) 757-1861, comes back to Chris Tucker.

Q. Chris Tucker. Okay.

What I'm going to propose, with the Court's permission, is I'm going to write on a piece of paper here illustrative of the witness's testimony. I'll take it piece by piece, and if he agrees, I'm going ask to admit it and publish it.

So I'm going to start with a blank piece of paper, and I guess we should have that marked as defense next in order, if we may.

THE COURT: That's fine.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

THE CLERK: That's 5011.

MR. SANGER: 5011? Okay. Why don't we go ahead and mark that piece of paper.

Okay. Thank you.

Q. Okay. Now, you would agree that the phone records that we just referred to up here, which is from Tab No. 6 of Exhibit 451 - okay? - the one that's on the board - all right? - you would agree that those relate to February 4th of 2003; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. So I'm going to write at the top "02-04-03."

Now, your chart started -- Exhibit 859 started on 02-05-03; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. That was a Wednesday. So what day of the week would 04 be?

A. Tuesday.

Q. There you go. You paid attention in grammar school and it paid off, all right.

All right. I'm going to write that on the top of the page.

Now, the one telephone that we're dealing with here belongs to Jay Jackson; is that correct?

A. Correct. The 9279.

Q. Okay. So I'm going to draw a telephone. And I'm going to put "Jay Jackson" under it. And now that you've looked at the other phone records, you determined that that call was placed to who?

A. Chris Tucker's phone.

Q. Chris Tucker's phone. I'm going to draw another telephone, not very well, by the way, and I'm going to put the number "2" on the bar. That's what you were doing if you were showing two calls, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And these two calls go from Jay Jackson's telephone to Chris Tucker's telephone, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. So I'll write "Chris Tucker." And remind us who Chris Tucker is.

A. He is an entertainer, comedian.

Q. And he was in the movies with Jackie Chan?

A. Yes.

Q. There you go. And I'm going to do one other thing, if it's all right with you. I'm going to do an arrow at the end of the bar to show which direction those calls were going. Would that be all right?

A. Sounds good.

Q. Does that make sense to you?

Okay. And can you tell us what time of day those telephone calls occurred?

A. 6:11 and 6:14 p.m.

Q. Okay. So I'm going to write down 6:11 and 6:14 p.m. under the line.

May I approach the witness?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: I'll show you what I did.

Who's looking at this? Oh, that's right. Sorry.

MR. NICOLA: That's a beautiful chart.

MR. SANGER: Thank you. Others will be the judge of that.

THE WITNESS: You appear to have paid more attention in art class than I did.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: There you go. All right. I want to ask you, does that appear to be an accurate depiction?

A. Correct.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I would move into evidence 5011.

THE COURT: It's admitted.

MR. SANGER: Thank you. And I'd ask permission to place that up on the board.

THE COURT: You may.

MR. SANGER: Thank you. Or on the screen.

Q. Okay. Did it the old-fashioned way. Now, does that accurately represent -- I don't want to beat this to death here, but does that accurately represent the date at the top, right?

A. Correct.

Q. And then we have a call from Jay Jackson's telephone, two calls, 6:11 and 6:14 p.m., to Chris Tucker's telephone, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Okay. Thank you. All right. Now I want to go to some other telephone calls at the end. And let me take this down. I'm sorry, not at the end. I want to go to the middle, to 2-11. Excuse me. Oh, I'm sorry, excuse me. Before I leave that, you have the book up there with the 200 series, I believe; is that correct?

A. Appears to be from -- correction. Or -- it is the 200 series.

Q. So if you look at Exhibit 223 -- And that's already been received into evidence, Your Honor, and I'm going to ask permission to put that up.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. There's two pages to 223; is that correct, sir?

A. That's correct.

Q. Okay. The first page I'll put up on the board, and that's the itinerary that we've seen -- you weren't in the room, I don't think, but we've seen this before. It's an itinerary for a flight that apparently did not occur, no tickets were issued on this. But it's an itinerary. But do you see that? Do you recognize that to be what it is?

MR. NICOLA: Objection; lack of foundation, Judge.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I recognize it as an itinerary. However, I'm not familiar enough with it to tell you whether or not a ticket was issued or not.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: That's fair enough. In any event, there's an itinerary there, and that's for a flight that's scheduled to go at two o'clock in the afternoon; is that correct?

A. It appears to be the case.

Q. All right. And if we look at -- keeping that in mind for a moment, if we look at page two down at the bottom, there's a fax transmittal that shows this document was faxed or attempted to be faxed at 11:31 in the morning on February 5, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. It shows, "NG," it didn't go through, but at least they were trying to fax it at that time, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now, on your February 5 document, if we look at page -- if the summary is page one, then this would be page three. It's the second page of phone summary records.

A. Okay.

Q. All right. Did I tell you Exhibit 859?

A. That's correct.

Q. Did I say that? Okay. So that's for the 5th of February. And if you look down the list --

Your Honor, may I inquire of counsel?

Has this page been changed?

THE WITNESS: I don't believe so.

MR. SANGER: Okay. May I inquire of the witness? All right. Why don’t I just approach so we don’t have a problem, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You may.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Let me just make sure we’re -- maybe compare the top and the bottom to see if they’re the same.
A. Yes.
MR. SANGER: Okay. May I publish this page? It’s already been admitted.

THE COURT: Yes.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: It actually says page two of three at the bottom, sir?
A. That’s correct.
Q. It’s actually page three of the exhibit, because the first page is your summary, right?
A. Correct.
Q. All right. I’ll put that up. Let’s see if it settles there.
All right. I’m hoping it’s going to get a little clearer, but it doesn’t seem to want to do that. I guess we cut off part of it here. Let’s see if that....
All right. Before I refer to -- I’m going to refer to this particular line here.
A. Can you show me which one again?
Q. Yeah, it’s -- there you go. You have to hold it just right. I’m going to refer to this particular line here, which is 2-5-03 at 9:58.
A. Okay.
Q. Okay? And before we talk about that particularly, let me ask you some general questions that will cover other entries as well.
In general, through your investigation in this case, did you determine that when Mr. Jackson travels, the people that arrange his travel often will take a name that is not Mr. Jackson’s name and use that for the purpose of booking hotels?

A. That’s correct.
Q. And is that something common with celebrities, to book rooms under other names, whether it’s a staff person or just a fictitious name?

A. I don’t have personal knowledge. This is the only instance that I’ve personally been involved in.

Q. All right. Have you ever seen other celebrities book rooms?

A. No.

Q. Okay. All right. Anyway, it makes sense to you. You don’t want to put your own name down there if you’re going to attract a lot of attention, right?

A. Correct.

Q. And sometimes in your investigation, just to cover the big picture, you will see in the documents that the name that is used appears to have -- the last name that’s used appears to have no relation to anybody we know of, right?

A. Correct.

Q. So it just might be a name like “Mason” or something like that; is that correct?

A. Could be, yes.

Q. On the other hand, sometimes you’ll see rooms are booked in the name of somebody who is actually working for MJJ Productions or in some other way associated with that organization, such as Chris Carter?

A. Correct.

Q. So Chris Carter might reserve rooms in his name, right?

A. Correct.

Q. You never saw rooms reserved in the name of Michael Jackson himself, correct?

A. No.

Q. All right. And the records are kept openly in that regard, correct? In other words, through the records that you found both at Neverland and from the various places where records were subpoenaed or obtained by search warrants, internally there was no effort to hide the fact that these were Mr. Jackson’s rooms, right?

A. No.

Q. All right. So, going to these -- we can look at all these rooms down here. These are basically a series of phone numbers that are associated with rooms or suites at that hotel; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And the Presidential Suite, or the top one that we're looking at here, was a multi-room suite; is that correct?

A. I don't know for certain. I just simply went off the records themselves.

Q. In your investigation, the course of your investigation, did you determine that the Presidential Suite was a multi-room suite?

A. Not personally, no.

Q. You heard that though?

A. I have heard that, yes.

Q. Do you know how many telephones were located in that suite?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you know how many people associated with MJJ Productions or with other people in this case, or in or out of this case, how many people were associated with that room?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know how many people came in and out of that room?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Do you know how many people -- how many people used the phone or phones in that room?

A. Of course not.

Q. Pardon?

A. Of course not.

Q. Yeah, okay.

That's a question like Tuesday comes before Wednesday. I just wanted to get it on the record.

Thank you.

Okay. Now, as we look here, this appears -- this particular call appears to have occurred at 9:58 in the morning, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. That’s two minutes of 10:00, right?

A. Correct.

Q. And that would have been Florida time, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And Florida is three hours -- what time would it be in California if it was 9:58 in Florida?

A. It would be two minutes before 7 a.m., California time.

Q. All right. So there’s some call from somebody at two minutes to 7:00 that lasts 27 minutes that was placed from the Turnberry and was made to Jay Jackson, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Now, in the course of your investigation, I think we’ve already shown you, and I won’t put it back up, Exhibit 223. That at least has an itinerary for people to fly commercially at two o’clock on the 5th, right?

A. Correct.

Q. In the course of your investigation, you determined that in fact, Chris Tucker was the person who arranged for a private jet to take the Arvizos to Florida; is that correct?

A. That is my understanding.

Q. And you do not have any other calls, other than those on the 4th, between members associated with the Arvizos - that is, Jay Jackson and the Venturas or anybody else associated with the Arvizos - and Chris Tucker; is that correct?

A. I believe there was one call later on that we covered.

Q. When was that?

A. It was in the March time frame.

Q. Okay. I’m sorry, I meant in this time period, February the 4th and the 5th, regarding this flight to Miami.

A. No. No.

Q. Okay. All right. Now I’d like to turn to Exhibit 458, if we can, please, and I’ll take this off in a moment. And 458 relates to whom?

A. You’ll have to bring me the record.

Q. Oh, I’m sorry.

May I approach, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

MR. SANGER: Sure.

Q. 458 relates to whom?

A. This appears to be a billing for Jay Jackson telephone line.

Q. And what company?

A. I believe this is the Talk America records.

Q. And that would be the long-distance carrier for Jay Jackson?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. So the phone records that we just saw up on the board were the local phone records for Jay Jackson; is that correct?

A. Or local toll or -- yeah. Not long distance.

Q. Not long distance. There are toll charges?

A. Correct.

Q. But not technically long distance.

All right. So looking at 458, these appear to indicate phone calls made long distance by Jay Jackson. And if I’m correct -- if you’ll bear with me, just hold on to that. Don’t go anywhere for a moment.

Look at your exhibits that you just talked about today, Exhibits 859 through 881, whatever it was, and you testified to some of them, but not all of them, we know that, okay? And I’m going to ask you to look in particular at 862 and 863.

While the witness is doing that, I’d like to have marked next in order two more blank pieces of paper.

THE COURT: You may.

MR. SANGER: Thank you. Separate numbers.

Q. All right. Are you looking at 862 and 863?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Not a big thing. It’s just you jump -- 862 is for February the 8th, and then the next summary chart you have is for February the 12th; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. All right. So you did not do a summary chart for February the 11th, correct?

A. No.

Q. Now, on February 11th, based on your investigation, the night of February 11th, right at the end of the night, were you aware that Janet Arvizo had asked somebody to give her a ride?

A. The 11th or the 12th. I’m not sure which day.

Q. And the ride actually occurred at -- the ride -- the Rolls Royce left the ranch at about 1:52 in the morning; is that correct?

A. The person I interviewed wasn’t real certain about times, so --

Q. You’re familiar with the gate logs, right?

A. Yes. But --

Q. Did you look at the entries on the gate logs?

A. I did. But not having them in front of me, I couldn’t state with certainty.

Q. Whatever time it was, it was sometime in the early morning hours of the 12th when the Rolls Royce left the property; is that your understanding?

A. Yes.

Q. So my question was, were you aware that she was asking, around midnight, somewhere just before midnight on the 11th, for a ride?

A. That is my understanding, yes.

Q. All right. There you go.

So on the 11th, I want to follow the same procedure, with the Court’s permission, and I’m going to write up at the top “02-11-03.” And since the 12th was a Wednesday, the 11th had to be a Tuesday. We learned that. Right?

A. Sounds good.

Q. Okay. And now I’m going to ask, with the Court’s permission, to put up page two of Exhibit 458.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: All right.

Q. Page two of 458. All right. Now, referring to -- I'm going to refer to these three calls down here. Hit the line numbers, I'll make it easier. Referring to these three calls down here that say "Santa Barbara," so that looks like 17, 18 and 19, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And I think you told us these are the phone records of Jay Jackson, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. The long-distance phone records, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And it appears that on line 17, on 2-11-03 8416 at 2322 hours -- that would be 11:22 at night, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Jay Jackson calls from Los Angeles, where his phone's located, to Santa Barbara, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And then you look right below it, at 2323, in other words, one minute later, he makes another call to Santa Barbara, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And then on the 19th -- I'm sorry, on line 19, the same evening, at 2349 or 11:49 at night, he makes another call to Santa Barbara, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. So, once again, I'm going to draw one of those little phones and I'm going to put "Jay Jackson" under it, and I'm going to put -- there's two different numbers that are called, right?

A. That's correct.

Q. I'm going to put two arrows, do it a little differently than your chart, but not much, and I'll put "1" for one number and "2" for the other numbers, and then I will draw two phones quickly.

All right. Now, let me ask you if you recognize the first number that was called on that evening.

A. The 2300 number?

Q. Yeah.

A. I’m not certain, but it may be the Santa Barbara Police Department.

Q. The Santa Barbara -- that’s the Santa Barbara Police Department in downtown Santa Barbara, correct?

A. The police department as opposed to the sheriff’s department.

Q. Yes, sir. I was going to let you explain that. For those who don’t know, but probably everybody does, the police department has jurisdiction over the City of Santa Barbara?

A. Within the city limits, correct.

Q. Within the city limits in the South County?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. The sheriff’s department has jurisdiction over the entire county, but primarily the incorporated areas; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And I guess by contract, some of the unincorporated areas like Buellton, Solvang, so on?

A. A few of them, yes.

Q. Okay. So the first call we believe is to the police department, right?

A. It’s my guess, based on the number.

Q. Okay. So I’m going to put a little shield-looking thing there that says “SBPD,” and I’m going to show you this in a minute. The next two calls are made to what number?

A. (805) 683-2724.

Q. What number is that?

A. I don’t know.

Q. Is that the sheriff’s department, by any chance?

A. It’s not a number I recognize as being the sheriff’s department.

Q. All right. So you don’t know that number at this point?

A. No.

Q. So I’m going to just write “2724” on there.

I won’t put the whole number down. And then we’ll deal with that later.

May I approach the witness, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: I’m just going to ask you to take a look at that.

THE COURT: State the exhibit number.

MR. SANGER: Yes, I’m sorry.

THE WITNESS: 5012. And it appears to be an accurate representation.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

MR. NICOLA: May I see that?

MR. SANGER: Oh, yeah.

MR. NICOLA: Thank you.

MR. SANGER: I’d move 5012 in.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

MR. SANGER: Thank you. May I publish it?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: By now everybody’s got it, all right?

Q. So we have -- on 2-11, we’ve got three calls from Jay Jackson to numbers in Santa Barbara. One is the Santa Barbara police, we believe, and the other is a number ending in 2724?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Okay. Thank you.

All right. I’d like you to go to Exhibit 451, Tab No. 5.

And, Your Honor, I’m going to follow the same procedure, with the Court’s permission, with one variation. Rather than doing a separate page for a number of days, one separate page for each day over a number of days, I will do one page for a series of phone calls over a series of days.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. I’m going to ask you to look at the -- under No. 5, tell me whose phone records those are.

A. These are the phone records for David Ventura, Janet Arvizo’s parents.

Q. Now, you did not do all of the summary charts in this case. I think we’ve established that.

A. Correct.

Q. Would you agree that the last summary chart that was prepared and submitted, although you haven’t testified to it - somebody else will - will be Exhibit 882?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And so the last summary chart, then, was for March the 12th of 2003?

A. Correct.

Q. And what was the significance of the date March the 12th, 2003?

A. The 12th was the day we believed the Arvizo family left Neverland Ranch.

Q. All right. Now -- may I approach just to make sure we have the same pages here?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. We’re looking at Exhibit -- I shouldn’t talk up here, so excuse me. I just want you to look at these pages here.

A. 8-1.

Q. And dash 2.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, if I may speak loudly just briefly so I can get oriented.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. On these, I believe you have to look at the date of the bill and then reference the page numbers. Do you want to --

A. I just got to find it.

Q. Okay. Excuse me one second.

A. Okay. I have them all.

Q. Why don’t you put a post-it sign on each one of those that you just found.

All right. Now, Exhibit 882, the reason I put post-its there, I need to flip back and forth a little bit. So look at Exhibit 882, first of all, 8-8-2. 882, that’s the exhibit number. Sorry to say it three times.

That's a summary chart for 3-12-03, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. On that summary chart - I realize you did not prepare it, and I'm not going to go into any detail except to ask, do any of the phone calls to Buellton or Guadalupe that are shown on Exhibit 451, Tab 5, the page that says March 26th, 8-1 -- 8-1 of 9, that's the first half -- the first post-it. Are any of those phone calls shown on that summary chart?

A. Do you mean the calls from the --

Q. The David Ventura telephone to Buellton and Guadalupe on the 12th.

A. On 2-12? No, they're not.

MR. SANGER: All right. Now, Your Honor, may I put up that page of Exhibit 451-5, and it's the March 26th, 8-1 of 9.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: And I did this before, Your Honor, and I apologize. And I apologize, there's some little pen marks there that should be ignored. They're not on the original exhibit.

Q. But I'd like to direct your attention to the telephone calls here to -- on March the 12th. It's Line No. 4, March the 12th, 5:08 p.m. to Buellton. Do you see that?

A. I do.

Q. About a four-minute call?

A. Four-minute call, correct.

Q. And March the 12th, a 7:02 call to Buellton, a one-minute call, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And March the 12th at 11:25 p.m. to Guadalupe, 35-minute call?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now, I'm going to put at the top of this page -- there's an overlap, because you already have a 3-12 exhibit, but I'm going to overlap and it's going to be 03-12-03 to 03-21-03. And then we're going to start with the telephone number that this comes from, and I'm going to risk drawing another telephone here.

And whose phone do all of these calls come from on those three pages that I’ve asked you to look at on page Exhibit 451, Tab 5?
A. David Ventura.

Q. I’m going to write “David Ventura. And based on your investigation, by 3-12-03, you believed that the children, as well as Janet Arvizo, had left the ranch; is that correct?
A. Correct.
Q. And they went to David Ventura’s house; is that correct?
A. I’m not certain where they went, but I do know they left.
Q. All right. Now, I’m just going to look at the phone number that ends in 5002, which is shown here on line 6, all right? It says “Guadalupe,” line 6, 5002, okay?
Did you determine whose telephone that was?
A. No.
Q. Okay. I’ll put a phone there, and I’m going to write the last digits of the number, “5002,” and I’ll put “in Guadalupe.”
All right. Now what we’ll do is, we’ll start here with what we have, and I’m going to put arrows for these various phone calls from the David Ventura telephone to the 5002 phone in Guadalupe.
And I’m going to put the date and time on each call, because this chart is going to span several days.
So when’s the first call to Guadalupe?
A. The first call to Guadalupe was at 11:25 p.m.
Q. So I’ll put -- it was on 3-12-03, correct?

A. Correct.
Q. 11:25 p.m. All right. When’s the next call to Guadalupe? I think if you look at the page that’s on the screen there.
A. March 13th, 8:45 p.m.
Q. And while we’re at it, I’m going to put down the duration here. So the first call was a duration of 35 minutes; is that correct?

A. Correct.
Q. The second call?
A. 64 minutes.
Q. 64 minutes. Okay. Now, I’m going to -- are there any other calls to Guadalupe on that page?
A. No.
Q. All right. With the Court’s permission, I’ll go to the next page, 451, Tab 5. What’s the next call to Guadalupe?
A. March 14th, 8:12 p.m.
Q. How many minutes?
A. One minute.
Q. The next call?
A. March 16th?
Q. Yes.
A. 26 minutes.
Q. What time was that?
A. 12:01 a.m.
Q. 12:01 a.m. So one minute after midnight?
A. Correct.

Q. And how many minutes? I’m sorry.
A. 26 minutes.
Q. Okay. Next?
A. March 16th, 10:14 p.m., six minutes.
Q. Next call?
A. March 17th, 7 -- 6:28 p.m., one minute.
Q. Next call?
A. March 17th, 8:51 p.m., one minute.
Q. Yes. Next one?
A. March 17th, 8:57 p.m., one minute.
Q. And again, when you say one-minute calls, they could be less than that?
A. Correct.
Q. Somebody picks it up and they say, “He’s not here.”
A. Correct.
Q. Next call?
A. March 18th, 3:26 p.m., 22 minutes.
Q. Okay.
A. March 18th, 9:29 p.m., 26 minutes.
Q. 26 minutes.

All right. And then I'll put up the last page from -- or the third page I identified from Exhibit 451, Tab 5, and ask if that shows additional calls and times.

A. It does.

Q. And if you'd go ahead, and we'll continue to add them here.

A. 3-19, 1910, or 7:10 p.m., 36 minutes.

Q. Okay. Go ahead.

A. 3-19, 8:01 p.m., 17 minutes.

Q. Yes.

A. 3-19, 10:50 p.m., three minutes.

Q. Okay.

A. 3-20, 2:57 p.m., three minutes.

Q. Yes.

A. 3-20, 7:52 p.m., three minutes.

Q. Okay.

A. 3-20, 7:55 p.m., 20 minutes.

Q. So it looks like 7:52, there was a hang-up and then a call back pretty much right away; is that right?

A. Appears to be the case.

Q. And that last one was 20 minutes; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay.

A. And finally, 3-21, 9:37 p.m., one minute.

MR. SANGER: All right. May I approach the witness --

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Ask you to take a look at this and see if that's --

THE COURT: Give us the exhibit number.

MR. SANGER: Yes, I'm sorry, that's Exhibit No. 5013.

THE WITNESS: It appears to be correct.

MR. SANGER: All right. May I retrieve the exhibit?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

And I would move into evidence 5013 and ask to publish it.

THE COURT: All right. It's admitted.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. All right. We won't go over all this again, but this is a summary of what you just testified to, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now, we talked about that phone number and -- well, it ends in 5002. We don't have to say the whole number again here. Do you know if anybody -- as one of the detectives in the case, do you know if anybody made an effort to find out whose number that was?

A. No.

Q. Do you know if the defense turned over information to the prosecution indicating whose number that was?

A. I don't know, no.

Q. Do you know if anybody tried to find a number for a Mr. Vivanco?

A. I have -- somebody has asked me to go in -- we went in and researched our record and found no record other than a Santa Maria number for him.

Q. You found a number for Mr. Vivanco?

A. Yes, but he gave our sheriff's detectives, when we served a search warrant in November of 2003, he gave a Santa Maria number.

Q. And you -- did you go along and interview him at that time?

A. I didn't interview him. I was at Neverland, but that was the phone number that was given to the detective who put it onto his report.

Q. Okay. So you checked that phone number from November and it's a different number than this number; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Have you subsequently learned, from information turned over from the defense, that there is some relationship between Mr. Vivanco and that number?

A. No. I --

MR. NICOLA: Objection, Your Honor. Asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled. The answer was, “No.” Next question.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Have you done anything to follow up on that, to your knowledge? And by “you,” I mean your department.

MR. NICOLA: Objection, Your Honor, it calls for speculation. And it’s asked and answered. It’s beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Again, I have not personally had anything to do with attempting to find out what that number comes back to. I was asked to research Vivanco to find out what number he gave to us and that’s what I did.

MR. SANGER: Okay. All right. I’ll take that down now, Your Honor.

Q. All right. I want to go through just a few of your summary charts here and try to do it in a way that is representative, rather than going through every single thing.

First of all, in your analysis of the phone records, you determined that there are a lot of telephone calls that are placed to phone numbers associated with Evvy Tavasci; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And you understand that Evvy Tavasci works for MJJ Productions; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And she’s also responsible for securing phones for a number of people; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. She also has other people who assist her in the office; is that your understanding?

A. One other person that I know of, yes.

Q. Okay. And is it also your understanding that Miss Tavasci tends to be the person that people go to at MJJ Productions to obtain information, make reservations, all that sort of thing?

A. I know that she is the administrative assistant, but I think that’s what she does, based on what she’s described to us.

Q. Okay. The District Attorney several times referred to her as Mr. Jackson’s personal assistant. Did you hear that?

A. I did.

Q. Okay. And in addition to that, she fulfills the function of facilitating the purchase of supplies, tickets, travel arrangements, all sorts of things; is that right?

A. I would believe that to be the case.

Q. Okay. So she’s not just doing this for Mr. Jackson. She is working for -- or she is providing these services to anybody associated with MJJ Productions who needs to have such things; is that right?

MR. NICOLA: I’ll object. Lack of foundation. Compound.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: On compound or lack of foundation?

THE COURT: Lack of foundation.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. Based on your investigation, did you determine what her duties were, what Evvy Tavasci’s duties were?

MR. NICOLA: Objection. Relevance at this point.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Based on the investigation, I think we’ve seen a few different things that, in addition to coordinating for Mr. Jackson’s personal calendar, that she also is a coordinator for travel arrangements for various other subjects.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. Now, the summary charts in general show that there’s a bunch of people, or at least their telephones, talking to each other here during a period of time. That’s pretty much what you’re showing, right?

A. Correct.

Q. You’re aware that a number of these people were involved in putting together rebuttal videos, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. Based on your investigation, there was the first rebuttal video, the actual one that was aired, that was hosted by Maury Povich; is that right?
A. Correct.
Q. And then there was a second one called, “Michael Jackson Home Movies”; is that right?
A. I don’t know if that was a rebuttal, but I do remember that we have a video of that.

Q. All right. During the period of time that Mr. Schaffel was involved, based on your review of the records and as a lead detective in this case, you were aware that he was working on doing a three-television-show package surrounding Mr. Jackson at this period of time; is that right?
MR. NICOLA: Objection, Your Honor. Relevance to this testimony. Beyond the scope.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. I’d like to go to February the 7th and I would like to -- I’m not sure I have the absolute latest chart on each one of these. I’m not saying it wasn’t given to me this morning, but I’m not sure that I have the latest on each one. So I’d like you to look at that and then I’m going to take it away from you and put it on the board, if I may.
May I approach for that purpose?
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. SANGER: Thank you.
THE WITNESS: Do you need the Excel sheets also?
MR. SANGER: I’ll leave those with you. I’ll just take this. Thank you.
Q. So this is the first page of 861, which is the summary, and I’m putting that up on the board. And again, I’m not going to go through all of these. I’ve skipped there. I’m going to skip a few more places and then we'll be done. But just of interest, you had -- there you go -- you had commented on these telephone calls that are in the upper right-hand corner?

A. Correct.

Q. Now, you do not have directions on your lines. You don't have arrows. You just have lines.

A. No.

Q. Hence, we were talking about whether it was placed to or placed from a different number, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. You also -- well, we're going to have to use this as -- you also have some lines that go from one place in a straight line down to another place. This does not suggest that these are pass-through calls or three-way calls or anything like that, correct?

A. No, they do not.

Q. It's just a chart that shows these phone calls went there, and that phone was used to make some other phone calls, right?

A. Correct.

Q. So the connections are -- the important connections in the chart are really just between one phone and another, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. All right. So let's go back up to this corner here where we're at. And all of these calls, there are 16 phone calls from the Gavin Franklin rooms at the Turnberry -- I'm sorry, let me withdraw.

There are 13 phone calls from the Gavin Franklin room at the Turnberry to Jay Jackson, or Jay Jackson's phone, and the grandparents' phone or Janet's parents' phone, right?

A. Correct.

Q. All of those calls were made on Mr. Jackson's nickel, right?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. So in other words, they're charged to the room. There is also three phone calls from the Xtra Jet flying up in the air to the Ventura telephone number, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And once again, all of these phone calls were placed to those two phones. There were no calls that were made back to either the Turnberry or to the Xtra Jet?

A. Correct.

Q. And when we say “Turnberry,” if there were, they would show up over here, correct, to the resort main number?

A. Correct.

Q. So there are no phone calls from either the David Ventura phone or the Jay Jackson phone to the Turnberry Hotel itself at all, to any phone number there, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Let me skip ahead here, and we’ll go to 864.

May I approach to exchange documents?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Let me give you 861.

Okay. Thank you.

May I put 864 up?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. Again, we’ll just take a representative instance here to talk about them, and rather than going through all the phone calls. Looking at the calls between Ann Kite and Geragos & Geragos, there are four calls there, right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Two of the calls were one minute long; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. Three of the calls -- I may be wrong -- three of the calls were placed in the same minute; isn’t that right?

A. Correct.

Q. So to add to Mr. Nicola’s conspiracy theory with the phone company, they managed to charge for three minutes, all of the calls made in the very same minute, right?

A. That’s correct.
Q. All right. That doesn’t mean that Ann Kite actually talked to a lawyer at Geragos & Geragos four times?
A. No. Two times.
Q. It strongly suggests that, at most, there was -- there was one or two phone calls that might have gotten through to somebody; is that true?
A. Probably two that were conversations.
Q. Okay. All right. I’m going to skip ahead to Exhibit 866.
And may I do the same thing, approach and exchange here?
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. SANGER: May I put 866 up?
THE COURT: Yes.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. Now, this is for February the 15th, and this is the second time that Rudy Provencio’s phone number shows up; is that correct?
A. I believe so.
Q. All right. So for Rudy Provencio we had oneth -- “oneth,” sorry. Let me try it again.
For Rudy Provencio, we had one call on February 8th, and then another call on February 15th?

A. Correct.
Q. All right. I’d like to direct your attention now to the phone calls here. We have Jay Jackson and Frank Cascio. There are 18 calls. I’m sorry -- well, I’m not sure.
You have 14, and I have I guess an earlier version that says 18. How many calls were there between Frank Cascio and Jay Jackson’s phone, Frank Cascio’s phone and Jay Jackson’s phone?
A. 14.
Q. Okay. Of those 14 calls, how many calls were placed from Jay Jackson, Jay Jackson’s phone to Frank Cascio’s phone?

A. Eight of the calls.
Q. I’m sorry, eight?
A. Eight.
Q. And of the five phone calls from the Ventura phone, how many phone calls were made from the Ventura phone to the Cascio phone?
A. There was one call from the Ventura phone to the Cascio phone.
Q. And so one of the five, somebody in the Ventura residence called Frank Cascio’s phone, right?
A. Correct.
Q. And that call lasted for eight minutes and 22 seconds; is that correct?
A. Correct.

MR. SANGER: All right. May I approach again, Your Honor, just to compare a page?
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. SANGER: Now, Detective -- oh, excuse me one second.
THE COURT: Counsel, it’s necessary to break early. We’ll take our break early.
(Recess taken.)
THE COURT: Go ahead.
MR. SANGER: May I proceed?
Q. All right. Just for reference, we have Exhibit 866 --
BAILIFF CORTEZ: Microphone, sir.
MR. SANGER: Oops.
Q. Just for reference, we have Exhibit 866 up on the board, which is where it was when we took our break. And we were talking about the 14 telephone calls between the Cascio phone and the Jay Jackson residence phone, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. And you had told us that in your summary you had identified eight of those 14 calls as being placed by Jay Jackson’s phone or from Jay Jackson’s phone to the Cascio phone, correct?
A. Correct.
MR. SANGER: All right. Now, with the Court’s permission, I’ll put up the last page of 866, which is actually marked 3 of 3, but it's the fourth page, because that's the first page.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: That's a little crooked there. Sorry.

Q. Okay. And on your summary page you summarized the phone records by putting this into a spreadsheet computer program, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And you have the eight phone calls here from the phone at Jay Jackson's house to the Frank Cascio telephone, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And these eight phone calls, all on the 15th, right? They're all on the 15th? That was the question. Sorry.

A. That's correct.

Q. And that would have been the day before the Brad Miller interview; is that correct?

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. And these particular eight phone calls all last a number of minutes; is that correct?

A. With the exception of the third to the last one, which was less than one minute. I'm sorry. And the three up from that is also less than one minute. You have one for 47 seconds, and one for 57 seconds.

Q. Yes, absolutely. Actually, sorry, I was looking at the wrong column.

Okay. So let me point here. All right? Let's just go through very quickly, and we'll just round it off. We've got a six-and-a-half-minute call; a three-and-a-half-minute call; a call that's three seconds short of a minute; eight seconds over a minute; a minute and a half; 47 seconds; four minutes and 15 seconds; two minutes and six seconds, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And we also see that these telephone calls were placed from 10 -- that's 10:17 in the morning to 8:48 at night; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And then you also have the call that was placed to Mr. Cascio's phone from the Venturas' residence. That was at 8:22 in the morning, and that lasted for two minutes, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. So basically you have more calls being made from these phone numbers to Mr. Cascio's phone than you do from Mr. Cascio's phone to these two numbers?

A. That's correct.

Q. Looks like somebody was trying to get ahold of Mr. Cascio and talk to him, or somebody at Mr. Cascio's phone, correct?

A. I don't know that I can say what they were trying to do, but I can say that they were calling numerous times.

Q. All right. Now, we have the -- we have these eight phone calls you just talked about. And I'm going to put up -- let me take off that page, which is 866, and I'll put it back together with the exhibit and I'll deliver that up to you in just a moment.

Your Honor, with the Court's permission, I'm going to put up Exhibit 458. And this would be page 2 of 458.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: Is that going to work? Excuse me one second. Can I borrow your stapler?

It's on this podium here and kind of bubbling up. See if that makes it any better. I don't know if that makes it better or worse. It doesn't, all right.

Q. The point of this is -- I showed you this at the break; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And you counted there are actually 12 phone calls to the phone number of -- associated with Mr. Cascio from Mr. Jackson's telephone; is that correct?

A. 12 attempts or phone calls, yes.

Q. All right. And in essence, you eliminated four of those and you only showed eight -- I’m sorry, Major Jackson, Jay Jackson’s telephone. When we’re talking about Jackson here, we’re talking about Jay Jackson.

A. Understood.

Q. Okay. Make sure there’s no question.

And in fact, this Exhibit 458 is an exhibit from the phone records of Major Jay Jackson, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. And your understanding is this was a land-based phone in his house?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. So back to our story, it’s very hard to read there because of the glassine envelope, but it’s 2-15, February 15th. Those are all February 15th calls and there are 12 of them, correct?

A. There are 12 calls or attempts to call, correct.

Q. And you did not include some of these in your summary charts because you felt that they were too short?

A. Yes, there were several of them that were two, three seconds and less -- and the other two that were less than 30 seconds.

Q. So there are a couple that are just a couple of seconds. And I can’t read it from here, but there was one 15 seconds, I think.

Anyway, your criteria was if they broke it down, if they broke it down into seconds less than a minute, you would eliminate anything under 30 seconds, correct?

A. We did that with all records, correct.

Q. All right. But if they didn’t break it down and they said one minute, then you would record it?

A. We have no other way of doing it, correct.

Q. So using those criteria you eliminated four of these calls, right?

A. Correct.

Q. But nevertheless -- as an evidentiary or as a matter of your investigation, nevertheless, it does show that somebody from Jay Jackson's phone was at least dialing the number for Mr. Cascio's phone; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And it was dialed a total of 12 times from Jay Jackson's phone and one time from David Ventura's phone, right?

A. Correct.

Q. And more calls were dialed -- in fact, more calls were completed to the Cascio phone than were made from the Cascio phone to those phones; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. So you would agree that for the purpose of getting down to the actual facts here, the original exhibits being the exhibits of the actual phone records, are going to be more detailed and more reliable than the summary charts; is that correct?

A. More detailed --

MR. NICOLA: I'm going to object. That's argumentative, Your Honor.

MR. SANGER: Let's start with more detailed.

MR. NICOLA: They're different records.

MR. SANGER: Let me withdraw it so it's not compound.

THE COURT: All right. Go ahead.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Would you agree that there would be more detail in the actual records than shows up in the summary charts?

A. Correct. Yes.

Q. And you identified at least one chart where the -- there was actually an error, correct?

A. Correct. 3-9.

Q. Okay. And 879?

And may I approach? And I'll exchange 866. I don't want to leave these things out of the book, so if I may --

THE COURT: All right. Go ahead.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you. Oops. Yes. 879, that's right.

I think it was offered. I think this was received, 879? It was -- it was shown and I think it was found to be in error, but I’d like to put it up.

THE COURT: It’s in evidence, I think. The error was found later.

MR. SANGER: Okay. May I put it up?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: And the error on 879 is that there were not 12 calls between a phone associated with Evvy Tavasci and Marc Schaffel, but instead, between Evvy Tavasci’s phone and Neverland Ranch, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And you -- based on your review of the records, you would expect, in the ordinary course of business, that Evvy Tavasci’s phones would be in contact with Neverland Ranch, right?

A. At minimum, occasionally, yes.

Q. And you understood that Miko Brando, although he’s the son of Marlon Brando, was an employee of MJJ Productions, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And he’s one of the longer-term employees. He’s been there a number of years; is that right?

A. I don’t know.

MR. SANGER: May I have just a moment, Your Honor, please?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

All right. We can take this down. And may I approach to return it?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: And I have no further questions.

MR. NICOLA: May I have that exhibit again, please? And 879, please.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. NICOLA:

Q. Detective Bonner, during the break, did you make a correction to another copy of Exhibit 879, which is the chart for March 9th of 2003?

A. I did.

MR. SANGER: Do you have a copy for me, or --

MR. NICOLA: I don’t.

MR. SANGER: Okay. That’s fine.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: I’d like to put the 879 on the board that we’ve already moved into evidence. And I’d like to show you Exhibit No. 883 and ask if this is your corrected exhibit.

A. It is.

Q. Using the original 879, could you just point out for the jury what -- what the difference is? And then we’ll show 883 in a moment.

A. I recognize that the mistake that was made is that on Marc Schaffel, the records say “Neverland Valley Entertainment,” and what we did is we accidentally made a mix-up between Neverland Valley Ranch and Neverland Valley Entertainment, so I have relabeled “Neverland Valley Entertainment - Schaffel” into “Neverland Valley Ranch,” and “Neverland Valley Ranch” into “Marc Schaffel - NVE.” And this connection has gone from here to here and we have erased or removed this connection right here.

Q. You did that yourself?

A. I did.

Q. Okay. And is that depicted on Exhibit 883?

A. It is.

MR. NICOLA: We’d offer that into evidence at this time, Your Honor.

MR. SANGER: No objection, but I’d ask, since nobody has a copy of it, if we might be allowed to have a copy, if the clerk can make one, if that would be possible.

THE COURT: That’s fine. I’ll admit it. The clerk will give you a copy.

MR. NICOLA: Thank you, Your Honor. And with the Court’s permission, I’d just publish it just briefly.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Okay. These are the changes that you were talking about, Detective Bonner?

A. That’s correct. The switch of the name here, and here, and then removing this connection and making it go from here to here.

Q. Okay. Mr. Sanger was asking you about dropping phone calls from your analysis that lasted roughly 30 seconds or less. In particular with Jay Jackson’s phone records found in Exhibit 458, did you follow that procedure for dropping numbers that were in the 30-second range and less for everybody?

A. Yes.

Q. So everyone who had seconds in their cell phone records, you would drop those calls?

A. Correct.

MR. SANGER: Objection. Asked and answered and actually misstates the testimony.

THE COURT: I’ll sustain the objection.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Did you drop calls that were 30 seconds or less on Frank Cascio’s records?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. And Vinnie Amen’s records?

A. I don’t believe Vinnie Amen had any seconds on his.

Q. Just the ones that were billed in seconds that you could locate?

A. Correct.

Q. Let me ask you about the minutes. Specifically with respect to Exhibit 451, that’s the exhibit that Mr. Sanger --

May I have your exhibit, please?

MR. SANGER: The ones we did?

MR. NICOLA: Uh-huh.

MR. SANGER: I gave them back to the clerk.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Specifically with respect to Exhibit No. 5011, now you testified under cross-examination that the call at 6:11 lasted four minutes and the call at 6:14 also lasted four minutes. And is it your understanding that a four-minute call on those records can be anywhere between three and four minutes?

A. Correct.

MR. NICOLA: Okay. I have no further questions, Judge.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. You talked about getting Neverland Valley Entertainment confused with Neverland Ranch.

A. Correct.

Q. And Neverland Valley Entertainment was a separate entity, correct?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And it seemed to have been run by Marc Schaffel; is that correct?

A. Correct. Records came back to his home address.

Q. And did it appear to you that Marc Schaffel was attempting to use a similar name for the purpose of suggesting that he was part of Mr. Jackson’s business enterprise?

MR. NICOLA: Objection, Your Honor. Calls for speculation. Beyond the scope of redirect.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you. No further questions, Your Honor.

MR. NICOLA: No questions.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.

Call your next witness.

MR. NICOLA: We call Detective Paul Zelis, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You may be seated. You’re still under oath.

DETECTIVE ZELIS: Thank you.

PAUL ZELIS

Having been previously sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. NICOLA:

Q. Good afternoon.

A. Good afternoon.

Q. Detective Zelis, did you participate with the team analyzing certain phone records for certain dates arising out of the records which were seized in this case?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And to that end, did you examine the records pertaining to these following days: February 17th of 2003, February 18th of 2003, February 19th of 2003, March 10th of 2003, March 11th, and March 12th of 2003?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Okay. Are you familiar with the phone records to the left of me, sitting on the end of counsel table? The other left.

A. Oh, I'm sorry. Yes, I am.

Q. Did you actually receive copies of all that and go through and --

A. Yes.

Q. I'd like to begin with the date of February 17th of 2003, and ask if you'd turn to the exhibit corresponding to that in the exhibit binder.

A. Okay.

Q. Is that Exhibit 868?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And have you gone over the contents of both the link chart on the front page and the supporting documents behind it?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And did you participate in creating both of those documents in 868?

A. I did.

Q. And to your knowledge, do the contents of 868 accurately reflect your analysis of the phone calls conducted on 2-17 of '03?

A. Yes, they do.

MR. NICOLA: Your Honor, we'd offer 868 into evidence.

MR. SANGER: No objection.

THE COURT: It's admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Detective Zelis, if you would just save us a step and go to Exhibit 869 and 870, I’d ask if 869 corresponds to February 18th.

A. Yes, it does.

Q. And if 870 corresponds to February 19th of 2003.

A. Yes.

Q. Do both of those exhibits accurately reflect your analysis of the phone calls on those particular days?

A. Yes, they do.

MR. NICOLA: We’d offer 869 and 870 into evidence at this time.

THE COURT: Admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: If you could turn to Exhibit No. 880.

A. Okay.

Q. IS that one of your exhibits?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And what’s the date on that?

A. March 10th of 2003.

Q. And right in the middle is 881, right?

A. Correct.

880, 881 and 882 accurately reflect the analysis that you conducted on March 10th for the phone calls -- excuse me, for March 10th, March 11th and March 12th of 2003?

A. Yes, they do.

MR. NICOLA: We’d offer those into evidence at this time, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Admitted.

MR. SANGER: No objection.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Detective Zelis, if you could please turn back to Exhibit No. 868, we’ll start with February 17th of 2003.

If I may have “Input 4,” Your Honor.

Is this Exhibit 868 that is in the book?

A. Yes.

Q. If you could please describe the contents for the jury, please.

A. It is a visual graph that shows the calls between different parties on the date of February 17th, 2003.

A. This exhibit basically shows different parties involved, the number of calls between the two telephone numbers and how they are connected.

A. I’d have to refer to the Excel spreadsheet.

MR. NICOLA: Thank you, Detective Zelis.

THE WITNESS: You’re welcome.

MR. NICOLA: Your Honor, I have no further questions.

THE COURT: Cross-examine?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Detective, Zelis, how are you doing?

A. Good afternoon.
Q. I'd like to go to Exhibit 870, so I'm going to ask you to take that out of the book, if you would.
And may I approach, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.
MR. SANGER: May I put this on the screen?
THE COURT: Yes.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. That's Exhibit 870 up on the screen. Now, you are one of the lead investigators in this case; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. And based on your investigation in this case, the day of the 19th of February, 2003, was the day that Hamid Moslehi was attempting to put together a video of the Arvizos; is that right?
A. He among others, yes.
Q. Okay. He was the videographer, right?
A. Correct.
Q. And he had a crew, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And you understand that that was originally scheduled to take place at Neverland Ranch, correct?
MR. NICOLA: Objection; lack of foundation.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Sir?
A. That is my understanding, yes.
Q. And then at some point they decided that they had to do it in the Los Angeles area; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And that's because Janet Arvizo was down there and wanted to do it down there, correct?

MR. NICOLA: Objection. Calls for hearsay and speculation. It's beyond the scope of direct.
THE COURT: Calls for hearsay; sustained.
MR. SANGER: All right.
Q. So you see that there is a good deal of activity between Frank Cascio's phone and the Neverland Valley Ranch phone; is that correct?

A. On this particular date?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes. 13.

Q. And Frank Cascio’s phone and Vincent Amen seem to be interacting with each other, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And somebody at Jay Jackson’s number is talking with somebody at Vincent Amen’s number?

A. Correct.

Q. And also Frank Cascio’s number, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And then Mr. Moslehi receives some phone calls, I believe. Does he receive them or make them?

A. He received them.

Q. All right. Now, you were aware that Mr. Moslehi was also at the ranch during that afternoon, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. So if he was making phone calls, he could have made phone calls from the Neverland Valley Ranch telephones; is that correct?

A. I don’t know.

Q. All right. He was at the ranch, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And you see there’s some phone calls that are made from various ranch numbers; is that correct?

A. No, I don’t.

Q. Okay. All of the phone calls are made to the ranch numbers; is that your understanding?

A. There are five calls from Neverland Valley Ranch to Frank Cascio.

Q. Okay. That was my original question. So some of the calls are made to Mr. Cascio’s phone, and you don’t know who made those? They just came from Neverland Valley, correct?

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: All right. Now, I think I can finish with this witness if I have another 45 seconds.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. At this time, on February the 19th, you understood that Rudy Provencio was working with Christian Robinson; is that correct?

MR. NICOLA: Objection, assumes facts not in evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Let’s put it this way: Your understanding from your investigation is that both Christian Robinson and Rudy Provencio were associated with Mr. Schaffel; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And as far as the production was concerned, they were working on the production on behalf of Mr. Schaffel, the production of the rebuttal video; is that correct?

MR. NICOLA: Objection. Vague; assumes facts not in evidence.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: Okay. I have no further questions.

THE COURT: All right. We’ll take our afternoon recess. I’ll see you tomorrow morning.

MR. NICOLA: Your Honor -- may the witness be excused? I won’t have any redirect.

THE COURT: No redirect?

You may step down.

Call your next witness first thing in the morning.

MR. NICOLA: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. NICOLA:
Q. Good morning. Would you please tell the jury how you’re employed and what your position is?
A. Yes, I’m the chief criminal investigator for the District Attorney’s Office.
Q. How long have you held that position?
A. About two and a half years.
Q. And prior to that, did you have other law enforcement experience?
A. Yes. I’ve been a peace officer about -- for about 19 years.
Q. Turning your attention to this case, were you asked to assist Sergeant Bonner and Detective Zelis in the analysis of certain phone records contained in telephone binders to my left and in front of you?
A. Yes.
Q. Were you assigned the dates of March 2nd, 3rd and 4th of 2003?
A. Yes.
Q. If you could turn your attention to Exhibit 872, please.
A. Okay.
Q. Do you recognize that exhibit?
A. Yes.
Q. And could you tell the jury what that exhibit is?

A. Yeah, this is a diagram showing the relevant telephone calls involved in this matter on March 2nd, 2003.

Q. And if you can flip to Exhibit 873.

A. Yes.

Q. Is that the diagram for March 3rd of 2003?

A. Yes.

Q. And Exhibit 874, please.

A. Yes. That's the diagram for the 4th.

Q. Now, behind each of the diagrams marked 872, 873 and 874, are there spreadsheets which contain the actual phone calls?

A. Yes, there are.

Q. Okay. And are those accurate?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you physically connect the phone calls that are listed on that chart to the evidence in the telephone binders that we've previously discussed?

A. Yes, for -- on the spreadsheet for each row, each one, I manually checked and compared it to the exhibit to confirm the accuracy.

Q. Okay. And do Exhibits 872, 873 and 874 accurately reflect the analysis that you conducted?

A. Yes.

MR. NICOLA: Your Honor, at this time we'd offer those three exhibits into evidence.

MR. SANGER: No further objection. We have the objection to tying these up, but other than that --

THE COURT: All right. They're admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: If you could turn to the chart for Exhibit 872, please.

And, Your Honor, if I may have "Input 4" on the Elmo.

Is that the diagram chart for Sunday, March 2nd of 2003?

A. Yes.

Q. If you could please start in the upper left-hand corner and tell us when the call between the Frank Cascio phone and the Evvy Tavasci home phone occurred.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I'm going to object and also move under 352; the objection being the documents speak for themselves. There's been inadequate foundation, and 352, undue consumption of time going through each call.

THE COURT: All right. That's overruled. Go ahead.

THE WITNESS: The call between Mr. Cascio and Ms. Tavasci occurred at 6:04 p.m., and lasted two minutes or less.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Okay. And generally can you give us a time frame between the Cascio phone and the icon marked "Evelyn Tavasci/MJJ Productions"?

A. Yes, the calls occurred between 6:03 p.m. and 6:15 p.m.

Q. Okay. And if you could direct your attention to the bottom middle icon, the one that's marked "Paul Hugo." And I've placed in front of you Exhibit 453. If you could open that up, please. Are the telephone records for that Paul Hugo phone contained within Exhibit 453 at Tab No. 3?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do the records indicate where the calls from the Paul Hugo phone originated on March 2nd of 2003?

A. Yes, Brazil.

Q. And can you tell us which page you're looking at in that exhibit?

A. Yes, sir, it's page 8 of 12. As well as page 9 of 12.

Q. I'm going to put page 9 of 12 up on the screen briefly. I've highlighted a line in there. Based on your review of the records, what can you tell us about the call that is highlighted up on the Elmo?

A. Mr. Hugo checked his voice mail at 10:32 a.m., Brazil time, and he was in Brazil when he did so.

Q. And Brazil is five hours ahead of the Pacific Coast?

A. Yes.

Q. So that's 5:32 a.m., California time, correct?

A. That's right.

Q. Is that the first call that you see in the Paul Hugo records?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Coming from Brazil?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, with respect to the calls - I’ll put it back up - between the Paul Hugo phone and the Vincent Amen phone, what time was the first call placed from Brazil to the Vincent Amen phone?
A. 6:05 p.m., Brazil time.
Q. Okay. How long did that call last?
A. Three minutes or less.
Q. Immediately after that call to the Vincent
Amen phone from the Paul Hugo phone, was there a call from the Frank Cascio phone to the Vince Amen
phone?
A. Yes.
Q. How long was that call?
A. One minute or less.
Q. And immediately after the call between the Frank Cascio phone to the Vince Amen phone, was there also a call that’s not on this chart from the Frank Cascio phone to the Paul Hugo phone?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. I’m going to put that on the chart.
I believe this is page eight of the Paul Hugo phone records; is that correct?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were you able to confirm which of these calls was the call between the Frank Cascio phone to the Paul Hugo phone?
A. Yes, it’s the one item, number three.
Q. And that call lasted for eight minutes?
A. That’s right.
Q. The additional calls on this record, specifically Call 4 and Call 9, do you recognize the phone numbers associated with those calls being dialed out from Brazil?
A. Yes. That’s Vincent Amen’s.
Q. Okay. And with respect to Call No. 7 and 8, do you recognize those phone numbers? Are they on your chart for Marc Schaffel?
A. Yes. Thank you. Yes.
Q. Now, before we finish with the Paul Hugo phone record, I’d like to show you page 11 of 12.

Just briefly, is that page 11 of 12?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. I'm not going to project it, but while you're testifying, can you tell us whether that call item contained within the Paul Hugo phone records was the last call that you see from Brazil?

A. It was.

Q. And without telling us the actual phone number, do you know from your review of the records where that call was placed to?

A. The defendant's home.

Q. Neverland Valley Ranch?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that call lasted for how long?

A. Two minutes or less.

Q. Okay. If we could turn to Exhibit 873, please.

And if I may use the Elmo again, Your Honor.

Is that the chart for Monday, March 3rd of 2003?

A. Yes.

Q. And at the right-hand corner of the chart, if you would focus on the calls labeled "Vincent Amen" and "Neverland Valley Ranch," if you could give us the time range that those calls occurred between those two phones.

A. The first call was at 3:17 p.m. and the last call was at 6:49 p.m.

Q. And the same question with respect to the calls between the Frank Cascio phone and the Neverland Valley Ranch phone.

A. The first call was at 1:34 p.m., the last call was at 8:28 p.m.

Q. The calls between Neverland Valley Ranch and the marker marked "Evelyn Tavasci/MJJ Production," was that call -- excuse me, was the phone number for the Evelyn Tavasci line that you have up there 402-7087, Area Code (818)?

A. Yes.

Q. Were all the calls in that link to that particular phone?

A. Yes.

Q. If we could turn, please, to the next exhibit, 874. If we could start with the Paul Hugo telephone line, I’d ask you whether the calls between the Paul Hugo line and the Vince Amen line were in one direction or whether the calls were going both ways.

A. They were in one direction.

Q. And which direction was that?

A. Mr. Hugo was calling Mr. Amen.

Q. And are the calls being placed from the Paul Hugo phone in Brazil?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The next link would be from Paul Hugo phone to Marc Schaffel phone. Were those also all initiated by the Paul Hugo phone?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell us what time the first call between the Hugo phone and the Amen phone first came in?

A. Yes.

Q. Please do so.

A. 1 a.m., Brazil time.

Q. Okay. And with respect to the calls between Paul Hugo phone and Marc Schaffel phone, can you tell us what time that first call came in?

A. 1:12 p.m., Brazil time.

Q. Did the calls between the Vince Amen phone and the Neverland Valley Ranch phone go both directions or one direction?

A. One direction.

Q. Was there a call placed from the Vince Amen phone to Neverland Valley Ranch at 1307 p.m.?

A. Yes.

Q. And did that follow a call -- excuse me. Was that the first call to Neverland Valley Ranch by Vince Amen’s phone?

A. Yes.

Q. And the other two calls were at 4:14 and 2:34 p.m.?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If you could turn your attention to the Frank Cascio phone.

A. Okay.

Q. Were all the phone calls from the Frank Cascio phone inbound to Neverland Valley Ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. And what time was the first call?

A. 9:05 a.m.

Q. And how long did that call last?

A. Seven minutes or less.

MR. NICOLA: Thank you, Chief Investigator. I have no more questions.

MR. SANGER: May I proceed?

THE COURT: Yes.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Investigator Saunders, how are you?

A. Fine, thank you.

MR. SANGER: Why don't you leave those there, please. Those are the originals?

MR. NICOLA: These are my copies.

MR. SANGER: Oh, the originals are up there. Sorry.

Excuse me, Your Honor, I'm sorry.

Q. All right. I'm going to ask you to clarify one thing, first of all. And we're going to put these exhibits up quickly. You said, your testimony was, that a call was placed by Paul Hugo to the defendant's home. Do you remember saying that?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. You were out there at the search on November 18th, 2003, were you not, sir?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you're aware that what you refer to as the defendant's home is, in fact, 2700 acres; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you're aware that not only is there a large home, but there are a number of outbuildings; is that correct?

A. That's right.

Q. And there is approximately 100 people who are employed at that ranch; is that correct?

A. I don't know if there are 100 people employed.

Q. How many -- what’s your best estimate, having been out there?

A. You know, I -- that’s beyond the scope of my knowledge. I really don’t know how many employees he has.

Q. Let’s just put it this way: You know that there are dozens and dozens of people who work out there; how about that?

A. That’s a fair assessment.

Q. All right. And do you know how many telephone extensions there are out there?

A. I know there are multiple telephone extensions. I don’t know the exact number off the top of my head.

Q. Now, when you did the phone analysis, you evaluated how many telephone numbers, in other words, distinct telephone numbers for Neverland Valley Ranch?

A. For the three dates in question I’d have to go back and look at each date to add them up, but there were multiple numbers.

Q. Okay. Are there at least eight distinct telephone numbers?

A. No, I don’t think there are that many.

Q. During the period you looked at, you looked at about four of them; is that right?

A. That sounds more accurate, yes.

Q. Were you aware that there were more than the four numbers that you looked at?

A. Yes.

Q. And then in addition to telephone numbers, I’d asked you about extensions. In other words, physical telephones located different places. And you don’t know how many physical telephones are located in different places on the ranch, do you?

A. I’m sorry, can you rephrase that question?

Q. Well, when I said “extensions,” I wanted to clarify we’re talking about -- there’s phone numbers and then there are actual telephones. You can have more telephones than extensions, I take it?

A. Sure. Sure.

Q. And so do you know how many actual telephone extensions there were throughout that ranch?

A. No.
Q. Would you say dozens?
A. I -- I’m not qualified to comment on how many there are.
Q. Well, you were -- you were out there during the search, and you looked around, right?
A. No. I didn’t look around. I was at the command post.

Q. Were you in the house?
A. No, I was at the command post.
Q. I’m sorry?
A. I was at the command post.
Q. You were out on the front porch of the house for a while?
A. Right.
Q. You’re in the photographs of the search, right?
A. I haven’t seen my photographs.
Q. Okay. And then where did you go to? Where is the command post?
A. It was parked in front of the residence.
Q. Okay. So you were outside -- the command post was the big van, or the big motorhome?
A. Motorhome-looking thing.
Q. You didn’t stay inside the whole time on November 18th, 2003, did you?
A. Inside the mobile home?
Q. Right.
A. No, sir.
Q. All right. And it’s your testimony you did not go into any of the buildings, any of the structures anywhere?
MR. NICOLA: Objection, Your Honor, this is beyond the scope.
THE COURT: Overruled.
THE WITNESS: At one point, I went in to get some of my personnel to check on them, and that was a fairly isolated incident.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. In any event, your understanding is that there was certainly several telephone extensions on that ranch, let us say that.

A. Yes.
Q. And do you know who was at the ranch, which employees were at the ranch, on March the 2nd, 2003?
A. Personal knowledge or what the investigation has indicated?
Q. Well, start with personal knowledge.
A. No.
Q. You know there were employees there, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. And you were there at the search as a representative of the District Attorney's Office, correct?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Mr. Sneddon himself was there during part of the search, correct?
MR. NICOLA: Objection, relevance, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. In any event, you saw other district attorney's employees besides yourself there at the search, correct?

MR. NICOLA: Objection, relevance, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: So when you said Paul Hugo -- the phone call went to the defendant's home --
A. Uh-huh.
Q. -- you have no idea who made the call, first of all, Paul Hugo's phone, right? You have no idea who placed the call from his phone, correct?
A. I'd say it's a reasonable inference that he did. I wasn't there and didn't witness it.
MR. SANGER: Move to strike based on speculation.
THE COURT: It's a question you asked, Counsel. I'm not going to restrict him.
MR. SANGER: It's not responsive if it's --
THE COURT: That's responsive. You have no idea. Well, he has an idea.
MR. SANGER: All right. Very well, Your Honor.

Q. Beyond the fact that if somebody’s phone is in their name, you could speculate that they may have been the person using it. Beyond that, from these records, can you determine who placed the call from Paul Hugo’s phone?
A. No.
Q. Now, more importantly, with regard to the Neverland Valley Ranch, can you determine from the phone records who answered the phone, if anybody, at Neverland Valley Ranch when the call was made?

A. From the phone records?
Q. Right.
A. No.
Q. All right. And can you tell us from the phone records -- let me withdraw that.
I asked you about the employees at the ranch on March the 2nd, 2003. And I think, if I’m not mistaken, you said that there were employees -- your understanding was that there were employees there, you just don’t know who; is that right?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. All right. Now, were there other people there, guests, or people associated with business or music, or some other connection, were there other people at the ranch besides employees on March the 2nd, 2003; do you know?
A. There were many people there. I don’t know what their role was specifically. There were employees. There were some young boys, and there were some other people but --
Q. On March the 2nd, 2003?
A. We’re talking about the day of the search warrant?
Q. No. We’re talking about March the 2nd, 2003.

A. Oh, I’m sorry.
Q. You testified to March the 2nd.
A. Yes, sir. I see. You’re right. I’m sorry.
I don’t know who was there.
Q. All right. Now, when did you prepare 872, the chart that was put up on the board?

In fact, Your Honor, while asking that question, I’d like to approach and retrieve that exhibit, if I may put it up.

THE COURT: You may.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

THE WITNESS: That was finalized yesterday morning.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. You can leave it in the book for a moment.

Mr. Nicola has given me his copy of this, which purports to be the same thing. May I put that up?

THE COURT: You may.

MR. SANGER: It’s 872.

Q. All right. Now, you had just indicated this was finalized yesterday morning, this particular summary chart.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which is 872, for the record.

And on that chart, you do not record some of these telephone calls that you referred to, is that correct, in your testimony?

A. Yes, there was a call between -- an outgoing call from Mr. Cascio --

Q. Okay. I didn’t ask you about -- to detail them. Because there were several, were there not? You referred to a call from Cascio, a call from Hugo to Neverland Valley Ranch, at least two of them; is that correct?

MR. NICOLA: I’d object. It misstates the evidence with respect to Neverland Valley Ranch.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: That’s not what I recall.

That call between Hugo and Neverland Valley was when Hugo was leaving Brazil, and I believe that was a later date than the second.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: What date was that?

A. Let me look back into the records and --

Q. Well, that’s all right. It’s in the records.

MR. NICOLA: Your Honor, I’d request the witness be allowed to answer that question.

MR. SANGER: He asked permission to go through the records and --
THE WITNESS: I have it now.
MR. SANGER: If he has it, then we'll ask.
THE COURT: All right.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: What date was it?
A. March 8th.

Q. March 8th, okay. So that would not have anything to do with the March 2nd call, the March 2nd chart for 872, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. All right. Now, there's one page attached to 872, the first page of which we have on the board, right? You have one page --
A. There's one page, yes, sir.
Q. And it's not a full page, correct? All right. It looks like you have more on your page than I do on mine.
May I approach, Your Honor?
THE COURT: Yes.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: On page two of 872 that you have that's been admitted into evidence, you have a number of calls from Mr. Hugo which are added on to the analysis; is that correct?
A. They're included in the analysis, yes, sir.
Q. When were they added on?
A. I don't have an independent recollection when they were added on. I know I was working on this through the weekend confirming that everything was completely accurate. And I believe they were there at that time.
Q. All right. Now, as far as Mr. Hugo is concerned, in the course of your investigation in this case, you were aware that Mr. Hugo and -- Mr. Hugo was a production associate of Marc Schaffel, correct?

MR. NICOLA: Objection. Lack of foundation; calls for hearsay.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: Would you please repeat the question?

MR. SANGER: Ask, Your Honor, if it may be read back.
THE COURT: Yes.
(Record read.)
THE WITNESS: No.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Were you aware that Mr. Hugo had worked with Marc Schaffel in any capacity?
MR. NICOLA: Objection, lack of foundation, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: Yes, generally.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. And you were aware that at this time Marc Schaffel had traveled commercially to Brazil; is that correct?
A. No.
MR. SANGER: Okay. All right. With the Court's permission, I'll put up --
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: My apologies.
(Laughter.)
THE COURT: I think you --

MR. SANGER: Are we to go to our corners now?
THE COURT: You said the magic word.
(Laughter.)
MR. SANGER: Sorry, I stole the Court's line.
THE COURT: You did.
MR. SANGER: Yours was probably funnier, I'll acknowledge that.
I would like to put 873 up, if I may. Is that all right, Your Honor?
THE COURT: Yes. Of course.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: And I'm using the copy just provided to me by the District Attorney, so if you'd be kind enough to take a look at your 873 and make sure that we are literally and figuratively on the same page here.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Okay. I don't want to spend unnecessary time on this, but you notice in your analysis of the phone records here that there are several telephone numbers that were associated with Evelyn Tavasci?

A. Yes.

Q. In other words, there is the one you've labeled "MJJ Production," there's one "Evelyn/MJJ Prod, Unit 1," there's one "Evelyn Tavasci home," and there's one "Evelyn Tavasci/MJJ Production" at the bottom. Do you see that on the chart?

Do we have our --

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: Do we have our pointer, please?

MS. YU: Oh.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. There's a technical term for this. "The pointer thing."

There we go. Just so we're clear - I think everybody is, but just in case - we have this one that says, "MJJ Production"?

A. Right.

Q. And this one says, "MJJ Production" also. But those are, in fact, two different phone numbers; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. The first -- the first one at the top is -- ends in 9239, correct?

A. Let me double-check that.

That's correct.

Q. And this one ends in 8984, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And then there's another one over here that says, "Tavasci," comma, "Evelyn/MJJ Production," and that's yet another phone which, in fact, is a different Area Code and ends in 7087, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. All of these phones that we referred to that say "Tavasci" and have some designation after them, sometimes the same, all of these five phones are different phone numbers, right?

A. That's right.

Q. And they're either (310) or (818), which is the Los Angeles area; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you have this other phone down here, "MJJ Production/Miko Brando," which is yet a different number; is that right?

A. That’s right.

Q. Now, in essence, you have somebody at -- in various places here -- without going into excessive detail, you’ve got somebody on one Evelyn Tavasci phone calling somebody else on another Evelyn Tavasci phone, correct?

A. Right.

Q. Now, you speculated before, so I’ll let you do it again, if it’s all right. Do you therefore assume it’s not Evelyn Tavasci calling herself on the various phones?

A. That’s a good point. Thanks for giving me a little latitude here. I think that example down at the bottom, the seven calls going to Neverland, for example, I know that’s Chris Carter calling the ranch, and based on --

Q. I didn’t ask you if it was Chris Carter calling the ranch. I asked you about these. I didn’t say say anything you want. I was asking about these calls. You assume that it is not Evelyn Tavasci calling Evelyn Tavasci; that in fact there are other people calling --

A. Right.

Q. -- on those phones?

A. Right.

MR. SANGER: All right. Okay. All right. And I have no further questions.

MR. NICOLA: No questions.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.

Call your next witness.

MR. SNEDDON: Lieutenant Klapakis, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You may be seated. You’re still under oath.

JEFF KLAPAKIS

Having been previously sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SNEDDON:
Q. Good morning.
A. Good morning.
Q. Are you familiar with the telephone number Area Code (310) 490-0144?

A. Yes, I am.
Q. And did you make a telephone call to that particular phone number?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. When did you do that?
A. Yesterday morning.
Q. And when you made that telephone call -- let me go back for just a second. During the course of this investigation, have you had an occasion to contact a private investigator by the name of Brad Miller?
A. Yes, I have.
Q. Do you remember when the first time you contacted Mr. Miller was?
A. It was 2004.
Q. And you had a conversation with him at that time?
A. Yes, I believe we did.
Q. Was it a personal call or was it a telephone call?
A. It was a personal call. We were trying to locate him to deliver some paperwork and stuff like that, so --
Q. And were you able to make contact with him?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, with regard to the telephone number that you called, it's Area Code (310) 490-0144, you called that number yesterday?

A. Yes, I did.
Q. And did you talk to somebody on the other line?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Who was that?
A. Brad Miller.
Q. Did you have a conversation with Mr. Miller, without going into the details of what was said?
A. Yes, I did.

Q. Were you satisfied that the person on the other end of that line was Mr. Miller?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. Based on both the first conversation earlier in 2004 and the content of the conversation yesterday?

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: Nothing further, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Any questions?

MR. SANGER: I'm sorry?

MR. SNEDDON: Nothing further.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Lieutenant Klapakis, how are you doing?

A. Fine, sir.

Q. You've been on this case since June or July of 2003, correct?

A. Actually, I believe it was prior to that. February of 2003.

Q. You've been on this case since February of 2003?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were aware of Brad Miller's existence in this case since what time?

A. Prior to November 2003.

Q. And you say that because, among other things, you all got a search warrant for Brad Miller's office before November 18, 2003, correct?

A. We obtained a search warrant before November 18th, yes, we did.

Q. And you were aware that Brad Miller was a private investigator before November 18, 2003, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. In part, Mr. Sneddon himself went to Brad Miller's office before November 18, 2003, to investigate and take photographs, correct?

A. Mr. Sneddon's been by there, yes, that's correct.

Q. Did he go down to investigate and take photographs?

A. He went down to take photographs of the office, yes.
Q. And he looked in the phone book to see if he had the correct address for Mr. Miller, correct?

A. You know, I'm not sure if he looked in the phone book, sir.
Q. He wrote a report, right?
A. Do you have the report? It would refresh my memory.
Q. Somewhere.
A. All right.
Q. It's a fair question, but I don't have it right in front of me. In any event -- and Mr. Sneddon actually went down and showed photographs of Brad Miller to Janet Arvizo before the November 18, 2003, search, correct?
A. I believe that's correct.
Q. And then you had officers search Mr. Miller's office in Beverly Hills on November 18, 2003, correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. And they went through, to a certain extent, his papers, records, and files within the scope of the search warrant, correct?
MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I'm going to object as immaterial and irrelevant. Beyond the scope.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. SANGER: All right.
Q. It's your testimony that the first time you figured out Brad Miller's phone number was yesterday?

MR. SNEDDON: Object as argumentative.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: No. We believed it was -- from other sources, we believed it to be Brad Miller's phone.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: When did you first believe it was Brad Miller's phone?
A. I believe that we were aware it was Mr. -- a phone that was linked to Mr. Miller through other documents we had found through the various search warrants that we had found from Mr. Schaffel’s residence, I believe.

Q. And so if today is May the 3rd -- which I think it is. I was just verifying that. Is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Time flies. May the 2nd, 2005, is the first time that you actually attempted to verify that this phone number belonged to Brad Miller; is that correct?
A. That’s incorrect.
Q. When did you try to verify it before?
A. Well, one of my detectives has written several search warrants to various phone companies involved in this investigation. What we -- as you heard, there’s thousands of numbers. We’ve -- we were able to determine a couple of days ago that the 8506 phone number that we believed showed linked to Brad Miller was actually linked to a subsidiary cellular phone company that fell through -- fell through the cracks when we were putting everything together.
Q. All right. But in order to determine whose phone it is, you concluded that you can call it and find out who answers it, right?
A. That’s exactly what I did.
Q. And you concluded that yesterday and did that yesterday, correct?
A. That’s what I did yesterday, yes, sir.
Q. All right. Now, there’s no question, based on your investigation at this point, that Brad Miller was a licensed private investigator, correct?
A. I’m sorry, say that again.
Q. Based on your investigation -- you’re in charge -- back to the foundation. You’re in charge of the investigation; is that correct?
A. Yes, I am.
Q. And as a part of that, your responsibility is to have a working knowledge of the investigation that’s conducted by officers under you; is that correct?
A. I have some knowledge of the investigation, yes.

Q. And you are aware that Brad Miller is a licensed private investigator, correct?
A. I'm aware of that.

Q. And you were aware long before today that Brad Miller was, in fact, working for Mark Geragos, correct?
A. I'm aware of that.
Q. Okay. And you've been aware of that for some time?
A. Yes, I have.
Q. And you would have expected that Mark Geragos and Brad Miller would have been in communication based on the fact that he's a lawyer and this was a private investigator working for him, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. So you called yesterday?
A. Yes.
MR. SANGER: Okay. No further questions.
MR. SNEDDON: Nothing further.
THE COURT: You may step down.
Call your next witness.
MR. SNEDDON: Craig Bonner.
MR. SANGER: Do you have an exhibit number for this?
MR. SNEDDON: I'm trying to find out when I have the evidence.
MR. SANGER: Yes.
(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

CRAIG BONNER
Having been previously sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. SNEDDON:
Q. Detective Bonner, one of the assignments that you were given in this case and which you spent considerable time on the witness stand the last couple of days just testifying to phone records, correct?

A. That’s correct.
Q. And in the -- in the procurement of those records, did you obtain a search warrant for the telephone records of Brad Miller?
A. For the number that I associated with Brad Miller, yes.
Q. Okay. And how many telephone companies was that request sent to?
A. Every single one, by name and his personal information.
Q. Every single one doing business in California?
A. Correction -- or, I’m sorry, correct. Basically any phone company, ATT Wireless, all of the cell phone companies, as well as Verizon California and Pac-Bell. Anything that I thought might have a telephone registered to Mr. Miller.

Q. And as a result of the search warrants that were returned, did you -- did you get any information from any of those carriers that the private investigator Brad Miller had a telephone?
A. None of the information directly came back directly to Mr. Miller.
Q. Now, with regard to the telephone number Area Code (310) 490-0144, do you recognize that number?
A. Yes.
Q. And when -- and was there a return on the search warrant associated with that number?
A. There was. It came back to a Payless reseller with an associated name -- last name of like Mozaffarian.
Q. So Mr. Miller wasn’t in any way, with the paperwork you’ve got, connected to that number?
A. No.
Q. As a result of the information that Detective Klapakis was able to obtain about the person that he talked to at that number, were you asked to put together a list of phone calls that you reviewed from the Exhibits 452, 456 and 450 that you had previously testified?
A. Yes, I did that last night.
Q. And let me just show you the exhibit which

I've shown to counsel, Your Honor, and had marked as 884 for identification purposes.

THE COURT: All right.
MR. SNEDDON: It's a four-page document.
THE WITNESS: This is the materials I prepared last night.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: That's a compilation of the telephone records that are in evidence in this case that reflect communications between that phone number, Mr. Miller's phone, and other parties in this case, correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. And is that particular exhibit, 884, listed in the time in which those are -- the sequence in which those phone calls are made?
A. Yes, it does.
Q. And the individual names that are contained on that particular exhibit?
A. Do you want me to list the --
Q. Just the people, yes.
A. The phones that are in this exhibit come back to Vincent Amen, Frank Cascio, Evelyn Tavasci/MJJ Productions, and Miss -- or the Hamid Mozaffarian phone number that we now believe or now know comes back to Brad Miller.
Q. Now, with regard to the -- the document 884 that you put together, this is a digest or a compilation of the information from the exhibits I referred to, 452, 450, 456, and -- I believe those are the ones; is that correct?

A. That's correct.
MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, at this time I move this be put into evidence.
MR. SANGER: No objection, other than the previous objection.
THE COURT: All right. They're admitted, subject to the....
MR. SNEDDON: Oh, Bob? I showed you this earlier.
Your Honor, I have another document. It's 885, and it's a 13-page document. I'm sorry, it's a 22-page document. And I've shown that to counsel and I placed a blue number in the lower right-hand corner on each of the pages, 1 through 22.

Q. All right. Detective Bonner, have you -- are you familiar with the Exhibit 885?
A. Yes, I am.
Q. And are you familiar with the pages -- or what it purports to represent of 1 through 22?
A. Yes.
Q. And these are diagrams, are they not?
A. Yes, they are.
Q. That reflect the information contained in Exhibit 884?
A. Correct.
Q. Between the parties?
A. Correct.
MR. SNEDDON: I'd move that 885 be placed into evidence, Your Honor.

MR. SANGER: No objection.
THE COURT: It's admitted.
MR. ZONEN: Excuse me.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Now, with regard to the information that's contained in the Exhibit 884- okay? - the source of that information is from exhibits that are in this case, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. And there are no exhibits in this case that show phone calls that are -- let me rephrase that. Did you determine whether Mr. Cascio's phone was a cellular or a landline?
A. It's a cellular.
Q. And Mr. Amen's?
A. Again, a cellular phone.
Q. And the Tavasci phone?
A. It's a cellular phone.
Q. So these are cellular phones?
A. Correct.
Q. And the phone calls that are on this particular document are all cellular contacts; is that correct?
A. Correct.
Q. So these would be calls that are -- that show up on the user phone either Cascio, Tavasci or Amen, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Calls either made by them to that number, (310) 490-0144, or calls placed by that number to them that show up on their telephone records, correct?

A. That's correct.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. Probably to the relief of everybody, I'm not going to go through all 22 of these exhibits. I'm just going to show one on the Elmo, Your Honor, to illustrate the information that you've provided on document 884. And I'm selecting 3.

MR. SANGER: 15th?

MR. SNEDDON: Yeah.

Q. Okay. I've just taken the one that has a "3" in the lower right-hand corner. And this has the date of March 15, 2003, on it, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And the -- obviously the cellular phones -- there's a cellular phone, four phones, depicted on the exhibit?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, tell the jury what these -- what the numbers that you placed on there reflect in terms of the information provided on the Exhibit 884, the telephones.

A. Basically there are two lines for each phone to each of the other phones -- or, I'm sorry, from Brad Miller's phone to each of the other phones.

There are directional arrows which indicate which direction the call went. And there are numbers associated with the arrows if there are any calls, and that will tell you how many calls went from each phone on that date.

Starting with the top connection between the Bradley Miller phone and the Frank Cascio phone, we have seven calls going from Cascio's phone to Miller's phone. And we have four calls going from Miller's phone to Cascio's phone.

With regard to the other two phones, there's a large zero in the center indicating there are no telephone calls to those phones.

Q. And was this the same approach that you took to all 22 charts that were prepared?
A. It is.
MR. SNEDDON: Okay. Could we have the lights, Your Honor?
Q. All right. Let’s move on to another subject.
During the course of the investigation, were you assigned to review items of evidence that were seized from certain locations?
A. Yes, I was.
Q. And were you assigned to review some video footage that was obtained in the residence of Mr. Hamid Moslehi?
A. I was for Hamid also, yes.

Q. And did you review a -- some footage of a -- that was filmed between Mr. Jackson and Mr. Bashir having a conversation?
A. Yes, I did. I should clarify that that actually came from Schaffel’s residence.
Q. Oh, okay. It came from Mr. Schaffel’s residence?
A. Correct.
Q. All right. So you reviewed that item?
A. Yes.
Q. And what is the item number of that associated with the sheriff’s investigation?
A. Item No. 1360.
Q. And during the course of that conversation, or during the course of the review of that, did you actually see Mr. Jackson having a conversation with Mr. Bashir?
A. I did.
Q. And did the subject of flying come up during that conversation?
A. It did.
Q. And during the course of that conversation between Mr. Bashir and Mr. Jackson, did you hear anything said by Mr. Jackson with regard to alcohol?
A. I did.
Q. What did Mr. Jackson say?
A. I’ll go ahead and read it from my report. I quoted it. Mr. Jackson’s statement was, “You don’t have, like, a little bit of Jesus Juice, a little bit of wine.”

Q. Now, was there anywhere else on that video that you reviewed that the term “Jesus Juice” was used by anybody else?

A. No.

Q. You were also assigned the responsibility -- give me a moment.

Are you familiar with an individual by the name of Louise Palanker?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. How did you become familiar with Ms. Palanker?

A. I interviewed Miss Palanker.

Q. Do you recall when that interview had occurred?

A. Not offhand. I know it was in the middle part of last year.

Q. And was it taped?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. And was that tape booked into evidence?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. And did you, at my request, review that tape?

A. I did.

Q. And what were you asked to review, looking for what?

A. I was asked to review any -- to find if there was any statement to the effect that Janet Arvizo had sold the kids at the comedy camp or sold the kids at the hospital.

Q. Was the word “sold” or “seldom”?

A. The actual word used was “seldom”; that Janet was seldom at the comedy camp. Janet was seldom at the hospital.

Q. Could you spell that, please?

A. S-e-l-d-o-m.

Q. It was not s-e-l, apostrophe, i-m?

A. No.

Q. And you reviewed the tapes and ascertained that to be correct?

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: Nothing further, Your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Okay. Let's start with your first topic. You had three topics, the first one being the cell phone records. The summary chart that was Exhibit 885 that Mr. Sneddon put up, I believe he put page three up on the board, the summary charts?

A. Right here.

MR. SANGER: With the Court's permission, I could put up my copy, if that's all right.

THE COURT: That's fine.

MR. SANGER: And Mr. Sneddon, is this the most recent?

MR. SNEDDON: (Nods head up and down.)

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. I'm going to put up page three, because that's the one that was shown as a representative -- that was shown as a representative page and there's -- actually, I forgot how many pages we were told, but quite a number of pages to this, right?

A. 20 some-odd, I believe.

Q. 20 some-odd pages. When was this prepared?

A. Last night.

Q. And when was it delivered to defense counsel?

A. I didn't deliver it, but I would assume this morning.

Q. This morning. Okay. Now, 884 -- May I just put up the first page of that? It would be my copy, if that's all right.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Mr. Sneddon, this is the correct --

MR. SNEDDON: Fine.

MR. SANGER: All right.

Q. 884 is a several-page -- I think a four-page exhibit that has the summary of all the records, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And those were faxed to my house last night by you, I believe; is that correct?

A. Yes, they were.

Q. And that would have been about 7:22 in the evening?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. On this summary chart --

And we can have lights again, if that’s all right, Your Honor.

On this summary chart, you have a record of phone calls that were made to and from what you’ve now determined -- what you’ve now labeled as the Bradley Miller telephone, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Maybe it would be helpful, I’m sorry to do that, but if I could put up 885, that one page again. Because on these, you’ve now labeled which way they were going and the number going each way, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. There you go. And you show four phones and those -- that same graphic is used for each of the pages; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. That’s why you have “0” here, because there were zero --

A. Correct.

Q. -- on this particular date.

On the other hand, this also tells us that 8520 what you were able to analyze were calls going to and from what you’ve labeled as the Bradley Miller telephone, to and from the Vincent Amen telephone, the Evelyn Tavasci/MJJ PROD telephone, and the Frank Cascio telephone; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Now, was there just one number to Evelyn Tavasci that you looked at?

A. That’s the only number that came out.

Q. And that is a cell phone?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, did you do this by analyzing just the records of the Amen, Tavasci and Cascio telephone?

A. We looked at every record that we have with the computer system, and these are the only three records that came out with any calls to that telephone.

Q. Okay. Do you have the records for what's called the Bradley Miller phone?

A. We only have a one-sheet piece of -- if we're talking about toll records, no, we do not. We do have a one-sheet page that tells us that it comes back to Hamid Mozaffarian, a cellular.

Q. And just because we have two Hamids we've talked about, Hamid Mozaffarian has nothing to do with Hamid Moslehi, correct?

A. No.

Q. I said, “Correct.” I'm sorry. Let me ask the question, does Hamid Mozaffarian have anything to do with Hamid Moslehi?

A. No.

Q. Thank you.

Therefore, you did not have the records from that Miller phone to see what numbers the Miller phone called, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Nor to see what incoming calls, if any, were recorded for that phone, correct?

A. Other than for these three telephones up here, no.

Q. I'm sorry, I'm saying for the Brad Miller phone itself, right?

A. No, but these records do show calls to and from the Bradley Miller phone. We don't have Bradley Miller's records, though.

Q. Thank you. That's what I was getting at.

I understand you have the other records.

But for Brad Miller you have one page that showed the subscriber information; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Has that page been marked as an exhibit in this case --

A. I don't know.

Q. -- to your knowledge? Okay. All right. So therefore -- let me withdraw that.

The Geragos records -- you had records pertaining to the Law Firm of Geragos & Geragos, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. You didn’t have the toll records, did you? Did you --

A. I believe -- I believe they were actually sent. However, those were not -- we were not supposed to receive those, so we have not included those in any analysis.

Q. All right. Because Mr. Geragos’ law firm has attorney-client privilege communications, I take it?

A. And more specifically in the warrant that I wrote, I laid out that we were not going to seek toll records.

Q. All right. And you did that because you understood that that might create a problem?

A. It could unless we were able to show him as being a member of a conspiracy.

Q. All right.

A. And part of the crime that occurred.

Q. All right. So the point being, that you did not have an opportunity to evaluate calls between Mr. Miller’s phone, the one you’ve attributed to him, and the Geragos law firm?

A. Correct.

Q. In other words, you didn’t have records 8523 going either way on that one, right?

A. We have records. We did not analyze them, yes.

Q. When I say “have,” did you not have them to look at and analyze and --

A. Correct.

Q. All right. And you did not have records pertaining to any cell phones that Mr. Geragos might have, correct?

A. Correct. Other than subscriber records. We do see subscriber records on that also.

Q. And when you say that, that means it just shows whose telephone number it is, right?

A. Correct.

Q. So therefore, did you not have available to you to analyze records to determine the -- any calls between Mr. Miller’s phone and Mr. Geragos’ cell phone?

A. I’m having a slight problem with that, because we did have the records. We simply set them aside and did not use them with regard to the Geragos records.

Q. And that was pursuant to the Court-ordered search warrant that you requested; is that correct?

A. Right.

Q. So I think I used the word “have available to analyze.”

A. I just want to clarify. They were sent, we just did not use them.

Q. Okay. All right. So what we have here -- it’s not a big thing, I just want to clarify this. What we have here basically is the analysis of the other records that -- for which there are toll records showing communications with this phone, but not any phone numbers associated with Geragos?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now --

THE COURT: Can we take a break?

MR. SANGER: That would be fine. But, Your Honor, we do need to address the Court on one matter briefly before or after we take the break.

THE COURT: All right. Let’s let the jury go ahead and take their break, I’ll remain a moment. Officer, you may step down.

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I know this is the fourth time, but I think you can see this coming. The -- what’s called the Hamid footage or the outtakes footage that we had asked to play --

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: -- we now have -- the government has now quoted from that footage, and therefore we would ask to play the entire statement to put that -- those quotes in context.

And I know I’ve asked the Court before, and I don’t mean to be rude.

THE COURT: I was just going to say, one more time, if it’s the fourth time, you’re keeping track.

MR. SANGER: Yes.

THE COURT: Not in the People’s case.

MR. SANGER: Very well. I hope the Court understands, there was a reason, because they quoted from it.

THE COURT: Well, if you could isolate out one piece that has to do with that one piece. However, you have to remember that I watched all those outtakes, and I know how many hours and how much repetition is there.

MR. SANGER: Right.

THE COURT: So we’re not talking about something I’m not totally familiar with. And if you want to take the time to go and find the material specifically that they’re relating to and show a small portion that relates to that, that’s fine. But that doesn’t give you license to play hours and hours of that takeout -- outtake, whatever it’s called.

MR. SANGER: I think it’s like two hours and 45 minutes or something like that.

THE COURT: Well, it seemed like -- all right.

MR. SANGER: The second one -- I understand what the Court said. And please, Your Honor, understand we just learned this right now, that they were going to quote that section. So I’ll have to see if I can find it and maybe do it later.

The second thing I wanted to address is there’s been now a quote from the Louise Palanker tape. That is a shorter tape, and I do think it would be appropriate to play that. That’s her interview.

THE COURT: I don’t see that either. It’s up to -- if is there anything specific you want to play, you know, in rebuttal to what they’ve just put on, or if there’s some reason to play the whole tape in your case, you may, but I’ll have to find out what it is. But one -- you know, just clarifying that one word doesn't call for the playing of the whole tape.

MR. SANGER: So having moved, those are denied and we're on a break.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: All right. Thank you.

THE COURT: Go ahead.
MR. SANGER: May I proceed? Okay.
Q. All right. We're going to Point No. 2 of your testimony, which was video footage that you reviewed. And I think you established that you had obtained this from the evidence bookings that pertained to the Marc Schaffel residence; is that correct?
A. Correct.
Q. And what sheriff's identification number was on the item that you referred to?
A. Item 1316, 1-3-1-6.
Q. And Item 1316 is booked into sheriff's evidence, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. And it remains booked into sheriff's evidence as we sit here right now, correct?
A. The original is, yes.

Q. The original. And you gave us a copy of that, right?
A. Correct.
Q. And do you know if that's the same as your Sheriff's Item 913, -10, -11 and -12?
A. I don't know without reviewing materials.
Q. In any event, what you reviewed was -- it was a CD, or a DVD, or what?
A. The original, I believe, was either -- it was a cassette tape. I don't recall if it was a Beta cassette tape or a regular cassette tape.

Q. Okay. And you provided that, a copy of that, to us in the form of a DVD; is that right?
A. Correct.
Q. So the original is some kind of tape. Now, what did you review? You didn't review a Beta cassette tape, did you?
A. I reviewed both, actually. I participated in the process of changing it over to the DVD format and watched it at that time.
Q. All right. But most recently when you reviewed it for this quote that you -- that you recited on direct examination, did you review the Beta cassette tape or the DVD?
A. The DVD.
Q. All right. And that's because Beta cassette tapes have to be played on some kind of a professional machine; is that right?
A. Correct. And we only have one, and it's in Santa Barbara.
Q. All right. So to lay the foundation here for something we'll do in the future, I understand that you will produce to the Court your Sheriff's Identification No. 1316, which is the original Beta cassette tape; is that correct?
A. Correct.
Q. And then you have a DVD that is -- how is that labeled?

A. It would be labeled "Item 1316," and more specifically the actual title that was on the cassette tape in question.
Q. I'm sorry, I just want to make sure I'm clear, and I'm not clear. If we say at some future date we would like to play this DVD that's in sheriff's evidence right now, how do we refer to it? 1316, the DVD? Or is there another number?

A. The most appropriate would be to say Item 1316 and then also provide the title, "MJ/Bashir, Summer 2003."
Q. All right. So that's what you reviewed. Now, I understand you did not review recently 913, -10, -11 and -12?
A. Correct.
Q. Which were sheriff's numbers. Did you ever review those?
A. I may have. I'm not certain at this point.
Q. All right. And then going to your third point, you referred to a Louise Palanker interview, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. And you and, I believe it was Detective Zelis, were present during this interview; is that correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. And it was surreptitiously tape-recorded,

correct?
A. Yes, it was.
Q. And how long did that interview last?
A. I believe it was approximately 40, 45 minutes in length.
Q. And that particular item is on a DVD; is that right?
A. CD. Yes.
Q. CD. Was it recorded on a CD or --
A. It was recorded on a digital recorder and downloaded into CD format.
Q. Okay. So the actual item that is Sheriff's Item 1790 is the original recording; is that correct?
A. The CD recording.
Q. And that's in sheriff's evidence, booked into sheriff's evidence at the substation; is that correct?
A. Right.

Q. And you -- you agree to bring those to court for whatever purpose we'll use them in the future; is that correct?
A. Absolutely.
MR. SANGER: All right. Thank you. Based on that, I have no further questions, Your Honor.
MR. SNEDDON: Nothing further.
THE COURT: All right. You may step down.

MR. SNEDDON: Detective Robel.
THE COURT: You're still under oath. You may be seated.

STEVE ROBEL
Having been previously sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. SNEDDON:
Q. Detective Robel, during the course of this investigation, were you involved in an interview with Debbie Rowe?
A. Yes, I was.
Q. And was that interview tape-recorded?
A. Yes, it was.
Q. And was it tape-recorded with her knowledge?
A. Yes, it was.
Q. And who else was present during the taping?
A. Lieutenant Klapakis.
Q. And do you recall where that took place?
A. Yes.
Q. Where was that?
A. In Los Angeles.
Q. Do you recall what day that took place?
A. I believe it was on March the 3rd, 2004.
Q. So over a year ago?
A. Yes.

Q. All right. I'm going to ask you a few questions about that interview. First of all, were you asked to review that tape?
A. Yes, I was.
Q. And you were asked to review it in detail,

correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And did you do that?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And when did you do that?

A. Yesterday.

Q. And did you compare it to a transcript?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Now, during that conversation that you had with Miss Rowe, did she at any time during the course of that transcript describe the defendant as a good parent?

A. No, she didn't.

Q. At any time during that conversation that you had with her over a year ago did she describe him as a wonderful father?

A. No, she didn't.

Q. At any time during the course of that interview with her over a year ago, did she describe him as a caring person?

A. No.

Q. And does she at any time during that interview use the word "generous" to describe the defendant?

A. No.

Q. During the course of the conversation that you had with Miss Rowe over a year ago, did she express to you, during the course of that interview, comments about her concerns of his parenting skills?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: And in particular, what did she say?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Opinion; relevance.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: She referred to Michael as a sociopath and his children as being possessions.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Did she at other points during the conversation express any other areas of concern --

A. Yes.
Q. -- about the defendant and the children’s relationship?
A. Yes, she did.
Q. How many different areas did she talk about? Without going into the details of what she talked about, the areas, how many areas of concern?
A. I recall there were three.

Q. And did each one of those reflect negatively upon the defendant’s parenting skills?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.
THE COURT: Calls for a conclusion, sustained.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Were those three areas discussed in the context of him being a good or a bad parent?
A. Yes.
Q. And was it good or bad?
A. It was bad.
Q. During the course of the interview with Miss Rowe, did you discuss the topic of whether or not the comments that she made during the course of her interview that was included in the Maury Povich program were truthful?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.
MR. SNEDDON: Let me rephrase that, Judge. I need to rephrase it anyhow, to be correct.
Q. During the course of your interview with Miss Rowe over a year ago, did you discuss with her the topic of the truthfulness of her statements made during the time -- the nine-hour interview that occurred at Mr. Schaffel’s house?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. And what did she say?
A. She told me that she had a plan since she got divorced from Michael in 1999.

Q. Did she tell you who made the plan up?
A. Yes.
Q. Who?
A. She and Mr. Jackson.
Q. Together?
A. Yes.

Q. And what was the plan?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; foundation.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, this is impeachment.

THE COURT: I’m going to sustain the objection. I don’t understand how that question could lead to an answer that would impeach something she said in front of this jury.

MR. SNEDDON: That the comments were truthful.

THE COURT: But that’s not the question that’s been asked. You asked about a plan she had with Mr. Jackson. So I’m sustaining the objection.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Were you present during Miss Rowe’s testimony here in court?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And did you hear Miss Rowe testify about the statements that she made during that nine-hour interview?

A. Yes.

Q. And you heard her testify that those statements were -- were truthful in court?

A. Correct.

Q. Now, did you have a conversation with Miss Rowe over a year ago when she told you about the comments -- about the same comments that she made in court here and whether they were truthful or not?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Misstates the evidence, leading, and vague.

MR. SNEDDON: Let me rephrase it, Judge. I might be able to solve the problem.

Q. During your conversation with Miss Rowe, did she say anything to you that was inconsistent with her statement in this courtroom that those statements were true when she made them on the film?

A. Yes.

Q. What did she say?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Calls for a narrative; vague.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: She said that she and Mr. Jackson, when they got divorced, that they had a plan --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Same objection as before. He’s trying to answer the same question, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: All right. You told us all about the plan. Tell us what she said after the plan.

A. She said she --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: That she stuck with her plan to talk positive about Mr. Jackson, as she’s done throughout news conferences that she’s had since they were divorced.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Did she indicate to you during this conversation whether those statements were true or false?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. What did she say?

A. And she says that they were false.

Q. All right. I want to go on to another subject. Excuse me just a second.

All right. Sergeant Robel, I’m handing you the exhibit book. First of all, you recognize those as being the Neverland Ranch logs, correct?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Now, during the course of the search warrant at the ranch on November 18th of 2003, were certain logs seized from the ranch?

A. Yes, there were.

Q. You’re aware of that?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. And you reviewed those logs, as a matter of fact, have you not?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And do any of the logs that you reviewed that were seized from the ranch go beyond the date of January 1st, 2003?

A. No.

Q. Now, there’s a medical report, one-page medical report that does, but all the logs themselves were before, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. During the course of this investigation, did, to your knowledge, the Santa Barbara Sheriff’s Department in any other search warrant seize any records or logs associated with the months of January, February or March of 2003?

A. No.

Q. Now, in the exhibit book, towards the end, there are logs for the months of February and March of 2003, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And what exhibit numbers, what two exhibit numbers are those? They should be tabbed.

A. 335 and 334.

Q. And those logs are log entries from the year 2003, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And those have been described by Mr. Sanger as being government documents. Do you know where they came from?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Where did they come from?

A. It came from the defense.

Q. Do you recall when it was that we obtained those records from the defense?

A. Yes.

Q. When?

A. To the best of my recollection, I believe it was about three to four months prior to us starting trial.

Q. Months?

A. Actually, excuse me. I’m sorry. Weeks.

Q. So they’ve been in the defense possession for over a year?

A. That is correct.

MR. SNEDDON: Nothing further.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. What is the date of your interview with Debbie Rowe?

A. March the 3rd, 2004.
Q. Did you do an interview with her on February 23rd, 2004?
A. Yes, that was a -- I talked with her on the phone.
Q. And that was recorded, correct?

A. That was not recorded.
Q. The transcript -- do you have a transcript of the interview you're referring to?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. And could I --
May I approach, Your Honor, just to take a look at the transcript?
THE COURT: Yes.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. And you say you just listened to the tape the other evening?
A. I listened to it yesterday.
Q. Do you ever ask the question, "Is Michael a good parent?"
A. I don't recall asking that.
Q. You never had a conversation with her about his parenting skills at all, did you?
A. I don't recall asking that question.
Q. Okay. In response to the prosecutor's question to you, you indicated that Ms. Rowe, during your conversation, had not said some of the things she said in open court, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. But there are things she said in open court that you didn't ask her about in your interview, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. She said Michael Jackson was generous in open court. Do you remember that?

A. Yes.
Q. You never asked her if Michael Jackson was generous, did you?
A. I don't recall asking that.
Q. She said that Michael Jackson was her friend, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. You never asked her in your interview if

Michael Jackson was her friend, right?

A. I don’t recall asking that.

Q. In fact, at one point in your interview, she said she wasn’t really supposed to talk a lot about Michael Jackson, because her lawyer had advised her as such, right?

A. Correct.

Q. And when she said that to you, you didn’t ask her a lot of questions about Michael Jackson as a person after that, right?

A. She volunteered some of the stuff.

Q. Now, at that particular point in time, did you know when she had last seen Michael Jackson? Excuse me, let me rephrase that better.

At the point in time when you interviewed Debbie Rowe, did you know when she had last seen Michael Jackson?

A. I believe that she had told us that it had been two to three years.

Q. Now, at the particular point in time when you interviewed Debbie Rowe, she was rather upset about their family law proceeding, true?

A. No, I don’t think that’s correct.

Q. Do you remember she said to you, “Officer, I have Michael’s Achilles tendon, I have the kids. I don’t have them, but I’m going to have them.” Do you remember that?

A. I remember something to that effect.

Q. Isn’t that what she said to you?

A. She did, Mr. Mesereau, but I don’t believe that her child custody issue was going on at that time.

Q. Well, she told you she had a lawyer named Iris Finsilver, did she not?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. Did you know why she had a lawyer named Iris Finsilver?

A. At the time I knew she had her because of the filming that she participated in where Iris was present.

Q. She told you in that interview that she was in a dispute with Mr. Jackson about the children, right?

A. I don't recall that.

Q. Did you know she was in a dispute with Mr. Jackson about the children when you conducted that discussion with Debbie Rowe?

A. To the best of my knowledge, I want to say that I did not.

Q. Do you recall in the first page of your interview -- and in my transcript it's page one. I don't know what page it is in yours. It's a different transcript.

Do you recall she says -- let me try and restate that.

Look at the fourth quote down of Debbie Rowe. It starts with, "Iris." Do you see that?

A. It said, "Iris, I..."

Q. Yes, exactly.

A. Okay. I'm there.

Q. She says, "F-u-c-k his defense at this point. I want the kids." Do you see that?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did you think that might have some relevance to a dispute between Mr. Jackson and Ms. Rowe when you heard her say that?

A. By reading it, you could interpret that, but at the time I did not.

Q. Okay. And this was the conversation where she talked about Janet Arvizo's history of orchestrating lawsuits, correct?

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I'm going to object as beyond the scope of direct examination. We were very pointed in our questions.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: This was a conversation where she said, "Michael is very easily manipulated," true?

MR. SNEDDON: Object. Same objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Now, do you remember Ms. Rowe in this conversation responding to your question, "Is Michael the kind of person that would keep a journal?" Do you remember that?

A. I do remember that.

Q. And she said, “He doesn’t keep a journal. He’s not organized enough to keep a journal.” Do you remember that?

MR. SNEDDON: Object. Same objection.

MR. MESEREAU: I think it’s all in -- they opened the door on this conversation about Mr. Jackson, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I’m having the same difficulty with you as I’m having with the District Attorney. I can’t really tell where you’re going from that question, and it appears to be beyond the scope. So I’ll sustain the objection. If you can rephrase it so I can see it better, that’s fine.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Ms. Arvizo -- excuse me. Ms. Rowe --

Let me start again. How did this conversation originate? Did you call her?

A. For this particular interview?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes. We had a phone discussion, and she agreed to meet with me on a specific date and time.

Q. And where did she meet you?

A. In the Los Angeles area, Calabasas.

Q. Was her attorney there?

A. No.

Q. Okay. But you begin the conversation with reference to her attorney, correct? Really on the first page. The sentence we just discussed where it starts by saying, “Iris....”

A. Correct.

Q. You discussed her attorney almost at the very beginning of the interview, correct?

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I object. Asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And this was the interview where she talked about Schaffel and Konitzer and Dieter trying to steal from Mr. Jackson, correct?

MR. SNEDDON: Object, Your Honor, beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SNEDDON: Ask the Court to admonish counsel. This --

THE COURT: Next question.
MR. MESEREAU: Yes. No further questions, Your Honor.
MR. SNEDDON: Nothing further, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You may step down.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, we call as our next witness Duross O'Bryan.
THE COURT: When you get to the witness stand, remain standing.
Face the clerk here and raise your right hand.

JOHN DUROSS O'BRYAN
Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.
THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.
THE WITNESS: John Duross O'Bryan. J-o-h-n; D-u-r-o-s-s; O-B-r-y-a-n.
THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:
Q. Good morning, Mr. O'Bryan.
A. Good morning.
Q. What is your occupation, please?
A. I am a certified public accountant in the State of California.
Q. And by whom are you employed?
A. With the firm of Alex Partners.
Q. Tell us a little bit about Alex Partners, if you would.

A. Alex Partners is an international financial consulting firm.
Q. And what is your title with Alex Partners?
A. I am a managing director.
Q. Prior to joining Alex Partners, did you work with other accounting firms?
A. I did, yes.
Q. And what were their names?
A. I started my career in 1978 with the international public accounting firm of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., now called KPMG. I was there for approximately six or seven years. And I went off to my own firm for about nine months to a year. And then joined the international public accounting firm of Coopers & Lybrand, which merged and it's now Pricewaterhouse Coopers. I was with them basically from 1985 through 2003.

Q. So what type of firms are KPMG and Pricewaterhouse Coopers?

A. They were referred to as The Big 8 accounting firms, which are the large accounting firms. They're international, both domestic and abroad, all over the world.

Q. All right. Let's start with KPMG. Can you tell us a little bit about your experiences there?

A. As I mentioned, I started in 1978, and I was really auditing, which is accounting. I have a accounting degree. I worked auditing companies' financial statements, auditing individuals' financial statements, and effectively auditing those numbers to make sure they are accurate and in conformity with accounting guidelines.

Q. How would you give a lay definition of what an audit is, general terms?

A. An audit is basically a function performed by auditors, CPAs that work principally with The Big 8, or now I think they call them The Final 4 accounting firms, that simply looks at, on a test basis, transactions and support the company's financial statements, and then gives an opinion about the accuracy of those financial statements, whether or not they are accurate and whether or not, in fact, they conform with what's called generally accepted accounting principles.

Q. Tell us a little bit about your experiences at Pricewaterhouse Coopers.

A. I started with Pricewaterhouse Coopers in 1985, or the predecessor firm. I was there through 2003. I continued doing audits through approximately 2000, 2001. And in about 1988, October the 1st of 1988, I was admitted to the partnership. And on and around that time, I was also asked to begin working, assisting individuals and/or companies in what’s called disputes, litigation matters, whether or not there’s damages, malpractice issues, whether or not an accountant did something wrong, any type of matter involving a dispute or an investigation.

Q. Have you participated in financial accounting investigations?

A. I have, yes, on several occasions.

Q. And as it relates to financial advisory services - I think you mentioned that - what kind of engagements have you worked?

A. Financial advisory services was one of the divisions within The Big 4 firms. I was in charge of that in both Los Angeles and in New York. That division does dispute analysis and investigation, work investigations that we’re talking about. It also does due diligence work, mergers and acquisitions, bankruptcy work valuation, et cetera. I was involved in most of those practices of being the partner in charge. But certainly specifically as a partner responsible, I worked on most of those engagements, those type of engagements.

Q. Do those engagements include forensic accounting investigations?

A. They do, yes. One of the -- the title “DA&I,” the “I” stands for investigation, which is an accounting investigation of financial records.

Q. Okay. So tell us what specifically you mean when you say “a forensic accounting investigation.”

A. Well, if an audit is really looking at a company’s financial statements and looking on a test basis to be able to opine as to the accuracy and conformity with those financial statements with accounting principles, a forensic accounting investigation is completely different. It basically looks at all the records you can possibly get, all of the information you can possibly get, and it attempts to reconstruct what happened and what went on in any period of time.

So the scope is completely different and the type of procedures are completely different. It’s much more invasive. It’s much more intrusive. And it is really, in fact, an investigation, not a sampling of documents like an audit is.

Q. So can you give us an idea of what kind of forensic accounting investigation you have participated in?

A. I’ve participated in dozens. Some of them involving thousands of dollars at issue, some of them involving billions of dollars at issue, and companies small and large, public, private, and not for profit.

Q. And are these investigations primarily for the purposes of litigation, prelitigation, testifying in court, that type of thing?

A. Some of them involve litigation. Probably most of them do. But there’s a vast majority that could just be an investigation that the company has authorized or the company is asking for or individuals are asking for to ask what’s going on within their company. So it may not be a litigation or it may not be a civil or criminal matter. It could simply be that the company is interested in what’s going on in their business and asked to have an investigation performed.

Q. Have you previously been asked to testify in California courts or in courts around the country as an expert in the area of a forensic accounting investigation?

A. I have, yes, on several occasions.

Q. Do you have an accounting degree?

A. I do, yes. I have a Bachelor of Science degree in accountancy from Northern Arizona University.

Q. Presently what are your hourly rates at Alex Partners?

A. My rate on this engagement is $385 an hour.

Q. Okay. I’ll try to be quick then.

How many hours have you put into this investigation or into this particular task?

A. I’ve put in probably 20 to 30 hours possibly.

Q. Okay. So tell us about your assignment in this particular case, the case of People v. Jackson.

Specifically what were you asked to do in this matter?

A. I was asked to look at the financial condition of Mr. Jackson leading up to February 2003.
Q. All right. And did you prepare a PowerPoint presentation to assist the jury in describing just exactly what you did in this case?
A. I did, yes.
Q. All right. Would you consider this to be a forensic accounting investigation?
A. The work that we performed was absolutely a forensic accounting investigation, yes.
Q. And have you ever performed other work that entailed a similar task, looking at someone's personal finances for forensic purposes?
A. Absolutely, yes.
Q. Okay. So let's talk about some terminology.
What does the term "financial condition" mean for purposes of your testimony here today?
A. I'm defining "financial condition" as basically an individual's assets, their liabilities, their net worth. One's net worth is simply the difference between their assets and liabilities. If you have more assets than liabilities, you have positive net worth. If you have more liabilities than assets, you have negative net worth.
So we look at the assets and the liabilities. We look at the income. We look at the expenditures. That's how I would really define one's financial condition, and really how those all interrelate and what kind of condition they're in. Can they afford to pay their bills, et cetera.

Q. You're going to be, I'm sure, throwing these words around, so I want to make sure everybody's clear on them.
Assets, would that just be -- a simple way of saying assets, would that be property that someone owns?
A. Yeah, I'm sorry. Assets are really anything that is an asset, which is your house, a car, artwork, intangible things like maybe a copyright. Anything that creates benefit to you is an asset. And so that’s what I’m referring to as an asset.

A liability is just the opposite of that. It is something that’s an obligation. You owe something, somebody something, meaning a bank for your mortgage on your house, a lease on your car, a loan securing some of the copyright things that you have. Any of those there becomes obligations, things that you actually have to pay for.

And then the difference between the two is simply a mathematical function of assets minus liabilities equals net worth.

Q. Okay. And can a net worth be positive as well as negative?

A. Yes. As I mentioned --

Q. Go ahead.

A. -- if you have more assets than liabilities, conceptually, if you gain the value of all of those assets at whatever is stated, say you have $100 worth of assets, and you can really get $100 for those assets, and you have $50 worth of liabilities, and you’re really only going to pay $50, then you have a net worth of $50. At the end of the day, you have $50 cash sitting in your hand.

On the other hand, you could have a situation where your assets are $50, and you’ll only get $50 for them. You really are going to pay $100 in liabilities, and therefore you have a negative net worth. At the end of the day, you will be short $50, or negative net worth.

Q. All right. Before we get into your opinions, let’s talk generally about how you conduct a forensic investigation of this type.

Typically how would you start a financial forensic accounting investigation?

A. Well, you ask for as many documents as you can get, because again, it’s not a sampling of documents. It’s everything you can possibly look at. And you get as much information as you possibly can during that relevant period of time. And the place we typically like to start with is a set of financial statements, and those being a balance sheet on an income statement, potentially to help us understand what's going on within that company or that individual's financial condition position.

Q. Okay. I think maybe this would be a good point to segue into your PowerPoint presentation.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; relevance; Court ruling.

THE COURT: The PowerPoint presentation is -- what does it consist of?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It consists strictly of some basic information about what Mr. O'Bryan does. It also describes his expert opinions in this matter, and it also includes the specific information that he relied upon in forming those opinions.

THE COURT: So it's demonstrative of his testimony?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes, it is, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Have you seen the presentation? Have you seen the materials?

MR. MESEREAU: I was handed a couple of documents that -- I think that has it.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes, I provided it to counsel yesterday. Actually, day before yesterday.

THE COURT: Generally, this is the kind of thing that if the witness was given a piece of chalk, he could go to the blackboard and, as he testified, put this up.

MR. MESEREAU: He's referencing select paragraphs from documents, one after another, without showing the whole document, and that would be one of our objections as well.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And if counsel wishes to introduce those documents at the end of his cross-examination, I don't think we'll have an objection to that.

THE COURT: I'll let you go forward with it on my theory that it's the type of help a witness normally could do with a piece of chalk or a marker and some butcher paper, but in these days we do it with PowerPoint. If it appears to be something beyond that type, I'll have to reevaluate it.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Very well.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. If we could have “Input 1,” Your Honor. All right. If I may approach, Your Honor, and provide the laser pointer to the witness.

Q. I’ll give you this to use, if you wish. If you could, Mr. O’Bryan, please take us through the components of a financial statement.

A. The components of a financial statement, as shown up on the board, are really made up of four different components, the first being the balance sheet. And all that is is a statement, part of the financial statements that are typically referred to in a set of financial statements, that lists out the assets and the liabilities, and then shows net worth. And it literally does balance. That’s why they call it a balance sheet, because the total of assets will equal the total of liabilities plus net worth, so it balances. So it’s simply a listing of assets and liabilities, and then it shows net worth as the difference.

Q. Before we --

THE COURT: I’m sorry, before you ask the next question - I thought you were through with your answer - I want to have Mr. Sneddon and Mr. Mesereau approach for a moment.

(Discussion held off the record at sidebar.)

THE COURT: All right, Counsel. Go ahead.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. I think we were at income statement.

A. And the second set of -- the second statement within a set of financial statements is an income statement, and that simply lists out all of an individual’s or company’s income or revenues, and it subtracts out all of the expenditures or expenses. And the difference between those two is either a net income or a net loss. So that’s the income statement.

The third is what’s called a statement of cash flows. It is simply a statement that shows cash, and where cash came in and where cash goes out. And at the end of the year, it shows what the ending cash balance is. Just cash.

And then the last component of a set of financial statements is notes. And those notes are a narrative addition to all of the numbers, and they’re simply informative. They simply tell you the basis that the financial statements are put together and some of the different accounting policies and principles used in accumulating the financial statements.

Q. All right. Let’s look at the next slide. What do you look for in these financial statements?

A. You first try to get an understanding of the business, or the assets and liabilities. You then look at the significant assets and liabilities and try and understand what those are. You look for unusual relationships, ones that you should do additional information and/or additional research on. And then lastly, you just look for unusual issues that should be considered during your investigation.

Q. All right. In this particular investigation, were you able to find any financial statements?

A. We did, yes. We found a June 30th, 2002, financial statement.

Q. All right. What type of financial statement was this?

A. It was a balance sheet only. Just that first statement, just the balance sheet showing assets and liabilities.

Q. Okay.

A. And net worth.

Q. And that’s what you’ve described as being balancing out. Subtract the liabilities from the assets, you have a net worth?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Okay. So let’s talk about what this particular June 30th, ‘02, balance sheet said about Mr. Jackson’s assets and liabilities.

MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, could we have the exhibit marked?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Certainly.

MR. MESEREAU: We'll renew our objection based on the Court's ruling.

THE COURT: Yeah. The ruling that you're talking to me about is the ruling limiting the financial presentation.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: He's made an offer of proof in his written materials that is within the scope of what I anticipated him to do.

The problem and the reason I have blacked out the screen is that if you're relying on documents that are evidentiary in nature in your presentation, they first must be introduced into evidence. The witness wouldn't be allowed to put parts of a document in evidence that is not in evidence. So....

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I would just say that this is offered as expert testimony. And expert testimony may be based upon inadmissible evidence that's not normally admissible. And these are the specific documents that he is basing his opinions on, including hearsay and a variety of other -- so typically the --

THE COURT: But usually -- all right. Go ahead. The foundation for the figures is what I was looking for.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Going back to your consideration of this particular balance sheet, tell us what it said in terms of Mr. Jackson's assets versus liabilities at that particular date.

A. This showed that as of June 30th, 2002, there was $130,000,000 in assets, $415,000,000 in liabilities, and a negative net worth of $285,000,000.

Q. Okay. Now, as far as this balance sheet goes, does it mean that Mr. Jackson is, by virtue of that balance sheet, bankrupt?

A. No, it doesn’t.

Q. Why do you say that?

A. Because the balance sheet is prepared on what’s called a cash basis, or an income tax basis. And that means that the assets are actually listed at their cost, not necessarily their fair market value. So those assets could have higher values, and they could have lower values. The liabilities could have higher values; they could have lower values. It’s just a cash basis. In other words, what was paid for the assets. So, no, it does not mean that. You have to look at it more from a fair market value.

Q. So this does not mean Mr. Jackson has $285,000,000 more liabilities than assets at this time?

A. The statement shows that. However, you know, it’s on a cash basis, which means if you want to get into the real world, you have to look at it more from a fair market value perspective.

Q. Okay. So as a beginning point to your investigation, would a balance sheet like that be a cause of any concern?

A. You certainly look at it and question as to why there’s a negative $285,000,000 net worth. I mean, that’s certainly a concern and a consideration. But it simply means that more investigation needs to take place.

Q. Were there other documents that you were able to review to give you a better picture of Mr. Jackson’s financial condition?

A. Yes. I mean, we weren’t -- we asked for things such as bank statements and general ledgers, which is a group of transactions that gets accumulated to become the financial statements. We asked for those types of things. We were not given those. We have not seen those. However, we did see about four to five boxes of other documents that were principally correspondence between Mr. Jackson’s financial advisors and some of his advisors and/or himself.

So where he actually had hired financial advisors to take care of his money and his assets and pay his bills, that correspondence was made available to us, or some of that. So we actually looked at those to try and get a better understanding of his financial condition during that period of time.

Q. And in a forensic investigation such as this, do you typically have all the documents you want?

A. No. You might have more than we had, but you don't typically get all the documents you want.

Q. Based upon what you were able to look at and consider in this case, were you able to form some opinions with regards to Mr. Jackson's financial condition leading up to February of 2003?

A. Yes, we were.

Q. Okay. I'd like you to take us through your opinions in this case that were based upon these documents.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may proceed.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

Q. If you would, please tell us about the opinions you formed based upon your review of all the financial documents you've described that were in these boxes that you reviewed.

A. Based on the information we saw, Mr. Jackson's financial condition had been deteriorating up and leading into February 2003, evidenced principally by a significant amount of overexpenditure over what was being made. In other words, expenditures exceeded income.

Secondly, that the liabilities, the obligations side of things, the obligations and liabilities were increasing steadily and fairly significantly.

And lastly, there appears to be an ongoing cash crisis. You'll see a number of the memos that we looked at that talked about cash crisis. Not enough cash to pay bills, et cetera.

And then lastly, I believe that information, based on the documents that I've seen, was certainly known as of February of 2003.

Q. All right. Have you prepared a diagram of this particular slide, Mr. O'Bryan, that you brought with you?

A. I think there was a blow-up of that made, yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: If I may approach, Your Honor. And I've shown this to counsel. And I'd like to just place it on the easel so Mr. O'Bryan can refer to it during his testimony.

MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, we're going to object just to the comment on their seeking documents and their not finding them, to the extent it suggests that the defense didn't produce something, and move to strike.

THE COURT: I'll strike that comment.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. I'd like you to --

THE COURT: Have you seen the chart that he --

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, I did. I did receive a copy, Your Honor.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. So let's talk about the first opinion that you've expressed about Mr. Jackson's financial condition deteriorating.

If you could, tell us why you -- how you arrived at that particular conclusion.

A. Well, as I mentioned, it was principally the documents that we reviewed, and principally in this matter some of the correspondence received from Mr. Jackson's financial advisors to either him or his other advisors about his cash position.

Q. Okay. And referring to Slide No. 5, if you'd take us through that.

A. Yes. Through some of these correspondence, it's apparent that there was --

THE COURT: Just a moment. The jurors can't see.

JUROR NO. 8: Can't see.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Oh, I'm sorry. I'm sorry. My apologies.

If I may place this down in the well or -- let me just try and adjust it here. No, that's not going to work. Is that all right? Okay.

Q. All right. If you'd please --

A. We came to that conclusion based on reviewing a number of different documents. It seemed to point to the following three things fairly consistently: One, that there was approximately 20 to 30 million dollars per year overspending. In other words, spending over what was being made. That has a tendency -- going back to that balance sheet, if you're not increasing your assets, and you're not -- you don't have the income to support that kind of expenditure, your debt goes up. And when your debt goes up and your assets don't go up, back to the balance sheet, your net worth goes down. So that is a tendency to look at that talks about deteriorating financial condition, first and most importantly, an overspending of that nature and that number. And, two, then, a decreasing net worth. And that was caused by the third bullet point, which is the fact that the debt increased almost $70,000,000 between 1999 and 2003.

Q. All right. So let's talk about the first thing you mentioned, his overspending habits, then how you come to your conclusions based on that. First of all, you mention these primary assets, two main -- two music publishing catalogs?

A. Well, I believe that, based on my review of the balance sheet, there are really three main assets, certainly one of them being the MIJAC catalog, which is publishing rights to certain of Mr. Jackson's personal performances and songs. And second is a Sony/ATV catalog, which is a library of copyrighted songs and performances by both Sony and Mr. Jackson -- Jackson other than the MIJAC catalog. Those would be two main assets. And those are income-producing, because they produce royalties and create income to Mr. Jackson.

The third main asset would also be Neverland, Neverland Ranch, which is a fairly substantial and significant asset.

Q. So what documents did you rely upon to come to the conclusion that he was overspending?

A. That was correspondence from his financial advisors.

Q. Okay. I'd like to start by going back to 1999 and then take us up to 2003 and '4. In 1999, did you consider any correspondence from Mr. Jackson's financial advisors in your forensic investigation?

A. We did, yes.

Q. Did you recall a letter dated October 13th, 1999, from Holthouse?

A. Yes, it was Holthouse Kaitlyn & Von Tropp (sic), or something like that.

Q. Okay. Who is -- can you determine from the correspondence who is Holthouse Kaitlyn & Von Tropp (sic)?

A. That is a CPA firm in Los Angeles that appeared to be acting as Mr. Jackson's financial advisors, business managers. They literally paid the bills, they kept track of the assets. And they reported back to Mr. Jackson or his advisors as it relates to financial condition and status of bills, et cetera.

Q. So they were actually cutting the checks to the vendors and people that Mr. Jackson owes money to?

A. Apparently so, yes.

Q. Okay. Back to this '99 memo. Does it make any reference to unpaid bills?

A. It does, yes.

Q. All right. Let's look at the next slide.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; Court ruling.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Specifically, what does it tell you about Mr. Jackson's unpaid bills?

A. It says that Holthouse was short approximately $780,000 to meet "our outstanding liabilities," meaning at that point in time there was -- they were short in cash $780,000 to pay outstanding invoices or obligations due by Mr.

Jackson and/or his entities.
Q. In this letter does Holthouse offer any suggestions or concerns?
A. They do, yes.
Q. What do they say?
A. They go on to say --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It’s relied upon for his opinion.
THE COURT: I’ll sustain the objection to the hearsay. He’s allowed to form his opinion on that type of material, but he isn’t necessarily allowed to repeat it, the material he forms his opinion on.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.
Q. All right. So they expressed concerns about Mr. Jackson’s overspending?
A. That’s correct.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, am I permitted to continue the PowerPoint presentation?
THE COURT: Well, you can’t show that material. You’re quoting hearsay quotes from other people that have to have limiting instructions, and that’s exactly what I asked you at the beginning, what the material was about. I wouldn’t allow a witness to go to the blackboard and write down what someone else told him. You’ve got that in the PowerPoint presentation?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: This is the specific statement that he relied upon to form his opinion, from the defendant’s --
THE COURT: I understand that. He’s given his opinion.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.
Q. So looking at the records, going through the records, did Mr. Jackson appear to heed the concerns of the Holthouse accountants, of his Holthouse accountants?
A. No. The expenditure levels seemed to continue throughout 1999, as evidenced by comments made within the Holthouse memos.

Q. Okay.
MR. MESEREAU: Same objection. Excuse me.

I'm going to object to relevance; 1999.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'll be happy to make an offer of proof as to why we're starting here.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Is there an indication, during this period, from Holthouse as to how much Mr. Jackson is receiving in income versus how much his expenditures are?

A. Yes. In one of the memos, it stated that Mr. Jackson was receiving --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: The problem we're having here -- I'm going to talk to the jury a second about this.

(To the jury) The expert is allowed to use this type of material to form an opinion on. But you, as a jury, are not allowed to accept that material for the truth of the matter asserted. It is hearsay, and it is only being presented to show you what he relied on.

So with that limiting instruction, I will allow him to state -- to answer your question.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. Would you like the question repeated?

THE WITNESS: No, I have the question in mind.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.

THE WITNESS: In fact, in 1999, there was a memo, it was actually in 2000, which summarized the 1999 income statement, and basically said that there was approximately 11 --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Go ahead. With the same limitation.

THE WITNESS: Stated that there was approximately $11.5 million received on the MIJAC catalog and the Sony/ATV catalog; five million on the MIJAC, 6.5 million on the Sony catalog, for a total revenue of about $11.5 million, if my math's correct.

At the same point in time, there was expenditures of over $20 million, made up of approximately $5 million in legal and professional fees, $5 million in security and ranch expenditures, seven and a half million dollars in personal expenditures, and $2.5 million of other miscellaneous, which was principally insurance. So total income of 11.5 million and expenditures of over $20 million.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Now, you've mentioned previously this MIJAC catalog and the Sony/ATV catalog. Does it appear, based on these records that you have reviewed, that these are his two main assets? You mentioned Neverland, but are these the main assets over and above Neverland?

A. Well, those are the main income-producing assets. I mean, as I said, I think there's three main assets, the two catalogs and Neverland. But the MIJAC catalog and the Sony/ATV catalog are the two income-producing assets which generate royalties off of those copyrighted performances.

Q. What is a music publishing catalog?

A. It's really a library of copyrighted songs or performances which a manager or an administrator sells into the commercial market. Either they sell it by playing it on the radio, they sell it by allowing a movie to use the song, a T.V. show to use the song, advertisements to use the song, or they might sell sheet music.

Each and every time that song is played or those -- that sheet music is used, you get a royalty off of it. So that generates money, which is captured by a royalty capture device, and then that is sent to MIJAC catalogs for all of the MIJAC songs, which again principally were Mr. Jackson's personal compendium of performances, or for the Sony/ATV, which was that catalog. That generates revenue.

Q. Okay. Now, the MIJAC catalog consists of what?

A. As I mentioned, that was principally Mr. Jackson's personal compendium of copyrighted songs and performances. That's what the MIJAC catalog is.

Q. And the Sony/ATV catalog?

A. The Sony/ATV was a joint venture or a partnership between Sony, who contributed a number of their copyrighted songs. I think it started out principally as country-western, and Mr. Jackson contributed his copyrighted performances of songs, other than MIJAC, which at the time there were a number of different performances, but some of them were The Beatles' hits.

Q. And is Mr. Jackson's interest in the Sony catalog a part interest?

A. Yes, it is.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Is Mr. Jackson the sole owner of the Sony catalog?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Do the records that you've reviewed indicate whether or not Mr. Jackson is the sole owner of the Sony catalog?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer that question.

THE WITNESS: Yes, the records indicate that Mr. Jackson is a part owner of that catalog with Sony as the other partner.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. Now, you've given us a breakdown of the 20 million in expenses.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; misstates the evidence.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did you give us a breakdown of the 20 million in expenses that -- for the '99 period in that March Holthouse letter?

A. I did, yes.

Q. Okay. Was there -- were there any additional liabilities over and above the $20 million, that Mr. Jackson accrued during the previous year based on that letter?

A. Yes, there were.

Q. What are we talking about?

A. It's about $11 million of interest expense on the two loans. There's two loans with B of A that are secured by -- one by the MIJAC catalog. The royalties in the MIJAC catalog are used as collateral against -- first it’s a $15 million loan, and then a $20 million loan, and it continues to go up.

And then there’s the -- the Sony/ATV catalog is used as collateral for approximately $140 million of loans from B of A. And those two loans in 1999 incurred about $11 million of expenditures -- excuse me, $11 million of interest that would be added to the 20 million to come up to a total expenditure.

Q. Okay. So let me see if -- paraphrase and see if I have this right.

In 1999, before this letter was written, Mr. Jackson had $31 million in liabilities; is that correct, approximately?

A. $31 million of expenditures.

Q. I’m sorry, $31 million in expenditures?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And he had $11.5 million in income?

A. That’s the income coming off of the two catalogs, yes.

Q. So he’s spending millions more than he’s making?

A. The evidence shows that he’s spending about $20 to $30 million more than he’s making.

Q. Now, is that an annualized issue? Are you saying -- I mean, he’s making 20 or 30 -- or spending 20 or 30 more than he’s making per year?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Is that what we’re talking about?

A. That’s annually, yes.

Q. Okay. So, you’ve mentioned some loans that he has accrued, some debts. Who was the lender in those loans?

A. Bank of America.

Q. Can you tell at this stage what types of loans those are?

A. Well, one is what’s called a line of credit, which means you can borrow from zero to the total amount of the loan possible. And the other was just a set loan. Started at $140 million, and it’s grown to $200 million.

Q. Okay. So we’re still looking at the Holthouse memo of 2000. At that stage, what was that loan?

A. In 2000 --

Q. In March.

A. In March of 2000, I believe that loan was $24 million.

Q. Okay. And then was there -- were there any other loans at that point?

A. Well, there was the B of A loan for 140 million. There was the $24 million B of A loan on the MIJAC catalog. And there was an additional $26 million owed to Sony.

Q. Okay. And what is the Sony loan related to, if you could tell us?

A. It appeared to be some 1994 transaction where 26 million dollars was owed.

Q. So the previous Holthouse letter you talked about said that he had I think around $800,000 in accounts payable.

A. Okay.

Q. Is that right?

A. Well, it said that there was -- there was not cash available to pay approximately $800,000 of outstanding obligations.

Q. So those are bills that he has that he didn’t have the money to pay?

A. Correct.

Q. How does his outstanding obligations versus cash -- look at the point where we’re at now, at the -- in March of 2000. Does the letter reflect his ability to pay his obligations at that point?

A. As I recall, the memo from Holthouse said that at that point in time --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer, with the same limitation that I instructed the jury on earlier.

Go ahead.

THE WITNESS: Approximately $3.5 million of outstanding obligations as of that date in 2000.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Does Holthouse express any additional concerns about his assets, the vitality of, or the risk that’s being presented by this overspending concerning his assets?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Leading and hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Are there any other concerns that are expressed by Holthouse in this memo?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Leading and hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained. Calls for a narrative.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. Does Holthouse talk about any possible tax liabilities in this letter?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: They do, yes. What's talked about is, they mention in the letter that if Mr. Jackson and his entities continue to overspend by $20 to $30 million a year, that the collateral for those loans is the catalogs. That's what secures the catalogs. Just like your car secures your car loan, those catalogs secure those loans, or your house secures your mortgage.

And their concern is that if that rate of spending continues, that those catalogs could be in jeopardy. In other words, he may have to sell those, even if he could sell them. And if, in fact, you sell those catalogs, there's a substantial tax liability. So you not only have to pay the debt, but you also have to pay the taxes on the sale of those catalogs. And it talks about that issue and that being a concern of Holthouse.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Does Holthouse write an additional letter expressing their concerns in June of 2000?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Hearsay; leading; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: They do, yes.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And do they discuss the issue of how much available cash or remaining debt on these loans Mr. Jackson has to fund his current obligations?

A. They do, yes.

Q. What do they say?

A. At that point in time, there was the $20 million line of credit that was basically -- Holthouse even says in the memo that it's really -- that line of credit and the other debt is funding his living expenses.

And the memo goes on to say that at that point in time, $9.2 million has been lent or drawn on the line of credit. Meaning that there's only another $800,000 available on that line to fund living expenses for an indefinite period of time.

Q. Do they describe any spending restrictions on Mr. Jackson that need to go into effect?

A. They do. Concerned over that cash situation or that cash crisis, they immediately state that they will no longer pay any bills unless authorized by the client, and --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Hearsay; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Moving on to June 14th, just a few days later, did they send another memorandum? Did Holthouse send another letter to Mr. Jackson?

A. They did, yes.

Q. Do they talk about Mr. Jackson's rate of spending specifically in that letter?

A. Um --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Hearsay; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes, they do.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: What do they say?

A. They continue to act -- or they continue to say they are concerned about Mr. Jackson's rate of spending. And again, he is spending approximately $20 to $30 million more than he's making per year.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did they specifically say that?
A. Yes.
Q. What is Mr. Jackson’s debt at this particular juncture? Is it mentioned in these documents?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation and hearsay.

THE COURT: It’s --
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It’s compound.
THE COURT: -- compound.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll go ahead and withdraw the question.
Q. Does -- do these documents that you’ve described so far say anything about Mr. Jackson’s debt that he is now servicing at this point in time, on June 13th or June 14th of 2000?
A. They do, yes.
Q. What do they tell you about his debt at that point?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.
THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.
THE WITNESS: As I recall, they mention that the Bank of America debt is a $200,000 -- excuse me, $200 million, which is securing the ATV catalog. And as I recall, the line of credit is up to $35 million at that point in time.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. And do they talk about his ability to pay unpaid vendors or bills in that letter?
A. Yes. It goes on to state that Holthouse is unable to pay vendors; that vendors continue --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.
THE COURT: Overruled. Go ahead.

THE WITNESS: And that vendors are continuing to threaten alternative action if they are not paid.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Does Holthouse warn Mr. Jackson of an impending problem?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Leading; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Yes. It goes on to say, back when -- it said back three months earlier --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Could you just confine your answer to any warnings that are given in the June 14th, 2000, Holthouse letter?

A. Yes. The warnings are that, again, that the catalogs are now at risk. And that’s the MIJAC catalog and the Sony/ATV catalog, because again, they are securing those loans, and those loans continue to increase.

Q. Did you consider a memorandum from So Young Lee to Myung Ho Lee?

A. I did, yes.

Q. And who is Myung Ho Lee?

A. Apparently he was a financial advisor to Mr. Jackson.

Q. And the date of this letter was -- do you recall it?

A. I think it was October of ‘00. ‘01, possibly.

Q. And in this letter, does Miss Lee forecast future spending for the period -- 16-month period of September 2000 through December 2001?

A. Yes, she does.

Q. How much spending is forecast?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Hearsay; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: A little over $31 million for that 16-month period of time.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: So what does that equal on an annualized basis in terms of spending?

A. If my math is right, about $23, $24 million per year.

Q. All right. So has that been an increase from the previous documentation that you reviewed concerning Mr. Jackson’s expenditures when he was warned back in, I think it was, March of 2000?

A. Yes. The 1999 expenditures were $20 million, plus approximately $11 million of interest. The projection by Ms. Lee was $23 million for that year, and that did not include the $11 or $12 million of interest expense. So those expenditures are continuing to increase.

Q. Were you able to determine whether or not these forecasts were accurate as far as future spending?

A. No, we did not see those documents as to actual expenditures in 2001.

Q. Did you ultimately look at documents from 2004 that showed his level of debt during that period?

A. Yeah, we saw how the debt increased 2001 -- or 2000 through 2004.

Q. And was the increase in debt commensurate with these predictions of excessive spending by So Young Lee?

A. Yes. As I mentioned earlier, the debt increased approximately $70 million over a three-year period of time. And that would tend you to believe that it was about $20 to $30 million per year increase. The debt was increasing because the expenditures increased over the income levels.

Q. Did you consider a February 13th, 2003, memorandum from International Business Management?

A. I did, yes.

Q. And who is International Business Management?

A. They appear to be another financial consulting firm that was assisting Mr. Jackson and/or his advisors.

Q. Okay. Does this letter mention anything about Mr. Jackson's rate of spending?

A. It does.

Q. What does it say?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: It says that they are concerned about his excess spending habits, his continued excess spending habits over his income.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Do they cite any specific figures?

A. I think it was $20 to $30 million again.

Q. Okay. Does that letter talk about how many -- how much money is building up in the unpaid vendors category?

A. It does, yes.

Q. What does it say?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; Court ruling.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Does it say how much cash is left to pay these vendors?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; Court ruling.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Does it say anything about the status of his current loan balances in February of 2003?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: It does, yes.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: What is that?

A. At that point in time, it mentions that the MIJAC loans are approximately $70 million. And the B of A loan on the Sony/ATV catalog is approximately $200 million.

Q. Does it say whether or not he has any -- has sufficient cash to pay his bills?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: In that month, February of 2003.

MR. MESEREAU: Leading; hearsay; foundation; Court ruling.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer

THE WITNESS: Yes. It states that at that point in time there are $10.5 million of unpaid vendor invoices. And there’s only $38,000 of cash in the bank.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. So if we can summarize what has happened to his debt since 1999, what was his debt with the Bank of America as of 2000?

A. Well, in 2000, the debt was approximately $155 million.
Q. And let’s go now to February of 2003.
A. That debt has grown to $224 million.
Q. 70 $million in three years increase?

A. That’s correct.
Q. Have you reviewed loan documents, these loan documents for the two loans that you’re -- or for the loans on these music catalogs that you’ve talked about?
A. I did, yes.
Q. Do they have any covenants or conditions?
A. They do, yes.
Q. Any covenants regarding accruing additional debt?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation, hearsay, and leading.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: Yes, there is a covenant. Covenants -- well, there is a covenant that says that there’s no additional debt allowed unless approved by Bank of America.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Is there a covenant against -- any covenant regarding, I should say, further encumbering these two assets? In other words, getting more -- mortgaging them further with another agency?
A. Yes. There is also a covenant that says that Mr. Jackson and/or his businesses are not allowed to further encumber these two catalogs. In other words, the only loan that can be on these two catalogs is the two B of A loans.

Q. So --
THE COURT: We’ll take our break.
MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, we have a motion to make.
THE COURT: Not now.
(Recess taken.)

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE BAILIFF: You can have a seat, Mr. O'Bryan.

THE COURT: The reason I've come in before we bring the jury in is that I want to make a ruling here that helps clarify what you're trying to do, both of you.

Initially I made an order that the District Attorney was permitted to bring in general financial information to provide evidence from which the jury may or may not infer that the defendant was -- had financial problems, from which they may or may not infer that that gives him some motive to commit the crimes the D.A. alleges he's committed.

The offer of proof that was made in the memorandum that you submitted, your trial memorandum, was within what I perceived.

The thing that I'm uncomfortable with, and have been for a few minutes, is the constant having your expert refer to, you know, letter after letter from his advisors about his financial condition.

The expert has testified that he relied on the balance sheet and income expenditure statements, which is basically what you expect an expert to rely on. And to some extent certainly he would rely on other people's opinions, financial advisors of Mr. Jackson. But it's not the kind of evidence that I'm going to allow you to continue to bring up.

So you can -- my ruling is that his quotes from -- that he wants to make or you want him to put into evidence from Michael Jackson's advisors are to stop at this point.

I have advised them that those have limited value to them, since they can't accept those for the truth of the matter asserted, but I think if we continue in that vein, it's not the right way to present the evidence.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: May I just tell the Court how I intend to finish up, just so we're --

THE COURT: They can't hear you.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: May I just tell the Court how I intend to finish up?

THE COURT: You may.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Basically, just so you know, Your Honor, we wanted to do this with balance sheets. And as you know, we weren't --

THE COURT: I don't want to hear that. What do you want to tell me?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: At the end of the -- we're at the end of his testimony. And we're going to finish with the two summaries that were provided by the Bank of America. Now, these are actual letters that were SDT'd from Bank of America to representatives. And just so you know, the testimony is book-ended by the statement, balance statement, and these letters.

THE COURT: Let me see the letters.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. Well, I have a copy, but --

THE COURT: Have you seen the letters, Counsel?

MR. MESEREAU: I'm not sure what he's talking about.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: This would be the Jane Heller letter and the Maiorella letter from the Bank of America indicating the status of the loan balances as of 2004.

THE WITNESS: I have them here, if you want.

MR. MESEREAU: May I take a look, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Well, after me.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Excuse me.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Jane Heller and Maiorella.

THE COURT: So these are the status of the loans in 2004?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes. And these provide conclusive evidence that everything that was predicted, everything that was stated by all of the letters that we have indicated, was borne out in the resulting accumulation of debt and of what the --

THE COURT: Yeah, but the issue isn't what his financial status is today or whether you were right or wrong.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I know, the issue is --

THE COURT: The issue is what was his frame of mind in 2000 -- late 2002 and 2003.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And that’s what --
THE COURT: And not whether he was even right. He could have been absolutely wrong. So --
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That’s true.
THE COURT: So his financial statement today isn’t at issue.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, I’m just saying that’s why the letters are so important, because they impute knowledge of the defendant.
THE COURT: Today.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: No, the ones that we’ve introduced so far. And this basically confirms that the letters were all correct, and that they also further show what was going on in 2003.
THE COURT: What they show is, in hindsight, he was in trouble. But that’s not the issue.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. So --
THE COURT: Did you look at the letters, Mr. Mesereau?
MR. MESEREAU: I’ve looked at them, Your Honor. And I would object based on what the Court just said. The point of their presentation is not to talk about --
THE COURT: They can’t hear you.
MR. MESEREAU: I’m sorry, Your Honor. The point they’re trying to prove is not what is his financial status today. They’re allegedly trying to suggest there was a motive in 2003 to conspire to do criminal acts because of financial concerns, which of course we vigorously dispute.
But nevertheless, the issue is what is relevant to a possible motive in 2003, specifically between January and March. Nothing after that date would have any relevance to what they claim they’re trying to prove.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Our point is that these letters tell what happened in 2003, tell what was going on at that time. Our --
THE COURT: I must have misread them. Do you want to give them back to me? I thought they were talking about right now.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, they're talking about how the debt has accumulated.

THE COURT: They're talking about right now, aren't they?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes, they are.
THE COURT: All right. Give them back to him.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: But it's the genesis of those problems that exist in 2003.
THE COURT: Do you understand what I'm saying, Counsel?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I do. I do.
THE COURT: Do you understand the limitations that I gave you on the financial material?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That it was to be concise --
THE COURT: I think now the limitation is this: That I don't want you asking him any more quotes from any of his advisors. You are apparently not going to do that.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.
THE COURT: And I don't think it's -- and I will rule that an opinion as to his present financial status would be improper.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Very good. I'll just finish up with his opinions about the defendant's financial status in 2003.
THE COURT: At that time. All right.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Thank you.
THE COURT: Thank you.
You can bring in the jury.

(The following proceedings were held in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: Counsel?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you, Your Honor.
Q. Mr. O'Bryan, where we left off, I was drawing your attention back to the summary of your opinions, and I'm going to ask you at this time, based upon your review of all the records in this case, including the records you've testified about, can you walk us through your opinions about Mr. Jackson’s financial condition as of the February-March period of 2003? What are your opinions, sir?

A. Again, they are that Mr. Jackson’s financial condition has deteriorated, up and leading to that point of time, February of 2003. The expenditures have exceeded income. The liabilities have increased. And there is a liquidity crisis or a cash crisis which looms and has been ongoing. And I believe those conditions were known as of February 2003.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Thank you very much, Mr. O’Bryan.

THE COURT: Cross-examine?

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, please, Your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Good afternoon.

A. That it is. Good afternoon.

Q. My name is Thomas Mesereau and I speak for Mr. Jackson.

When you began your examination by the prosecutor for the government, you indicated there was some documents that you had wanted to see if you could, but they were not available to you, right?

A. That is correct.

Q. And what documents were they?

A. Those would be -- well, we’d like to see financial statements for 2000 -- for 1999, 2000, 2001, 2002, and all the way through February of 2003. In addition to that, general ledgers, which are the summation of transactions, which become financial statements. We asked for bank statements. Those types of detailed supporting documentation would be things that we would typically ask for, and we did. They were just simply not made available to us.

Q. Okay. They were not made available to you by the prosecutor who hired you, correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; misstates the evidence.

THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I was simply told that that information was not available to me.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Well, you've never spoken to anyone on the defense side, correct?

A. I have not, no.

Q. The only people you spoke to about your opinions today are the prosecutors for the government, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And when did you first talk to any prosecutor for the government?

A. Oh, I think the first call came to me probably back in October-November.

Q. Okay. And who called you?

A. Oh, it was Mr. Auchincloss.

Q. Okay. And have you worked with Prosecutor Auchincloss ever since?

A. I have not, no.

Q. Okay. Who have you worked with to -- in the process of preparing to testify in this trial?

A. We've met with Mr. Auchincloss, and also a Ms. Linz, as I recall her name, Chris Linz. I met Mr. Sneddon, but we really didn't talk about my testimony, per se.

Q. Okay. Now, you've indicated you wished you could have looked at financial statements for 1999, 2000, 2001 and 2002; is that correct?

A. All the way up through February of 2003, actually.

Q. Okay. So in the process of forming your opinions, and I'm speaking about the opinions you've testified to today, you haven't looked at one certified financial statement of Mr. Jackson, true?

A. Well, we saw the June 30 -- there's a 1999 financial statement, and there's a June 30, 2002, financial statement.

Q. Okay. And who prepared those?

A. Prepared by Holthouse, as I recall.

Q. Okay. And are they certified, to your knowledge?

A. Yes, they are.

Q. Okay. And did you talk to anyone at Holthouse about what they used to prepare those statements?

A. No. You can see what they used to prepare the statements.

Q. Well, let me just -- you can see what they used to prepare those statements?

A. Yes.

Q. You can see every document they reviewed?

A. No, but you know, based on the opinion that they gave and the types of financial statements that they are.

Q. Okay. Okay. You didn't look at general ledgers, because they were not available, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And please tell the jury what general ledgers would have -- well, first of all, before I get into that. The financial statements you did not look at, why would you like to have looked at those financial statements?

A. Because, as I mentioned in my direct, in doing a forensic accounting investigation, you want to see as much information as you possibly can. So that may lend additional information, it may not, but you certainly want to see as much as you possible can.

Q. And you said you would like to have looked at general ledgers, but could not, right?

A. That's correct.

Q. And why would you have preferred to have looked at general ledgers?

A. It's just more information. Understand that the general ledgers are nothing more than a process of accumulating a bunch of different transactions that then come to an end number that then become part of the balance sheet. So it just tells you the detail that makes up the final number. It's just more information.

Q. You didn't look at bank statements, correct?

A. We did not see any bank statements, no.

Q. And had you had any bank statements available, what benefit would you have had?

A. Well, it would tell you cash balances. It would tell you the expenditures, at least on a cash basis. You wouldn’t know the detail. It would just be like looking at your normal bank statement, just shows the check and the account. So it would show you cash balances on an ongoing basis.

Q. And are you saying the documents you looked at did not identify for you exactly what the nature of the expenditures were?

A. No, there are documents within some of the Holthouse memos and some of the financial consultants that talk about individual expenditures and individual expenditure levels.

Q. Okay. You didn’t look at any tax returns, correct?

A. No, we actually did, I think, see tax returns.

Q. Which ones; do you know?

A. I don’t recall the years. Seems to me they were later years.

Q. Okay. You didn’t see any during the period you’re giving an opinion on, did you?

A. I think we may have seen ‘02, maybe ‘03.

Q. Okay. And are you sure about that?

A. I don’t recall. There’s not a lot of information that’s pertinent to this analysis in a tax return.

Q. Okay. Were they corporate returns or personal; do you know?

A. I believe they were personal.

Q. Okay. Now, you’ve indicated that you are with a financial consulting firm, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And would one of the areas of expertise in your firm be looking at someone’s bare financial condition and giving them advice how to change their condition and improve it?

A. I’m not sure what you mean by “bare.”

Q. Well, you’ve given the jury your opinions about Mr. Jackson’s expenditures, liabilities and liquidity, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. You were not here to tell the jury what all of his assets were worth during that particular time period, correct?

A. And we don’t know exactly what they were worth during that particular time frame.

Q. Have you looked at any information in response to the prosecutor’s questions that would have given you any indication what any of Mr. Jackson’s assets were worth?

A. There were a number of different documents in those which we saw that talked about value over periods of time. For example, I think there was a value given for Neverland Ranch at some point in time. There was also an appraisal done on the MIJAC catalog at some point in time. And there was an appraisal done on the entire Sony/ATV catalog at some point in time. Those would be the major assets. And we did see valuation -- two valuations done by an appraiser, and then one I think was just a representation maybe made by IBM, as I recall.

Q. Now, the prosecutor talked to you about a letter from a company called International Business Management. Do you remember that?

A. I do, yes.

Q. That was in February of 2003, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And do you recall that in that letter from that firm the Sony/ATV catalog was estimated to be worth approximately one billion dollars?

A. I do, yes. That’s the catalog in total, yes.

Q. And clearly if you were going to try and advise someone like Mr. Jackson, based on the information you’ve given the jury today, about how to restructure his affairs to not have the debt he had or to be more liquid, you would consider the possibility of selling assets, true?

A. I think that’s a real possibility here, yes.

Q. And if, in fact, the value of one billion dollars that is found in the letter you refer to is true, clearly if you were advising Mr. Jackson how to solve any cash crisis, you would consider the possibility of liquidating that asset, true?

A. No, because the value of the catalog is one billion dollars. Mr. Jackson’s interest is not half of that billion dollars.

Q. Well, sir, he has an interest in that catalog, correct?

A. Yes. But it is not worth half of one billion dollars.

Q. He purchased the catalog in approximately 1986 for about $47 million, right?

A. I think that’s right.

Q. He sold half of that interest in the catalog in approximately 1995 for 90 million, true?

A. I believe that’s correct.

Q. And in 1999 -- excuse me, in 2003, you see an estimated value in this particular letter of one billion dollars, right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And that catalog contains ownership interests in all of The Beatles’ music, true?

A. I don’t know that it’s all of The Beatles’ music. I think it’s some of The Beatles’ music.

Q. Do you know whether or not it’s all of it or not?

A. I don’t know.

Q. Do you know any other recording artists whose copyrighted music is contained within that catalog?

A. Yeah, I saw a memo on that. I don’t recall the specifics, but I saw there were others involved. I think there were -- Sony’s copyrighted music was in there, which I think it initially was country-western. But I think there were other artists in there as well as The Beatles.

Q. Okay. Now, that catalog today has been estimated to be worth a couple of billion dollars by some, and even four to five by others. Are you aware of that?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; assumes facts.

THE WITNESS: I’m not aware of that, but again --

THE COURT: That’s overruled. The answer is he’s not aware of it. Next question.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Your job was not to appraise the value of the Sony/ATV catalog, correct?
A. No. We certainly considered the value in coming to our opinions.
Q. Did you hire an appraiser to give you an appraisal of the value of that catalog in the year 2003?
A. No.
Q. You never hired any appraiser to put a value on that catalog at any time while you were working for the government, correct?
A. No. I don’t see the need to.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m going to object as relevancy as to the entire catalog. What’s relevant is only the defendant’s portion of it.

BAILIFF CORTEZ: Your microphone, sir, is off.
THE COURT: The objection is overruled. The answer is in. Next question.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you look at the transactional documents that were drafted in the mid-’90s, approximately 1995, whereby Mr. Jackson sold a half interest in that catalog to Sony?
A. I see the Sony/ATV agreement. Is that the document you’re referring to?
Q. That and other documents that refer to that transaction.
A. I see -- the Sony/ATV agreement is what I saw.
Q. Okay. Your job was not to obtain all of the documentation that pertained to Mr. Jackson’s sale of a half of his catalog to Sony, right?
A. Well, again, I would ask for any document that’s available. And I got the documents I got, which was the Sony/ATV catalog document.
Q. Okay. And you’re not aware of efforts, through the last four or five years, by anybody to try and purchase his interest, correct?
A. In the Sony/ATV?
Q. Yes.
A. Well, Mr. Jackson, I don’t believe, is allowed to sell any interest until 2005.

Q. But there are efforts to purchase it. If you can get all parties to agree, you can sell your interest, can’t you?

A. That’s true. If he gets Sony’s approval, he could sell his interest, based on the agreement.

Q. So are you aware of any efforts during the last four or five years by third parties to try and get Sony and Mr. Jackson together and purchase that catalog?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object as to relevancy beyond 2003.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: March.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Let me rephrase.

Are you aware of any efforts by third parties, between 1999 and the end of 2003, to get Sony and Mr. Jackson together and work out an arrangement where Mr. Jackson’s interest is sold?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Same objection. End of 2003.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. MESEREAU: I’ll rephrase it again.

Q. Are you aware of any efforts between the years 1999 and March of 2003 by any third party to get Mr. Jackson and Sony together so they could purchase Mr. Jackson’s interest in that catalog?

A. No, I have not seen any document like that.

Q. Okay. Now, among the documents that you were handed by Prosecutor Auchincloss, was the only reference to a value of the Sony/ATV catalog the one billion dollars you just referred to?

A. No, there was two. The IBM memo said, I think, one billion dollars, and it’s June -- excuse me, a February 13th, ‘03 memo. But again, that’s the value of the catalog, not Mr. Jackson’s interest.

And there was a second document that was actually an appraisal done by an appraisal firm in, I think it was 1999, for $991 million, I believe.

Q. Okay.

A. So there’s two documents that I saw.

Q. Now, Prosecutor Auchincloss showed you documents from March of 2003 that were written to Mr. Jackson by an attorney named David LeGrand, correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; misstates the evidence as to the date of the documents.

THE WITNESS: You’d have to refer me to that document. I’m sorry.

THE COURT: Just a moment.

THE WITNESS: I’m sorry.

THE COURT: Well, I guess the District Attorney is saying that’s not the correct date. Do you have a document that’s dated March of 2003?

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, I do.

Q. Did the prosecutor in the course of your work for him show you a document dated March 18th, 2003, to Mr. Jackson from a lawyer named David LeGrand?

A. I don’t recall seeing that document.

Q. Okay. Might it refresh your recollection if I just show you the one I have?

A. Please.

MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: May I see what you’ve got?

THE WITNESS: I don’t recall seeing this memo before.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: So you’re saying the prosecutor didn’t give you this document when he was preparing you?

A. No, I’m not suggesting that. It’s just I have not seen that document.

Q. Okay. Well, how many documents did you look at in preparing to testify?

A. As I mentioned earlier, there was about six boxes, something like that, of documents.

Q. Okay. Do you recall seeing the name David LeGrand in the documents?

A. I do, yes. There’s documents from IBM to David LeGrand.

Q. Do you recall that he was giving Mr. Jackson advice about how to handle his financial situation?

A. I do recall that, yes.

Q. Do you recall him suggesting that if Mr.

Jackson --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m going to object to counsel reading --

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: -- sold his --

Your Honor, can I --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: -- reading from the letter --

MR. MESEREAU: -- complete the question?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: -- that he says he doesn’t know about.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: If Mr. Jackson sold his interest in March of 1993 -- excuse me, March of 2003 in the Sony/ATV joint venture, okay?

A. Yes, I gotcha.

Q. That’s assuming the parties got together and all agreed Mr. Jackson can sell his interest, all right?

A. That’s what I believe would have to happen, yes.

Q. Yes. He could have paid off the Bank of America loan, he could have ended up worth $200 million after taxes, excluding royalty income, true?

A. I’ve never seen that document, so I can’t tell you that’s true or not.

Q. Okay. But you were given some documents by the prosecutor that Mr. Jackson had gotten from his lawyer, Mr. LeGrand, true?

A. Yes, we were.

Q. And you saw some documents that said “Hale Lane” on them, correct, the law firm the lawyer belonged to, right?

A. We’ve seen those documents, yes.

Q. Okay. And you don’t recall a document dated March 18th where Mr. LeGrand told him how to solve his liquidity problem and be worth $200 million before he got a royalty?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Assumes facts; argumentative.

THE COURT: The objection is sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever ask Prosecutor Auchincloss if he had any documents available to him where any of Mr. Jackson’s advisors gave him advice on how to solve his liquidity problem?

A. Well, we asked for any and all documents relevant, so if I didn't know that document exists, whatever that document is, I wouldn't have known to ask for it. So we simply asked for any and all documents relevant to financial condition issues through February of 2003.

Q. Okay. Did you ask for documents through March of 2003 from Prosecutor Auchincloss?

A. We asked for documents all the way through today --

Q. Okay.

A. -- with respect to bank statements and the like.

Q. But you have never seen any document that suggested Mr. Jackson sell that asset and analyzes what he'll be worth if he sells his interest, right?

A. No. I've never seen that document, no.

Q. Okay. Now, none of your calculations consider any opportunities Mr. Jackson had in the entertainment industry during those years, correct?

A. That's -- well, I mean, it doesn't consider from an income perspective.

Actually, that's not true. It does consider, because the financial consultants -- the letters that the financial consultants wrote that I have looked at and relied on would assumingly take that into account. They're his business advisors and they're talking about the excess expenditures. So my guess is -- not a guess. I would assume they would include all items of revenue with respect to a calculation.

Q. Mr. O'Bryan, an entertainer like Mr. Jackson doesn't just go to his CPA every time someone offers him an opportunity around the world, right?

A. I don't know what his relationship with his business manager was.

Q. Well, did you know that he was offered $100 million to do a national tour in 2002?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; assumes facts.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Are you an expert on the music industry?

A. No, I’m not.

Q. Have you done any kind of an analysis on what opportunities in the entertainment industry Mr. Jackson had between the years 1999 and March of 2003?

A. I did not, no. I relied on the financial consultants’ information.

Q. Now, based on what you have seen to date, Mr. Jackson has never gone bankrupt ever, has he?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Do you have any knowledge of what Mr. Jackson was offered to do either national or international music tours between the years 1999 and March of 2003?

A. No.

Q. Did the prosecutor give you any documents about licensing opportunities for various Michael-Jackson-related products that he was offered between the years 1999 and March of 2003?

A. I don’t recall seeing any of those. There could be some in there, but I don’t know that would be relevant to my calculations.

Q. If you were trying to solve a liquidity crisis like you’ve identified here, wouldn’t it be relevant if you knew that Mr. Jackson could accept one opportunity and solve it in a day?

A. Well, it could be relevant, but it isn’t in this calculation, because that liquidity crisis was real. There were documents -- there are documents throughout that we reviewed that there was a serious cash crisis. And if it could have been solved, why wasn’t it? I mean, there were documents that there’s $10 million being unpaid. There’s documents where vendors are threatening lawsuits. If it’s that easy to fix, why don’t you fix it?

Q. If it was as bad as you said it was, why didn’t he go bankrupt?

A. Because I think he’s been able to continue to borrow.

Q. Do you know that for a fact?

A. Yes. The debt’s gone up.

Q. Do you know what opportunities he had to market Michael Jackson video games, market Michael Jackson fragrances, Michael Jackson music, Michael Jackson concerts, Michael Jackson tours during that period? Do you know what cash opportunities were available to him if he wanted them?

A. I have no doubt that there were substantial opportunities. The issue becomes why weren't they availed themselves? Why didn't they do that? There was a serious cash crisis. There's no doubt about that, based on the documents I've seen. And in fact, if it was so easy to do, why wasn't it done?

Q. Maybe it wasn't as serious as you've identified.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained. The jury's admonished to disregard Mr. Mesereau's remark.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did your firm ever do any independent due diligence investigation of Mr. Jackson's finances during that period?

A. No. No. Like, for example, searching the Internet or something like that? I mean, we asked for documents.

Q. Yes.

A. And we got the documents we got. I'm not sure -- independent investigation. Do you mean by going to the Internet or something like that?

Q. If your firm had been theoretically retained by Mr. Jackson to do an analysis of his assets and liabilities, to analyze any cash liquidity problem and to make recommendations how to solve it, what would you have wanted to look at?

A. We would have wanted to look at the documents we requested, which were all the bank statements, all the general ledgers, all of the income statements and balance sheets and financial statements for the individual years, plus the documents that we've seen, which is the opinions and/or the correspondence from all of his advisors as they progressed through serving him and helping him with his cash crisis.

Q. Okay. And I think it goes without saying, you didn't get all those documents to look at, correct?
A. As I mentioned, we didn't get all the financial statements and all the documents that we talked about, no.
Q. Now, you asked for documents up to the present; is that correct?
A. As I recall, we did, yes.
Q. Did Prosecutor Auchincloss give you documents that concerned March of 2003?
A. We -- we didn't -- apparently we didn't see some documents. In fact, I'm sure we didn't see all the documents, but we got what we got and those documents appeared to go through mostly 2003.
Q. Okay. Now, did you see current appraisals of all assets you believe Mr. Jackson owned when you did your analysis?
A. No. No, the -- as I said, the only two appraisal documents we saw was an official one in 1999, and then the IBM document, which was again a valuation of the venture, not just Mr. Jackson's interest.
Q. Now, based on what documents you saw, clearly the Sony/ATV music catalog was an appreciating asset, right?

A. It was an appreciating asset for the catalog. I'm not sure it was an appreciating asset for Mr. Jackson's interest because of the way it was structured.
Q. Okay. But, sir, again, if three parties, Sony, Mr. Jackson and a potential purchaser, get together, and there is an effort to buy that catalog from Sony and Mr. Jackson, terms are negotiated, and almost anything can be liquid at that point, true?
A. I'm sorry, "anything can be liquid." Do you mean --
Q. Sony and Mr. Jackson were certainly, based on what you know, capable of getting together and jointly selling their interests in that catalog to a third party, right?
A. That's my understanding; that either party could sell with the approval of the other.

Q. Okay.

A. Up until December 2005.

Q. And you knew that that catalog had originally been completely owned by Mr. Jackson, right?

A. That's correct. Well, he owned a portion of it. The catalog became total once Sony put their interests in as well.

Q. Well, when Mr. Jackson initially obtained an interest in the catalog, he had a complete interest, did he not?

A. He had the interest in his copyrighted assets. Sony had their interest in their copyrighted assets.

Q. I'm talking about in 1986 when he purchased it.

A. He had apparently 100 percent interest.

Q. Okay. And you knew he had paid approximately 47 million for his interest, right?

A. I think that's right.

Q. He had sold half of that interest approximately ten years later for 90 million, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And in 2003, it was your understanding that the entire catalog was worth -- at least the only estimate you saw was a billion, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Now, let me ask you this, because you do advise businesses on how to restructure --

A. I do.

Q. -- and improve liquidity, correct?

A. We do, yes.

Q. Okay. Given the rate of appreciation of that asset, based on what you know, between 1986 and 2003, can you envision a situation where Mr. Jackson says to himself, "I'll deal with the liquidity crisis each year, because it’s a price worth paying to hang on to this asset the way it’s increasing in value”?

A. I don’t know what Mr. Jackson may have said to himself. But from a financial perspective, I would simply disagree with you that his interest is necessarily increasing each year given the financial structure of the arrangement.

Q. But the asset could be appreciating in terms of inherent value, true?

A. Depends on what royalties, in fact, it’s generating.

Q. Do you know?

A. Actually, yes, the royalties were increasing. But again, that’s the catalog in total. That’s not necessarily Mr. Jackson’s interest in that catalog.

Q. Well, let me ask you this: Had you seen the letter of March 18th -- excuse me, March 19th that I just showed you from Mr. LeGrand - okay? - where his lawyer advises him, “You can sell your interest, and you can end up worth $200 million after taxes” --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. This was -- this was -- the objection was sustained previously.

Hearsay.

MR. MESEREAU: I haven’t finished the question, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I’ll sustain the objection, though. I know it is the same question.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Motion to strike.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: If you’d known that asset could be sold in March of 2003 - okay? - if you knew that Mr. Jackson could have been worth 200 million after taxes by doing it, excluding royalty income, let’s assume those facts just for the sake of argument, all right?

A. Okay.

Q. If you knew that, you wouldn’t consider this liquidity crisis to be as serious as you’ve made it, true?

A. Well, the liquidity crisis was ongoing. There’s -- in my mind, there’s no doubt about it, in 1999, 2000, 2001, 2002, and as of February 13th, 2003. In my mind there's no question about that. If, hypothetically, Mr. Jackson could have sold his interest, Sony would have agreed, and it would have created a net cash to him of $200 million, of course liquidity issues would change subsequent to February 13th, 2003.

Q. Okay. I'm not talking about net cash. I'm talking about when all the dust settles and all the loans are paid, and Bank of America is out of the equation, he ends up worth $200 million free of all debt. If you knew he could have achieved that in March of 2003, would that change your opinion about the seriousness of this liquidity crisis?

A. As I was saying --
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'll object as to assumes facts. Argumentative. And requires speculation.
MR. MESEREAU: It's just using a hypothetical, Your Honor.
THE COURT: I'll allow the question as a hypothetical.
(To the jury) I've already given you some instruction on hypothetical questions. Do you remember that instruction? Vaguely. Okay. I'll give it to you after a while.
Go ahead. You may answer.
THE WITNESS: As I mentioned, it would not change my opinion about his liquidity of the cash crisis up through 2-13-03. However, if that was known at that point in time, and at the end of the day there would be $200 million of net worth in your hypothetical, clearly that would change a liquidity issue at that point in time.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And certainly if Mr. Jackson had received a letter from his attorney in March of 2003 stating an assumption like that, that would likely have changed Mr. Jackson's view of his financial situation, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Improper hypothetical; argumentative.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Now, typically, if you were going to advise Mr. Jackson on how to handle a liquidity crisis, once you identified a liquidity crisis like you have today, logically wouldn't you sit down with the client and say, "What opportunities are available to you, sir, to raise millions of dollars and help solve your short-term needs?" That would be one of the questions you'd ask, right?

A. Certainly.

Q. And given what you know about Mr. Jackson and the success he's had in the music business and his reputation he's had around the world, logically wouldn't one of the first questions be, "Mr. Jackson, what are the opportunities available for you around the world right now to raise millions of dollars and help solve the crisis?"

A. Would that be a question an advisor would ask? Is that your --

Q. Wouldn't that be a logical question if you were consulting -- or someone like Mr. Jackson was consulting you?

A. Certainly. Clearly cash needed to be raised, and that would be a question one would ask.

Q. Okay. Now, have you, in your work, advised people in the entertainment industry --

A. No.

Q. -- of how to restructure their affairs?

A. No, I have not.

Q. You've never done it once?

A. Never once.

Q. Well, certainly in the course of your career, you've heard from time to time about various celebrities in the entertainment industry who, for whatever reason, end up with a cash crisis, true?

A. Yes.

Q. One of the reasons is sometimes work is sporadic depending on what work you do, correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Argumentative; irrelevant.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you recall generally what documents you looked at when you were preparing your conclusions in this case?

A. Yes. As I mentioned, we saw -- it was five to six boxes. There was a couple of boxes of UCC filing statements. There was also a couple of boxes of Warner-Schappel royalty statements. And I think the remaining two boxes were miscellaneous financial documents, including correspondence from Mr. Jackson’s financial advisors. And the balance sheet that I mentioned to you, as well, for 1999 and 2002.

Q. With respect to the expenditures that you’ve identified as exceeding income during those years - okay? --

A. Yes.
Q. -- am I correct in assuming that you saw some general information about how much was being spent?
A. Yes.
Q. As opposed to what the individual expenditures were for; is that correct?
A. We saw some specifics.
Q. Okay.
A. And some summaries that the consultants included.
Q. Okay. Okay. Did you see any year-by-year breakdowns about what Mr. Jackson was supposedly spending this money on?
A. Well, we showed you 1999, which summarized it by four or five different categories. There was some information in 2000. There was not -- I don’t recall any information in ‘01 or ‘02.
So we saw some details, but principally we saw the summarized memos of his financial consultants.
Q. Okay. Now, you mentioned the one-billion-dollar figure you saw attributed to the Sony/ATV catalog, correct?
A. That’s correct, in the IBM memo.
Q. And there was a second catalog as well that you became aware of, correct?

A. That’s correct, the MIJAC catalog.
Q. And that was a catalog devoted to Mr. Jackson’s own music, right?
A. That is correct.
Q. Did you see any appraisals on what the value of that catalog was?

A. Yes. There was one done in 1999.

Q. And what was the value placed on that catalog based on the appraisal you looked at?

A. $128 million.

Q. And do you recall who did that appraisal?

A. It was the same firm that did the Sony/ATV catalog appraisal. I don't remember the name of the firm. It was a Los-Angeles-based firm.

Q. And I believe you testified that as part of your analysis, you considered what the Michael Jackson catalog was generating each year in terms of revenue, right?

A. Absolutely, yes.

Q. Just like you took into consideration what the Sony/ATV catalog was generating in terms of revenue, right?

A. Right.

Q. You didn't do any analysis of whether or not, between the years 1999 and March of 2003, the Michael Jackson catalog could have been sold, correct?

A. Well, I think that the Michael Jackson catalog could have been sold at any point in time. I'm not aware of any restrictions similar to the ones on the Sony/ATV catalogs. My assumption is that could be sold at any time.

Q. Okay. And if it had been sold in 1999, based upon the document you looked at, the best value you could ever come up with would be 128 million right?

A. 128 million would be the value of the catalog, less, of course, any debt, taxes, et cetera.

Q. Right. Now, in 1999 -- actually, excuse me. Let me just rephrase that.

You're not aware of any efforts to sell the Michael Jackson catalog, correct?

A. I've never seen any documentation like that, no.

Q. Okay. And I believe you testified that, from what you could see, the three main hard assets were the two catalogs and Neverland, right?

A. Those are the three main assets, yes.

Q. Okay. And clearly, you didn't consider any analysis of what entertainment opportunities were ever available for Mr. Jackson during 1999 to March of 2003, right?

A. No, I did consider those, in that it doesn't matter if those opportunities were available. There was a serious cash crisis. That's a fact. That's what the documents support. Also, whether or not that could have happened, it didn't, and therefore there was a cash crisis. That's what the documents show.

Q. And if you knew you could solve your cash crisis tomorrow by selling a portion of an asset and accepting an opportunity to tour around the world, that would make a difference in terms of the severity of that crisis, correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Requires speculation, assumes facts, and asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained. Assumes facts.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: As you sit here today, you know that he's never gone bankrupt and he's continued to live at Neverland, correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Now, let me ask you the following: Let's assume that your conclusions are correct. In February of 2003, let's assume that your conclusions about Mr. Jackson's financial crisis are true. Okay?

A. Okay.

Q. As of February of 2003, how much was he in debt?

A. Well, the -- the Sony B of A loan had a balance of $200 million. The MIJAC loan had a balance of $24 million. There was apparently an additional ten and a half million dollars owing to vendors that had not been paid.

Q. Okay. Now --

A. Those are the large liabilities that I can think of as I sit here right now.

Q. Let’s assume that’s all correct, all right? And let’s assume he doesn’t want to sell his interest in the Sony/ATV catalog. Let’s assume he doesn’t want to sell his own catalog, which was estimated to be worth $128 million in 1999, okay? Let’s assume he decides to sit there and just keep living with this, these obligations that you’ve identified, all right?

A. Okay.

Q. Now, let’s assume he has an opportunity to make a documentary for television that can generate about $7 million, all right?

A. Okay.

Q. Let’s assume FOX is doing what is called a rebuttal documentary, okay? That $7 million isn’t going to make much of a difference, is it?

A. No, it’s not.

Q. Wouldn’t be worth committing a crime over $7 million in that situation, would it?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Now, I believe you testified that on June 30th, 2002, he was not bankrupt, right?

A. June 30th, 2002?

Q. Yes. I wrote down some notes, and if I misstated that, let me know. But did you say that?

A. Oh, I’m sorry. Based on the financial statements --

Q. Yes.

A. -- I think Mr. Auchincloss asked, by definition of a negative net worth, does that mean he’s bankrupt, and I said no.

Q. Okay. And could you please explain why you felt a negative net worth did not mean you’re bankrupt?

A. As I mentioned, that financial statement, those assets were listed in what they call a tax basis, or cash basis, which means it’s the cost. So that’s the cost of acquiring those assets whenever they were acquired. And liabilities are, in fact, the stated amount of the liability. We all know, for example, if you buy a house for 100,000, two years later it might be worth 150,000. So if that’s, in fact, the case, the 100,000 asset is lower on the balance sheet than it is the fair market value. And that’s the reason that you cannot draw that inference from that information, because that’s stated at cost, not necessarily fair market value.

Q. You were referring, in response to the prosecutor’s questions, to a document dealing with -- I gather it was a financial statement from June 30th, 2002; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Okay. Now, if you were trying to determine fair market value of Mr. Jackson’s assets based on that document, what would you have to do?

A. You’d have to go through each one of the assets and figure out what the fair market value was.

Q. And how would you do that?

A. You’d have to perform an appraisal on the largest of the assets; namely, the catalogs, and Neverland Ranch and all of the furnishings and fixtures and artwork within Neverland Ranch. And then you’d have to go through the liabilities’ side and understand what the total liabilities were, adjusted for taxes, because assuming you have to sell all those assets, there’s going to be taxes related to that. So that’s how you go about it.

Q. Did Prosecutor Auchincloss ever ask you to get an appraisal done of anything?

A. No.

Q. Did Prosecutor Auchincloss ever ask you to do a fair market value analysis of anything owned by Mr. Jackson?

A. No. But as part of the work that we were performing, we did look at and consider the value of the MIJAC catalog and the Sony/ATV, Mr. Jackson’s interest in that.

Q. But you didn’t actually have it appraised by someone capable of appraising its value, true?

A. There was no appraisal done, no.

Q. Okay. And you would agree that to put a value on something like the Sony/ATV catalog would require fairly unique expertise, would it not?

A. Not necessarily, no. I mean, it’s -- valuations -- both these valuations are simply based on cash flows. And the cash flows of that entity are then projected out into the future, and then they’re discounted back. That’s a common valuation technique. I’ve done it dozens of times.

Q. But they’re also based on whether or not you think the hard asset is appreciating, correct?

A. No, it’s not appreciating, because the appraisal tells you whether or not it’s appreciating. It’s simply based on assumptions with respect to the cash flow stream.

The value of those copyrights are nothing more than the cash flow going forward. That’s what someone would pay for them. And so you have to make an assumption about how they’ll grow, but then they simply apply a multiplier and they discount it back to today’s dollars using a discount rate.

And so it’s a rather -- I’m not going to say it’s simple, but it’s a rather common valuation technique that we use in our business.

Q. And if it’s so common to do, why wasn’t it done in your analysis?

A. Well, as I said, I did consider the MIJAC valuation as of 2003 and the Sony/ATV valuation of 2003. I did consider that.

Q. You did no analysis regarding what the marketability of his interests were in either of those assets during that point in time, and if he were to market those assets, what his condition would have been afterwards, correct?

A. No, that’s not true. No, I did. I considered that.

Q. Well, I just showed you a letter from March 2003 where his lawyer actually does that, and you said you didn’t do any analysis like that, right?

A. No, I said I didn’t see the letter, and I didn’t do a formal appraisal.

Q. Okay.

A. But I certainly took a look at what I believed the values to be of those assets. Not the whole catalog, because you can't value the whole catalog. It's just Mr. Jackson's interest. But I certainly considered the value of the MIJAC catalog and the Sony/ATV catalog as of February of 2003.

Q. But correct me if I'm wrong, you said you don't know how marketable that interest was, either individually or jointly with Sony at that time, right?

A. No, I think what I said was Sony would have to approve any sale. How marketable it is, I don't know.

Q. Okay. Did you ever do any analysis as to whether or not Mr. Jackson's assets were appreciating in value between 1999 and February of 2003?

A. I believe that the catalogs were actually -- that Mr. Jackson's interest in both MIJAC and Sony/ATV were depreciating. The Neverland Ranch I've just always assumed at the value that was put in, I think in 1999, by one of his advisors.

Q. Sir, if Mr. Jackson's interest in the Sony/ATV catalog went from 47 million in 1986 to selling half of it for 90 million in 1995, and then was estimated -- the entire catalog was estimated at a billion in 2003, based on the document you saw, how can you say it's diminishing in value?

A. Because when you look at the way the money gets disbursed to the partners on the sale, and you look at how much money has been advanced to Mr. Jackson over the years, he gets six and a half million dollars guaranteed every year on that. While that's going on, Sony should be getting six and a half million, and they're not. So that means that they are, in fact, accruing a liability on an annual basis.

In addition to that, Sony is making substantial investments in additional copyrights expenses which Mr. Jackson is not contributing to, so that liability increases.

So I literally cash-flowed a model out and looked at when anybody could expect to get cash out of the Sony/ATV catalog, and it's like out into 2015 that someone would get that value, cash flows. When you discount that back to today’s dollars, it’s not as much as you think.

Q. Does anything happen in the year 2006 regarding liquidity of that catalog, to your knowledge?

A. Well, there’s a “put” option that happens in December of 2005, which Mr. Jackson could sell for $200 million to Sony.

Q. What else is available?

A. I don’t recall. I think at some point in time it can be sold. But again, the interest is -- what the cash flow values are, and when you look at the actual cash flows that will result off that interest, there’s been a substantial amount of pre-drawing, if you will, of disbursements.

Q. But you saw documents that indicated what Sony’s making on the catalog.

A. Well, you see a financial statement that shows what the entire partnership is making.

Q. Okay. So what you’re saying is, based upon the obligations Mr. Jackson’s assumed, you think value has been lost with each year; is that correct?

A. I do, yes.

Q. Okay. But you’re not taking into account the value of the music around the world and what markets might be available for that music, true?

A. No, I am. I’m taking into account the cash flows that the partnership’s generating.

Q. Okay. All right. Now, you indicated -- by the way, did you look to see whether Neverland has increased in value?

A. I didn’t, no. I think at some point in time there was a value, and I just assumed that value.

Q. And what year did the -- excuse me, what year was there a value that you assumed?

A. I thought there was a number in there. I think it was sometime in the 2000 range. About $50 million.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. If I may take just one second, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You may.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you.

Q. As far as his expenditures go, you don’t know, generally speaking, who he’s spending money on, do you?

A. No. There is some detail in the records, yes.

Q. How much detail would you say?

A. As I mentioned, in the 1999 memo it shows the expenditures for the Neverland Ranch and security, it shows for professional and legal, it shows for personal, it shows for other, so there are details in there. There’s a listing of all the employees that work at Neverland Ranch. There is detail at times.

Q. Do you think that detail accounts for all of the expenditures you’ve identified today?

A. Well, I think -- I think that the work done by Mr. Jackson’s financial consultants would take into account all the expenditures. I don’t know why they would have a reason to misstate those expenditures.

Q. No, I don’t mean the amount. I mean the actual whatever -- whatever the money was actually spent on. Did you get detail to that effect?

A. As I mentioned, for 1999 we have detail.

Q. Okay.

A. And there are -- there is other detail. But Holthouse was the ones writing the checks. They would know where all the money went.

Q. Excuse me?

A. Holthouse was writing the checks. They would know where that money went.

Q. Did you see a detailed accounting of where every dollar was spent?

A. No.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. No further questions.

THE COURT: Counsel?

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Mr. O’Bryan, you mentioned that you did an analysis of Mr. Jackson’s interest in the Sony/ATV catalog, as well as an analysis of the value of the MIJAC catalog in coming to the conclusions that you've stated to the jury today; is that correct?

A. I did consider those values, yes.
Q. And you've also stated that you arrived at those values based on a cash flow analysis?
A. That's correct. That's how you value that investment.
Q. What do you mean by a cash flow analysis?
A. The cash that actually is paid to someone over a period of time. That's the cash flow.
Q. Okay.
A. How that cash flows to you and what you're willing to pay for that investment is how much cash you will get in the cash flow that you get out of it. That's a common valuation methodology.
Q. So those catalogs are only worth their -- you arrive at your value based on what kind of income streams they produce?

A. Right.
Q. Okay. So tell us about your analysis of the MIJAC catalog. What were your findings or what were your conclusions about the value of the MIJAC catalog based upon your cash flow analysis in this case?
A. Well, the MIJAC catalog, I believe, has gone down in value from 1999. The revenues, the royalties stream has gone down by almost 30 percent from the 1997, '98, '99 time frame, into '00, '01, '02, '03. And by virtue of the fact that the cash flow stream goes down, the value goes down. That's just the way -- it's the way the model works. You simply multiply the revenue stream times the multiplier. So if, in fact, the revenue stream goes down, the value goes down, and that makes sense. So that's gone down.
Q. Okay.
A. And on the Sony/ATV, it was exactly as I described, and that is that the amount of money which Mr. Jackson and/or his entities have been taking out on an annual basis and/or not paying into the partnership on an annual basis has created a growing liability.

And by the time you pay back that growing liability, there is a substantial amount of time that will pass before you see cash flows out of that. There's a guaranteed amount of six and a half million, I think, through 2005. And that goes down to two million. And then after that, it's just the actual amounts. But when those actual amounts are paid, you have to first repay the amounts that Sony hasn't been paid, and/or the investments that they've made that in fact they have not been paid back for, including interest.

And I looked at that and it's a long while, once you get through this guaranteed portion, before you'll see a cash flow on that investment.

Q. So based on everything that you've considered, I believe you said that Sony is putting more royalties -- more copyrights into that catalog as time goes on?

A. They continue to invest.

Q. Mr. Jackson is taking more than his share out in terms of cash on an annualized basis?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; misstates the evidence.

THE WITNESS: I wouldn't say he's taking more than his share, but --

THE COURT: Just a moment.

THE WITNESS: I'm sorry.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.

THE COURT: Well, I'll allow the answer. You may --

THE WITNESS: I wouldn't say he's taking more than his share. I would say that Sony isn't getting their share.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: So is the catalog producing what was anticipated when this agreement was originally reached?

A. I don't know when it was anticipated, or when it was reached. I don't know.

Q. So tell us about this -- the structure of Mr. Jackson's interest in the ATV catalog.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You mentioned he doesn't own half of that catalog today on an asset basis. In other words, if it's worth a billion dollars, he doesn't own half a billion dollars, doesn't have a half-a-billion-dollar interest in that catalog; is that correct?

A. Well, he owns half of the catalog.

Q. Yes.

A. But his interest in the catalog is not worth half of the catalog value --

Q. All right. So --

A. -- because of the front-end loading of the cash flow stream that has gone to him and not gone to Sony.

Q. So if the catalog gets sold, then Sony walks away with more money than Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes, because he has to repay all of the advances on all of the investments that Sony has made. Absolutely.

Q. And you stated that Mr. Jackson has a right to sell his interest in that catalog for $200 million; is that correct?

A. There is a "put" option. That means I can -- it's a technical term in financial -- it means I can put this opportunity to you, and that "put" option is worth 200 million. Starting on December 2005, Mr. Jackson can force Sony to pay him $200 million for that investment for his share.

Q. And I think you previously testified that in February of 2003, that asset, his Sony/ATV catalog, was mortgaged to the tune of $200 million; is that correct?

A. That's right. But remember, you also have to consider the taxes on that. If you sell that, you're going to pay taxes.

Q. Good point. Tell me what happens, from a tax basis, if Mr. Jackson has to sell his Sony/ATV interest for $200 million to pay off that $200 million loan.

A. His basis is somewhere around $40 million, meaning his cost basis. So you'd subtract the 200 from the 40, and you get a gain of about 160 million, and you'd basically calculate it in what's called capital gains rates, which federal and state would be about 25 percent, so you’d pay about $40 million in taxes.

Q. Now, you said that he can exercise this “put” option asking Sony to purchase that catalog in December of 2005, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. When is that loan due, that $200 million loan?

A. December 20th, 2005.

Q. Now, assuming, as Mr. Mesereau asked you to do, assuming that he was just going to sell his interest in the Sony/ATV catalog back in, let’s say, 2003 - okay? - February of 2003, and assuming Sony agreed and said, “We’ll sell our interest. We’ll sell it on the open market.”

Using your cash flow analysis, can you give us -- get us in a range, a reasonable range on a cash flow basis what Mr. Jackson’s interest would be in the sale of that Sony/ATV catalog, if it were to occur?

A. My -- it would be --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: He’s testified he did a cash flow analysis. Counsel asked him this question as part of his opinion.

THE COURT: All right. I’ll allow the answer.

As I understand the question, he’s asking you what interest he would have if it were sold.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That is the question.

THE COURT: The catalog were sold.

THE WITNESS: In 2003, that interest was probably worth a couple hundred million dollars.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. Now, moving on to the MIJAC catalog, you said that you did a cash flow analysis on that. What -- give us the same analysis in terms of what that catalog was worth to Mr. Jackson back in 2003.

A. Well, as I mentioned, the royalties had dropped about 25 percent -- 33 percent, excuse me. So if you take 33 percent off the value of 128 million, then it comes up to somewhere between $75 and $80 million.

Q. And he’s also asked you some questions about Neverland. Do you know if Neverland has a mortgage on it?

A. Neverland is cross-collateralized with one of the Sony/ATV loans to the extent of $18 million.

Q. What do you mean by “cross-collateralized”?

A. The collateral on the MIJAC loan -- excuse me, the $24 million loan, which is now $70 million, is collateralized by the MIJAC catalog. The bank has asked for additional collateral, including an $18 million lien on Neverland.

Q. Why would a bank ask for additional collateral on a $70 million loan?

A. They want more collateral.

Q. Would it have anything to do with the perception of what that catalog was worth?

A. Certainly.

Q. And what would the tax ramifications be if Mr. Jackson was to sell his Sony -- or sell his MIJAC catalog for, let’s say, 70 million?

A. It would be the same calculation. The interest -- the investment was about ten million. So you’d have about a $60 million gain, I’m just rounding it to 70. Less ten million, or 60 million, at 25 percent would be about a $10 million tax, so you’d have a net of $50, $60 million.

Q. Okay. So summarizing everything, is it your testimony that Mr. Jackson’s ATV catalog is fully mortgaged? In other words, if -- well, let me back up.

As of February of 2003, your testimony is that the Sony/ATV catalog was worth $200 million, approximately?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Misstates the evidence; no foundation.

THE WITNESS: I think that’s a --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Just a minute.

THE WITNESS: Oh, I’m sorry.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And I should rephrase that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Rephrase it.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your testimony is that that catalog, Mr. Jackson's financial interest in that catalog, the Sony/ATV catalog, in February of 2003 was worth approximately -- I know we're not talking about a sharp pencil here, but approximately $200 million?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

He's asking you if that's what you've already testified to.

THE WITNESS: That's correct.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. And there's a loan against it at that time for $200 million?

A. That's correct.

Q. And if he sells that asset for $200 million, he has to come up with another $40 million from somewhere to pay taxes?

A. That's correct.

Q. He also has another $10 million in unpaid vendors that he has to come up with?

A. As of February 13th, that's correct.

Q. Okay. And if he sells his MIJAC catalog for $70 million, which is about your stated -- you stated that's about what it's worth?

A. Approximately.

Q. It is encumbered or there are loans against that catalog to the tune of about 70 million?

A. $70 million, correct.

Q. And if he sells that catalog, then he -- he incurs an additional ten million in taxes?

A. That's correct.

Q. You previously testified that Mr. Jackson was accruing debt at a rate of about, I believe it was, $20 to $30 million a year?

A. That's correct. To fund living expenses.

Q. So his living expenses were exceeding his income for that amount per year?

A. Correct.

Q. And as a financial advisor, is that a advisable course of action for somebody?

A. None that I would give.

Q. Okay. As far as providing you with information, is it -- is it true that I personally have not provided your office with anything in terms of me giving you documents?

A. Do you mean you personally?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't know where the documents came from. I assume they came from your office. But you didn't hand me any document, no.

Q. Very well. Did Chris Linz of our office, who you've mentioned -- do you know who she has?

A. Yes, I've met Chris Linz.

Q. Was she your contact point in the District Attorney's Office?

A. With respect to documents. I mean we spoke to you about documents.

Q. Yes.

A. We spoke to Miss Linz. And my understanding was Miss Linz was the one that passed documents to us.

Q. And were you given an opportunity, you or your staff given an opportunity to go through all of the D.A.'s records to review documents for purposes of your analysis and opinions in this case?

A. Yeah, we were made available to all the documents I believe you had.

Q. No restrictions whatsoever?

A. No. The only thing was that some just wasn't available.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you. I have no further questions.

THE COURT: It's about time for the break, Mr. Mesereau.

MR. MESEREAU: Oh.

THE COURT: Unless you were just going to ask one question.

MR. MESEREAU: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: All right. I think it's okay now.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you say you did an appraisal of the value of the Sony/ATV catalog?

A. No, I considered values. I did not do a formal appraisal, as I mentioned earlier.

Q. Do you have a piece of paper which reflects your values?
A. I have it in my mind, yes.
Q. You didn’t reduce it to paper?
A. I have papers in front of me here that show me how I get to that. But there’s nothing that’s formalized as far as a valuation report, no.
Q. So pretty much it was done in your head?
A. No. I mean, it was done with calculators and with computers and the like, but I understand the value, and about the amounts I stated at those times.
Q. Did the computer generate any type of report showing your analysis?
A. No. It’s -- basically I have it in my notes in front of me.
Q. Can I take a look at it?
A. Certainly.
MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor?
Q. Now, I realize you said you’re not an expert in the music industry, right?
A. That is true.
Q. And you indicated you didn’t know who the recording artists were whose music were copyrighted and owned by the catalogs, correct?
A. No, I’ve seen that. I just don’t recall as I sit here right now. The appraisal that was done in 1999 lists all of the copyrighted material in that document.

Q. How many recording artists are we talking about; do you know?
A. In the Sony/ATV?
Q. Yes.
A. I don’t recall. There was a number, as I recall.
Q. There were hundreds, correct?
A. Yeah. There was a substantial amount, yes.
Q. You had country western musicians, correct?
A. That’s correct.
Q. You had very different kinds of musicians in that arrangement, correct?

A. There was a wide disparity of types of music, yes.

Q. And how many years out did you project the value of the catalog?

A. Well, I looked at when Mr. Jackson's interest would actually begin to see the benefit of some cash flow. And it's well out into 2015, I believe.

Q. Well, if you don't know who any of the recording artists are and you can't put a value on their music today or tomorrow, how can you possibly give a value to the catalog?

A. Because I used the financial statements that were prepared by Pricewaterhouse Coopers.

Q. When?

A. They were prepared, I think, in 2003.

Q. Well, what is the music going to be worth in 2006 or 2007 when you look at it artist by artist? You don't know, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Argumentative and irrelevant.

THE WITNESS: Well --

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: No, certainly you do. I mean, that's exactly how you do valuation, is you look at what the catalog is producing in cash flow streams, and then you value that. And that's going to change over time. But you have to use historical paths to then try and figure out what the future will be.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did they pick up any artists last year?

A. I suspect they did. There's constant investments.

Q. Do you know who they were?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you know what their music is worth?

A. No, I'm simply looking at the cash flow stream that this partnership is producing and projecting that out into the future.

Q. If --

A. That's the only way anyone can do a valuation. No one is going to value the cash flow stream based on artists that aren't even in the catalog yet.

Q. But if you have artists who are in the catalog and you have someone who's an expert on how their music is marketed and how it might be marketed differently this year or next year, you can place additional value, correct?

A. Additional over what? I'm simply using the real numbers as to what the cash flow was, and that cash flow would generate a value. And that's how you value that asset.

Q. Has the cash flow changed from year to year?

A. Yes.

Q. Where is it going to be three years from now? Do you really know?

A. That's the projection you have to make --

Q. Okay.

A. -- to come up to a value. And that's exactly how it was valued -- pardon me.

Q. Sure.

A. That's exactly how it was valued by the valuation people in 1999, was simply to look at an income stream, try and understand what that income stream was going forward, and then put a multiplier on it. That's how any valuation works.

Q. So in other words, if you're going to try and put a value on this music catalog and project out three or four or five years from now, you don't need to know who the recording artists are, what kind of music they've generated, and where that music is likely to be or not be in a few years, right?

A. No, that has to be considered. But again, historical paths to the cash flow is what's most important.

Q. So now you're conceding it is important to know who the recording artists are and what value you might be able to place on their music two, three, four, five, ten years from now, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: As of 2003, we know what the cash flow was. And at that point in time, you can value based on the cash flow. In fact, if there are other artists added in 2004 and 2005, that could change the cash flow, and that should be considered, absolutely. But in 2003, when you have the figures, that cash flow is known and can be used to then value into the future.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Looking at the document that we talked about earlier, which is a letter from International Business Management dated February 13th 2003, to Attorney David LeGrand, okay?

A. Yes, I remember that memo.

Q. That’s the letter that, on page two, says the value of the Sony/ATV catalog is estimated to be approximately one billion dollars; right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Okay. According to that letter, which you certainly did consider in your work, right?

A. That is correct.

Q. It says that in November of 2005, the bank will enforce a put, right?

A. Correct.

Q. Which forces Sony to either buy out Mr. Jackson’s interest at fair market value, right?

A. Correct.

Q. Sell the entire catalog to a third party, right?

A. Correct.

Q. Or give Mr. Jackson the opportunity to purchase Sony’s interest in the catalog, right?

A. Correct.

Q. And do you have any way of knowing what Sony’s interest in the catalog will be in November of 2005?

A. No.

Q. Why not?

A. Because I don’t have that -- I haven’t calculated what Sony’s interest is.

Q. How would you do it, if you were going to?

A. The same way as you do with Mr. Jackson’s interest, you simply look at the cash flows that would be accruing to or earned by Sony, project that out over time, and then discount it back.

Q. How do you relate the one-billion-dollar amount to the value either side has in the catalog?

A. Well, the one billion dollars is the entire catalog.

Q. Right.

A. It’s made up of two components, the Sony component and Mr. Jackson’s component. And the two would equal whatever the value is.

Q. Okay. So if the value is one -- is estimated at one billion dollars, each side would theoretically have a $500 million interest, true?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; misstates the evidence.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: If it’s -- if the catalog is worth a billion dollars, that’s what the catalog’s worth. Then you have to go about the process of understanding what the cash flows which will accrue to each party will be, and that’s how you value the total one billion dollars.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And you have no way of knowing what third parties are out there trying to purchase it, correct?

A. I do not, no.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. No further questions.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I have no further questions, but I do have a request at sidebar.

THE COURT: All right. We should mark the Power Point.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And I have a copy of that, which I’ll mark.

THE COURT: And you may approach.

(Discussion held off the record at sidebar.)

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. All right. Mr. O’Bryan, I’m just going to finish up with one final question.

Based upon your cash flow analysis and everything you know about this case, what is the maximum -- in general, what is the value of what Mr. Jackson could obtain for this ATV/Sony catalog in February of 2003?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. No foundation; no expertise.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I phrased it in terms of a cash flow analysis, which he's testified extensively about.

THE COURT: What I'm going to do is limit the question to a little different question, which would be what was the value he used in determining the net worth figure that he's already testified to the jury.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Maybe I'll lay a couple of foundational questions before I ask that one. Just a couple.

Q. Mr. O'Bryan, are you familiar with how these catalogs are appraised, in general terms?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. And when an appraiser conducts an appraisal of a music catalog, do they use a cash flow analysis?

A. Yes, they do.

Q. And are cash flow analyses something that you do in the course of your business as a forensic accountant or a CPA?

A. All the time.

Q. And is -- and did you do such an analysis in this particular case?

A. We did, yes.

Q. And based upon that, can you tell us what your analysis -- what your conclusion was based on a cash flow analysis of the value of Mr. Jackson's share of the ATV catalog in February of 2003?

A. As I stated, I believe that's $200 million.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Thank you.

THE COURT: Mr. Mesereau?

FURTHER RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. When you say Mr. Jackson had a $200 million interest in the catalog in February of 2003, are you suggesting that if he sold it for $200 million, he would end up with zero because of his debt?

A. Yes. And/or taxes.

Q. And where did the other 700 million in value of the catalog go to? Sony?

A. Go to Sony, yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; misstates the evidence.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Even though they each had a 50 percent interest --

THE COURT: Just a moment.

The objection is overruled.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Even though they each had a 50 percent interest in something estimated at one billion dollars, you think Sony's interest is really worth 700 million, correct?

A. Yes, at least that.

Q. And tell me how you arrived at that conclusion.

A. Again, it's just simply looking at the cash flows that would be accruing to Mr. Jackson over time, beginning in 2003, out over a period of time. And because of the fact that he has taken much more than Sony, Sony is due an equal amount. Sony is additionally due the investments that they have made, plus interest. The cash flows that would accrue to Mr. Jackson and/or his interest would not even occur until about 2015. At that point in time, the discount rate used would, quite frankly, have a value of around $200 million.

Q. Do you know Mr. Jackson was offered 400 million for half of his interest in 2003?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; assumes facts not in evidence.

THE COURT: I guess the question is are you aware of any such offer.

THE WITNESS: No, I'm not.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Are you aware of what anyone has ever offered Mr. Jackson for his interest in the catalog?

A. No, I'm not.

Q. Have you ever tried to market a music catalog in your career?

A. I have not, no.
Q. Ever tried to negotiate a sale of any interest in a music catalog?
A. I have not, no.
Q. Is this the first music catalog you've analyzed with your cash flow analysis?
A. No. I also did one for Mr. Bowie, David Bowie.
MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:
Q. If Mr. Jackson wanted to sell his share of the ATV catalog to somebody else in 2003, could he have done it?
A. Only with the approval of Sony.
Q. And as far as this put goes, did you consider that in your cash flow analysis, the fact that in December of '05 he would receive $200 million?
A. Certainly. I mean, that's a stated amount that he could get in '05.
Q. So if he sold it in 2003, he would accrue -- what was your tax analysis in terms of how much capital gains tax he would have to pay?
A. 25 percent.
Q. So $40 million?
A. Off --
Q. Off the 200 million?
A. That's correct.
Q. Okay. Finally, there was --
A. It was $50 million. Well, no, that's not true because you have to take the basis out.
Q. So you tell me.
A. So it was about 40 million, as I recall.
Q. And Mr. Mesereau said if Mr. Jackson got $200 million, then Sony would be entitled to $700 million. I believe we've got a math problem there.
A. Well, the 800. That's why I said --

Q. It would be 800. All right. Thank you.
Nothing further.
No further questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

For the record, what’s the exhibit number on the Power Point?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That would be 886, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

Call your next witness.

MR. ZONEN: Call Rudy Provencio to the stand, please.

MR. PROVENCIO: Right here?

THE COURT: Yes, please. When you get there, remain standing.

Look at the clerk over here. Raise your right hand. Right here.

RUDY R. PROVENCIO

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: My name is Rudy R. Provencio. R-u-d-y; R.; P-r-o-v-e-n-c-i-o.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

MR. ZONEN: May I proceed?

THE COURT: Yes.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Mr. Provencio, what is -- good afternoon.

A. Hello.

Q. What is your current occupation?

A. Independent contractor.

Q. What kind of an independent contractor are you?

A. For entertainment, placement of music for film and television.

Q. What does that mean?

A. Basically it means that I take music that already exists, and I place it in film and television, depending on what they are looking for or what they want. You know, like for a -- for a commercial, they would like want something, maybe an oldies --

BAILIFF CORTEZ: Excuse me.

THE WITNESS: Can you hear me? Can you hear me okay? Sorry.

THE BAILIFF: If you could just scoot closer to the mike.

THE WITNESS: Scoot closer?

For T.V. or film, basically what are they looking for? If they’re looking for an oldies, like if -- for instance, if The Gap is looking for an old song, I would secure rights for that -- for that song and bring it in, and secure the legal part of it, and the whole nine yards, so --

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Do you work for a company or are you self-employed?

A. Self-employed.

Q. How long have you been in this business?

A. The entertainment business?

Q. Yes.

A. 20 years.

Q. Prior to that, what type of work did you do?

A. I worked for record companies, various record companies.

Q. Do you know Marc Schaffel?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did you know him by the name Fred Schaffel?

A. Yes, Fred Schaffel.

Q. When did you first meet Mr. Schaffel?

A. I met him in high school in 1983, ‘84.

Q. You both went to high school, the same school?

A. Yes, Toledo, Ohio.

Q. In Toledo, Ohio?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. At some point in time, did you actually do business with Mr. Schaffel?

A. Not until much later, which would have been 2001.

Q. And in 2001, did he contact you or did you contact him?

A. He contacted me.

Q. Now, how did he know who you were at that point or where you were or what you did?

A. He came over to the record labels a couple of times to pick up CDs and such, and I kept in contact with him. When he moved out to California, I met up with him, I believe in ‘93. Yes, it would have been ‘93, because I was working at Warner Brothers Records at that time, so I met up with him and, you know, we kept a casual contact.

Q. Were you both living in the Los Angeles area during that time?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Did he invite you into some form of business adventure?

A. Yes. With him and Michael Jackson.

Q. All right. What was it exactly that you were invited to go into?

A. We were -- well, I was invited to come and participate in a benefit single called “What More Can I Give?” and he said that it was a Michael Jackson and Marc project, and they would -- were both going to hire me to work on this project if I was willing to come on board with them.

Q. All right. Did you eventually talk with Mr. Jackson about your involvement in that?

A. We had a meeting at -- well, we first had a meeting with -- the first one we had at The Beverly Hills Hotel with Lee Davidian, I think is his last name, where it was Ali, myself, Marc, and we talked about doing “What More Can I Give?” into a game that Ali was producing --

Q. Uh-huh.

A. -- or such.

So, you know, there was a lot of material to cover in that meeting. I remember that, because there was going to be a game featuring Michael Jackson in the game --

Q. All right.

A. -- and the music of “What More Can I Give?” was going to be in that, so we talked about that.

Q. Explain -- “What More Can I Give?” you mentioned was a benefit single.

A. Charity single.

Q. What does that mean?

A. Basically we hadn’t announced what Michael -- excuse me, what Michael’s charities were going to be yet, because Michael would have to do that. That’s -- he is the captain of the helm, so he’d have to do that. But basically what the idea and the premise was to do a benefit single that would benefit people just in general and Michael’s charities in particular. We hadn’t narrowed it down exactly what those charities were going to be until, you know, a little bit more into the project. Does that answer your question?

Q. Yes, but we’ll have a couple more, as you can imagine.

A. All right.

Q. How does a single benefit anybody in the day and age where you only buy CDs with many songs on them? What --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Move to strike; colloquy.

THE COURT: Coming from you?

(Laughter.)

MR. ZONEN: My sentiments exactly.

THE COURT: All right. Stricken.

MR. ZONEN: Stricken, all right.

Q. How does a single benefit anybody? How do you market a single?

A. Well, we were looking at it to be the next “We are the World.” You know, Michael is -- was a genius behind that. That made more money than any other single in history.

Q. Tell us what “We are the World” was.

A. Oh. I believe in 1983 or ‘84 it came out and basically it made a trazillion dollars. I don’t know how much exactly. I won’t say, you know, $100 million, because I don’t know. But we were estimating that even if “What More Can I Give?” could make half of that, that would make like $50 million right there and would be able to go to some of Michael’s charities, you know, in the process.

Q. Okay. How is it marketed?

A. It --

Q. A single, how do you market a single?

A. Well, it depends. Basically, you know, we'd have -- well, the way that I was thinking that we were going to do it, the way that we had talked about it is, we would do a press release later in regards to who was going to be the beneficiaries. But Michael would have to have done that because that's going to be Michael's charities. But -- but it would have gone through the regular routes, which would have been a record company for the distribution. We didn't really want Sony at the time. There was some problems with Sony. So we were going to look, per advice, Marc and Michael, to go other places and look at other distribution, like I believe we ended up talking with Zamba Entertainment, and they handled Britney Spears and Backstreet Boys and stuff, and so they were hot, so we were thinking we were going to possibly go with their distribution.

Q. Now, like, would this be a song that would have been performed by multiple groups?

A. By multiple who?

Q. Groups. Performers.

A. Multiple performers, yes.

Q. Performers.

A. We had a recording time in the studio and we brought in quite a few artists.

Q. Is that, in fact, what "We are the World" was?

A. No, that was an arrangement that was different. They came from an awards show and went right across the street, essentially, or down the street and they recorded it in one fell swoop.

Q. And who are "they"? You say "they" came and did that.

A. Oh, well, the performers that were on "We are the World," Kim Carnes, Huey Lewis and the News, Michael was there, Diana Ross, everybody went from an awards show looking good and went into this thing with recording, filming, the whole nine yards. Ours was a little bit different, because what we were going to do is bring people in one at a time and record it, so it was a little bit more -- it was essentially the same premise, but a little bit more lengthy.

Q. All right. Were you anticipating having multiple groups or performers?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. And were you going to be generating an entire CD or a single song?

A. We were going to have a Spanish version that was completed with Casey Porter doing the Spanish version, which was completed, and then we were going to have the English version and many, many, many different artists. Santana played on the Spanish version. And so we were going to have many artists on -- essentially the same amount of artists, but a little bit different with the Spanish version than the other one.

Q. Again, this is a single song?

A. Yes, a single song with many versions. So that would be considered what’s called a CD-5. So that would be different versions of the same song.

Q. By “different versions,” how would it be marketed? I mean, in a physical form.

A. Well, the marketing, it’s its own unit when you look at it, because it’s a Michael Jackson song. It’s -- you know, which you can’t get bigger than that. And, you know, you’ve got a benefit. You would have a press -- world press release around it. You know, it would create its own buzz. You wouldn’t even have to take out an ad anywhere, so then you’d have to have the disks from the record label to kind of get it in the public’s hands, which would have been Best Buy and the other chains.

Q. So you actually purchase it as a CD?

A. You would purchase it as a CD.

Q. On the CD is one single song?

A. A single song with many versions, yes. English and Spanish as well. And re-mixes. There were going to be re-mixes by Junior Vasquez.

Q. That does sell?

A. Oh, absolutely. For something like -- if you can tie into something that is of importance, like charities and things like that, then you -- you have a commodity that's very well sought after.

Q. Tell me when it was that you were called into this. When were you invited to explore the possibilities of joining this enterprise?
A. 2001.
Q. Do you remember when in 2001?
A. June is the first meeting.
Q. Okay. The first meeting between you and who?
A. Marc and Michael. And Ali joined us on that first meeting.
Q. All right. And that first meeting was in a hotel in Los Angeles; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, was the song already drafted? Was it already performed? Was it already recorded?
A. Yes, Michael had done a demo of it.
Q. Okay. Were artists lined up to participate in the recordings?
A. Yes. Absolutely.
Q. Had some of the artists already participated in the recordings?

A. Not until -- not at that time. Not June.
Q. Okay.
A. Michael had a demo, and the only thing that was on it was Michael's voice.
Q. All right. Is it possible, in fact, to be able to have multiple artists performing at different locations at different times --
A. Absolutely. That's what we did.
Q. One of the things you have to do is wait until the whole question is asked.
A. Oh, I'm sorry.
Q. She goes nuts otherwise.
A. Oh, I'm really sorry.
Q. Is it possible to be able to, in fact, perform at different places and different times and then be able to mix it all into one product?
A. You can perform many places at the same time, and so that's -- yes. And then you can mix it as one product later, yes, absolutely.
Q. So it was not necessary to be able to have everybody perform at the same time, same location as was done in “We are the World”?

A. Correct.

Q. That was a matter of convenience back then?

A. That was a matter of happenstance.

Q. Okay.

A. I believe. You just happened to go across the street and there you are --

Q. Okay.

A. -- performing a song. I mean, they planned it. But they also planned it that all these performers could -- from what I understand.

Q. You described this as a benefit single, which means part of the purpose is to raise money for charities; is that correct?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Was it also intended to be for profit?

A. Well, yeah. You have to make a profit to keep going. I mean, it’s like, you know, you can’t be in the ditch for $20 million. Yeah, so it had to make a profit somewhere.

Q. So not just pay expenses. This wasn’t just a charitable enterprise exclusively, but it was going to generate profit for some people. Would that be correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, were you hired on salary?

A. Yes. Salary, uh-huh.

Q. Were you ultimately hired to do this?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you actually work on this project?

A. Yes.

Q. And by the time you -- from the point that you began the project to the time that you officially ended your employment on this project, how long had you worked on it?

A. Until 2001 -- June is when we took the first meeting. I’d have to look at my records to see exactly when they signed my contract, and then it was 2003 of February, the 25th, I believe I received my last check.

Q. All right. And when did you cease your employment? Was it on the day you received your last check?

A. No, I stopped going in the office I believe it was the first week of August.

Q. What kind of things were you expecting to do in terms of promoting and marketing and creating this product?

A. Well, nobody had any record experience.

MR. MESEREAU: Calls for speculation.

MR. ZONEN: I believe he did it.

THE COURT: But you asked him what he was expected to do.

MR. ZONEN: All right. Let me change the question, then.

Q. What actually did you do during the two years of employment in this capacity? What types of things did you do?

A. Okay. Well, I was the general manager of the label of Neverland Valley Entertainment. I oversee the books. Not all of the books, but a certain major portion of the books. Everything from the task of filing, to making sure artists are where they're supposed to be, and doing the things that we're supposed to do to get things done to get the single finished, and to facilitate any other dream or necessity that Michael might have that would fall into us participating with him --

Q. All right.

A. -- on that.

Q. You've mentioned Neverland Valley Entertainment. What exactly is Neverland Valley Entertainment?

A. It's Marc and Michael's company.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. At some point in time, did you become part of Neverland Valley Entertainment?

A. Well, yeah, when they signed my contract.

Q. And during the course of your two years of working as the general manager of Neverland Valley Entertainment and based on your conversations with both Marc and Mr. Jackson, did you learn what Neverland Valley Entertainment was?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Assumes facts not in evidence and foundation.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What is it?
A. Can you state the question again? I'm sorry.

MR. ZONEN: Perhaps the court reporter could read it.
(Record read.)
THE WITNESS: Well, it was a Michael and Marc company. That's what it was.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Was it created while you were there?
A. Well, yeah. It was created as -- as -- it wasn't -- it wasn't flying until we got a loan, but, yeah, we were in the midst of having conversations with Parviz to get a loan, or they were, to get a loan to get this thing flying.
Q. All right. Who were the people who were involved at that time, at the time that you came into it, with Neverland Valley Entertainment?
A. Who were the people involved?
Q. Yes.
A. It would have been Michael, Marc, myself. You know, Dieter and Ronald were on the fringes, but the -- but the single was Marc and Michael.
Q. The what was Marc --
A. The single. The "What More Can I Give?" was Michael and Marc's creation.
Q. Did you have meetings with Mr. Jackson pursuant to your coming on board?
A. Yeah, we had meetings at The Beverly Hills Hotel, and then we had meetings at The Universal Hilton.

Q. What discussions did you have with Mr. Jackson about your involvement in this in both -- either of those two meetings?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: Okay. The first -- the first meeting, we talked about the video game, and then we talked about how “What More Can I Give?” would be a great project, which -- you know, which we could work on, make some cash, and -- you know, and basically have it segue way into many other things. You know, maybe -- because there wasn’t -- we had a conversation in regards that the “What More” -- or the “We are the World” wasn’t marketed to its full potential. There weren’t like a lot of T-shirts made. There was different marketing --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. ZONEN: I’m sorry, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you have a discussion as to how “What More Can I Give?” would be marketed during either of those two meetings?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the nature of that discussion?

A. The nature was that basically we needed to reach its full potential, much more and much better, making it much bigger and making much more money than “We are the World” made. How are we going to do that? Are we going to take a present situation and make it better? You know. Basically this present model that we had was “We are the World.” How do we explore that?

Q. And you said --

A. And you need a business plan.

Q. And you said “and make more money.” Was there a discussion with Mr. --

A. It had to be bigger.

Q. Hold on.

A. Sorry.

Q. You’ve got to wait until the question’s asked.

Was there a discussion with Mr. Jackson as to the potential of what could be made on the production of “What More Can I Give?”

A. To answer your question, Michael wanted it bigger and better than “We are the World.” So it had to be more than “We are the World,” which unfortunately I don’t remember off the top of my head. I know it was like $100 million, something crazy like that.

Q. Mr. Jackson had indicated he wanted this to exceed that?

A. Oh, yeah. He was very excited. It had to.

It had to.

Q. Was there any discussion as to what percentage of this would actually go toward the charitable causes and what would be profit?

A. We hadn’t really finessed that all out. I mean, we really were -- we were -- everything was moving very quickly, like everything in my experience with Michael. Everything moves very, very quickly, and Michael wants his results now. And we really hadn’t gotten down to sitting with lawyers to work out percentages and things like that.

We knew essentially, you know, what we wanted to do overall, but we had to get a product made first, so that was -- that was our first and most important thing was to get this product made.

Q. Did you ever actually sit down with lawyers and work out details of percentages as to who would get what during the course of that two years you worked on that project?

A. No.

Q. Did you have some form of contract signed with either Michael Jackson or Marc Schaffel as to what your compensation would be?

A. Yes. They gave me a point on the record.

Q. Did you have a salary in addition to a point on the record?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What was the salary?

A. 225,000.

Q. And was that for the duration of the project?

A. For the project.

Q. Would it make a difference how long the project took?

A. Not really. The project had to be done, so --

Q. Did you have a sense at the time as to what -- I mean, did you anticipate what it would be?

A. A year, maybe a little bit more. But a year.

Q. Now, you also said a point was given to you. What does that mean?

A. Well, a point is basically a percentage, or a 1 percent of the gross, or the total of a project. Marc got four points. Michael had given Marc four points. And Michael and Marc had given me one point.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. Let's talk about what was going to you, and then we'll talk about Mr. Schaffel.

A. Okay.

Q. One point was given to you, and you mentioned the gross. Explain what that means.

A. Well, what the album makes, you know, is considered -- you know, what it really actually -- what's in the kitty at the end of the day is really -- you know, what you're selling -- I'm not making sense here, but what -- when the product is sold, you know, you've got your expenses covered first. That comes out of -- like you make a dollar, and let's say you just made the dollar from that CD. You're -- 60 cents of it is taken away because it's, you know, marketing, whatever.

This was going to be a cheap single, so we weren't going to be spending a tremendous, tremendous amount of money, so there would be more take-home, you know, for Neverland Valley Entertainment, so -- I think I just got lost.

Q. Let me ask this: The 1 percent gross --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- does that mean your 1 percent would come to you before any of the expenses were paid?

A. Oh, no. We hadn't worked that all out yet. That hadn't been worked out. So if the record made 50 million dollars, you know -- you know, you have to remember, we hadn't sat down with the lawyers to get the exact verbiage down, so we were estimating.

And our assumptions in our meetings was that if it made $50 million, I would be getting 1 percent of that.

Q. Which would be $500,000?

A. Or if it made more.

Q. Or if made 100 million, you'd get one million?

A. Exactly.

Q. All right. Did you negotiate that? In other words, was that part of the negotiation as you came into this project?

A. No.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; relevance.

THE WITNESS: No.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: When did you get the 1 percent?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; relevance.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Who was it who gave you the 1 percent?

A. Michael and Marc.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; relevance.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.

A. Michael and Marc.

Q. Was that in the form of a document signed by both of them?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Leading and relevance.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes. They both signed it.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: And did you -- and did you commence work on this project?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. What were the -- over the next, say, couple months after you began working in June of '01, did you speak with Mr. Jackson on any kind of regular basis?

A. Well, we had the studio time, and we'd have our meetings in the studio time, and, you know, there was plenty of filming of that.

Q. Did you have conversations with him as well?
A. Yes.
Q. What was Mr. Schaffel's role in this? You were the general manager. What was he?
A. He was the president of Neverland Valley Entertainment.
Q. And did he have a similar agreement to yours in terms of compensation?
A. Yes, he did.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; no foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: As the general manager, did you have access to all of the records that dealt with the expenditures?
A. Well, they were in a filing cabinet, and I went through all of them, yes.
Q. You read them all?

A. I read most of them.
Q. As well -- it was the two of you. Did you have conversations with Mr. Schaffel about such matters?
A. Oh, yeah, we talked about things. He was a little bit more braggadocious, but --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Braggadocious?
A. Yeah. He bragged a lot.
Q. What was his compensation, Mr. Schaffel's?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; relevance.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you review his employment documents as well?
A. I looked at them, yes.
Q. Yeah. And did that contain what his compensation was?
A. Yes.
Q. And what was it?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; relevance.
THE COURT: Sustained. It's hearsay, really.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: During the next couple months, you indicated that you did have meetings with Mr. Jackson. Can you tell us with what level of frequency you would meet with him?

A. Well, whenever he came to the studio, but sometimes he wouldn't come to the studio. So it was whenever he came into the studio.

Q. And how often might that be?

A. Boy, the first couple of months, it was pretty regular. I mean, he came in, you know, three or four times a month.

Q. Did you have meetings with him on a regular basis when he came into the studio?

A. Well, we would talk about the project, how did we think -- when Michael walks in the door, he's -- he's meticulous. He wants to know everything that's going on and what's happening, and he's a great businessmen.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive and move to strike.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you brief Mr. Jackson on a regular basis of what was going on with Neverland Valley Entertainment?

A. We did, yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You can go ahead and answer.

He did. He said, "Yes."

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: How did you do that? How did you brief him?

A. We would have meetings. Michael would want to know what's going on. "Who do we have coming in? Did you get this person? Is Usher coming?"

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; move to strike.

THE COURT: I'll strike after, "We would have meetings."

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What kind of things would Mr. Jackson want to know in the course of these meetings?

A. That we are getting the hottest artists out there right now on this project. We had to be the hottest.

Q. And did he ask you details in terms of who you were going after and what you were intending to do, attempting to do?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: You can answer.

A. Oh, he wanted to know that it was the hottest artist, and when are they coming, and what are we doing.

Q. All right. In addition to the meetings at the studios that took place, did you also have meetings with him at other locations?

A. The -- well, like I said, we had The Beverly Hills Hotel. We had the studio meetings. And then we would have -- we had two meetings at The Universal Hilton.

Q. All right. Did you have telephone conversations with Mr. Jackson?

A. Oh, yeah. He called -- him and Marc would call my house.

Q. On what level or frequency? And we’re talking about Mr. Jackson, not Marc Schaffel. But on what level of frequently would you have a conversation with Mr. Jackson about the business?

A. In the beginning, the first couple of months, it was -- I would say it was -- it was semi-regular, once or twice a month. You know, just late-night phone calls, because Michael gets up late, so -- or -- so it would be late-night phone calls sometimes.

Q. You would be home by the evening hours?

A. Yeah, I’d be home.

Q. All right.

A. Exhausted, but home.

Q. And did you ever get calls from Mr. Jackson while you were at the office?

A. Yes, he would call in.

Q. And did you, in fact, have an office there?

A. Yes, at Neverland Valley Entertainment.

Q. And where was Neverland Valley Entertainment?

A. In Calabasas, California.

Q. At somebody's residence?
A. At Marc's residence, yes.

Q. Describe for us his residence, please, in Calabasas.
A. A gated community. Pretty swanky. It's pretty nice. A rich person's home.
Q. And was the office set at a particular location within the house?
A. Upstairs.
Q. All right. Were there multiple offices devoted to this project?
A. Well, you know, there was an office at Neverland, but, you know, that wasn't really used that much. You know, it was you usually worked out of the bungalow and then -- and then -- but that was the primary office, Mr. Schaffel's --
Q. At Mr. Schaffel's residence, were there multiple rooms that were devoted to this project?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Did you have separate rooms from Mr. Schaffel?
A. Yes. I did.
Q. Okay. Were you able to hear, from where you worked, conversations that Mr. Schaffel was having on the telephone?
A. Well, Marc had a really bad habit of having you sit there, and he would --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may finish that sentence.

THE WITNESS: Marc would have a really bad habit of having you sit there, and he would put people on speakerphone, and -- or answer on speakerphone, so you would know who it was, so he can kind of gloat that, you know, "Oooh, look who I'm talking to," whether it's Michael or Beyonce or some other star. And then he would pick up the phone or he would just leave them on speakerphone, and you could hear the whole conversation.
Everybody in the house that we were working in, we were always shocked that pretty much a lot of business was known just by sitting there, you know.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. So did you have to actually be in his room to be able to overhear these conversations?

A. Well, yeah. I mean, pretty much you had to be in his office. But then I could hear them in my office, too, if I jumped on a conference call with them.

Q. Did you frequently overhear conversations that Marc Schaffel was having with other people concerning his business enterprise?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you frequently overhear conversations that Marc Schaffel was having with Michael Jackson?

A. Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Do you know Michael Jackson’s voice?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it fairly distinct?

A. Well, unless he’s upset. Then he uses the other voice.

Q. Now, you tell us another voice --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.

THE WITNESS: Oh.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Have you talked with Mr. Jackson often enough or been present during his conversations that you’re able to recognize his voice when he calls?

A. Michael Jackson’s voice is the most distinctive voice in the world, I think.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; move to strike.

THE COURT: Overruled. Next question.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. That means yes, you do know his voice?

A. Yes.

Q. And you know his voice well?

A. Based on my experience of hearing him.

Q. On those occasions when he called, did you have any difficulty at all recognizing his voice?

A. No. God, no. He always introduced himself as Michael Jackson.

Q. All right. Were you able to overhear conversations between Marc Schaffel and Michael Jackson?
A. Yes.
Q. Both sides of the conversation? In other words --
A. At times. Not all the time, but at times.
Q. All right. Can you give us a sense of how often you would overhear a conversation? And I’m now talking about both sides of the conversation between Marc Schaffel and Michael Jackson. How often would that happen?
A. Could you be more clear? I’m sorry.
Q. Well, in the first couple months of your employment with Neverland Valley Entertainment --
A. Uh-huh.
Q. -- give us a sense of how often you would overhear a conversation between Marc Schaffel and Michael Jackson.
A. Frequently. Especially if I stayed later, because Michael would always -- always call later. And he would always call him “Arnold.” That was his nickname. “Ar-nold.” And then -- and then he would pick up the phone and say, “You’re looking for french fries?”
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; move to strike.
THE COURT: Stricken.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. We’ll get to Arnold in just a moment.
A. Oh, all right.
Q. Let’s talk about -- if we can, let’s talk about -- this happens when we get later in the day.
A. Okay.
Q. The frequency with which you might hear conversations between Michael Jackson and Marc Schaffel where you could actually hear both sides of the conversations, you answered “frequently” to that?
A. Yeah.
Q. Give us a sense, please, of what that means in a week period of time.

A. Well, if you’re speaking about the beginning, before the Martin Bashir thing, Michael was calling. He wanted to know what was happening with the project. He’s a meticulous businessman.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; move to strike.

THE COURT: So the question is kind of hard to get back to, but you were asking him what the frequency of calls from Michael Jackson were.

MR. ZONEN: Yes, Your Honor, I was.

THE COURT: That’s the question. How often did he call in a week?

THE WITNESS: In a week? God, sometimes ten times. Hey, he would be on the phone with him for hours sometimes at night. And we didn’t have a schedule. You have to remember, work is work. You get up, you work. And when Michael calls and you got something to do, you work.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.

THE WITNESS: So it’s like that’s the way it was.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Give us a sense of when you were there at this office in Calabasas, what kinds of hours and days did you put in?

A. Seven days a week. If you had to do something, you had to do it.

Q. Now, you were working pretty much full time on this project?

A. Yes. This was our only project in the beginning.

Q. The point that was offered to you, that 1 percentage of -- at the time as was described as gross, did that give you some incentive to work even harder on making this --

A. Well, God, yeah.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Leading and relevance.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What is the consequence of having a commission like that?

A. You’d be rich.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; relevance.

MR. ZONEN: Would you like me to move on,

Judge?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. ZONEN: And I will.

Q. All right. During the course of the conversations that you had with Mr. Jackson, and of course the conversations you had overheard with Mr. Schaffel, as frequently as they were, describe how attentive to business Mr. Jackson was.

A. He wanted to know the details.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; no foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.

A. He wanted to know the details. He wanted to know what was happening with the project. You know, the project was -- you know, it was taking time to get the artists in, so he wanted to know we were getting the hottest artists and the best artists, and where were we going to be going next, and -- and things like that. I mean, it was pretty much our duty to make sure everything was set up.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.

THE COURT: The last sentence is stricken.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Do you know who was financing this project?

A. Michael was.

Q. Do you know how it was being financed?

A. Yes.

Q. How?

A. Through a money lender named Parviz in Beverly Hills.

Q. Was that a loan that was obtained by Michael Jackson?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.

A. Yes, it was a loan that Marc and Michael got from Parviz for ten million dollars.

Q. Were you there?

A. I was there when the paperwork was signed. We brought the paperwork to Parviz after Michael had signed it in Beverly Hills, in the 9000 -- I believe the 9000 block of Beverly Hills, Wilshire, and Parviz ran it upstairs, and we came back the next day, and it was signed.

Q. Okay. Now --
A. And I saw the document.
Q. Was the ten million dollars actually turned over to either Marc Schaffel or Michael Jackson?
A. No, it was -- it was, like, in the bank, and they withdrew, I think it was like two million dollars, two and a quarter initially to start the company, start the project going.
Q. All right. And which bank, incidentally, was that deposited into?
A. It was -- it was Marc’s bank, and that would have been B of A. No, not B of A. It was, uh, U -- God, I can’t remember the name of it. I can see the logo, but I can’t remember the name of it. But --

Q. Were you about to say --
A. But it was the one off of Santa Monica. I remember because we went there many times, because Beverly was the lead person that we dealt with.
Q. All right. So you were there in Santa Monica, the City of Santa Monica?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Beverly was the person --
A. Yes.
Q. -- you dealt with?
A. Her name was Beverly.
Q. And you’ve seen her?
A. Oh, yeah, I’ve talked to her many times. She made me open an account. I didn’t have a million dollars to put in it, but --
Q. Did you get a toaster?
A. I didn’t get anything. So -- but I opened an account with her.
THE COURT: You want to quit, don’t you?
MR. ZONEN: I really do.
THE COURT: All right. See you tomorrow at 8:30. Remember the admonitions.
MR. ZONEN: Thank you.

Santa Maria, California
Wednesday, May 4, 2005
8:30 a.m.

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: Good morning, everyone. The Court has received the memorandum concerning the admissibility of statements involving this witness, and this morning received the opposition filed by the defense. Without further argument, I'm going to make these rulings.

The statement -- looking at page three of the prosecution's memo and page one of the defense memo -- actually, I think it's a little clearer, easier to refer to, on the defense memo.

So number one statement, Vinnie Amen told him that signs had been posted at Neverland Ranch directing security personnel not to allow the Arvizo children to leave the ranch. I'm not going to allow him to repeat that hearsay.

Number two, Vinnie Amen and Marc Schaffel used the word "killers." I am going to allow that.

Number three, Mr. Amen informed Mr. Provencio that a tape-recorder had secretly been used. I'm not going to allow that.

That Mr. Schaffel informed Provencio that Janet Arvizo didn’t want to go to Brazil, wanted to leave Neverland, did leave Neverland and that it was an escape. I’m breaking that into two parts and I’m not allowing the first part, but I will allow him to say that Mr. Schaffel informed Mr. Provencio that they, the Arvizo family, had escaped.

So with those rulings, I think we can go forward.

MR. ZONEN: Any discussion about Brazil at all?

THE COURT: Excuse me?

MR. ZONEN: Any discussion about his knowledge for Brazil, the family going to Brazil? All of that is out?

THE COURT: What I’m ruling on is that hearsay statements made to him by Mr. Schaffel that she didn’t want to go to Brazil is not admissible.

MR. ZONEN: But that the family had escaped is admissible.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. ZONEN: Can I have a moment with the witness to make sure he understands the extent of the rulings before we begin?

THE COURT: Absolutely. I’m going to leave. And when you’re ready, tell the bailiff and we’ll have the jury brought in.

MR. ZONEN: Thank you so much.

MR. SANGER: We have another motion that we filed.
THE COURT: I’m looking up some law on that motion. I received it this morning.
MR. SANGER: Thank you, Your Honor.
(Recess taken.)
THE COURT: Good morning.
COUNSEL AT COUNSEL TABLE: (In unison) Good morning, Your Honor.
THE COURT: You may proceed.
MR. ZONEN: Thank you, Your Honor.

RUDY R. PROVENCIO
Having been previously sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION (Continued)
BY MR. ZONEN:
Q. Mr. Provencio, good morning.
A. Good morning.
Q. Did you remember the name of the bank that Neverland Valley Entertainment used during the course of the time that you were employed there?
A. Yes, the U.S. Bank.
Q. Beverly was, in fact, the person that you dealt with when you worked in conjunction with that bank?
A. Yes.

Q. I had asked you a few questions about your work in lining up artists for the presentation of the “What More Can I Give?” Were artists that were going to be performing on that song going to be compensated or paid for their performance?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

MR. ZONEN: This is what he was doing.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: You can answer.

A. No, they were not going to be compensated. It was going to be for the next “We are the World” charity single, which was going to be “What More Can I Give?”

Q. Did you need Mr. Jackson’s assistance in being able to get those artists to perform?

A. Well, yeah. He was on conference calls, and calling the artists, and -- like he -- like we were in a car and he talked to Britney Spears, with us, on the phone. Stuff like that.

Q. All right. Mr. Provencio, you mentioned yesterday, you made a reference to two voices in your discussion about Mr. Jackson. What do you mean?

A. Well, there’s the --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.

A. There’s the -- you know, there’s the voice you hear on television and stuff, and then there’s the upset voice, I guess you could call it. You know, the voice --
Q. How are they different?
A. Well, one is deeper.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; foundation.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.
A. One is a deeper voice.
Q. And you have heard both of those voices?
A. Oh, yeah.
Q. Are they uniquely distinct?
A. I think so, yes.
Q. Did you ever talk with Mr. Jackson about his use of cell phones?
A. I just saw him use people’s cell phones.
Q. Did you ever see him use his own cell phone?
A. I don’t think he owned one.
Q. Did you ever have -- did you ever have the ability to contact him by cell phone?
A. If we needed to get him, like if we were in the office and needed to get ahold of him?
Q. Yes.
A. We would call the bodyguard or we would call someone that we knew was close to him at that time, because he would travel or he would be someplace, and so we’d have to get ahold of somebody to get ahold of him. So he didn’t have his own cell phone direct.

Q. And that was your understanding during the entirety of the time that you --

A. Oh, yeah. Oh, yeah. You couldn’t get ahold of him directly. You can’t get ahold of Michael Jackson directly. Like, you know, “bbrring.” “Oh, hi.” You know, it was -- you know, it was -- you know, you had to go to the bodyguard or you had to go through somebody, and then -- you know, that was always my experience.

Q. Did he ever make a comment to you about being like fog?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did he ever talk to you about how he liked to travel or move around?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE WITNESS: Well --

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: We were at The Beverly Hills Hotel, and I had made a comment that I liked -- I was talking about anonymity --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; move to strike.

MR. ZONEN: I believe it is responsive.

THE COURT: All right. Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.

A. I was speaking about anonymity, and I remember because I was drinking my Smart Water. And I was talking about anonymity and being in New York and how I loved the fact that I could be anyplace I want, and nobody knows me and I like that feeling, compared to someone like him, where he can’t go anywhere unless he’s dressed up or disguised.

And then he had made a comment that he could go places and be like no place, which was like being like fog. It was like a strange reference. But that he would have to be in costume. Like when he was at Universal, he said that he dressed like a clown and walked around in disguise so people -- so he wouldn’t be mobbed essentially.

Q. Did he explain the term “fog” to you?

A. Well, that’s what he said. I don’t -- you know, I just thought it was strange.

Q. Now, you mentioned that the charities had not been decided as to which charities that were going to be the beneficiaries of this song “What More Can I Give?” At some point in time was it resolved who the beneficiary would be?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; relevance.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Over the time that you had the opportunity to listen to conversations between

Mr. Schaffel and Mr. Jackson, did you ever hear any use of diminutives or nicknames by either of them for the other?
A. Just that Marc called him “Arnold.” But they were good friends. I mean, they were buddies.
Q. All right. And where did “Arnold” come from?
A. Gosh, I don’t know. I don’t know. I mean, “Arnold” was like, you know, “Ar-nold,” and then Michael would laugh. I just thought it was kind of like an endearment term.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; move to strike.
THE COURT: Stricken.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you hear that often?
A. Yeah. When they were around each other, uh-huh. We were in the studio, we would go and have meetings with Michael to talk about the benefit single.
Q. What -- you mentioned the term “french fries.” What was that?
A. Money.
Q. Excuse me?
A. Money.
Q. And what does that mean?
A. Typically Michael wanted money. So, “I need french fries,” or -- you know, “french fries” was about money.
Q. Did that term come up in conversations frequently?

A. Well, yeah.

Q. Did you learn over time what it was in reference to?

A. That Michael needed money.

Q. Did either Mr. Jackson or Mr. Schaffel tell you that, that that was what that term meant?

A. Well, Michael was always asking for money, or --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection.

THE WITNESS: You know, everybody has to make money.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; move to strike.

THE COURT: Stricken.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: In the conversations that you overheard between Mr. Schaffel and Mr. Jackson, were there discussions about money passing from one to the other?

A. Yeah.

Q. Frequently?

A. Well, yeah. We were -- you know, you had to make money to -- you know, the single had to take off, and there were other things Michael wanted to do, and he needed his cash, like after the RMAs and --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; move to strike.

THE COURT: I'll strike the last phrase.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you ever specifically hear Michael Jackson -- ever hear Michael Jackson specifically ask for cash from Mr. Schaffel, money to be delivered in cash?
A. Yes.
Q. On a number of occasions?
A. Couple times, yes.
Q. Were you present when that happened, when money was, in fact, transferred from Mr. Schaffel to Mr. Jackson?
A. No. I saw checks.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; move to strike.
THE COURT: Overruled. Next question.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: In November 2001, did something happen that changed the working relationship between you, Marc Schaffel and Mr. Jackson?
A. Yes. The -- Marc got fired.
Q. Got fired by whom?
A. Neverland Valley wasn’t closed. Marc got fired, though.
Q. And did you actually see or witness the firing of Mr. Schaffel?
A. Yeah, it came through a fax machine.
Q. It was a letter?
A. Yeah, it was a letter.
Q. From whom?

A. A guy named Zia. I believe --
Q. Do you know his last name?
A. Maroda. Maroder or something.
Q. Do you know who Zia is?
A. He was just one of Michael’s lawyers, crony lawyers.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; move to strike.
MR. ZONEN: Did I hear that right?
THE WITNESS: Well, there’s many lawyers.
THE COURT: Just a moment.
THE WITNESS: Oh, sorry.
THE COURT: I’ll strike the last phrase in that answer.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: You understand Zia to be one of the attorneys; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. And this letter was received by whom?
A. By Marc in his office.
Q. All right. But did you see it?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you see it when it actually came in?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you see it before or after Mr. Schaffel saw it?
A. We pretty much saw it at the same time, because it was, you know, “You’re fired,” you know, when I handed it to him.
Q. Was there some level of controversy that --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; move to strike.
THE COURT: I’ll strike the last sentence. Leave the first phrase in, that they “saw it at the same time.”
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Was there some controversy that was going on at that time involving Mr. Schaffel?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; foundation.
MR. ZONEN: I can lay foundation for it.
MR. MESEREAU: And leading.
MR. ZONEN: But it would require some discussion.
THE COURT: The objection is overruled.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.
A. What was the question?
Q. Was there some controversy that was going on involving Marc Schaffel at that time?
A. Well, they --
THE COURT: Just answer “yes” or “no” on that.
THE WITNESS: Oh, okay. Yes.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What was it?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; foundation; 352.
THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What was it?
A. His past.
Q. And what was it about his past?
A. He was in adult entertainment.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Objection. 352; foundation; relevance.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What was it about his past?
A. He was in adult entertainment.
Q. What type of adult entertainment; what was he doing?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; 352.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. And he was fired. But this operation was out of his home; is that correct?
A. Right. Neverland Valley Entertainment kept on operating.
Q. Up until this time in November -- and do you remember if it was early or late November of ‘01?
A. It was -- I think it was like the third week in November.
Q. Up until this time in November of ‘01, was there fairly continuous communication between Mr. Schaffel and Mr. Jackson and even between you and Mr. Jackson?
A. There was continuous communication between those two definitely, and then I would only come into it when it was just business.

Q. Okay. And the communication between Mr. Jackson and Mr. Schaffel was communication that you were able to personally witness; is that right?

A. Right. He would have him on the speakerphone.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; move to strike.

THE COURT: Overruled. Next question.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. Now, after the firing of Mr. Schaffel, was there any communication that you were able to personally witness between Mr. Schaffel and Mr. Jackson?

A. No.

Q. And did that go on for some period of time?

A. Yeah. For quite a while.

Q. All right. Now, Neverland Valley Entertainment was housed in Mr. Schaffel's home; is that correct?

A. Yeah, it was a Michael Jackson/Marc Schaffel company housed in his home.

Q. So what happened to you at that point?

A. Well, we just kind of went into limbo, because we didn't -- without Michael's cooperation on the single, we couldn't really get more artists to sing on it, and everything just kind of went screeching to a halt.

Q. All right. What did you continue to do?

A. We started working on, you know, finances, how much we have spent on the project, getting the receipts together. Getting the books together, essentially, to make sure that, you know, things were, you know, on the up and up and --

Q. Who is “we”? You say “we.”

A. Marc and I.

Q. So Marc was still working there?

A. Yeah, Marc, Christian, I was still there.

Q. Christian Robinson?

A. Yes, Christian Robinson.

Q. What was he doing during this time?

A. He was doing the same thing we were doing, you know, just getting filing done and -- you know, there had been a mountain of things. You know, everybody had been traveling, trying to get artists.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; move to strike.

THE COURT: Overruled. Next question.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you continue to draw salary during this time?

A. Yeah.

Q. Do you know if Mr. Schaffel continued to draw salary?

A. I’m pretty sure.

Q. Was that bank account still in existence at U.S. Bank?

A. Yes.

Q. And were either you or Schaffel periodically dealing with that bank with regards to funds?

A. Well, yeah, we had to go in and see Beverly and --

Q. For how long did this continue, that you continued working in Mr. Schaffel's home on this project?

A. Well, at the beginning, we took a break. You know, we just kind of took a breather. And then we started -- just went in like gangbusters and got all the paperwork together. So that went on for like seven, eight months, something like that.

Q. And for the next seven or eight months, was there any contact between you and Michael Jackson?

A. No. He wasn't calling the office.

Q. Pardon me?

A. He wasn't calling the office.

Q. And there was no contact between Mr. Schaffel and Mr. Jackson that you were personally witness to; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Was there any progress that was being made toward the development of "What More Can I Give?"

A. No. Everything was at a dead halt. Other than, you know, it was trying to be -- Marc was trying to work on things. But, you know, as far as I was concerned, getting artists in the studio and everything, and recording and other things, you know, everything was at a dead halt.

Q. Did you still have your point? Do you know what I’m talking about, the point?

A. I didn’t. Yeah.

Q. Did you still have -- that’s the point of the interest, 1 percent interest in the song; is that right?

A. Yeah, I still had it in the beginning. And then I started debating whether I was going to hold on to it.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; move to strike.

THE COURT: I’ll strike after, “In the beginning.”

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Mr. Provencio, what did you do with your 1 percent interest in “What More Can I Give?”

A. I gave it back to Michael.

Q. How did you do that?

A. I signed documents at Wahoo’s Fish Taco on Wilshire, and basically it says that I give my point back to Michael.

Q. Who did you furnish those documents to?

A. To Marc Schaffel, but it had Michael’s name. I read it. It said that, “This hereby” -- “You are giving your point back.”

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; move to strike.

THE COURT: The last portion is stricken.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Why did you do that? Why did you return your 1 percent back to Michael Jackson?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; relevance.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead and explain.

A. Well, there was two things. I was really kind of just wanting to get away from all of them, and I really didn’t feel like really I deserved to keep something that was Michael’s song, and make money on something that I didn’t really -- it was Michael’s song, so I felt that it was the right thing to do.

And I just wanted to kind -- I had a good time while I had it, and -- and, you know, I wasn’t rich before, so, you know, I can’t miss anything I didn’t have. So I just gave it back because I thought that was the right thing to do.

Q. Mr. Provencio, during that period of time, did Marc Schaffel continue to work with Neverland Valley Entertainment?

A. Yes.

Q. Even after he was fired?

A. Yes. Because Neverland Valley Entertainment still existed.

Q. Were there other projects that Neverland Valley Entertainment was engaged in other than “What More Can I Give?”

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

MR. ZONEN: I’m sorry, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes, he may answer.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead, please.

A. The rebuttal specials, the RMA Awards in Las Vegas. Essentially The BAMBIs, The BAMBIs in Germany.

Q. Now, The BAMBIs in Germany, tell us what that is.

A. Well, that’s --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; relevance.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did Marc Schaffel attend any activities with Michael Jackson during the latter -- at any time during 2001 or 2002?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Were you present during the attendance of any activities with Marc Schaffel and Michael Jackson after he had been fired?

A. Yeah.

Q. Where?

A. Went to Gary, Indiana.

Q. What happened at Gary, Indiana?

A. We went to Michael’s home town.

Q. And Mr. Schaffel was there?

A. Yeah. That’s the last time I talked to Michael, was there.

Q. Okay. Do you remember when that was?

A. June 2003, I think.

Q. Let me go back, if we can, please, to early 2003, January 2003. Did you know in January 2003 a woman by the name of Kathryn Milofsky?

A. Yes.

Q. Did I pronounce her name correctly?

A. I can’t even pronounce her name. Yeah, I believe so.

Q. Okay. Who is Kathryn Milofsky, to your knowledge?

A. She was a press person, a really nice press person.

Q. Okay. From where; do you know?

A. Well, she worked at one of the major networks.

Q. And do you know in which country?

A. Yeah, Great Britain. And then she came over to America.

Q. Did she send something to you or to Mr. Schaffel that you saw in early January 2003?

A. Yeah, the transcript to Martin Bashir, January 24th.

Q. So the “Martin Bashir,” what was that exactly? Do you know the name of it?

A. It was the transcript -- I’m sorry?

Q. Do you know the name of it?

A. “Living with Michael Jackson.”

Q. All right. Now, had it been aired at the time that she sent it?

A. No.

Q. Did she actually have a conversation with either -- with you?

A. About?

Q. About “Living with Michael Jackson” and the transcript.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer “yes” or “no.”

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Just “yes” or “no.”

A. Yes.

Q. Was this conversation with her before or after she sent you the transcript?

A. Both before and after.

Q. You had multiple conversations with her?

A. Yeah. It was -- she had warned us it was going to be very damaging to Michael.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Hearsay; move to strike.

MR. ZONEN: Tends to explain their conduct thereafter.

THE COURT: Well, it’s nonresponsive.

Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Mr. Provencio, when you received the transcript, did you read it?

A. Yes. On the 24th.
Q. Was this before the documentary had been aired either in Europe or in the United States?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you understand the impact of that transcript when you read it?
A. Oh, yeah.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.
THE COURT: Overruled.
MR. ZONEN: The answer is in?
THE COURT: Yes.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. At some point in time did you begin getting phone calls at Neverland Valley Entertainment?
A. Oh, yeah, the phone went ballistic.
Q. Was that before or after the first showing of “Living with Michael Jackson”?
A. It was actually before, because other -- other press people had, I guess, received the transcript, too, or got ahold of it.
Q. And when you say -- don’t tell me what the content of the conversations were, but just give me a sense of how much -- you say the phone went ballistic. How many calls were you getting, how often?
A. Well, if an octopus could pick up a phone every two seconds, that’s how many phone calls we were getting. So literally the phone just rang and rang and rang and rang.

Q. For the entire time?

A. Oh, yeah, day and night.

Q. Was it people other than the press?

A. Well, first it was European press and then it was the American press, North American press.

Q. Was the American showing a few days after the European showing?

A. Excuse me?

Q. The American showing of “Living with Michael Jackson,” to your understanding, was a few days after the European showing?

A. Yes, like two or three days.

Q. And after that, were there plenty of phone calls?

A. Yeah, it was crazy.

Q. Did it go on for some period of time?

A. Well, yeah, it was an engagement. You had to -- you know, you had to take the phone calls, or people would just keep calling.

Q. All right. Now, without getting into what, were the questions geared towards specific areas of the content of that documentary?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Hearsay and leading.

MR. ZONEN: Leading for a reason. I’m trying to narrow the focus, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Just a moment. The objection is overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you understand the question?

A. Yes. They were asking -- the press was asking primarily two questions.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection.

MR. ZONEN: Hold on. Hold on.

MR. MESEREAU: Hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: I'll ask you specifically -- listen to the question. Were there specific areas -- without getting into what they were, were there specific areas in particular that the press were inquiring about?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Was one of those areas the issue of the child?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

MR. ZONEN: For a reason.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Was one of those areas the issue of the child?

A. Yes.

Q. As to that issue, what were they inquiring about?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Hearsay; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.

A. What was their question?

Q. Yes. Who were they inquiring about?

A. Who was this boy Michael was sleeping with.

Q. Was that asked often?

A. Yeah, a lot.

Q. Was that asked as much as any other inquiry, without getting into any of the other inquiries?

A. Yeah, that was the number one.

Q. Now, did things change at Neverland Valley Entertainment after the screening of “Living with Michael Jackson”?

A. Well, yeah, it was in high gear again, and they were going to make doc -- rebuttals.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; move to strike.

THE COURT: After “in high gear again,” I’ll strike that.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Were there other people brought in now to Neverland Valley Entertainment to deal with this crisis?

A. Yeah. Well, Frank’s always been around. But Vinnie was brought in and -- but they were -- they were -- and Stuart Backerman.

Q. Okay. Is Stuart Backerman somebody that you knew prior to the screening of “Living with Michael Jackson”?

A. Oh, God, no. Nobody knew him. So, no.
Q. What was Mr. Backerman’s role?
A. He was going to be the press person.
Q. Did he work out of Mr. Schaffel’s residence as well?
A. Yes. You know, at first, and then he was working at a hotel down the street. And they would come into the office.
Q. Did you know an Ann Gabriel or Ann Kite?
A. I only knew that they had her around for like a minute, and then she was gone. So --
Q. Did you know of any other people who were brought in, who were working with Neverland Valley Entertainment dealing with this issue?
A. Oh, this British company, Bell something or something Bell.
Q. Bell Yard?
A. Bell Yard. That’s it.
Q. And were there, in fact, conversations that you were able to overhear between Mr. Schaffel and Bell Yard in England?
A. Yeah. And I also saw the paperwork.
Q. Okay. Were there -- was there now communication with Michael Jackson that you were privy to, that you were actually witness to?
A. Yeah.
Q. Did that begin after this?
A. After --

Q. In other words, after the -- after the screening of “Living with Michael Jackson,” or even -- let me withdraw that question.

After you and Mr. Schaffel became aware of the existence of the transcript of that show, did either you or Mr. Schaffel make that -- the content of that transcript known to Mr. Jackson?

A. Marc did. Marc did to Ronald, Dieter and Michael.

Q. So all of them were contacted at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, had Ronald and Dieter been active in dealing with Mr. Schaffel in your presence during the preceding months prior to January ‘03?

A. I don’t understand. Can you say that --

Q. Were you witness to conversations between Marc Schaffel and either Ronald Konitzer or Dieter Weizner prior to January of ‘03?

A. Oh, prior to January?

Q. Yes.

A. Yeah. They were -- he was trying to get back into good graces with Michael, so he was talking to Frank and to Ronald and Dieter on the phone a lot.

Q. What -- did you ever have conversations with Frank or Ronald or Dieter during that period prior to January ‘03?

A. Well, Ronald and Dieter came over to the 8730 house to have meetings, like two meetings I remember.

Q. All right. And that was -- you were there at the time; is that correct?

A. Yeah, we had a meeting with them.

Q. All right. Were there any conference calls that took place in the early part of February or late part of January that involved Mr. Jackson, conference calls that you were privy to?

A. January 1st.

Q. How many conference calls were there that you actually heard?

A. With Michael on it?

Q. Yes.

A. Two.

Q. And were you actually part of the conference call?

A. Well, in the beginning I was sitting there. And they got -- you know, he put them on speakerphone. And then -- and then he kind of just wanted to make it a little more private, and I went in my office and was listening to the conference call.

Q. All right. Were you listening to the conference call on your phone in your office?

A. Yes.

Q. We're talking about Mr. Schaffel's residence; is that correct?

A. Right, but I had my own office in there, and the phones were all interlinked.
Q. And were you able to listen to the conversation in its entirety?
A. Yeah, because I kept notes.
Q. You kept notes as to both those conversations?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Was Mr. Jackson part of the conversation?
A. Yes. Not in the beginning, but Dieter would bring him on.
Q. From the point that Mr. Jackson became part of the conversation - and this is the first conversation on the 1st of January - was there any discussion about Debbie Rowe in that conversation?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.
A. Yes.
Q. And what was discussed about Debbie Rowe?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Was there any specific discussion about Debbie Rowe being actively involved in dealing with this controversy?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Leading and vague.

MR. ZONEN: I’m not sure they can be both leading and vague.

THE COURT: I’ll allow a “yes” or “no” answer to that question.

Do you know the question?

THE WITNESS: Could you state it again, please?

MR. ZONEN: Perhaps the court reporter could read it back.

THE COURT: Yes.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: The answer is yes.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Okay. Was Mr. Jackson asked to do something by any of the other participants in this conference call with regards to Debbie Rowe?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: You can answer.

A. Yes.

Q. What was he asked to do?

A. Call her.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Vague and hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

MR. ZONEN: And the answer is in?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did Mr. Jackson say something in regards to that?

A. Just that he wanted to know what was going on.
Q. Did he ask that throughout that conversation?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Was he told what he needed to say or was there any discussion about what he needed to say to Debbie Rowe?
A. Yeah.
Q. What was that?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.
THE COURT: Overruled. I want -- there's an issue here for me, though, and that is who is talking?
MR. ZONEN: All right. All right. Let me back up a question, and then we'll go back to the other one.
Q. Who was on this telephone conversation?
A. Dieter, Marc and then Michael.
Q. Now, did you know where Dieter and Michael were at the time of the conversation? That's just "yes" or "no."
A. No.
Q. And Marc, of course, was in the same residence with you?
A. Correct.

Q. Who was it who was talking to -- to Mr. Jackson about -- specifically about what he needed to do with regards to Debbie Rowe?

A. Marc and Dieter.

Q. Were both of them speaking at different times with Mr. Jackson with regards to Debbie Rowe?

A. Together and separate.

Q. What is it that Marc told Mr. Jackson he needed to do with regards to Debbie Rowe?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Hearsay and leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.

A. He needed to call her and talk to her.

Q. Okay.

A. Give her permission.

Q. All right. Something about permission?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Okay. What did Dieter say to Mr. Jackson with regards to Debbie Rowe?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation and hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.

A. That he needed -- that all he needed to do was talk to her so that she could do the rebuttal.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson say anything in that regard as to whether he would or would not do that?

A. No, I never knew if he even called her. So....

Q. All right. Were you aware, from your having read the transcript -- incidentally, did you ever see the documentary “Living with Michael Jackson”?

A. Yeah, I saw it. I mean, parts I nodded off on, but, you know, I saw it for what it was worth, yeah.

Q. Did you see the portion of the documentary that specifically featured this child who was the subject of the controversy?

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. Did you see it in its entirety, that section?

A. Oh, absolutely.

Q. All right. Did you know the name of this family?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know how many members were in the family?

A. Yeah, I mean, I pretty much knew there was like -- how many people were there, yeah.

Q. In this first conference call that you were listening to on the 1st of January, was there any discussion about the family at all?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was said in the presence -- at the time that Mr. Jackson was on the phone?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Was Mr. Jackson asked to do anything with regard to this family?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Hearsay and vague.

THE COURT: Vague as to the person asking.

MR. ZONEN: Okay.

Q. Did either Mr. Schaffel or Mr. -- it was Dieter, right? Not Ronald.

A. Dieter.

Q. Dieter was on the call.

Did Mr. Weizner or Mr. Schaffel ask Michael Jackson to do anything with regards to the family?

A. Well, Frank had told him that --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: “Yes” or “no.”

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And who was it, Dieter or Schaffel or both?

A. Both.

Q. Let’s start with Mr. Schaffel. What did Mr. Schaffel say with regards to Mr. Jackson with regards to this family?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.

A. That they could ruin your career, they could blackmail you.
Q. All right. Did Mr. Weizner say anything to Mr. Jackson?
A. Essentially the same thing. You know, essentially the same thing.
Q. Was there some discussion by either one of them as to what should be done?
A. On the second conference call there was a little bit better clarity there.
Q. We’ll get to that in a second. But on the first one, was there any further discussion at that point?
A. Not really. Not that I can remember, that I can recall. I mean, it’s -- do you want me to look at my notes, or --
Q. Would it refresh your recollection to look at your notes?
A. Yeah.
Q. Did you, in fact, take notes at that time?
A. Yeah, at the time. This is --
Q. Were your notes taken contemporaneous with the event, the phone call?
A. Yeah, they’re right here.
Q. You have those notes with you?
A. Yes.
Q. Go ahead and take a look at your notes. Don’t read from them, just read them, and then close your notebook back up when you’re done.

A. Okay.
Q. Having reviewed your notes, did it refresh your recollection as to any other content of that conversation that specifically dealt with this family?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. And what else was said?
A. That --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Let’s start with either Mr. Weizner -- what else was said by Mr. Weizner, if anything else?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: I don’t -- Weizner and Marc were essentially saying the same things back and forth. There was that urgency tone in their voice of, you know, “You’ve got to” -- you know, “You have got to take care of” --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.
THE COURT: Overruled. As to the tone of voice is stricken.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Let’s deal specifically with Mr. Weizner, as best you can recall. Anything other than what you’ve told us already with regards to the Arvizo family?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.
Your Honor, was there a ruling?
THE COURT: I’m sorry, yes.
MR. ZONEN: What was the ruling? I’m sorry, I didn’t hear it. I apologize.
THE COURT: Overruled.
MR. ZONEN: All right.
THE COURT: My voice was --
MR. ZONEN: Now I don’t remember the question.
Q. Oh, it was dealing with Mr. Weizner, and the question of whether or not your notes refresh your recollection as to anything else that Mr. Weizner had said to Mr. Jackson concerning the Arvizo family. Am I right?
A. Right.
Q. Tell us anything else you can recall having read your notes, reviewed your notes.
A. That they wanted to do this rebuttal and put some money in his pocket.
Q. There was discussion about rebuttal at that point?
A. Yeah, that was an early concept of theirs.
Q. All right. What specifically was the discussion about the rebuttal coming from Mr. Weizner? And then we’ll talk about from Mr. Schaffel.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Just rephrase the question. You've confused the witness.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Was there a conversation between Mr. Weizner and Mr. Jackson about a rebuttal?

A. Yes.

Q. What did Mr. Weizner say to Mr. Jackson about a rebuttal?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: To the best of your recollection.

A. That we -- that they needed to do it.

Q. Did he say why they needed to do this rebuttal?

A. To save Michael's image, his career.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: And did he talk at all about this being a money-raiser in any way?

A. Oh, yeah. This could make money.

Q. And that's what Mr. Weizner said to Mr. Jackson?

A. Both of them did.

Q. All right. Now, let's move to Mr. Schaffel as well. To the best of your recollection, what did Mr. Schaffel say about -- to Mr. Jackson about performing this -- doing this rebuttal film?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.
A. That, “You could let the network make all the money or you could make the money.” So there was an incentive.
Q. Do you recall what Mr. Jackson said in response to that?
A. Well, he agreed.
Q. Was there any discussion about whether the Arvizo family would be involved in this rebuttal?
A. Yes, because Michael had --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.
THE COURT: Overruled. The answer was, “Yes.”
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. Tell us who -- between which parties was there discussion about the Arvizo family being involved in this rebuttal? Who talked about the Arvizos’ family participation in the rebuttal?
A. Oh, Michael brought it up.
Q. And what did he say?
A. That Frank had told him.
Q. That Frank had told him what?
A. That they could be filming the family, or that the family might be in this rebuttal special.

And needed to be.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson offer any commentary as to why the family needed to be involved in this rebuttal?

A. Not really. Just -- wanted just to be aware of things.

Q. Now, this is all the first conversation, is that right, the first conference call?

A. Yes. Things were moving very quickly.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; move to strike.

THE COURT: Stricken. No question pending.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Now, the second conversation conference call that took place, do you remember when that was?

A. Yeah, it was either Feb 2nd or 3rd. One of those days.

Q. Within one to two days?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you listening to that conversation as well?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you party to the conversation? In other words, were you talking during the conversation?

A. No, I was just listening.

Q. Do you know whether or not the other parties knew you were on the line?

A. They didn’t know.

Q. As to the first conversation on the 1st, do you know whether the other parties knew whether you were on the line?

A. He knew I was sitting there when he got them on the phone, and then I went into the other room and listened.

Q. Did he know that you -- Schaffel, you’re talking about, is “he,” right?

A. Right.

Q. Did Mr. Schaffel know that you were listening on the other line as to either of those two conversations?

A. No, but he -- no, the answer is no.

Q. In the second conversation, who were the participants of that conversation?

A. Dieter and Michael again, and it was the same way. Dieter first and then Michael got on the phone.

Q. In other words, initially the conversation was between Marc and Dieter?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And then Michael got on the phone?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Without getting into the content of the conversation, what -- how long did Marc and Dieter talk before Michael got on the phone?

A. A couple of minutes. Just about probably, like, eight or ten minutes. And it was just rambling money crap, I mean stuff.

Q. That happens here every once in a while.

A. Oh, okay.

Q. Could you tell if Dieter and Michael were in the same location? I mean, when Michael -- Mr. Jackson got on the phone, did they have to commence another phone call to do that or did he simply get on the phone?

A. Well, initially it was like an operator, so I knew it wasn't at Neverland. But I didn't know where they were.

Q. But did they have to invoke -- use an operator again to get Mr. Jackson on the phone?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Do you understand the question?

A. Yes.

No, when Michael came on the phone, it was like he was right there.

Q. Okay.

A. Or he had walked into another room, you know, if it was that kind of phone.

Q. You said, "Neverland." Did you know whether or not they were actually calling from Neverland?

A. No, because when you call at Neverland, they pick up and say "Neverland."

Q. Do you know who commenced this phone call?

A. Marc did.

Q. And no one said “Neverland” at the time that he called?

A. No. It was an operator.

Q. All right. After Mr. Jackson became party to this conversation that was now a conversation with Dieter and Michael Jackson and Mr. Schaffel, was there a discussion about making the video?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Just “yes” or “no.”

A. Yes.

Q. Who was involved in that discussion?

A. Dieter, Ronald, Michael.

Q. Can you tell us what Michael Jackson said specifically about the video and making the video?

A. Well, he wanted to know what was going on, so he just asked it blunt, like, “What’s happening? What’s the latest? What’s going on?”

Q. And did either Dieter or Marc answer that question? That’s “yes” or “no.”

A. Yes.

Q. Which one answered that question?

A. Both of them did.

Q. What did Marc say with regards to what’s going on?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What did Marc say with regards to what's going on?

A. Can I look at my notes?

Q. Would it refresh your recollection to do so?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And if that same question dealt with Dieter, would you need to refresh your recollection as to that as well?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Would you please refresh your recollection as to both of those.
Have you reviewed your notes as to both of those conversations?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Were you able to refresh your recollection as to both of those conversations?

A. Yes.

Q. What did Mr. Jackson say with regards to his conversation with Marc Schaffel as to what was going on?

A. Well, first --

Q. You already answered that.
I'm sorry. What did -- you know, I'm not sure what the question was.

THE COURT: It was, "What did Marc say?"

MR. ZONEN: I'm sorry?

THE COURT: I think you were asking, “What did Marc say?”

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Okay. Go ahead.

A. What did Marc say? Well, he said that, “We’re going to go down to Florida,” or something like that, yeah.

Q. He made a comment about going to Florida?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall what --

A. Taking the family down to Florida.

Q. So the content of that conversation included going to Florida with the family?

A. Correct.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; misstates the evidence.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: And as to Dieter, what did Dieter say specifically?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: To Michael Jackson, what did Dieter say?

A. They needed to do a press conference.

Q. What did Mr. Jackson say in response to doing a press conference?

A. That he hates doing those things.

Q. I’m sorry?

A. That he hated doing those things.

Q. Did he agree to do it?

A. You know, I didn’t hear Michael say, “Yes,” you know, “I want to do it.” He just says, “Ahh, I hate doing those things.”

Q. Was there any other discussion about the Arvizo family in this conversation other than that they were going to go to Florida to do a press conference?

A. Yeah, they were going to be with Michael and Michael wanted to go someplace fun.

Q. What did he say specifically about going someplace fun?

A. He said, “Let’s go someplace fun.” I don’t know, maybe the place was boring.

Q. Was there any discussion in this second conference about being concerned about the Arvizo family?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: No, but I was concerned.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. But --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Move to strike; nonresponsive.

THE COURT: Stricken. Except for “No.”

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: You had mentioned, as to the first conversation on the 1st, that there was some discussion about blackmail; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. Was there any discussion about blackmail on the second conversation, to the best of your recollection?

A. No, not that I can think of.

Q. Was there any more discussion in the second conversation about Debbie Rowe’s involvement in the video?

A. No, she was just going to do the rebuttal.

Q. All right. Was that talked about in the second conversation at all?

A. No.

Q. At some point in time, did you become aware of the fact that there was going to be an interview with Debbie Rowe?

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. Did you learn about that prior to the commencement of that interview?

A. Could you say that again?

Q. Before the interview actually took place, did you know that that interview was going to happen?

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. How long prior to the commencement of the interview?

A. A couple days. It was going quick.

Q. Do you know when that interview took place relative to, say, the second phone call?

A. Actually a couple days later, I believe. Yeah.

Q. Do you know where that interview took place?

A. Yeah, I was there. It was at Marc’s house.

Q. Do you know for what period of time that interview took place? How long did it last?

A. It went on for forever. It was like -- it was like eight, nine hours, something like that.

Q. Do you know approximately what time it started and approximately what time it ended?

A. It seemed like it just went on all day. There was a lot of setup. Hamid had to come in and set up. So if you’re talking that, that started early. And then, you know, we didn’t get out of there until the sun went down, really, so....

Q. And was Debbie Rowe there the entire time?

A. No, not in the beginning, because that’s all setup; microphones, lighting, the cameras.

Q. You said Hamid was there. Who is Hamid? Do you know his full name?

A. Hamid Molesi or Moleshi.

Q. And what does he do?

A. He was Michael’s personal videographer, photographer.

Q. If I referred to Hamid as Mr. Moslehi --

A. Moslehi.

Q. -- would that sound close enough?

A. I always mispronounced his name, so yeah. 8751

Q. I think everybody does.

Who else was there besides Mr. Moslehi?

A. Iris, her attorney.

Q. Whose attorney?

A. Debbie Rowe’s attorney.

Q. Do you know Iris’s last name?

A. Silver something.

Q. Does Finsilver sound right?

A. Finsilver.

Q. And then Debbie was there?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. All right. And who else was there?

A. Christian. Ian Drew.

Q. Is this Christian Robinson we’re talking about?

A. Yes.

Q. Christian Robinson was still working --

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. -- for Neverland Valley Entertainment?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And the workplace for Christian Robinson continued to be Mr. Schaffel’s residence?

A. Correct.

Q. And he was there on that occasion?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he actually involved in this interview with Debbie Rowe?

A. Well, he was working, yeah. I mean, doing some sideline things and helping to assist camera work and stuff.

Q. Was Marc Schaffel there?

A. Yes.

Q. We have Christian Robinson, Marc Schaffel, Iris Joan, Hamid, you were there; is that correct?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Who else was there? Anybody else you can think of?

A. Stuart Backerman.

Q. Was he there for the entire time?

A. Yeah, everybody stayed for the entire time.

Q. Anybody else?

A. Not that I can think of. I mean, there was camera -- I think Hamid had some camera guys, but --

Q. Who actually conducted the interview?

A. Ian Drew.

Q. Now, were you witness to any part of this interview?

A. Yeah, I would come up and -- upstairs and downstairs and watch, and then get bored and go back upstairs, and then come down.

Q. Did you watch at times for extended periods?

A. Yeah, to see what was said and how it was going to be performed or whatever.

Q. Over the entirety of the time that this interview took place, what percentage of it do you believe you actually witnessed?

A. Probably 75 percent of it, because I was going up and down. You couldn’t help it, it was just happening right there, so --

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, may I approach the witness?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: I’m going to show you Exhibit No. 888. 888, you would agree, is a photograph?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Can you tell us the content of the photograph, the subject matter?

A. It’s the interview that’s happening in the house. Marc’s home.

Q. Can you identify the people who are in that photograph?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Who are they?

A. Debbie Rowe. Ian Drew sitting across from her. Marc to the right in the blue shirt. And Christian Robinson to the left.

Q. Does that appear to be a photograph that was taken during the course of that interview?

A. Oh, absolutely.

Q. All right. Are all of those people identified accurately as the subject of that photograph?

A. Yes.

Q. And is that photograph, in fact, an accurate depiction of the subject matter contained within?

A. I guess so, yeah.

MR. ZONEN: I would move to introduce 888 into evidence.

MR. MESEREAU: No objection.

MR. ZONEN: All right.

Q. In that photograph, do you see Mr. Schaffel doing something?

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, can I publish the photograph?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: And can you identify those people again, please?

A. Yes. By pointing?

MR. ZONEN: Do we have that laser?

Yeah, right there.

THE WITNESS: This is a laser?

MR. ZONEN: It is.

THE WITNESS: All right.

MR. ZONEN: Don’t start playing with it.

Q. Point out, please, Debbie Rowe for us.

Point out Ian Drew for us.

A simple point would be adequate.

Point out Marc Schaffel, if you would, please.

And point out Christian Robinson.

Okay. Can you tell what Mr. Schaffel is doing at that time?

A. He's working on the -- he's working on the questions and answers.

Q. Did you actually see documents that you believed to be questions and answers?

A. Well, initially they were just questions, because they were sent over by Ian Drew. And then they became questions and answers.

Q. Now, you say "were sent over by Ian Drew." Ian Drew was actually there at that time. Do you mean sometime prior to this interview?

A. Oh, yeah, because Ian was upset that Marc hadn't responded to him right away.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; hearsay; move to strike.

THE COURT: Strike the last sentence.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Were questions received by Marc Schaffel at Neverland Valley Entertainment headquarters, at Mr. Schaffel's residence, prior to the commencement of this interview?

A. Yes. 100 questions.

Q. Did those questions also contain suggested answers?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you see the questions at the time they came from Mr. Drew?

A. He printed them and had them on the desk.

Q. And you looked at them?

A. Yeah, I just looked at them quickly.

Q. You were able to see how many questions roughly; is that correct?

A. Well, yeah, there was 100. There was about 100. 90 to 100.

Q. Were they numbered, the questions?

A. Well, actually, Marc complained there were so many questions. I said, “How many questions?” And he said, “About 100.”

Q. All right. But you did actually look at it at one point?

A. Yes. It was sitting on his desk.

Q. And at that time that it came in, were there answers associated with those questions?

A. Not at the time.

Q. At a later time, were there answers associated with those questions?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you see the document at a later time?

A. Yes.

Q. Did that document change over time?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. How did it change?

A. There was answers.

Q. Prior to the commencement of this interview, were there answers as part of that document?

A. Well, it was changing. So Ian Drew sent over the questions. And it changed. And then there were answers.

Q. During the course of the interview, what was Mr. Schaffel’s involvement?

A. He was like the producer. He was like the director.

Q. All right. Was he making any suggestions one way or the other?

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. In what way?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Is that a request for him to repeat what was said or -- I’ll ask for a different question.

MR. ZONEN: I’m sorry --

THE COURT: “In what way” is the question I find vague.

MR. ZONEN: All right.

Q. What was Mr. Schaffel saying to Debbie Rowe during the course of this interview?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: It’s overly broad. It’s sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Was Mr. Schaffel making any suggestions as to how to answer the questions to Debbie Rowe?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection as leading.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: In what way? What was he saying?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.
MR. ZONEN: It’s not for the truth of the matter stated.
THE COURT: The objection is overruled.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Tell us in what way.
A. He would prod her to do it better or say it better, like any producer would.
Q. How often did he do that with regards to the questions, the frequency with which the questions were asked? How often would he offer suggestions?
A. A lot. That’s what -- he was there the whole time and he was working on things at the same time. He would write things and scratch it out and then she would redo it.
Q. Was Debbie Rowe responsive to his suggestions?
A. Yes.
Q. Was she changing her answers in accordance with his directions?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Hearsay and leading.
THE COURT: Calls for a conclusion.

Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did she make changes in any answers at any time during those interviews?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you hear any discussions about --

THE COURT: It’s not the foundation. You’re asking him to conclude, when she says A and then says B, that that’s a change in testimony. Not in testimony, but in statement. So it’s opinion, and I’m not allowing that.

MR. ZONEN: Okay.

THE COURT: If you want to give some examples --

MR. ZONEN: I can do that.

THE COURT: -- you can do that.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Mr. Provencio, were there some subject matters that you recall at this time that were the subject of this discussion -- this interview?

A. Yeah, well, like when she was --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: That’s “yes” or “no.”

A. Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Move to strike.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Do you recall specifically that there was a discussion about the quality of Mr. Jackson’s parenting of his children?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

MR. ZONEN: For a reason.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Were there any discussions about the quality of Mr. Jackson’s parenting of his children?

A. Well, that Debbie said?

Q. Questions that were put to Debbie Rowe about exactly that.

A. Yes.

Q. Were those questions subject to Mr. Schaffel’s suggestions?

A. Yes, because he would --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. What -- do you remember a question in specific that dealt with that topic that was eventually commented on by Mr. Schaffel?

A. That Michael was a good father, and then he said, “You’re going to see your kids.”

Q. Do you recall having heard that?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; move to strike.

THE COURT: Sustained. The question was whether or not you remember a question, not what the response was.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. Let me -- was there an answer specifically that Debbie Rowe gave to that issue of the quality of Mr. Jackson’s parenting that Mr. Schaffel wanted to change?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Calls for speculation, hearsay, and a conclusion.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Was there a conversation about her seeing her children?

A. Well --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: You may answer.

A. He said, “You’re going to see your kids soon.”

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; hearsay; move to strike.

THE COURT: It’s stricken.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Well, but the answer would be “yes” or “no.” Was there a conversation specifically about her kids?

A. Yes.

Q. What did Mr. Schaffel say to her about her kids?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.

A. That, “You were doing good. You are going to see them soon,” or something like that.

Q. Were there times when you were watching this interview when Miss Rowe was crying?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there any discussion between Mr. Schaffel and Ms. Rowe about her crying at other times?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you explain that to us, please?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Hearsay; vague.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.

THE WITNESS: Can you say it again?

MR. ZONEN: Perhaps the court reporter would read it back.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: Okay. He thought she could cry better.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: And did they do the scene again?

A. Pretty much, yeah. Well, not “pretty much.” They did.

Q. And did she cry when they redid it?

A. She cried better.

Q. She cried better.
Did you eventually see this production of the Maury Povich rebuttal?
A. Yes.
Q. Were there, in fact, scenes of Debbie Rowe in this production?
A. Yes.
Q. Were any of the scenes including -- which included her crying?
A. Yeah, there was like a crying scene.
Q. During the course of the interview, did you receive phone calls at the house from a Mark Geragos?
A. Yes.
Q. Were you able to overhear those conversations?
A. Well, he would -- he would get on the phone with Marc.
Q. “Yes” or “no.”
A. Yes, sorry.
Q. You were able to overhear the conversations?
A. Yes.
Q. How could you overhear the conversations?
A. Because sometimes they were on speakerphone, and sometimes -- you know, he just --
Q. Did he call more than once?
A. Oh, yeah.
Q. And can you give us a sense of how often he called, how frequently he called during that time?

A. Well, he was calling -- in a week’s time, he was calling three or four times that I would know for sure that was him, because I could hear his voice. And then -- and then if Vinnie was there, he called a lot.

Q. All right. And we’re talking at the moment during the course of the interview, the Debbie Rowe interview.

A. Oh. If we’re talking towards the interview, he was calling a couple of times, yes.

Q. Vinnie was not there during that interview; is that correct?

A. I don’t believe he was, no.

Q. But at subsequent times Vinnie was -- “Vinnie” is Vinnie Amen; is that right?

A. Vinnie Amen.

Q. And Vinnie was there at the house subsequent to that interview; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you testified that there were conversations with Mr. Geragos and Vinnie Amen?

A. Correct.

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, this might be a good time to take a break, if that’s okay.

THE COURT: All right. We’ll take our break.

(Recess taken.)

A JUROR: Your microphone.

MR. ZONEN: I’m in my own world today.

Q. Did you ever become aware of a CD that was produced by Michael Jackson entitled “Invincible”?

A. The album “Invincible,” yes.

Q. Do they still call them “albums” nowadays?

A. Yeah, CDs, albums.

Q. Are there actually people who remember albums?

A. Yeah, I hope so.

Q. Did you have an opportunity to take a look at it?

A. Oh, yeah. Yes.

Q. Did you look at the credits that are contained in it?

A. Oh, yeah. Marc gloated over it.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; move to strike.

THE COURT: Stricken, the last sentence.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: I’d like to show you Exhibit 887, please. Is that, in fact, the CD “Invincible” produced by Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that published during the course of your employment with Neverland Valley Entertainment?

A. Yes, but it was a Sony record.

Q. A Sony production?

A. Yes, it's a Sony record.

Q. All right. Are there credits that are published along with that CD?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you have an opportunity to look at them?

A. Oh, many times.

Q. All right. Is there, in fact, a credit there to Marc Schaffel?

A. Yes.

Q. Could you read that to us?

A. "Marc Schaffel: Thank you for all your help. I love you, Michael."

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: I'm sorry, the -- we heard the, "Thank you for all your help." What's the next part?

A. "Thank you for all your help. I love you, Michael."

Q. Is there also a credit to the Cascio family, including Frank Cascio?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you find that?

A. Yes. "Frank" --

Q. What does that say?

A. "Frank: Thank you for all your help, love and support. You are my true friend and family. (Stop fishing). I love you, Michael.”

Q. Is there a separate credit to the Cascio family, other members of the Cascio family besides Frank?

A. There is. Let me look for it. Hold on.

Q. Okay.

A. Oh, yes. “Special thanks to Connie (Momma Rubba)” -- I think that’s a -- oh, “Angel and Frank, my other family.”

Q. Is there a credit there to Bob Jones?

A. Yes.

Q. What does that say?

A. Let me find it.

“Special thanks and appreciation to Bob Jones for your continuing support and love over the years. Love, Michael Jackson.”

Q. Do you know when “Invincible” came out?

A. 2001.

MR. ZONEN: All right. I’d move into evidence Exhibit No. 887.

MR. MESEREAU: No objection.

MR. ZONEN: May I approach the witness? I’d like to show some other exhibits.

THE COURT: It’s admitted. Yes.

You’re stepping on my lines here.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Let me put this notebook in front of you, if I may, and with the admonition that it's --

A. Oh, the water spilled.

Thank you. Okay.

Q. I'd like to direct your attention to Exhibit No. 400 that's before you here. And with the admonition as we turn each page, do it gingerly, because it gets caught in the binder.

No. 400 is the document that's currently in front of you. Do you recognize that document?

A. Yes.

Q. What is that document?

A. The work agreement.

Q. And was that -- a work agreement for whom?

A. For Marc, I believe, yes.

Q. Okay. At Neverland Valley Entertainment?

A. Correct.

Q. Was that kept at Mr. Schaffel's offices at his home?

A. Yes, in the filing cabinet.

Q. And you've seen that document before, have you?

A. Yeah. It was -- it's been -- it's laid out a couple of times, too.

Q. No. 401, please. 401, consisting of one, two, three and four pages, do you know what these pages are?

A. This is the agreement where Michael gives Marc the song and gives me a point on the record, on

"What More Can I Give?"

Q. And this was kept at Mr. Schaffel's residence, the offices to Neverland Valley Entertainment?

A. Yes, and I had a copy as well.

Q. Exhibit No. 402. Tell us, please, what 402 is.

A. It's the reports on basically money that we're spending, receipts, and what we've been spending on, you know, production people for the record, Brad Buxer, Bruce Swedien, who was a production person for "What More Can I Give?"

Q. Did you participate in putting these compilation figures together?

A. Yeah, parts. And then -- we would work on parts and then bring it all together, because we had to hunt down receipts and just do what you do in any kind of an office.

Q. Was this document, No. 402, kept at Neverland Valley Entertainment offices at Mr. Schaffel's residence as well?

A. Yes, that's part of how we'd track money.

Q. And was that where you and Mr. Schaffel compiled those figures?

A. Yes.

Q. Going to No. 405, please.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. The document, No. 405, with the name, at the 8775 upper left-hand, of “Bell Yard,” had you ever seen that document before?

A. Yes.

Q. And where did you see that document?

A. Laying around in the office.

Q. Did you have any discussions with Mr. Schaffel concerning the content of that document at any time?

A. I just concerned -- I was just concerned for the family --

Q. Hold on a second. It’s a “yes” or “no.”

A. Yes.

Q. Yes, you did have a conversation with Mr. Schaffel concerning that document?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall at what time that was? When, approximately, in terms of month, year?

A. February 2003.

Q. Now, I -- let me correct something while I remember to do so.

The telephone conference calls that you referred to --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- the two of them, where you were listening in on those two conference calls, were at the beginning of what month?

A. February.

Q. It was February 1st and February 2nd?

A. 2nd, 3rd.

Q. Or 2nd or 3rd was the other one?

A. Yes.

Q. 2003?

A. 2003.

Q. I may have said “January” early on. Do you have a recollection of that at all?

A. January was when the transcript was sent.

Q. All right. So the conference calls were at the beginning of February?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. I take you now to Exhibit 409. What is this, please?

A. Oh, this is the thing we would -- basically we had a wall where we just stuck people’s numbers on so that everybody knew who they were when they called and how to get ahold of them.

Q. And the wall was where?

A. Right there in Marc’s office. There was an extra space right there for someone to work on the other computer.

Q. Do you know who compiled those documents?

A. Well, we all did, pretty much. We would write them down and then -- this one looks like it was done by Marc or Christian.

Q. Okay.

A. So --

Q. And the -- this document contains a phone 8777 number and the name of Gavin Arvizo; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Showing you now No. 410, please. Tell us what 410 is.

A. It’s the same thing. Basically phone numbers and -- of people we need to know. David LeGrand, Ronald Konitzer. You know, if they called, so you would recognize numbers and know to patch them in to Marc right away.

Q. And did this also include the name Gavin “Orvizo,” spelled O-r-v-i-z-o?

A. Yeah.

Q. We are in Exhibit No. 413, and 413 is a piece of paper, yellow legal pad, that has handwriting writing on it. Do you recognize the handwriting of Exhibit No. 413?

A. Yeah, it’s Vinnie’s.

Q. This is 413, specifically page six. That’s Vinnie’s handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. And you’ve seen his handwriting before?

A. Many times. He always writes in notebooks.

Q. Let’s see if we can get to the very back of that. Let’s just do that.

A. No, I can just hold it.

Q. All right. Showing you Exhibit no. 423 then, which is a collection of pages --

A. Uh-huh.
Q. -- do you recognize these documents?
A. Yes. They're the Parviz documents.
Q. The entire collection of documents?
A. Yes. I mean, these are what Parviz had to sign and Marc had to sign and Michael had to sign.
Q. And you had testified to those documents yesterday; is that correct?
A. Right, because we went there twice.
Q. And where was that collection of documents kept?
A. In the office.
Q. Was there a particular file it was kept in?
A. Well, yeah, it had a -- I think it was just the Parviz loan file.
Q. It was kept in the office at Mr. Schaffel's residence?
A. Yes, in the filing cabinet.
Q. Thank you. Go ahead and --
A. Shut it all?
Q. Well, leave it like that. I'll take care of it.
In the early days of Neverland Valley Entertainment after you had started up and until the time that Marc Schaffel was formally fired, were you involved in meetings or conference calls with Michael Jackson?
A. Yes.

Q. Was he involved in the business decisions of Neverland Valley Entertainment?
A. Absolutely.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. ZONEN: All right.
Q. Were you able to watch Mr. Jackson’s participation in meetings that were held between Mr. Jackson and Mr. Schaffel?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Were you able to listen to the interaction between the two of them?
A. Yes.
Q. Were you able to listen and understand the content of the dialogue between the two of them?
A. Oh, yeah, because it was business.
Q. All right. And did those conversations take place with some level of frequency?
A. Yes. I mean -- yes.
Q. And did you hear all of them when they did?
A. Not all of them, no.
Q. What percentage of conversations were you a witness to?
A. Well, if we had a face-to-face meeting, is that what you’re saying?
Q. Yes. Yes.
A. I was there with those meetings, with him and Michael.

Q. How many face-to-face meetings did you have with Michael Jackson and Mr. Schaffel?

A. There was three at The Beverly Hills Hotel. Two at The Universal Hilton. And then all the ones in the studio, when Michael would come to the studio.

Q. And how many times did that happen?

A. Four. Maybe four, five times maybe.

Q. As to all of those meetings, was business discussed?

A. Excuse me?

Q. As to all of those meetings, was there a discussion of business matters?

A. Yes, my situation with Michael was always business, just business.

Q. Was Michael Jackson actively involved in the business of Neverland Valley Entertainment?

A. Yes.

Q. In what way?

A. He was the captain at the helm.

Q. All right. And what do you mean by that?

A. He had to make the decisions. It was Michael Jackson’s project, “What More Can I Give?” Michael and Marc’s.

Q. I want to move back now to February of -- February and March of 2003.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Did you have a discussion with anyone among the people who -- may I have just one second? Did you have a discussion with anyone among the people who were working for Michael Jackson where the words or word “killers” became part of the conversation?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. With whom did you have that discussion?

A. With Marc and Vinnie.

Q. All right. Who was the first person with whom you had that discussion?

A. Marc.

Q. And where were you at the time of that discussion?

A. I was in his office.

Q. Do you remember when that was? Can you tell us as to the best of your recollection?

A. It was right -- right after the Arvizos came to the house the first time.

Q. Did the Arvizos actually come to the house?

A. Oh, yeah. Twice.

Q. On more than one occasion?

A. That I saw, twice.

Q. Did they ever actually come into the house?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever meet them?

A. Well, I pointed to the bathroom.

Q. Okay.

A. When Gavin -- or the boy came in.

Q. All right. Did other members of the Arvizo family come into the house besides Gavin?

A. Yes. They were in the car.

Q. Did they actually come into the house?

A. No.

Q. All right. Was Gavin the only member of the family to actually come into the house?

A. That I saw, yeah.

Q. Do you remember when those two visits were?

A. Had to have been -- well, I don’t remember exactly the date, but I remember when they came, you know.

Q. Do you remember if it was still in February of ‘03?

A. Oh, it was in February for sure.

Q. Do you remember how far apart these two visits were?

A. They were pretty close because they were going shopping.

Q. Did you ever see the other members of the family besides Gavin?

A. Yes, the young girl.

Q. Did you ever see the mother?

A. No.

Q. Were you ever introduced to any of them?
A. No.
Q. Now, I asked you the question about the discussion of the word “killer” or “killers” --
A. Uh-huh.
Q. -- and you said that it was Frank -- excuse me, you said it was Marc Schaffel --
A. Marc and Vinnie.
Q. -- and Vinnie.
Tell me about the conversation with Marc Schaffel involving the word “killer.”
A. Well --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.
A. He said -- he made a flippant remark about the “killers,” and I was kind of trying to figure out what was happening here. So I said to him, I said, “Well, what killers?” And he said, “The killers that are after the Arvizos.” And I think I’m pronouncing the name right. And I said, “Um,” because I thought, “Well, maybe I should be” --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; narrative.
THE COURT: Narrative; sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. He said the killers that were after the Arvizos; is that correct?

A. Correct.
Q. Did he say anything else about the killers?
A. No, that was the first time I was hearing about it, so -- it was a flippant remark.
Q. Did you ever hear the word “killers” prior to that?
A. Never.
Q. Did you ask him about that, to explain further?
A. Yes.
Q. And what did you ask him?
A. I said, “Who are the killers?”
Q. And what did he say?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What did he say?
A. He says, “The killers that are after the family.” I mean, he didn’t really go into it. That was the first time I was hearing about it. So --
Q. Did he offer any further explanation?
A. No. That’s what was alarming, because --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; move to strike.
THE COURT: Strike the last sentence.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Were you alarmed by those comments?
A. Absolutely.
Q. Did you ask him for any further explanation?

A. No. Because I didn’t know -- I didn’t know -- it was just an alarming situation.

Q. What was the tone of that --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; move to strike.

THE COURT: Overruled. Next --

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What was the tone of his comments?

A. The comment about “the killers”?

Q. Yes.

A. Just flippant, like it was nothing. Like, “Oh, the killers.”

Q. And that conversation lasted for approximately how long?

A. 15 seconds, I guess.

Q. Okay.

A. I mean, it just didn’t go on that long. It was just “the killers.” And I was --

Q. Did you ever pursue that conversation with anybody else?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that Vinnie?

A. Yes, it was Vinnie.

Q. Approximately how long after your conversation with Marc Schaffel was it that you had the conversation with Vinnie?

A. I raced over to the phone and picked up the phone and called him.

Q. So immediately?

A. Immediately.

Q. All right. What did you ask Vinnie?

A. “Who the heck are the killers?”

Q. What did he say?

A. He goes, “There are no killers.”

Q. Did he say anything beyond that?

A. He said that -- that they were calling him a faggot at school, and that was really it. It was just so -- it was another kid or something, I don’t know. But he just said that they were calling him a faggot at school, so….

Q. Was that the end of that conversation?

A. Pretty much.

Q. Did you have a conversation with anybody among the people who worked for Michael Jackson at that time about escape or escaping from Neverland?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. With whom did you have that conversation?

A. With Marc and Vinnie again.

Q. Okay. At the same time, or at separate times?

A. Separate times.

Q. With whom did you first speak about that subject?

A. Marc.

Q. And what did Marc say to you?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What did he say to you?

A. “I can’t talk right now. They just escaped.”

Q. Was there any further discussion with him at that point?

A. No, he just got off the phone. It was kind of ugly.

Q. You were talking to him over the telephone?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Did he make any further qualifications on that?

A. No.

Q. Did you have -- but the word “escaped” was the word he used?

A. He used “escaped.”

Q. Okay. Do you know when this conversation took place, as best you can recall?

A. Yes. I was -- my dad was -- I was taking care of my dad because he was dying of liver cancer, so I was taking care of him at his house, so I called on the phone.

Q. And his house was where?

A. In Michigan.

Q. And so your conversation was with Mr. Schaffel by telephone?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember what period of time you were tending to your father’s needs in Michigan?

A. It would have been March, the first of March, like around the 6th or 7th, something around there.

Q. The early part of March?

A. Yeah, it was the 6th. I think it was the 6th or 7th.

Q. Are those to the best of your recollection, the dates?

A. Oh, I remember. You don’t forget “escape.”

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; move to strike.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: No, I understand the content of the conversation, but the date.

THE COURT: Sustained.

THE WITNESS: Yes, the date. Sorry.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Now, did you follow up that conversation, on the question of escape, with anybody else?

A. I didn’t bring it up. I just called Vinnie.

Q. All right. Was this one of those things where you did it again immediately after?

A. Yes, I did it often, to see what the truth was.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Move to strike; nonresponsive.

THE COURT: I’ll strike the last voluntary clause.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you, in fact, call Vinnie soon after your conversation with Mr. Schaffel where the word “escaped” was used?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Did you have a conversation with Vinnie about that particular word?

A. It was just very quick.

Q. What did you ask Vinnie, and what did he tell you?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Hearsay; compound.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.

A. He essentially was panicked and said he couldn’t talk right now because the family just escaped.

Q. He said that as well?

A. Yeah, pretty much the same thing.

Q. Did you ask him for any clarification on that as well?

A. No, because I was kind of relieved.

Q. I’m sorry?

A. I was relieved.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Move to strike; nonresponsive.

THE COURT: After “No,” I’ll strike that.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. Did he offer any other commentary or -- commentary or explanation?
A. No. He just wanted to get off the phone.
Q. And did you get off the phone?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. When did you leave Neverland Valley Entertainment?
A. The beginning of March.
Q. Did you complete your contract with them?
A. Yes.
Q. Were you paid everything in accordance with your contract?
A. Yes. I received my last check on the 25th of February.
Q. And the point that you had, you had already given back to Mr. Jackson?
A. Yes.
MR. ZONEN: Thank you. I have no further questions.
Hold on just one second, Mr. Mesereau.
Excuse me. Your Honor, if I could have just one moment.
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. ZONEN: No further questions. Thank you, Your Honor.
MR. MESEREAU: May I just take a second, Your Honor?
THE COURT: Yes.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Good morning.

A. Hello.

Q. Mr. Provencio, we haven’t spoken before. My name is Tom Mesereau, and I speak for Mr. Jackson, okay?

A. Okay.

Q. Now, you referred to your taking notes in response to the prosecutor’s questions, correct?

A. Could you repeat that, please?

Q. Yes. Did you make a reference in response to one of the prosecutor’s questions to taking notes?

A. I’ve always taken notes, yes.

Q. And could you please explain what you mean by that?

A. By always taking notes?

Q. Yes.

A. I take notes -- I have been taking notes in journals since I was a teenager.

Q. And do you take notes about every phone call you make?

A. No. Not every single one.

Q. Do you take notes of some phone calls that you make?

A. Ones that I think are important.

Q. Okay. When did you first talk to any representative of the Santa Barbara sheriffs about this case?

A. When -- let’s see. That would have been, oh, gosh, a couple months after Michael’s house was raided.

Q. And that would be when, do you think?

A. That would have been 2000 -- 2004.

Q. And do you recall where that interview took place?

A. Interview?

Q. Yes. Was it an interview?

A. No, that was they came to my place.

Q. And did you talk?

A. Yeah.

Q. Was it an interview?

A. No, I just told them, “You can have whatever you want.”

Q. Did they ask you any questions?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you answer the questions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. And approximately how long was that discussion, if you know?

A. Maybe -- well, you know, I was pretty nervous. Probably 30 minutes.

Q. Did they ask you questions about Mr. Jackson?

A. Yeah. They asked me, you know, basic questions in regards to, you know, “How well do you know him?” And, “Do you have any information in regards to what we’re investigating?” or “You saw,” you know, “on the news,” or whatever.

Q. Did you tell them when you first met the Arvizo family?
A. At that meeting?
Q. Yes.
A. Did I tell them when I first met them?
Q. Yes.
A. No, not at that meeting, I don’t believe.
Q. When did you first meet the Arvizo family?
A. I never met them, other than showed Gavin the bathroom.
Q. When did you first meet them?
MR. ZONEN: Asked and answered.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When you showed Gavin the bathroom, did you meet the family?
MR. ZONEN: Objection; asked and answered
THE WITNESS: Not the family. Just Gavin.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Was Gavin the only one --
THE COURT: Just a minute.
MR. MESEREAU: I’m sorry.
THE COURT: The objection is overruled. Next question.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Was Gavin the only member of the Arvizo family that you met that day?

A. Yes.
Q. And where did you meet him?
A. Downstairs in Neverland Valley Entertainment.
Q. And “downstairs” is in the home of Marc Schaffel, true?
A. Right.
Q. Was any other member of the Arvizo family present that day, to your knowledge?
A. Yes. They were -- yes.
Q. And who were they?
A. It was -- it was that girl, Star, I think is her name, yeah. And then whoever was in the car. I couldn’t see in the car. I didn’t look in the car.
Q. Do you know approximately when that happened?
A. February.
Q. February of when?
A. Middle of February.
Q. Okay. Would that be 2003?
A. 2003.
Q. Okay. Were you making notes about the Arvizos at that point in time?
A. Yes. Because there was a slanderous thing that was said against them.
Q. Okay. And this -- the slanderous thing was said when?
A. Was -- was the first -- first time they came over.

Q. And approximately when was that?

A. February 2003.

Q. Okay. Do you know the date, approximately?

A. The middle of February I'm thinking.

Q. Was it after the Bashir documentary had aired?

A. I believe so. Possibly -- well, honestly, I won't say yes, because I know it was in February, but things are moving so quickly, so I think I'd have to tell you that I'm -- I guess I would say I'm uncertain.

Q. Did you have any reason to meet them before the Bashir documentary had aired?

A. No. I just knew they were nice people. That's what they said.

Q. I understand that. But you met them after the Bashir documentary aired, true?

A. Yes.

MR. ZONEN: Objection; assumes facts not in evidence, that he met them.

MR. MESEREAU: I'll rephrase it, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you meet Janet Arvizo after the Bashir documentary aired?

A. No.

Q. Did you meet Janet Arvizo before the Bashir documentary aired?

A. No.
Q. Didn’t you just say she’s a nice person?
A. They said she was a nice person.
Q. Did you meet Gavin Arvizo after the Bashir documentary aired?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you meet Davellin Arvizo, his sister, after the Bashir documentary aired?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever meet Davellin Arvizo?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever meet Star Arvizo?
A. Saw her.
Q. Excuse me?
A. Didn’t meet her, no.
Q. Okay. Is Gavin Arvizo the only member of the Arvizo family you ever met personally?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And that was at Mr. Schaffel’s house, correct?
A. Yes. As I pointed to the bathroom.
Q. And he was alone, to your knowledge?
A. Well, Vinnie had come in.
Q. Okay. And he was with Vinnie, right?
A. Correct.
Q. All right. Now, the conversation that you’ve described about killers --
A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- happened approximately when, to your knowledge?

A. It was soon after the second visit. So that would have been mid-February.

Q. Okay. And to your knowledge, was that after the Bashir documentary had aired?

A. In America -- I think the Bashir thing aired the 5th or 6th in America. So, yes, that would be afterwards.

Q. Okay. And is it your recollection that the discussion about so-called killers happened after you saw the Bashir documentary?

A. After I saw the Bashir documentary, did the word “killers” come into dialogue with other people and I heard it? Is that what you’re saying?

Q. Yes. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Was it your belief that the discussion about killers that you heard with Schaffel and Vinnie in some way related to the Bashir documentary?

A. Well, it would have to be, because they’re saying it, and they’re around, so that would make sense, yes.

Q. And were you taking notes about your discussions with any member of the Arvizo family?

A. I didn’t have a discussion with the Arvizo family. I showed him the bathroom. Is that what you mean?

Q. Did you take notes about any discussion you had with Schaffel concerning the Arvizos?

A. Yes. He called them “stupid Mexicans,” so I wrote it down.

Q. Did you write that down?

A. Yeah, it’s in my notes.

Q. Okay. And did you write down any notes about what Vinnie said about killers?

A. Well, he said there were no killers.

Q. Did you write that down in your notes?

A. I believe so.

Q. Would you write your notes down shortly after you heard these discussions?

A. Yeah. Typically -- well, this is the notebook. So I would write it -- if I had the notebook in my hand, I would write it and then -- or as soon as I could go and write something, I would write it. I was concerned that something might be wrong with the family.

Q. And because of your wonderful concern for the family, you were writing notes down?

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Because of your concern for the family, you were taking contemporaneous notes, true?

A. For my concern for the family, I took notes, because I wanted to see what was happening.

Q. Okay. That was your only purpose, correct?

A. Well, I thought it was fishy. And so much was moving so quickly, that if I didn’t write things down, I wouldn’t remember things, so I wrote them down as they were happening.

Q. And your only purpose was a concern for the family, true?

A. Well, yeah. Because I just wanted to know what was happening. Something fishy was going on.

Q. No, I understand, I understand. And because something fishy was going on, you thought you would just take notes of everything that was happening, right?

A. I took notes because I knew things were moving so quickly, that unless I kept track of what was going on -- I wasn’t sure what was happening with this family, because people were all saying different things.

Q. I understand. And have you ever discussed the possibility of writing a book based on your notes?

A. No.

Q. When you first met the sheriffs, did you tell them you had taken notes?

A. At first, maybe, probably not. I didn’t want to get involved really. 8800

Q. I see. And did you continue to take notes about what was going on around Mr. Jackson?

A. Around Mr. Jackson?

Q. Yes.

A. I take notes anyways. Of everything. For my life; I mean, for who I am. It helps me become a better person.

Q. And you do that every day?

A. Not every single day.

Q. Every other day?

A. Couple times a week.

Q. Have you at any point, when you wrote notes about this investigation, gone backward and wrote about what happened, say, months before?

A. No.

Q. Have all of your notes been taken about the time you described these events in the notes?

A. Yeah. That’s why they seem kind of scrambled, because I just frantically write and I never meant for anybody to read them. They were just for me to understand.

Q. And you wrote notes about the word “killers,” right?

A. Yeah. I believe I did, yes.

Q. You wrote notes about how you thought the Arvizos used to be good people, right?

A. Yes. But those were their words, so I was just writing down what they had said.

Q. Okay. And when you wrote those notes, you thought the Arvizos used to be good people, right?

A. Well, yeah, until they called them a crack whore, called her a crack whore.

Q. I understand your point.

A. Yeah.

Q. When you wrote the notes that you thought they were good people --

A. Oh, I see what you're saying.

Q. Yes.

A. Oh. I wrote the notes because verbiage started changing around the family. And so I started writing notes during the time, and then afterwards I started writing notes, you know, still.

Q. And you consider your notes to be accurate, right?

A. Well, they were for me, yes.

Q. Yeah. And you thought they were -- everything you wrote down is honest and truthful, right?

A. For --

Q. Yeah.

A. Because I was writing them for me, not for other people to read.

Q. You were just writing them for yourself for therapy, is that the idea?

MR. ZONEN: That's argumentative and I'll object.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And you never went backward months and wrote down --

A. I wrote them --

MR. ZONEN: Object as asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Mr. Provencio, isn’t it true that in your notebook, you claim the word “killers” was used on February 1st, 2003?

A. If that’s in my notes, yes.

Q. Sir, that’s before the Bashir documentary ever aired. Did you know that?

A. I just wrote it. I heard -- if I heard it, I wrote it. I mean, that’s what I did.

Q. Do you remember writing that word down and --

A. I remember writing it down.

Q. On February 1st, 2003?

A. If it’s in my notes, I wrote it, yeah.

Q. Do you remember that you put the date “February 1st, 2003”?

A. No, I don’t remember that.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection to look at your own notes?

A. Sure, if you want me to.

Q. Sure, please.

A. Okay. Yes, here it is.

Q. Did you write, “Are these killers?” and date 8803 it February 1st, 2003?

A. Well, actually, if you look at it, it’s a different paragraph, so I don’t really know when that was written specifically. I mean -- because the top part is February the 1st.

Q. And what date do you have above those words, sir?

A. The first paragraph, I have February the 1st. The second paragraph, if you -- if you take a look at the entire page, there’s all kinds of information on there that either has a date or it doesn’t have a date. These notes were intended as, like, scribbled memory. So parts of it, unless I have a date right there, then I don’t know if that second paragraph is exactly when I wrote it, because I wrote these notes for me.

Q. What is the date above those words?

A. The date above the first paragraph?

Q. Yes.

A. Is February 1st. The second paragraph has no date.

Q. Okay. Well, let’s look at the first paragraph.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say, “I thought they used to be good people,” correct?

A. Correct.

Q. You’re talking about the Arvizos?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. You'd never met them on February 1st, 2003, right?

A. No. They said they were good people, like I said before.

Q. Did you write down, "I thought they used to be good people" under February 1st, 2003?

A. Yes.

Q. You hadn't met them, correct?

A. I hadn't met them, but that's what they said.

Q. Did you write under February 1st, 2003, "Mom's flipping out about something"?

A. About February 1st, 2003?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. You hadn't met the mom, correct?

A. Never met her.

Q. Did you write under February 1st, 2003, "Family-kids"?

A. Yes.

Q. You hadn't met the family or the kids on February 1st, 2003, correct?

A. That's not what it means.

Q. And write below that first paragraph is where you wrote the words, "Who are these killers?" Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And after that, you wrote, “Nobody but press are calling,” correct?

A. Right.

Q. Okay.

A. Because that was after the transcript on the 24th.

Q. You don’t write down the 24th there, do you?

A. No. You’re right.

Q. Okay. Now, you’ve been taking notes about various conversations you’ve had with people you think are associated with this case, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And at one point you were recording conversations with various people you think are associated with this case, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. How many people’s conversations do you think you recorded of people you think are associated with this case, sir?

A. Three, four.

Q. A lot more than that, wasn’t it?

A. Well, if you count my grandma. She’s on -- you know, but it comes on automatically sometimes.

Q. I understand that. Let’s look at Ms. Milofsky.

A. Okay.

Q. How many times have you recorded phone conversations with Miss Milofsky?

A. A few times. Quite a few times.
Q. How many?
A. I don’t know. Quite a few times.
Q. Can you give an estimate?
A. No, just -- I can tell you it’s quite a few times.
Q. Ten?
A. Probably a little more than that.
Q. 20?
A. Probably -- yeah, something like that, probably.
Q. 30?
A. No. 30, come on. 10, 15. Something like that.
Q. Okay. How about Vinnie? How many times have you recorded phone conversations with --
A. A few times, yeah.
Q. How many?
A. Less than ten probably.
Q. How about Schaffel?
A. Quite a few times.
Q. How many do you think?
A. Probably 10, 20, probably.
Q. 10 or 20?
A. Probably ten. I would say ten.
Q. So now we’re up to about 40 you’ve recorded, correct?
A. Well, yeah, I was cooperating with the 8807 police.

Q. Yeah.

A. Law enforcement.

Q. You were doing it before then, weren't you?

A. Was I doing it before that?

Q. Yeah.

A. With -- cooperating with the police?

Q. You were recording people before you started cooperating with the police, were you not?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. You sure?

A. I'm pretty sure.

Q. Did you go to the police at some point and say, "I recorded people"?

A. Oh, I didn't -- did I go to the police?

Q. Yes.

A. Say that question one more time.

Q. Did you ever go to any representative of the sheriff's department and say, "I've recorded people's conversations"?

A. Yes, later on.

Q. Yeah. And then you agreed to keep recording at the request of the sheriffs, true?

A. Yes. For law enforcement.

Q. Yes. How many do you think -- how many phone conversations with people associated with this case do you think you recorded before you revealed that fact to the police?

A. Say that one more time. I’m sorry.
Q. Sure. Maybe I’m not clear.
How many phone conversations with people associated with this case do you think you recorded before you told any representative of the sheriffs about your recordings?
A. So how many people or how many times?
Q. Well, let’s start with people, yes.
A. Probably like four or five people. Yeah, four people.
Q. And how many times?
A. Well, quite a few times. You know, I felt there was something wrong, so I -- I was, like, everybody should work with law enforcement. I did it.
Q. I understand. But you were doing it before you worked with law enforcement, were you not?
A. No. I did it after.
Q. Did you record anyone’s phone conversation associated with this case before you went to law enforcement and told them about it?
A. Before I went --
MR. ZONEN: I’ll object as vague as to when he went to law enforcement and told them about it.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When did you first tell anyone associated with law enforcement, Mr. Provencio, that you were recording telephone calls?

A. Well, they had asked me if I was willing to cooperate with law enforcement. So I told them later on that I had -- had did, you know, what they had requested.

Q. Did you ever record anyone’s call before you got authorization from law enforcement? Anyone.

A. Not to my memory.

Q. You ever recall Schaffel -- did you ever record Schaffel’s calls before you went to law enforcement?

A. Not that I can remember.

Q. Are you sure?

A. I’m pretty sure. I believe I bought the recorder after, after the police -- I had contact with the police.

Q. Now, you’ve testified you were listening in on phone calls --

A. Correct.

Q. -- of Mr. Jackson and Mr. Schaffel, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. You were listening in on phone calls without them knowing about it, true?

A. That’s true.

Q. Okay. And you were doing this because you were so concerned that something wrong might be going on; is that correct?

A. Well, it’s not that sarcastic, but I was concerned about the family.

Q. Right. Right. But you didn't even know the family, correct?

A. You didn't need to. Something was fishy. Something was going wrong.

Q. I see. And did you call the police immediately and say, "Something wrong is going on"?

A. No, because nobody would believe me. So I --

Q. You just kept working for Schaffel, listening to phone calls, hearing what wrong was going on, and never called the police, right?

A. I was trying to figure out what was going on.

Q. Okay. And when do you think you first spoke to any representative of the sheriffs?

A. It was a couple months, I guess, after Michael's place was raided.

Q. Okay. And Michael's place was raided approximately when?

A. Gosh. Gosh, I know I saw it on T.V. I know the police came to me the first of the year. So it had to have been sometime --

Q. Was it maybe November 2004, something like that?

A. Maybe. Yeah.

MR. SANGER: 2003.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: 2003?

A. Oh, yeah, it was around Thanksgiving, wasn't it? It was around Thanksgiving that the place was raided.

Q. But you’re writing in your notes in February of 2003 --

A. Right.

Q. -- your concern about killers and disparaging remarks, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. You waited from February to November to do a good deed and go to the police, right?

A. No. It wasn’t like that. It was -- it was basically there was no -- they escaped, so I didn’t need to. I was relieved because I didn’t need to do anything.

Q. Did you watch them escape, sir?

A. No. They told me they escaped.

Q. Did you watch them escape?

A. No.

Q. Did you know that Janet Arvizo got a body wax that day?

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object. Objection. Irrelevant; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

BAILIFF CORTEZ: Microphone’s off, sir.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When you heard they escaped, did you call the police and say, “These people are being held”?

A. No, I was relieved at least this portion of this train wreck was over.

Q. In other words, they'd been held against their will, they had escaped, so you had no need to call the police at that point, correct?

MR. ZONEN: Object as argumentative. And asked and answered.

THE COURT: It's a compound question. Sustained.

MR. ZONEN: That too.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Let me try and ascertain your state of knowledge, sir. When you say this escape took place --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- you assumed they had been held against their will, true?

A. They said there were signs up at Neverland.

Q. Did you assume they had been held against their will?

A. True.

Q. Did you assume they had escaped from confinement?

A. Well, why would you use the word "escape"? So the answer is true.

Q. Did you call the police right away?

A. No, they had escaped. I didn't need to.

Q. How long did you keep working for Schaffel after this escape?

A. I was already gone.

Q. Did you stay in contact with Mr. Schaffel after this escape?

A. Yes.

Q. On a regular basis?

A. Well, not when -- the month that I buried my dad.

Q. Did you stay in contact with Mr. Schaffel on a regular basis after you thought the Arvizos had escaped?

A. Yes.

Q. How often would you talk to Mr. Schaffel after you claim the Arvizos escaped?

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Compound and argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Okay. Can you ask again?

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Yes.

THE COURT: I’ll have the court reporter read it back.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: Often. I mean, you know, I would talk to him quite a bit.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You talked to Mr. Schaffel a lot between February 2003 and when you went to the sheriffs in late 2003, correct?

A. Late 2003?

Q. Yes.

A. Do you mean 2004, when -- after Michael’s place was raided?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. You --

A. We would chitchat, but the chitchat was just that. Chitchat. Nothing real --

Q. Did you have any ongoing business relationship with Schaffel during the year of 2003?

A. Oh, only that I went to -- there to visit him and Michael at Gary, Indiana.

Q. And when was that?

A. It was -- I believe it was in the summer. I believe it was the summer.

Q. How many months after you thought this escape took place did you go to Gary, Indiana, with Schaffel?

A. About five months. I think it was about five months.

Q. Did you think you were traveling with a criminal at that point?

A. I was just trying to get over this train wreck. That’s why I gave my point back. I was over this part of my life, and I just, you know, thought now that the family’s gone and maybe everything’s going to get better for everybody.

Q. Uh-huh. And did you ever learn that they went back and escaped a few more times? 8815

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever learn of any other escapes after the one that you have just articulated?

A. I only knew of the one escape on the first of March.

Q. Did you ever hear anything about the Arvizos returning to Neverland after the escape that you’ve described?

MR. ZONEN: Objection. No evidence that it’s that escape. Argumentative.

THE COURT: It’s vague as to date.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. You’ve indicated that in your mind an escape took place, correct?

A. That’s what they said.

Q. And you believed it, right?

A. Well, yeah. Nobody uses those words.

Q. And you were relieved that they had escaped, right?

A. I was just happy that it was over.

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Objection. Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When did you think this escape took place?

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Beyond the scope of his information, personal knowledge. Foundation.

MR. MESEREAU: I’ll withdraw it.

Q. Did you know when this escape took place?

A. I only know what they told me.

Q. And when did -- did they tell you when the escape took place?

A. They didn’t tell me when they escaped. That they couldn’t talk because they had escaped.

Q. When do you think this escape had taken place?

A. Well, I tried to get that information, but they told me on, like, March the 6th.

Q. And when were you relieved that an escape had taken place?

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Irrelevant and argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You claim you were relieved that the family had escaped, true?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Okay. Will you ask it again? Could you ask it again?

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Yeah. I’m trying to find out when you felt relief that the Arvizos had escaped from Neverland.

A. Well, I was relieved at that point because that meant that -- that that part -- portion of this train wreck was going to be over.

Q. No, I understand.
A. That’s what I thought.
Q. When --
A. That would have been the first week of March, like March 6.
Q. Okay. So around March 6th you thought they had escaped from Neverland, correct?
A. That’s what they said.
Q. Okay. Did you ever check to see if the Arvizos were at Neverland in early March?
A. I -- no.
Q. Do you know if the Arvizos were at Neverland in early March?
A. No.
Q. Okay. Have you ever spoken to Janet Arvizo at any time?
A. No.
Q. Okay. Now, you took notes about a need for a Debbie Rowe interview, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. And when did you learn there was any thought about a Debbie Rowe interview?
A. Well, that was the first time I was hearing about it.
Q. When?
A. I guess February the 1st, I guess. Well, not “I guess.” It was February the 1st when I was listening to the conference call.

Q. Before the Bashir documentary aired, right?

A. Yeah, because we had received the transcript on the 24th.

Q. Okay. And when, in your mind, were they planning a Debbie Rowe interview?

A. I didn’t know. I really didn’t know until like maybe a day or two beforehand.

Q. Before the interview?

A. Before the interview took place there, I really didn’t know exactly when it was going to be.

Q. And when did the interview take place, if you know?

A. I think it was that Thursday or something. That Thursday or -- I was going to say the 5th, maybe the 5th or 6th of February, something around there.

Q. Do you remember writing in your notes about a Debbie Rowe interview and dating it February 2nd, 2003?

A. Yeah.

Q. Did you know about a Debbie Rowe interview on February 2nd, 2003?

A. Well, they were talking about it, but I don’t know if -- I don’t believe I wrote down what day it was going to be.

Q. Do you want to check your notes?

A. Oh. Okay.

Okay, what about it?

Q. Didn't you write down the words "Debbie Rowe interview" on February 2nd, 2003?

A. Oh, I'm at the wrong one. I'm sorry. Hang on one second.

It appears, again -- you're looking at one that's dated, correct? Correct?

Q. It says, in the middle of the top of the page, "February 2nd, 2003," correct?

A. Okay. I'm looking for that one.

Oh, okay. With the scripts, yes.

Q. You see that? First you say, "Two scripts," right?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Slash, "questions and answers," right?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And then you say, "Debbie Rowe interview," right?

A. Right, question mark.

Q. There had been no discussion about a Debbie Rowe interview on February 2nd, 2003, had there?

A. They were talking about it.

Q. Where did that discussion take place?

A. Where did that -- on the phone.

Q. Yes.

A. On the phone.

Q. And where were you?

A. I was there on the phone listening.
Q. Where is “there”?
A. Oh, at Neverland Valley Entertainment.
Q. Okay. Is that a conversation you claim Mr. Jackson was involved in?
A. Well, yeah.
Q. And you say here, “Rough drafts on Marc’s computer,” correct?
A. Correct.
Q. Are you telling the Court that there were rough drafts of the Debbie Rowe interview on February 2nd, 2003?
A. There was an outline of something they wanted -- he wanted to do something, so -- I -- I -- you know what, I should say that “rough drafts” might not be an accurate thing to say about that, but there was -- there was something there.
Q. Sir, you went back and wrote these notes because you wanted to be involved in this case, didn’t you?
A. No. God, no. And ruin my career?
Q. It just happens all the dates are wrong?
A. Well, not all the dates are wrong.
MR. ZONEN: I’ll object as argumentative.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Now, the prosecutor asked you about your relationships with Vinnie and Schaffel, right?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Did you respond truthfully about all your relationships with Schaffel and Vinnie?

A. Yeah.

Q. Were you ever involved in a corporation with Schaffel and Vinnie?

A. Oh, yeah. We started an LLC, I think it was.

Q. Really. When was that?

A. Oh, yeah. It was with Marc, yes. It was an LLC that basically, if we wanted to start something else, we could do it.

Q. Well, let's explore that a little bit.

A. Okay.

Q. Please say what an LLC is.

A. Limited liability company, corporation.

Q. And who did you form that company with?

A. With Vinnie. I thought it was with Frank, too, but maybe it wasn't. I think it was Vinnie and Marc definitely.

Q. And when did you form that limited liability company with Vinnie, Marc, and you think Frank?

A. Well -- well, I think Frank, but I'm not sure. I'm not positive, because Vinnie did it on the computer.

Q. Okay.

A. At the office, he did it on the computer.

Q. And when was this? 8822

A. Gosh, I don’t remember, to tell you the truth.

Q. Can you kind of estimate the year, Mr. Provencio?

A. I would say it was 2003. Early 2003.

Q. Any reason why you didn’t say that in your response to the prosecutor’s questions?

A. I don’t remember that question. I’m sorry.

Q. Let me rephrase it. Is there any reason why, when you were asked when you met Vinnie and Schaffel by the prosecutor, you never talked about the company you had set up with those individuals?

A. Nothing ever happened with it. So to answer your question, no, I didn’t mention it.

Q. What was the name of your limited liability company that you set up with Schaffel and Vinnie?

A. I don’t remember. It was so off the cuff, it was just something we did on the computer. You can do it on the computer in like ten minutes, and you mail in a check and that was it. So it wasn’t really something that -- I probably didn’t pay enough attention to it, to tell you the truth.

Q. What was the name of your company that you set up with Schaffel and Vinnie?

A. I don’t remember the name of it.

Q. Was it called Steal the Stage, LLC?

A. Yeah. It was, yeah.

Q. And where did that company operate out of, 8823

Mr. Provencio?

A. That operated out of nowhere. It was registered, but there was no operations from it.

Q. Where was it registered?

A. It was registered on the computer at Marc’s house.

Q. It was registered in New Jersey, was it not?

A. Oh, maybe it was. Maybe he did register it in New Jersey.

Q. Okay. And what was the purpose of the company?

A. To explore other options outside of, you know, being on the coattails of Michael or anything like that.

Q. What other options were you exploring?

A. Well, possibly we could do things with -- like an American Idol, but something different. That’s what it was, yeah. I remember that now, yeah.

Q. Michael Jackson was not part of that company, was he?

A. No.

Q. Did you have a board of directors?

A. No.

Q. Did you have shareholders?

A. We did it on the computer in 15 minutes, so, no.

Q. I understand. And it was filed in the State of New Jersey, correct?

A. He must have did it in the State of New Jersey.
Q. I see. Did you ever look at any papers involving that company?
A. No, he just said, “This is what I did,” and, “I just have it set up.” Like a kid could do it. I mean, it’s just like nothing.
Q. I understand. Just set up a company like a kid, right?
MR. ZONEN: Objection; argumentative.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Does the company still exist?
A. Um, you know what? I don’t know. To tell you the truth, I don’t know.
Q. Did you have meetings with Schaffel and Vinnie --
A. No, I don’t think it exists. No, I don’t think it exists.
Q. Did you have meetings with Schaffel and Vinnie about this company?
A. No.
Q. When did you start recording conversations for the sheriff’s department as part of this investigation?
A. Soon after they -- that I agreed to work with law enforcement. So it would have been a little bit after they came and served a search warrant, that I agreed to.

Q. And when was that?

A. A couple months after Michael’s place had been raided. A couple months after November.

Q. And do you think that was what year, 2004?

A. Yeah, I think it was 2004.

Q. Okay. And between February 1st, 2003, when you were so concerned about the family, and that meeting with the police, you never called the police at any time about Mr. Schaffel, Vinnie or anybody, right?

A. You know what, Mr. Mesereau, I didn’t want anybody really to get in trouble. I really didn’t. I thought -- I thought it was -- they had gone, and that possibly and hopefully this problem was just gone, too. So --

Q. Okay. Well, when did the escape take place in relation to the interview of Debbie Rowe?

A. Oooh, I think I already answered that, but the -- they said “escape” in the first week of March.

Q. When did the Maury Povich documentary air, if you know?

A. I think it was -- I think it was the third week of February.

Q. The third week of February?

A. I think so.

Q. Okay.
A. Yeah, I think so.
Q. So it aired before the --
A. We watched it at Neverland Valley Entertainment. That's where we watched it.
Q. By the way, did you ever find out how the Arvizos escaped from Neverland, meaning who took them home?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever learn it was a Michael Jackson employee?
MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object as exceeding the scope of this witness's knowledge.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Have you ever had a discussion with anybody about how the Arvizos left Neverland?
A. Not that I can remember. I -- I know that they had left. I was relieved. And so I kind of figured that that's -- that's where it was.
Q. And no one's ever told you a Michael Jackson employee took them home?
A. I think I heard that on the news.
Q. But never discussed that with the sheriffs, right?
A. That -- that what?
Q. That a Michael Jackson employee had taken --
A. Oh, I heard that.

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as exceeding the scope of this witness’s knowledge. No foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled. The question was, “But never discussed that with the sheriffs, right?” And then he asked for clarification, “What?” So it’s in your --

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. I guess -- let me withdraw the question, Your Honor.

Q. To date, you’ve never had a discussion with any representative of the sheriff’s department about who helped the Arvizos escape, right?

A. I -- no. I inquired about it, yes.

Q. When did you inquire about it?

A. Probably -- oh, probably just recently. Probably in the last month. Because I had a lot of unanswered questions, and I was just curious in nature.

Q. Those questions that have been just sort of sitting in there for a couple years, right?

A. Well, not a couple years, but --

MR. ZONEN: That’s argumentative and I’ll object.

MR. MESEREAU: I’ll withdraw it.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Now, in your notes, and I’m referring to the February 1st, 2003, entry, you say, “Mom’s flipping out about something,” right?

A. Uh-huh.
Q. Is that Ms. Arvizo you’re talking about?
A. I’m assuming -- yes, yes, yes.
Q. Did you think she was flipping out on February 1st, 2003?
A. Well, she was kind of strange.
Q. But you hadn’t met her.
A. I know. They were telling me she was strange.
Q. Did you think she was flipping out on February 1st, 2003, when you made your entry?
MR. ZONEN: Objection. Lack of foundation and irrelevant.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: Would you state your question again? I’m sorry.
THE COURT: I’ll have the court reporter read it back.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
(Record read.)
THE WITNESS: Yes, they had said that.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And did you get your information from Schaffel?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you know whether or not Schaffel had ever met them on February 1st, 2003?
A. He said he never met them, but then I reminded him that they came to the house, and then he goes, “Oh, yeah.”

Q. They came to the house before February 1st, 2003?

A. Oh, no, they didn’t come to the house before February 1st.

Q. Well, you wrote down in your, as you described, your accurate notebook --

A. Uh-huh. My notebook.

Q. -- that “Mom’s flipping out about something” on February 1st, 2003, right?

A. Yeah, February, that is true. And it has a question mark, because I really don’t know what she’s flipping out about.

Q. You haven’t met her at that point, true?

A. I never met her.

Q. Schaffel hadn’t met her either, right?

A. I don’t know.

MR. ZONEN: Objection; lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Actually, I’ll leave the question and answer in. He answered he didn’t know.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And you say on February 1st, 2003, in the first paragraph that you identify with that, “I thought they used to be good people,” right?

A. Correct. That’s what they said.

Q. But you say, “I thought they used to be good people.”

A. Yeah, because I’m asking myself a question. You know, are these -- because, you know, Michael had taken care of this person with cancer. You know, oh, they’re good people. They’re gracious. And so I’m -- I’m hearing some verbiage starting to change around them, but I’m not really sure -- I’m not really certain what’s exactly happening, so I’m trying to kind of get kind of a clarity around that. What is really going on here? You know, it was kind of like my general question. If you look through my notes, I’m asking myself a lot of questions, because I don’t know the answers. And I just keep -- keep asking, you know, because it’s I think what people do.

Q. And you’re doing this for yourself, you say, right?

A. Yeah, because I don’t know what’s going on.

Q. Okay. All right. Now, to your knowledge, the Bashir documentary didn’t air until February 3rd, 2003, right?

A. The one in the United States or the one in Great Britain?

Q. Well, which one aired first, to your knowledge?

A. Great Britain.

Q. When did that air?

A. It was -- it was probably the 3rd or -- I believe the 3rd or something like that. 3rd or 4th. Because we got the transcript on the 24th, so then -- then came the British one, and then right on top of that, I think it was two days later, came the one in North America.

Q. To your knowledge, was the Florida trip planned in response to the airing of the Bashir documentary?

A. Was it planned?

Q. Yes.

A. I know that they were going to fly -- well, according to my notes and what I remember hearing, that they were going to come down to Florida. I guess.

Q. And to your knowledge, was that supposed to be a response to the airing of the Bashir documentary?

A. Everything was a response. Push and pull every single day.

Q. Okay. Starting when, Mr. Provencio?

A. Starting on January the 24th, to my -- the best of my recollection. Things -- as soon as we got the -- got the transcript, things were going cuckoo.

Q. And that's when you wrote down that the Arvizos were having trouble, right?

A. What, on the 24th?

Q. Sure.

A. No. Are you saying did I write it down and you’re seeing it?

Q. When did you think the Arvizos were having trouble with the press?

A. I thought possibly -- well, the phone calls were coming in, so the 24th -- the 24th we get the transcript, and then all of a sudden the phone calls started coming in. They just started coming in. So I felt that possibly -- do you want me to explain or not?

Q. Yeah, please explain.

A. I felt that possibly there could be a problem, because you have this poor family and you’ve got somebody who’s very wealthy. I’ve been in entertainment enough to know that, you know, that could potentially be kind of a bad situation for both people. And so I was starting to pay attention, because I had read the transcript.

Q. How did you know they were poor?

A. You know what? I didn’t know for sure, so they told me they were poor, that they were ghetto.

Q. The Arvizos did?

A. No, Marc and -- Marc and Vinnie.

Q. Okay. Okay. And this is approximately when, Marc tells you they’re poor people?

A. Well, yeah, that they leave in East L.A., that they live in a dump.

Q. When was this?

A. Probably in -- probably had to be in January sometime. Yeah, the late part of January, to the best of my recollection.

Q. Marc knew nothing about these people in January, did he?

A. I don’t know.

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as to lack of foundation.

THE COURT: He answered he doesn’t know. Next question.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember telling Kathryn Milofsky, “Marc is putting this whole thing together. He wants to be the kingpin”?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. What were you referring to?

A. He -- I was referring to a phone call that he had made to Dieter at -- at the ranch, that, you know, “This is what you need to do.” He was trying to get ingratiated back with Michael.

Q. And approximately when were you starting this process?

A. As soon as he got the transcript. As soon as he got the transcript.

Q. That’s approximately when?

A. January the 24th.

Q. Okay.

A. Or soon after that.

Q. So when you referred to Marc putting this whole thing together, he wants to be a kingpin, you're talking about sometime after January 24th, 2003, correct?

A. Actually, I remember that conversation with her, and I'm referring to the phone call, because -- because I'm saying he wants to be the kingpin, he wants to be in charge of things, and he wants to look good with Michael, like most people do.

Q. Okay. Do you remember telling Ms. Milofsky -- excuse me, let me rephrase that. Did you ever communicate with Ms. Milofsky by e-mail?

A. Oh, yeah, frequently.

Q. Did you turn those e-mails over to the sheriffs?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember telling Kathryn Milofsky, "I would always" --

A. They took my computer. Oh, I'm sorry.

Q. Okay. Do you remember telling Kathryn Milofsky in an e-mail, "I would always say that MJ had no idea what he was up to," referring to Schaffel?

A. Well, not all -- okay, go ahead, I'm sorry. Repeat that.

Q. Do you remember saying that?

A. Yes.

Q. Words to the effect that, "Michael Jackson had no idea what Schaffel was up to"? Do you remember telling that to Milofsky?

A. Of the total scope. You’ve got to remember the complete conversation. The total scope of everything, yes.

Q. Do you remember saying that?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Do you remember telling Milofsky Michael Jackson was unaware of what Schaffel was up to?

A. In his totality, his other situations, maybe his past and things like that.

Q. Okay. That’s what you were referring to, without explaining it, correct?

A. Well, I mean, there’s a whole conversation happening, so that’s just one piece of a conversation.

Q. Okay.

A. But that Michael and him were business people, but the totality of the conversation was -- was that, you know, there were other things Marc was doing --

Q. Right.

A. -- that probably Michael didn’t know about it.

Q. But you said that right after you talked to Ms. Milofsky about the hiding of the Arvizos; correct?

A. I’d have to -- I don’t know. I’d have to look. There’s a zillion e-mails.

Q. Did you ever tell Milofsky, “I saw him give them money to take them shopping”?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were referring to Schaffel, true?

A. Yes. Schaffel and Vinnie.

Q. Schaffel and Vinnie gave the Arvizos money so they could go shopping, right?

A. Correct.

Q. Do you know how much money they gave the Arvizos so they could go shopping?

A. No. I just saw an envelope with money in it, and then Vinnie had to sign a receipt for it.

Q. Did you ever go shopping with them at any time?

A. Oh, God, no.

Q. Where were you when they were shopping?

A. I stayed put. I wasn’t going to go anywhere near that disaster. I was already close enough.

Q. Where are you staying put?

A. Well, the first time, where -- are you talking about the first time he gave them money and I saw it?

Q. Sure.

A. I was in the office. And the Arvizos came over and they parked in that four-door whatever. Vinnie came in. Gavin came in to use the rest room. Stuart was downstairs. And I just pointed to the bathroom. And then Vinnie went upstairs and got some money and signed for a receipt.

Q. And at this particular point in time, you thought something was wrong about this, right?

A. Well, it was the conversation, because I said, “Well, what’s going on?” And he said -- I said, “Why are you,” you know, “taking them shopping? This doesn’t make any sense.” See, none of this made any sense.

And he said, “Do you honestly think I’d take those stupid people shopping?” He goes, “Those stupid Mexicans shopping? I’m just trying to get receipts.”

So it was ugly. It was kind of ugly.

Q. And you were in the house when Schaffel told you this?

A. Yeah.

Q. Did you call the police?

A. No, I didn’t know what was going on yet. I didn’t know what was going on.

Q. But you suspected something was wrong, true?

A. Well, you know, you know when something’s not right. And you just -- and you’re paying attention, like anybody would.

Q. So you paid attention, you followed your suspicions wherever they took you and waited till the following year to go to the police, right?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember telling Ms. Milofsky that, “Schaffel made a lot of money off Michael, but I don’t think Michael knows how much money was made off of him”?
A. Yes.
Q. And were you telling the truth when you said that?
A. Everybody was making money, yeah.
Q. Off of Michael, right?
A. With and off of Michael.
Q. Okay.
A. Because that needs to be clear. There’s --
Q. And your feeling was that Michael didn’t know what kind of money people were making off of him, true?
A. Well, I -- yes, that was true. I would say that’s true. Everybody seemed to have different stories, so I just kind of -- I said what I felt was the truth.
Q. Okay. Do you remember telling Vinnie in a conversation you recorded where you were speaking to him that, “All fingers point to Marc”?
A. Yes, Marc as a ringleader.
Q. That’s what you said to Vinnie, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Were you working for Marc at the time?

A. At the time of what?

Q. You were recording conversations with Vinnie.

A. No.

Q. Were you in contact with Marc at the time you were recording conversations with Vinnie?

A. Yes.

Q. How often would you talk to Marc during the time you were recording conversations with Vinnie?

A. How often would I talk to Marc?

Q. Yes.

A. Gosh, I don't know. Your answer is, "I don't know."

Q. You said at one point Schaffel was fired, right?

A. Yes, in November.

Q. And then you said Schaffel -- I don't mean to put words in your mouth, but Schaffel kept trying to be involved with Mr. Jackson?

A. That's correct. Everybody does, from what I witnessed.

Q. And when you say everybody was trying to be involved with Mr. Jackson, who are you referring to?

A. Well, Ronald, Dieter, Marc. It just seemed like they just kissed his butt all the time, so, yeah.

Q. And did you have a business relationship with Ronald anytime?

A. With Ronald?

Q. Yes.

A. No.

Q. Did you have a business relationship with Dieter at any time?

A. No. I mean, we had meetings with him, but, no, I didn’t ever, like, hawk one of their products or anything like that.

Q. How many meetings do you think you had with Dieter?

A. Two.

Q. How many do you think you had with Ronald?

A. The two. They were both there.

Q. Now, how many conversations do you think you’ve had on the phone with Michael Jackson?

A. Conversations?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, they called my house like two or three times, and we talked about “What More Can I Give?”

Q. Two or three conversations with Michael Jackson?

A. Well, and then the meetings at The Beverly Hills Hotel.

Q. Okay.

A. And The Hilton. And then in the studio.

Q. All right. On the phone?

A. But it was always business. No, not on the phone. In person and on the phone. 8841

Q. How many times do you think you've ever spoken to Michael Jackson on the phone?

A. Oh. If he's calling the office? Or if he's -- having a conversation like, "Hey, how are you doing? Do you want to go see a car show or something?"

Q. How many times do you think you have spoken to Michael Jackson on the phone?

A. A couple times. A dozen, I guess.

Q. A dozen?

A. Well, I mean -- I say, "How are you doing?" He says, "Fine." He's always very polite. And -- you know. And on the phone, probably -- they called me twice at my home. I would say, you know, for knowing for sure that we had conversations on the phone, strictly on the phone, would probably -- I would say twice.

Q. Okay.

A. Everything else was just chitchat.

Q. How many times do you think you've met Mr. Jackson in person?

A. 10, 12 times. And it was always business.

Q. And were --

A. Except for Gary, Indiana.

Q. Where did these meetings take place?

A. Oh, in the studio, at the hotel.

Q. Okay. Now, which hotel are you talking about?

A. The Beverly Hills Hotel and then The Universal Hilton.

Q. Were you with Schaffel every time?

A. Oh, yes. The first time was with Ali and then it was just Schaffel or Marc.

Q. For how long a period of time were you in business with Schaffel?

A. For the duration of 2001 to 2003 when I ended my contract and, you know, essentially when I got my last check on the 25th of February.

Q. You got your last check from Neverland Valley Entertainment on February 25th, 2003?

A. Yes, I believe so.

Q. Did you do any kind of work for Schaffel after that date?

A. Oh, he asked me -- I have a pickup truck, so he asked me if we could pick up some stones from someplace. But that wasn’t work. I wasn’t compensated. I just did it.

Q. What stones are you talking about?

A. Stones for his house, just like bags of stones.

Q. Approximately when was this?

A. I was going to -- I think that summer. It was that summer. So it was 2003, summer.

Q. Summer of 2003?

A. He just asked me for a favor, and I just said, “Yeah, okay,” whatever.

Q. And you helped him pick up some stones for his house in the summer of 2003?
A. I think. I believe so.
Q. Was that after your so-called escape?
A. After my so-called escape?
MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as sarcastic and argumentative. Also his “so-called escape.”
THE COURT: It’s sustained.
MR. MESEREAU: Withdraw it.
Q. Was that after the escape --
A. Yes, that was.
Q. -- that concerned you so much?
A. That concerned me so much.
Q. Yes.
A. After I was relieved that the family was just gone and blah-blah-blah, yeah.
Q. Okay. Before Mr. Schaffel asked you to help him with some stones on his house, you were in constant communication with him, true?
A. Chitchat. Chitchat.
Q. “Chitchat” meaning what?
A. Nothing really of substance. Just -- just, you know, something -- “Hey, how you doing?” “What’s going on?” “Oh, that sounds great.” And then just be off the phone. Really nothing of substance. There was occasional, like, more conversation, but nothing really of substance.
Q. The corporation that you had formed with 8844

Schaffel and Vinnie was still in existence, was it not?

A. I don’t know, tell you the truth. I don’t know. I thought it was all closed down. So -- I thought it was like -- we did it, and then for a -- I didn’t really put any weight in it. I just thought, “Okay, if a project comes along and we’re going to it, we’ll do it.” But nothing happened, so I just didn’t put any weight in it.

And then Vinnie had told me that he had closed it for -- I think he closed it for tax purposes. I think that’s what he said.

Q. And when was that?

A. Geez. Tell you the truth, I don’t remember.

Q. When --

A. It was in 2003. I believe it was in 2003.

Q. The company was still in existence after you got your last check from Neverland Valley Entertainment, right?

A. Well, yes, because we were going to possibly work on a benefit, a different benefit, and then that would basically be -- I think it was called “Best Buddies” or something like that. It was a benefit.

Q. And did you work on putting this benefit together?

A. Huh-uh.

Q. Did you talk to Vinnie about it?

A. Yeah.

Q. Did you talk to Schaffel about it?

A. Not Schaffel.

Q. Did you talk to Vinnie about it?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you last talk to Vinnie?

A. Gosh. It’s been a while. It’s been a little while. With today -- or a couple of months probably now, I guess.

Q. Couple of months ago you talked to Vinnie?

A. Possibly, yeah. Possibly.

Q. Did you record him?

A. No.

Q. When did you last record Vinnie?

A. Boy, I don’t remember, tell you the truth.

Q. When did you last record a phone call for the sheriffs?

A. Gosh, I would say maybe a couple weeks before -- gosh, you know what? I -- I can’t say, because I -- it just stopped and I just stopped it. So, maybe a couple weeks before I gave him the tapes, possibly.

Q. Which would be approximately when, do you think?

A. Well, let’s see, this is March -- maybe a couple of weeks before April 14th. I’m sorry, I’m not meaning to be that way. I’m just trying to be accurate. So I’m just trying to make sure I’m saying what I -- what I know is in my mind.

Q. Now, in the notes that you say you took --

A. Which notes? Which ones?

Q. The notes you have in front of you. The notes you say you took close to the date or on the day these events occurred, we referred to February 1st, 2003, and you said that you thought there was a train wreck going on, right?

A. A train wreck, right.

Q. Yet all through that year, you kept in communication with all the people you thought who were involved in the train wreck and never called the police, right?

A. That's true.

Q. You kept in touch with Vinnie on a regular basis, correct?

A. Initially, yes.

Q. All through 2003, you kept in touch with Vinnie on a regular basis, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. All through 2003, you kept in touch with Schaffel on a regular basis, correct?

A. True.

Q. Did you stay in touch with Frank?

A. Yeah, the last time we spoke was he was in the studio.

Q. And when was that?

A. I don't know. It's in my notes.

Q. Was it in 2003?
A. Oh, 2003? Yeah. I kept on talking to Frank.
Q. Was it after you say this train wreck was going on that you documented in your notes?
A. Yes, I just wrote, yes, “train wreck.”
Q. Okay. Now, I believe you indicated in response to the prosecutor’s questions that you thought a press conference was going to go on in Florida, true?
A. I didn’t think so. They said it.
Q. Okay. Well, Schaffel said it, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. Did Ronald say it?
A. They both wanted Michael to do a press conference.
Q. Okay. And you said Michael was reluctant to do one, correct?
A. Yeah, he said he doesn’t like to do those things.
Q. And ultimately, no press conference took place, to your knowledge, right?
A. To my knowledge, yes. That’s true.
Q. All right. Did you talk to Debbie Rowe yourself?
A. Yes.
MR. ZONEN: Objection; vague.
MR. MESEREAU: I’ll rephrase, Your Honor.

I’ll withdraw it.

Q. During the interview with Debbie Rowe that you described in response to the prosecutor’s questions, did you speak with Debbie Rowe?

A. Yes. And Iris.

Q. Iris was her lawyer, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And Iris was sitting there during the interview, correct?

A. Yes. She’s very nice.

Q. And Iris was sitting there when you say Schaffel tried to get her to change some of her answers, correct?

A. I didn’t say Iris was sitting there. I was sitting there watching Debbie. I don’t know where Iris was at that particular moment.

Q. But you did say that Schaffel tried to get Debbie Rowe to change some of her answers, correct?

A. To -- yeah, he was nudging, like any producer would, would nudge you to get a better performance or whatever it is that they’re looking for.

Q. And do you know if Debbie’s lawyer was right there while that was going on?

A. She was there a lot. I don’t remember turning around and seeing her. But I remember she was around a lot.

THE COURT: Let’s take our break.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, Your Honor.
(Recess taken.)
THE COURT: Counsel?
MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.
Q. Mr. Provencio, you were first interviewed by the Santa Barbara Sheriff’s Department on Saturday, January 31st, 2004, right?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. And you were interviewed by a Sergeant Robel, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. And in that interview, Mr. Provencio, you told Sergeant Robel that, “Marc directed everything,” and “It’s unknown if Michael Jackson even knew about what was going on with the Arvizo family,” correct?
A. If it’s in the report. At that time, you know, I just -- I didn’t know what to do. I just was, like, just talking to them, yeah.
Q. I understand. But that’s exactly what you told Sergeant Robel?
A. If I wrote it, then that’s what I said at that time. He was -- Marc was orchestrating -- oh, I’m sorry.
Q. That was your first police interview, true?
A. Yeah. If you have the report there, yeah.
Q. You used those words in your interview with Sergeant Robel, correct?

A. Yes, if it’s in the report.

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as nonresponsive based on personal knowledge.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Would it refresh your recollection if I show you Sergeant Robel’s handwritten notes of your interview with him?

A. No, that’s okay. I believe you.

Q. I need to find out if that’s what you said to Sergeant Robel.

A. Sergeant -- to Sergeant Robel?

Q. Yes. Did you tell Sergeant Robel in your interview on January 31st, 2004, words to the effect, “Marc directed everything. It’s unknown if Michael Jackson knew about what was going on with the Arvizo family”?

A. Yes, I wrote that, or said that. Sorry.

Q. Now, you told Sergeant Robel in that interview that when the Bashir taping of “Living with Michael Jackson” was aired in the U.S., Schaffel immediately contacted Weizner and Konitzer, right?

A. Correct. I believe Dieter was staying at the ranch at that time.

Q. At no time in that police interview did you say that any of these people got together because a transcript was forwarded in January of 2003, right?

A. Does it say that? Or -- are you telling me something or are you asking me a question?

Q. I’m just --

MR. ZONEN: Objection; vague.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

Q. In your police interview on January 31st, 2004 --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- you told Sergeant Robel that Weizner and Konitzer -- excuse me, let me rephrase that.

Schaffel contacted Weizner and Konitzer after the Bashir taping of “Living with Michael Jackson” was aired in the U.S., right?

A. No, it was after -- I believe it was after the 24th transcript.

Q. That’s something --

A. Because that’s when the conspiracy really starts is after the 24th transcript.

Q. That’s something you’ve come up with for this trial. That’s not what you said in your first interview, right?

MR. ZONEN: That’s argumentative.

Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: In your interview, you said they got together after the airing, right?

A. Well, I know what happened. It was after we got the transcript they made the -- he made the phone calls.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I show you the police report?

A. I know what it might say, but I’m telling you right now it was after the 24th transcript was delivered that we -- that they, you know, started contacting --

Q. You just came up with that recently, didn’t you?

A. No.

MR. ZONEN: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled. Next question.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You recently turned over the so-called notes you say you kept, right?

A. Uh-huh. Uh-huh.

Q. And when did you recently turn them over to the prosecution?

A. When I found them in my storage unit.

Q. When did you find these notes in your storage unit?

A. When -- it was probably last month, around the 14th. I really had for -- I really actually did forget about them. I stuck them in a box and -- you know, and I just kind of forgot them, because they weren’t -- you know, I just -- that’s what I did. I just put them in a box and put the whole thing behind me.

Q. During all of this period of time when you were acting as a police informant --

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object to the use of that term; and compound.

MR. MESEREAU: I’ll rephrase it.

Q. Did you act as a police informant in this investigation?

A. Whenever something has happened, a criminal act has been committed, it’s everybody’s duty to work with law enforcement, so the answer is yes.

Q. When did you start working as a police informant, Mr. Provencio?

A. Law enforcement, I worked with them when -- when they asked me, you know, after - what is it? - when they served me the search warrant, or I agreed to the search warrant.

Q. And when was that?

A. A couple months -- like I said, a couple months after Michael’s place was searched.

Q. And you started recording phone calls for the sheriff’s department --

A. Right.

Q. -- correct?

A. To get to the truth, correct.

Q. I understand. And this was in 2004, correct?

A. It would have been 2004, yes.

Q. And did you do it into 2005?

A. Into 2005? Yes, uh-huh.

Q. And you were in constant touch with the sheriffs about the investigation, right?

A. Well, I only let them know what -- what I had, you know, as far as, like, tried to get to the truth of some matters that were unanswered.

Q. You were in constant touch with the sheriffs during the period of time you were recording phone calls, right?

A. Yes, sir.

MR. ZONEN: I’ll object to that question as vague.

THE COURT: Overruled. He said, “Yes.”

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Is that right?

A. Yes.

THE COURT: He answered it; “Yes.”

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And you were recording phone calls for over a year, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Never told anyone in the sheriffs about these notes, right?

A. Well, I’ve always had notes, so yes, I did tell them about the notes, but not these. Those particular notes I had found when I cleaned out a storage unit, and I have the receipt to show that I cleaned out that storage unit, because I switched storage units.

Q. When they searched your house, did you give them the notes?

A. I gave them some notes, yes.

Q. Not the ones you turned over in the last few weeks, right?

A. No, that's true.

Q. You just kind of forgot about them while you were working as an informant?

MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object to the continuous use of argumentative questions and sarcasm in his questioning.

THE COURT: Mr. Mesereau?

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, Your Honor?

THE COURT: I'm going to admonish you to stop that.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, Your Honor.

Q. In your interview with Sergeant Robel on January 31st, 2004, you said it was around the beginning of February of 2003 when Weizner and Konitzer allowed Schaffel to rejoin their team, true?

A. Yes.

Q. It was not in January, correct?

A. Can you rephrase that again? I'm sorry. Maybe I blanked out a little bit. Say it again. I'm sorry. I'm sorry.

Q. You told Sergeant Robel that Weizner and Konitzer allowed Schaffel to rejoin their team around the beginning of February of 2003?

A. It had been -- do you want me to explain? No?

Q. Is that what you told Sergeant Robel in that police interview?

A. If it’s there, I told him that, yeah. But --

Q. Do you know if that’s what you said?

A. Yes. If I said it, I said it.

Q. Did you say it?

A. Yes, I said it.

Q. Do you remember telling Sergeant Robel in that interview that you thought Debbie Rowe was honest and sincere regarding her responses to the questions in that interview?

A. Well, I don’t remember exactly saying that, but I know what I saw there. I mean, so I guess if it’s there in writing and I said it, then I said it.

Q. Well, I have to ask you if you said it.

A. Okay. I said it. Sorry.

Q. And you told Sergeant Robel in that interview on January 31st, 2004, that you thought the questions she was asked were typed via computer, right?

A. Well, there was several versions, but, yeah, like there was one version that I saw handwritten, and then it -- because it’s just not one piece of paper that you -- that I saw. It was variations of things.

Q. And when you saw the questions, you asked Schaffel what they were, and he told you they were questions to be asked to Debbie Rowe, right?

A. Yeah, flippantly. Questions and answers.
Q. Well, you didn’t tell the police about answers in that interview, did you?
A. In that interview?
Q. Yes.
A. Probably not. I just -- but I was really scared at that time, too, so -- because that was the very first time I was meeting them, law enforcement. So I didn’t really know what was going on, so -- and I can -- you know, I do make mistakes. I can get jumbled in some of my stuff, but, you know, I was being as honest -- I was being honest when I was there.
Q. Who wrote out the questions, if you know?
A. For Debbie Rowe, are you --
Q. Yes.
A. Ian had sent over the questions via e-mail. And then -- and then -- and then they were in many different forms at the office.
Q. Did you work on the questions yourself?
A. Oh, no.
Q. Okay. Did you see Schaffel changing the questions at all?
A. Well, yeah, he would write things and then, you know, edit it.
Q. Okay. By the way, in that interview --
A. Uh-huh.
Q. -- of January 31st, 2004 --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- you never said anything about any escape, correct?

A. I don’t believe I did, no. We were just first meeting, so it was like -- it was a bombardment of questions and information, so I was just trying to answer, you know, what I knew. And it seemed all very overwhelming.

Q. In that interview of January 31st, 2004, with Sergeant Robel, you never mentioned the word “killers,” true?

A. That is true.

Q. You did talk about the Arvizo family going shopping, right?

A. Correct. That they had told me. And seen them exchange money.

Q. You said Schaffel would give cash to the Arvizo family for shopping, right?

A. Well, to Vinnie. And then Vinnie would sign a receipt. That’s what I witnessed.

Q. You talked about Vinnie Amen transporting the Arvizo family, correct?

A. Correct, in that four-door clunker.

Q. And you indicated at the beginning of that interview to Sergeant Robel that you would tell him everything you knew, right?

A. Well, at that -- yeah, to the best of my knowledge at that time. You know, but I was nervous, too.

Q. And you said --

A. Like I'm nervous now.

Q. You told Sergeant Robel you would tell him everything you knew, and you didn't want it to be tape-recorded, right?

A. That's true.

Q. Did you tell Sergeant Robel everything you knew on that date?

A. No, because I didn't -- it's not something -- it wasn't something I was thinking about for a while, so it was -- you know, I told him what I knew at that particular time.

Q. And the first time you ever produced anything to the sheriffs referring to "escape" or "killers" was a few weeks ago, right?

A. Well, that was when I found it, because I didn't think I had it anymore, so -- but I always kept journals, so -- not all of them that I still have, so --

Q. Well, would it be -- would it be accurate to say that even though you told Sergeant Robel you would tell him everything you knew on January 31st, 2004, you just forgot about the escape on that date?

A. No. I -- I told him what I knew based on the questions he was asking me. And I was being honest at that time.

Q. And would it be accurate to say that during 8860 your interview with Sergeant Robel on January 31st, 2004, you just forgot about the reference to -- I'm sorry. Let me withdraw the question and restate it.

Would it be accurate to say that during your interview with Sergeant Robel on January 31st, 2004, where you said you'd tell him everything you knew about these events, you just forgot about someone using the word "killers"?

A. I know what I heard.

Q. Did you forget to mention that in that interview?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled. I'll have the question read back.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: I didn't mention it at that time, if it's in writing. I didn't mention it at that time.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You just forgot, do you think?

A. I don't forget. I just didn't mention it at that time.

Q. Now, the prosecutor asked you to read some of the credits --

A. Correct.

Q. -- that are found in the little brochure that accompanies Michael Jackson's DVD entitled “”Invincible”,” okay?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And -- did you ever work on that album?

A. We went to the video shoot, yes.

Q. And he had you read credits that are given to Schaffel, right?

A. Well, yeah, Marc said that that was his.

Q. And he had you read credits that are given to the Cascio family, right?

A. Right.

Q. Michael gave a lot of other credits to a lot of other people?

A. Correct. There’s a lot there.

Q. And he tells a lot of people that he loves them, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Michael typically says he loves people he’s giving credits to, right?

A. Yeah. That’s like his sound bite, yeah.

Q. And he dedicated the “”Invincible”” album, said, “A special thanks to all the children of the world of all nationalities. You are my greatest inspiration. Without you this album would never have been released. I love you all, Michael Jackson,” right?

A. You read it. Yeah.

Q. Do you remember that?

A. Well, yeah, I read through it.

Q. Okay. He expressed gratitude to his parents, Joseph and Katherine, right? Remember that?

A. Does it say it there?

Q. Right.

A. Does it say it?

Q. “For their love and support, inspiration and caring, I love you dearly. Thank you for conceiving me. Your son, Michael.” Do you remember that?

A. I’m sorry, I don’t remember that, but -- I did read it. I read it once or twice.

Q. He also dedicated it to Prince and Paris, saying, “You give me the greatest joy I’ve ever known in my entire life. I love you both from the bottom of my heart, now and forever,” right?

A. Yep.

Q. Did you know someone named John McClain?

A. I don’t know him. I knew of him.

Q. Who is he?

A. He’s a music guy that we never could figure out what he did.

Q. Do you remember Michael dedicated “”Invincible”” to John McClain?

A. Yeah, I read that.

Q. Saying, “This album would not be possible without your genius and perfection. I love you, Michael Jackson,” right?

A. I remember John McClain’s name.

Q. He dedicated it to Elizabeth Taylor, correct?

A. Yeah.

Q. He said, “Elizabeth: Through it all, you have been my constant, with your support, your caring and your love. I love you dearly, Michael Jackson,” right?

A. Okay.

Q. Do you remember that?

A. Sure.

Q. He said, “A special thanks to Carlos Santana for sharing your genius and love. Michael Jackson,” right?

A. Yeah.

Q. Remember that?

A. Yeah, I guess so. You’re reading it.

Q. He had a whole list of people --

A. Right.

Q. -- that he dedicated this album to with expressions of love, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. It wasn’t just to Schaffel or the Cascios alone, was it?

A. Well, him and Schaffel were friends. So, yeah, it wasn’t just -- it wasn’t just them.

Q. He dedicates it to Chris Tucker, does he not?

A. I don’t remember that one, but sure.

Q. Says: “Dear Chris, with all my respect for your art and deepest gratitude for your contribution, your friendship and your love. To the future, and to all that we can create together. I love you, Michael Jackson,” right?
A. Okay.
Q. Remember that?
A. No. But if it’s there, I believe you.
Q. He gave a special thanks to everyone at MJJ Productions, and listed people in various capacities, right?
MR. ZONEN: My objection is that the witness has stated to the last three that he has no recollection of any of them. It appears that counsel is simply reading it into the record. I’ll object.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Before you testified, did you go over this document with the prosecutor?
A. I looked at it.
Q. Where did you go over this document with the prosecutor?
A. In the office.
Q. And when was this?
A. A couple days ago. Two days ago, or something.
Q. And were you with Prosecutor Zonen?
A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Did you talk about your being asked questions about where the credits went on the album “Inspiration”?

A. “Inspiration”?

Q. I mean, pardon me, “”Invincible”.” I’m sorry, my mistake.

A. “”Invincible”.”

Q. Did you talk to him about what you were going to say to those questions?

A. No. I just -- he just asked me to look at it. “Can you identify” -- “Is this” -- you know, “Is this Marc? Are you sure?” And I said, “Well, yeah. He bragged about it.”

Q. Okay. Okay. And how much work did you do on the album “”Invincible””?

A. Went to the video shoot. And everything else was -- it was -- we were already working on “What More Can I Give?” We couldn’t focus on two things at one time.

Q. Okay. Now, at some point you -- let me rephrase that. You mentioned Christian Robinson in response to the prosecutor’s questions, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And when did you first meet Christian Robinson?

A. Gosh. 2000 -- 2001, first time I met him.

Q. Was he working with Schaffel at the time?

A. Yeah. They might have been working on 8866 something else, but I don’t know what it was. No, he was around. I don’t know what they were doing. I think he just brought him on board.

Q. You mentioned to Vinnie one time in a recorded conversation that you had learned that Christian Robinson made $10,000 selling some pictures of Michael Jackson, right?

A. That’s what I had heard, yes.

Q. Did you ever confirm whether that was true?

A. I never confirmed it with Christian. I just heard it from one of my friends who told me about it.

Q. And you indicated that he had sold those pictures to ABC, right?

A. Yes. I believe so.

Q. Okay. Were you --

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object to lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever learn where Christian Robinson had sold those pictures to?

A. What? Say that again.

Q. Did you ever learn where Christian Robinson sold pictures of Michael Jackson to?

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, no -- objection. Lack of foundation that such pictures were sold.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You’ve indicated that you learned at some point that Christian Robinson had sold pictures of Michael Jackson for $10,000, right?

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, objection, lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer that. Do you want the question read back?

THE WITNESS: Please.

(Record read.)

MR. ZONEN: I’ll object as hearsay as well.

THE COURT: He’s just asking him if he’s already testified to that. That’s his question.

Did you say that a minute ago?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE COURT: Next question.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you know -- excuse me.

Do you know whether those pictures were actually sold?

A. No, I had heard about it.

Q. Okay. Did you ever talk to Christian Robinson about that subject?

A. No, because I was alarmed that they were doing it, but --

Q. You never talked to him about it, right?

A. No.

Q. When did you last see Christian Robinson?

A. I saw Christian, oh, in Gary, Indiana.

Q. Was that after you had learned that he had sold pictures of Michael Jackson for $10,000?

MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object as lack of foundation and assuming facts not in evidence.

THE COURT: It's not relevant. I'll sustain that objection.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: At some point, you had a discussion with Marc Schaffel about Schaffel's writing a book about Michael Jackson, true?

A. True.

Q. Now, when did you first talk to Marc Schaffel about his writing a book about Michael Jackson?

MR. ZONEN: I'll object as hearsay.

MR. MESEREAU: Just asked him when, Your Honor.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

The question is, when did you talk to Schaffel about that?

THE WITNESS: I learned -- he had told me that they were going to --

THE COURT: Just -- the question is when.

THE WITNESS: When? Oh, gosh. I don't -- I don't know. I don't remember. Last year sometime. German book fair.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And you had a number of discussions with him about that subject, correct?

A. Well, I was trying -- yeah, I -- okay, the answer is yes.

Q. And it was your understanding that Schaffel was trying to make some money on a book deal in Europe, right?

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Lack of foundation; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever learn if Schaffel was trying to peddle a book about Michael Jackson in Europe?

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Lack of foundation and hearsay.

THE COURT: Hearsay; sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: How many conversations have you had with Marc Schaffel about the possibility of his writing a book about Michael Jackson?

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as hearsay.

MR. MESEREAU: Just asked how many, Your Honor.

MR. ZONEN: Assumes facts not in evidence.

THE COURT: Sustained. It’s just hearsay.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember in one of your recorded conversations with Vinnie where you told Vinnie that Chris Tucker and a woman identified as his girlfriend are witnesses the Arvizo family were free to come and go from Neverland whenever they wanted?

A. Did Vinnie say that or did I say that?

Q. You.

A. Gosh. I don’t remember.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I show you a transcript?

A. Sure. Go ahead.

MR. MESEREAU: May I approach?

THE COURT: Yes.

THE WITNESS: Could I ask you a question?

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object to any further dialogue other than whether or not that provision refreshed his recollection.

THE WITNESS: Oh.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Have you had a chance to look at that page of the transcript?

A. Yes, I looked at that.

Q. Does it refresh your recollection about you saying that to Vinnie?

A. Can you say the question again? I’m sorry. What was the question?

Q. Did you tell Vinnie that it was your understanding that Chris Tucker and a woman identified as Tucker’s girlfriend are witnesses that the Arvizos were free to come and go whenever they wanted from Neverland?

A. I think I’m asking a question. I’m not? Am I asking it or am I making a statement?

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object to the absence of a foundation that it refreshed his recollection.

THE COURT: The only question pending is whether, having looked at that manuscript, your memory is refreshed about that statement or question, whatever it may be.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

THE COURT: Does it refresh your recollection?

THE WITNESS: No. Not really.

THE COURT: All right. Next question.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You’ve talked about the project “What More Can I Give?” right?

A. Correct.

Q. You’ve talked about the work you did on “”Invincible”,” right?

A. No, I didn’t -- no, I didn’t say that. I said I went to a video shoot.

Q. You didn’t do any work yourself on it?

A. No. My name ain’t in it.

Q. You did some work on the rebuttal show involving Debbie Rowe, correct?

A. I was there for the shooting of Debbie Rowe, true.

Q. Were you actually working for Schaffel at that time?

A. I worked until the 25th, and that was it, of February of ‘03.

Q. So you were working for Schaffel when the 8872 interview with Debbie Rowe took place?

A. With Neverland Valley Entertainment.

Q. Okay, excuse me.

A. Okay.

Q. You were working with Neverland Valley Entertainment when the interview with Debbie Rowe took place?

A. Correct. I received my last check on the 25th.

Q. And when the interview with Debbie Rowe took place, were you working that day at Schaffel’s residence?

A. Yeah, I was doing filing and other miscellaneous --

Q. Did you do any work on that video yourself?

MR. ZONEN: Which video? Objection.

MR. MESEREAU: I’ll rephrase.

Q. Did you yourself do any work on the rebuttal video involving Debbie Rowe?

MR. ZONEN: Again, it’s vague as to just the section of Debbie Rowe or the whole film?

MR. MESEREAU: I’ll be happy to rephrase those questions, Your Honor.

Q. The first question: Did you do any work on the rebuttal video documentary --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- involving the Arvizos?

A. No.

Q. Did you do any work on the rebuttal documentary particularly, specifically the Debbie Rowe interview?

A. I was there for the filming.

Q. Okay. Were you working on it at all?

A. Just upstairs I was doing things for Neverland Valley Entertainment. It was part of Neverland. They were filming there.

Q. Did the work that you were doing on that day involve the interview with Debbie Rowe?

A. No, not really. My work was just office stuff.

Q. When you looked at the list of questions you've identified that were being asked of Debbie Rowe --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- was that part of your responsibilities and your work for Neverland Valley Entertainment?

A. They were laying around. It wasn't like -- there was no secret about it. They were laying around. It was like -- just like you would in any production.

Q. Well, I think you said you went up and down the stairs during the shoot.

A. Yeah, I went up and down the stairs to get coffee, take a leak, come back downstairs, watch a little bit more. Go back upstairs.

Q. Were you just watching it on your own time or was that part of your work for Neverland Valley Entertainment?

A. Everybody was -- it was like Stuart. We were just there. We were watching. We were -- you know, I just wanted to do something else other than just sit there for nine hours. So --

Q. So am I correct you didn’t directly work on that portion of the video?

A. I didn’t do any lighting. I didn’t ask her any questions. You know, but I was there. It was part of Neverland Valley Entertainment, for clarity’s sake.

Q. Do you remember telling Vinnie --

A. In what?

Q. -- in one of your recorded interviews with him -- excuse me, not “interviews.” Excuse me. Let me rephrase the question.

Do you remember telling Vinnie during one of your phone conversations with him that you recorded that, “All fingers point to Marc”?

A. Yeah, he was mastermind, letting people know what was happening.

Q. Do you remember telling Vinnie that, “Even if you were stupid and had the inside track, you would see the finger’s pointing to Marc”?

A. Yeah, and Marc informed everybody what was going on.

Q. How long were you in contact on a regular basis with Marc Schaffel after you decided there was a conspiracy?

A. I never -- I never really decided there was a conspiracy per se. I just knew something was wrong. The family had escaped, and so I was relieved. I was just real relieved that everything was just like -- I thought everything was just going to be -- you know, that these people were kind of on a -- like lost souls on a ship. They could just float away from me and I could just be free of all of it.

So -- but I kept in contact with them. I love people. I adore people. Even if they do something wrong doesn’t mean that I have a right to judge them. And maybe I don’t know all the answers and maybe I don’t -- I didn’t know everything that was happening at the time. But as long as they were -- everything was okay and everybody was okay, I just kind of figured that -- I’m rambling. Sorry. So that’s a --

Q. So around the time you decided the family had escaped, you did not judge Marc positively or negatively; is that right?

A. I was just -- like I said, they were all on a boat, I mean, lost souls on a boat, so just let it go. Just let them go and do whatever fantastic things they do.

Q. While you were working for Neverland Valley 8876

Entertainment at Schaffel's residence --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- you learned that Schaffel had stolen money from a woman in Japan, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And you kept working with him anyway, right?

A. I didn't learn it until later. And -- and even though I saw some documents, I don't know if the agreement specifically was that there was to be any money given back or anything like that. I only saw, you know, what I saw and heard what I heard.

Q. You saw what you saw and you heard what you heard while you were working with Schaffel, right?

A. We were on hiatus, yeah.

Q. Did you see the documents that you just referred to at Schaffel's residence?

A. I saw a couple of them, yeah. They would come in fax.

Q. How much longer did you keep working with Schaffel after you learned he had stolen money from a woman in Japan?

A. Well, I learned it much later, what had happened. I learned that the money situation -- because the people who brought -- can I explain this? Is that okay?

Q. I'm just asking you how much longer you kept working for Schaffel after you saw the document you've just described.

A. I kept on working with him, but I didn’t know he had taken this money until much later.

Q. You are friendly with a woman named Cindy Montgomery, right?

A. Correct. I met her.

Q. And when did you first meet Cindy Montgomery?

A. Around the Brazil trip, where they were trying to get one-way tickets to Brazil. Right around that time.

Q. Well, Mr. Schaffel used to go to Brazil a lot, didn’t he?

A. Well, yeah. But -- yes. The answer is yes.

Q. You knew Cindy Montgomery before the Brazil trip you just referred to.

A. I knew of her.

Q. Correct.

A. But that was the first time I was actually meeting her face to face and talking to her.

Q. At some point you learned Cindy Montgomery tape-recorded a phone conversation with you, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you then began to tape-record phone conversations with Cindy Montgomery, right?

A. Yes. Because the machine would come on. I believe there was one conversation in there.

Q. And you repeatedly told Cindy Montgomery that Marc Schaffel is a prolific liar, right?

A. That’s true.

Q. When did you learn that Marc Schaffel was a prolific liar?

A. Well, do you want the short answer or the long one?

Q. When do you think you decided Marc Schaffel is a prolific liar?

A. When I started working with him, things -- things were -- things were unraveling, stories weren’t matching. You know, things his parents did for a living, things like that. You know, so I -- I kept on kind of, “Well, wait a second. That’s not what you told me last month,” so then I was just starting to remember.

Q. You’d known him since high school; is that correct?

A. I knew of him since high school, yes.

Q. Okay. Did you know him in high school?

A. Yes, I knew of him in high school.

Q. Before you began to work for Neverland Valley Entertainment, were you working in the entertainment industry?

A. Yes.

Q. What were you doing?

A. I was a record promoter.

Q. And where were you promoting records?

A. At the Universal Music Group.

Q. How long did you do that?
A. Oh, God, like four years.
Q. Did you meet -- did you run into Schaffel while you were working for the Universal Music Group?
A. No, I ran into Schaffel when I was working for the Warner Music Group.
Q. When was that?
A. In ‘93. Because we lost contact from like ‘84 to like ‘93 is kind of like when we lost contact with each other, because I didn’t know where he moved.
Q. Did the sheriffs -- excuse me. Did representatives of the sheriff’s department tell you that Cindy Montgomery had recorded a conversation with you?
A. No, but I understood the wisdom of it later.
Q. How did you learn she had recorded a conversation with you?
A. She told me the truth.
Q. Okay. Approximately when was this, if you know?
A. Gosh, I don’t remember. I really didn’t think it was a big deal, so I don’t remember. I mean, I couldn’t honestly tell you a day or a month.
Q. Did you learn she had done that as a part of a police investigation?
A. She just basically said, “Listen, I’m your 8880 friend. I really like you. I don’t want this to ruin our friendship, but, you know, I” -- “I wanted to make this recording.” And she did it and.... Listen, everybody was making recordings in that world. So this was like nothing. This was nothing. I mean, people were following people. People were making recordings. You weren’t allowed to talk on the phone at Neverland, things like that. So this was nothing new.

Q. So you were not upset when you learned that Cindy Montgomery had recorded a conversation with you as part of this investigation?

A. Well, I was upset, because I wished she would have just told me. And I remember, you know, I put it in my notes, that I just thought, you know, God, you know -- I was upset at the time. And then later on, I just -- I realized that, you know, I could see the wisdom of why that occurred, and it was fine. It was just like I got done with what I was doing, so --

Q. Did you tell her that you were recording conversations with her?

A. No, I don’t think so. But I think that conversation with her was an accident, if I’m right. I think there’s maybe one or two in there with her, and I think that was a complete accident, because it was just -- the tape would go on, so -- when you pick up the phone.

Q. Do you remember discussing with Cindy Montgomery the fact that you were keeping notes of this investigation?

A. Keeping notes?

Q. Yes.

A. Yeah. I keep notes of everything, you know. My journals do you mean?

Q. Yes. Do you remember telling Cindy Montgomery that you were taking notes about this investigation?

A. I was keeping notes, yes.

Q. Do you remember telling her about that?

MR. ZONEN: I’ll object as hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember that?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember telling Cindy Montgomery, in discussing your notes, “I’ll give my lawyer the bullet points, overview, but not give him my detailed notes. Are you kidding me? That’s a book, honey”?

A. Yes, I did say that.

Q. But you said earlier you have no intention of writing a book about this case, right?

A. I don’t. I really don’t.

Q. Okay. Do you know someone named Ian

Barkley?

A. He was one of the people that Christian Robinson -- Christian Robinson brought on board. I think he was a photographer also.

Q. Did you ever --

A. From Utah.

Q. Did you work with him?

A. No, I didn't really communicate with him. I know he was around and was working for Christian or helping to assist Christian.

Q. Did you ever see Ian Barkley with Michael Jackson?

A. No.

Q. Was it your belief that Schaffel was trying to prevent people from talking to Michael Jackson?

A. Well, yeah, he would -- I mean, he always wanted to kind of hog the spotlight, I guess you might say.

Q. And he tried to keep Ian Barkley away from Michael Jackson, did he not?

MR. ZONEN: I'll object as lack of foundation and relevance.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: I'm not sure if I asked you this. When did you last talk to Schaffel?

A. Right before last month, on the 14th.

Q. Did he call you?

A. I don't remember. But I know I talked to him.

Q. And when had you talked to him last before that call?

A. Gosh, off the top of my head, I don't remember. It was just back and forth. Whatever.

Q. When did you last see Marc Schaffel in person?

A. I think it was in Ohio. Yeah, I'm pretty sure it was in Ohio. Yeah, it was in Ohio.

Q. You indicated you gave up your point --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- in the project that you had with Neverland Valley Entertainment?

A. Yes, with "What More Can I Give?"

Q. And how did you give up your point?

A. I signed documents and just said -- basically Marc had provided me documents and said that this is going to return -- because I had said, you know, "I think this is a good idea. We should return our points to Michael. I think that's a very good idea." And he said, you know, "Oh, I agree."

And I met him at Wahoo's Fish Taco, and we had lunch, and that's when I signed the point over to Michael.

Q. And I believe you said you did that out of pure generosity; is that --

A. Well, I did it because I just felt like I would have bad karma owning something I didn't think 8884

I deserved. I really thought that I should; I should do it.

Q. Okay. Do you remember telling Vinnie Amen that you should have made $150,000 by going to a tabloid?

A. That I go to the tabloid or he did?

Q. You.

A. I never went to a tabloid.

Q. Do you remember telling him you should have?

A. I might have been tempted, yes, but I never did it. And I got calls and offers, but I never took them.

Q. Have you been told by anyone associated with the prosecution, “Don’t make any deal till after the trial’s over”?

A. No.

Q. Have you been told by any member of the prosecution, “Don’t give interviews till the trial’s over”?

A. Oh, they said I’m under gag order. Is that what you mean?

Q. Has anyone from the prosecution said to you, “Mr. Provencio, don’t give any interviews till this trial’s over”?

A. They never said do interviews or any of that. They just said, “You’re under gag order,” you know, and, “You’re accountable for your own actions.”

Q. Do you remember telling Vinnie Amen, “Marc has made money hand over fist on Michael Jackson”?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember telling Vinnie that Michael Jackson had given a million dollars to Marlon Brando?

A. Yeah, I was there. Because he got booed.

Q. And you told Vinnie that Schaffel had stolen a million dollars from that woman in Japan, correct?

A. Yes. After I found out -- and maybe I’m being overassumptious, but the woman died and he didn’t return the money, so I considered that not right.

Q. Have you ever spoken to anyone who represents the media about this case?

A. I have friends in the media, but -- I would listen to what they said, but I -- I didn’t want people to put a stranglehold on me, so I preferred not to speak to them about it.

Q. And what friends in the media have you spoken to about this case?

A. Well, Kathryn’s a person that I talked to.

Q. Okay. She’s with who, CBS?

A. CBS.

Q. Who else have you spoken to in the media about this case?

A. Nobody. So....

Q. You just referred to some friends in the media.

A. Yes, I did refer to friends. And --
Q. And who were they?
A. And that’s Kathryn Milofsky.
MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object unless there are people he actually discussed in this context.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Correct me if I’m wrong --
A. Uh-huh.
Q. -- did you just say you have friends in the media that you have listened to about this case?
A. Yes, they -- they call me, and I hear what they have to say, but it’s -- you know, it’s -- it has to stay a one-way street.
Q. And who are they?
MR. ZONEN: Objection, irrelevant.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Is Ian Drew a friend of yours?
A. Yes. He is in the media.
Q. Who does he work for?
A. A magazine. US Weekly, I think.
Q. Have you ever had a discussion with him about this case?
A. Oh, yes, I -- yes.
Q. And when was that discussion?
A. We were both there experiencing things at the same time, so that’s what -- I mean, at the time it wasn’t really a case, but we were experiencing things at the same time. So, like, I said, “Did you hear the word ‘escape’ or did I just make that up in my mind?” And he said he had heard it, too.

Q. When did you last talk to Ian Drew about the case?

A. A couple days ago. Oh, about the case?

Q. Yes.

A. He just said he --

Q. When did you last talk to Ian Drew about this case?

A. A couple days ago.

Q. And you said he worked for US Weekly?

A. Yes. But I’ve never been paid by them or anything like that.

Q. What does he do for US Weekly?

A. You know what? I think he’s a writer. I think he’s a writer.

Q. Did he call you or did you call him?

A. He called me.

Q. Do you talk to him on a regular basis?

A. Infrequently. He’s very infrequent. Cool guy. Very infrequent.

Q. Now, in your handwritten notes, you refer to someone named Larry Schiller, correct?

A. I guess. Oh, is that my handwriting or Marc’s?

Q. I don’t know. I can show you a page of 8888 this.

A. I can look at it, if you want me to look.

Q. Sure.

THE COURT: We'll take our break now.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: No?

(Laughter.)

All right. We won't.

THE WITNESS: Oh.

THE COURT: The second time.

(Laughter.)

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: I can show you that page, if you want.

A. You know what? Why don't you just show me.

MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. ZONEN: Counsel, could I see that, please?

THE WITNESS: Oh, yeah, that's Marc's writing.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Now, that page was found in your notes, true?

A. Correct.

Q. Do you know why Marc's writing is found in your notes?

A. Well, I would have it -- well, sometimes I was kind of stupid and I would have the -- the -- the -- the book sitting out. And if he went to my phone to answer the phone and he was in there, I think that’s when he wrote it.

Now, I didn’t see him write it, but that’s when -- I mean, I freaked out. I even made the reference that I got to keep my notes a little bit better.

Q. Do you know who Larry Schiller is?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Did you ever talk to Marc about who Larry Schiller was?

A. Huh-uh.

Q. Okay. He writes books about trials. Did you know that?

A. No.

MR. ZONEN: I’ll object as beyond the scope of this witness’s knowledge and assuming facts not in evidence.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Have you ever taken your notes and rewritten them?

A. Huh-uh.

Q. Are --

A. I mean, I ramble and I scribble, but -- you know, and rewrite sometimes. Like if I find a fact out, I’ll, like, write out the answer. Or sometimes I’ll be, like, “Well, what is this?” You know what I mean?

Because, like, in that period of time, I wasn't sure who was telling me the truth. That's why the notes seem pretty scrambly a little bit.

Q. I thought you'd forgotten about them.

A. What do you mean?

Q. Your notes.

A. Well, I did, you know, for a period of time after it was all done. I just stuck it in a box in storage, so --

Q. Did you ever go back to those notes and redo them?

A. No.

Q. Ever add anything to any of those notes?

A. No. I know I have, like, different styles of handwriting. But, no.

Q. Did you ever go back to your notes when you had another thought and just kind of add something?

A. No. That wouldn't be cool.

Q. Was there only one set of notes?

A. One set of notes?

Q. Yes.

A. There are many notes. There are many journals.

Q. When did you first give the police -- well, let me rephrase that.

A. Okay.

Q. The notes you took, are you referring to them as journals?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay.

A. You know, just notes that I took. Journals.

Q. Okay. When did you first give any representative of the sheriff’s department a journal referring to anything about this case?

A. I guess the first -- the first couple weeks, I guess. Oh, no, it was during the -- no, I had notes that I gave them during the -- when they came to my house the first time.

Q. You gave them your journal notes a few weeks ago, didn’t you?

A. No, I continuously give them notes.

Q. The notes you were referring to earlier that have a February 1st date are notes you gave them a couple of weeks ago?

A. That’s true. From the Neverland Valley book, right.

Q. Had you given them some notes before that recent date?

A. Well, it was an ongoing investigation, so I gave them notes all along. I was keeping in contact with people, so --

Q. You didn’t give them any of your notes until a few weeks ago, right?

A. Any of my notes? No.

MR. ZONEN: Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You mentioned someone named Stuart Backerman, right?

A. Uh-huh. Uh-huh.

Q. And when did you first meet Stuart Backerman?

A. When he was hired to come on for the “What More Can I Give?” project. Or was it -- no, he was hired for the -- for when he -- he came on -- excuse me. He came on when Ronald brought him on to work on the -- the -- kind of the fall-out of the Martin Bashir thing. That’s when I believe he started working.

Q. Did you work with him directly?

A. Yeah, he was in the office.

Q. How long did you work with him?

A. Couple months. Well, not really. I mean, probably a month and a half maybe.

Q. Now, in your notebook, you have phone numbers and fax numbers for Access Hollywood?

A. Yes.

Q. MTV?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Entertainment Tonight?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Have you ever talked to anyone associated with those organizations?

A. Yeah, they call -- they were all calling us.

Q. About the case?

A. About the case?

Q. Yes.

A. Not me. Marc did. But I just kept the phone calls because they called in.

Q. Did you listen in on any of Marc’s calls to the media?

A. A few of them. Like when he was -- like I said, he would have it on speakerphone, and you would just sit there and you would just listen.

Q. Did you ever become aware of Marc’s efforts to sell any information about Michael Jackson to the media?

MR. ZONEN: Assuming facts not in evidence. Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember discussing with Cindy Montgomery the possibility that she secretly videotaped Michael Jackson on an Xtra Jet flight?

A. Did I talk to her about it?

Q. Yes.

A. I just -- I don’t remember it. But probably did.

Q. Did you have a number of discussions with Cindy Montgomery about the claim that she had secretly videotaped Michael Jackson on an Xtra Jet flight?

MR. ZONEN: Assuming facts not in evidence, that she had secretly videotaped anyone.

THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember learning about that issue?
A. Yes.
MR. ZONEN: Objection; vague. What issue?
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Cindy Montgomery videotaping Michael Jackson on an Xtra Jet flight. Do you remember learning about that subject?
MR. ZONEN: Objection; assuming facts not in evidence.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever tell anyone you thought Cindy Montgomery secretly videotaped Michael Jackson on a flight?
MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as irrelevant; assumes facts not in evidence.
THE COURT: Overruled.
MR. ZONEN: And hearsay.
THE COURT: Overruled.
THE WITNESS: I don’t remember.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember talking with her about that subject?
A. Of her videotaping?
Q. The claim that she had.
A. That she -- what the news was reporting?
Q. Yes.
A. Yeah, I brought it up to her. I believe so.
Q. Did you ever tell anyone you thought she had done it?

A. I was uncertain.

Q. To your knowledge, how long had Cindy Montgomery been friendly with Marc Schaffel?

A. Well, I found out many things, but I found out that --

MR. ZONEN: Judge, I'm going to object. Lack of foundation, personal knowledge, and hearsay.

THE COURT: Foundation; sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: How many phone calls of Cindy Montgomery -- excuse me. How many phone conversations with Cindy Montgomery did you record?

MR. ZONEN: That was asked and answered. Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did anyone from the sheriff's department ask you to record a phone conversation with Cindy Montgomery?

A. No. But like I said, it just came on, so it was an accident. I acknowledge that.

Q. It was a what?

A. It was an accident. I acknowledge that.

Q. Okay. It was an accident that you recorded her?

A. It was an accident that the thing -- I didn't mean to record her.

Q. Okay. And how many times did you record her in total, do you think?

A. I think once or twice, because I wouldn’t get to the thing and pick it up right away.
Q. Okay. And was this at your home?
A. Yes.
Q. Were you recording these phone conversations out of your home?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Did the sheriffs give you some equipment to use to record those conversations?
A. I went and got it.
Q. Yourself?
A. Yes.
Q. Had you ever done that before you began to work with the sheriffs in this investigation?
A. Huh-uh.
Q. Did they tell you what equipment to buy?
A. No.
Q. Did you already know what kind of equipment to buy for that purpose?
A. I just walked into Radio Shack.
Q. And when was that?
A. I don’t recall.
Q. You used to discuss entertainment projects with Cindy Montgomery, right?
A. Correct.
Q. And why did you do that?
A. Because she had some good ideas.
Q. Was she involved with you in any 8897 entertainment projects?

A. Oh, yeah, we worked on Michael’s party together.

Q. And when was that?

A. September of ‘03.

Q. Was that a party at Neverland?

A. Yes. The Romero-Britto party.

Q. And you worked with Cindy Montgomery on that?

A. We did the -- we did the thing for the raffle, yes.

Q. And that was a charitable function?

A. I hope so. But, yes.

Q. It was a charitable function, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Schaffel was involved in that, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were working for Schaffel at that time, right?

A. Well, no, I was working for Neverland Valley Entertainment.

Q. And this was when, September of 2003?

A. Yes. They had asked me to -- to -- if I would be willing to do another fund-raising thing and basically -- and help Michael raise some money. And I thought maybe that might be a good idea.

Q. Were you suspicious at the time that the money might not go to charity?

A. Well, I was uncertain, but -- I don’t want to think the worst, but --
Q. Did you keep working for Neverland Valley after that date?
A. No.
Q. You didn’t work after September of 2003?
A. Oh, September 2003. Neverland Valley Entertainment, getting a check?
Q. Yes.
A. No.
Q. When was this event that you just described?
A. It was in September.
Q. Of what year?
A. I think 2003. 2003 or 2004. Maybe I’m wrong. I have a reference here. May I look at it?
Q. Sure.
A. Okay.
Q. Just looking for that day.
A. Yes. Yes, September 13th, 2003.
Q. And that was how long after you were relieved that the family escaped?
A. It was a while.
MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as asked and answered and argumentative.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember telling Cindy Montgomery in a recorded phone conversation regarding the Debbie Rowe interview that it was a sheet full of questions, in reference -- referring to the script? Do you remember that?

A. Yes, there was -- there was a few, in the beginning, a sheet full of questions, and then it turned into having answers on it.

Q. All right.

A. It wasn’t just one piece of paper, ever.

Q. During the time you worked with Marc Schaffel, how many times do you remember him going to Brazil?

A. Quite a few times.

Q. And over --

A. Four, five times, maybe.

Q. Over what period of time would that have been?

A. Over a couple of years, that I knew of.

Q. To your knowledge, did Cindy Montgomery book his trips to Brazil?

A. To my knowledge, yes.

Q. Do you know when you first talked to her?

A. About?

Q. Anything.

A. Probably not until the “What More Can I Give?” project. Probably June, June 2001, when she would call at the office.

Q. Do you remember giving the sheriffs your handwritten notes about the taping of the Arvizos --

A. Right.

Q. -- where you said you saw the script yourself. Questions only, no answers?

A. Yes. I wrote that.

Q. You gave those notes to the police, correct?

A. Right.

Q. You were referring to the taping of the Arvizos, right?

A. Correct. And then later on, I believe, in the notes I make another remark about it.

Q. Were you there during the taping of the Arvizos?

A. No. That was at Hamid's place.

Q. Did you ever meet Jay Jackson?

A. No.

Q. To your knowledge, has Ian Drew been speaking to Marc Schaffel as of late?

A. No. They don't like each other.

Q. Did they ever work together, to your knowledge?

A. Yeah, on the Debbie Rowe rebuttal.

Q. Did they work on any other projects together, to your knowledge?

A. The -- the one that was -- they were at, which was the Debbie Rowe rebuttal. I think there was something else, but -- I think there was something in regards to --

MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object to lack of foundation, unless it's based on personal knowledge.

THE COURT: Sustained. Foundation.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Now, you mentioned hearing some conversations that involved Mark Geragos, right?

A. Correct. He would call the office.

Q. Did you used to speak to Mark Geragos?

A. No, I didn’t speak to him.

Q. Ever spoken to him?

A. Just when he called the office.

Q. And did you ever actually have a conversation with him?

A. No.

Q. Do you recognize his voice if you hear it?

A. It’s pretty distinctive, but --

Q. Did you ever listen in on any discussions that Marc Schaffel had with Mark Geragos?

A. No.

Q. Well, in your response to the prosecutor’s questions, you, I think, gave a number of how many times you had -- you recall Geragos calling Schaffel, right?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And how many times do you recall Geragos calling Schaffel?

A. Well, he called quite a bit. When he -- Marc said that he only talked to him twice, but I know he was calling often when Vinnie was there.

Q. Did you hear anything that Mark Geragos ever said in those conversations?

A. Just updates.

Q. You heard him giving updates?

A. No, he -- he -- Vinnie was giving him updates.

Q. Could you hear Vinnie but not Geragos? Is that the way it worked?

A. Well, yeah.

Q. Were you in the room?

A. And then he would hang up, and I would go, “Who was that?” And he would go, “Oh, just Mark Geragos.”

Q. Were you in the room listening to Vinnie speak to Mr. Geragos?

A. Well, sometimes it’s -- well, it’s an office, so if you’re on the fax machine or you’re on the computer, you can hear people talking. So --

Q. Could you hear what Vinnie was saying?

A. Well, you could hear Vinnie, yes.

Q. Did you listen to his conversations with Mark Geragos?

A. I heard the conversation in a work setting.

Q. And was this one conversation?

A. No, there were a couple.

Q. And where did they take place?

A. At Neverland Valley Entertainment.

Q. Have you ever met Mark Geragos?

A. Huh-uh.

MR. MESEREAU: Let me take just one second.

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You took notes -- excuse me. You’ve been writing notes about this case almost up till the present, right?

A. Practically, uh-huh.

Q. And do you do this on a daily basis?

A. No.

Q. How often do you do it?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever tell any representative of the sheriff’s department that Dieter didn’t tell Michael Jackson everything?

A. None of them told everybody everything, so -- that’s an accurate statement, you know, because they had their own deal -- oops, sorry. They had their own deals they would do, and if they weren’t part of Michael, I don’t think they would tell him.

Q. During the time you worked with Neverland Valley, was it your perception that Schaffel was working closely with Dieter and Konitzer?

A. And Michael, yes.

Q. Well, but you’ve made -- excuse me. But you’ve told the police that you didn’t think Michael Jackson knew what they were doing, correct?

A. No, not what they were doing. Not every thing. There’s a difference.

Q. Do you recall anyone in the sheriff’s department ever giving you a police report to read and make corrections to?

A. Oh, I’m -- yes, I made corrections.

Q. And when did you do that, if you remember?

A. One of the meetings.

Q. Pardon me?

A. One of the meetings.

Q. Do you know who you were meeting with?

A. Yes.

Q. Who were you meeting with?

A. Gordon and Steve -- or was it -- oh, it was Gordon. It was Jeff Klapakis.

Q. And where did that meeting take place?

A. In their office.

Q. And did someone give you a police report about your interview to look at?

A. At that time?

Q. Yes.

A. No. They gave me a police report to look at later.

Q. When was that?

A. And I made corrections.

Q. When was that?

A. You know what? Honestly I don’t know.

Q. Were you given a copy of a police report about a past interview you’d had for you to correct?

A. Yes. Some of the words, like my name was misspelled and other things like that. Plus, I'd been getting phone threats, and I wanted to make sure they knew that I had been getting some phone threats lately.
Q. Well, my question is this: Who gave you a police report from a past interview to look at and make corrections?
A. Gordon.
Q. Gordon Auchincloss?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. All right. Did you do what he asked you to do?
A. He said to look it over, "Are these things spelled right? Are these things right?" And I did.
Q. And when did that meeting take place?
A. I told you, I don't exactly remember.
Q. Was it recently?
A. No. It was a while -- a while ago. Maybe a couple months ago, yeah.
Q. A couple of months ago?
A. Yeah, probably a couple months ago.
Q. And what report were you -- excuse me. The report that Mr. Auchincloss gave you to look at --
A. Uh-huh.
Q. -- concerned an interview that was very old, did it not?
A. Yeah. Like I said to you prior, that, you 8906 know, when that interview was taking place, I was very nervous, and I could expand on certain things a little bit better, bring clarity to it.

Q. And is that what you and Mr. Auchincloss discussed the purpose of your looking at that report was?

A. No, he just said correct the spelling, and if there’s something that’s totally wrong, just make a mark on it.

Q. This is a report about an interview that had happened a long time ago, correct?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember looking at that report of your prior interview where you talked about Schaffel and Dieter and Konitzer doing things you thought were wrong?

A. Yeah. I always thought that.

Q. And while you were sitting with Prosecutor Auchincloss, you decided to add the name “Michael Jackson,” right?

A. No. God, no.

Q. Did you ever add “Michael Jackson” to any report that he gave you to correct?

A. I added -- added “Michael Jackson.” Yes, I added “Michael Jackson,” because that’s what I knew from those two conference calls. That’s it.

Q. He wanted you to add the name “Michael Jackson” because it didn’t appear in your original interview, right?

A. No, he didn’t want me to add it.

Q. Well, that’s what you did, isn’t it?

A. I added it, because it was correct.

Q. So you were correcting a statement you made well over a year ago where you said Schaffel, Konitzer and Dieter were doing incorrect things?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And suddenly, right before the trial, you handwrote in an additional name, Michael Jackson, right?

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as argumentative; and narrative in the questioning.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions at this time, Your Honor.

Just one second, Your Honor. I’ve got a bunch of stuff to move.

Thank you.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Mr. Provencio, did anybody in law enforcement ever ask you to change your testimony?

A. No.

Q. Did anybody in law enforcement ever ask you to create facts to help this prosecution?

A. Absolutely not.
Q. Would you have done such a thing?
A. No.
Q. Did Mr. Auchincloss ever ask you to change any of the factual content in your report?
A. No.
Q. What exactly did he ask you to do with regards to that report?
A. Look it over, make sure things are right, that they're spelled right. And my name was even spelled wrong. And I didn't give a taped recording, so I know it was kind of handwritten-note-driven and there was things missing. Because if you're not tape-recorded, then it can't be like a transcript form.
Q. And did you make changes on that report?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Did you believe that there was a statement that missed Mr. Jackson's name that should have been included?
A. Yes. That's why.
Q. What was it that you believed that Mr. Jackson's name should have been included on?
A. That he knew what was going on along with everyone else, he knew what was happening.
Q. What did you base that on?
A. The conversation I heard.
Q. You had had many conversations with Mr. 8909

Jackson over the two years you worked for Neverland Valley Entertainment; is that correct?

A. Not tons and tons, but many, yes.

Q. And had overheard many conversations that he had with Mr. Schaffel?

A. That's correct.

Q. Did you -- was it your experience that Mr. Jackson was actively involved in his own businesses?

A. He's a brilliant businessman. He knows what's going on.

Q. And he would ask questions frequently?

A. He wanted updates.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Do you have the notebook with you that contains that note that you wrote on -- that is dated February 1, '03?

A. May I look?

Q. Please.

A. Okay. In regards to the conference call?

Q. It was a note that was shown to you by Mr. Mesereau.

Could I approach the witness?

THE COURT: Yes.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Do you have that with you?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you pull it out, please?

A. Okay. Oh, here it is. Is it this one? Yeah.
Q. Those are the original notes; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And may I take a look at it?
A. Sure.
Q. Now, you -- are these the notes that you refer to as the ones that went into a storage locker?
A. Yes. And I have the storage locker thing to show that that’s when I found them.
Q. Would this be the front of the notebook here?
A. Yeah. It looks juvenile, but, yeah.
Q. That’s all right. We have “N-V-E” --
A. Right.
Q. -- in kind of block letters. Is that Neverland Valley Entertainment?
A. Right.
Q. All right. Now, as we proceed to the section that has February 1, ‘03 -- and you see that page right here; is that correct?
A. Uh-huh. Uh-huh.
Q. Now, let’s back up one, two pages.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. And this would be closer to the front of the notebook; is that correct?

A. Right.

Q. And here we have a date, February 17, ‘03?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Can you explain how that is, that you have an entry from February 17 closer to the front of the notebook and this reference that Mr. Mesereau talked to you about, February 1, ‘03, two full pages beyond? How is that?

A. Well, my notebook’s random. I doodle in it. I mean, I flick -- open a page that’s open, and I just write. Then there’s -- it’s on both sides. I’ve got horrible drawings, and that’s what -- that’s what my notebook is. It’s for me and my eyes only, so it’s not really meant for other people to see and care about it.

Q. I guess the question, then, is this: Should we assume that the order in which we see the pages is the order in which they’re entered?

A. Oh, no. For -- if it’s -- if the first page is supposed to be January 1st and then the third page, you know, or second page January 2nd, no, it’s not written like a diary.

It’s written like a notebook would, from an office. You just scribble on whatever you scribble on. This is the notebook I just carried around.

Q. Now, this notebook ended up in a storage locker; is that correct?

A. Yes.

THE COURT: All right. We’ll take our break.

(Recess taken.)

MR. ZONEN: May I proceed?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: I’d like to go back to a couple more inquiries about that notation in your notebook that includes the reference to --

BAILIFF CORTEZ: Turn your microphone on, sir.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Let me go back to that notation in your notes of February 1, ‘03. You had testified as to the paragraph that was right after February 1, ‘03, and then another paragraph that followed after that, “Family in danger.”

A. Uh-huh.

Q. “Who are these killers? Nobody but the press are calling.”

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Do you have an opinion as to whether or not that paragraph was written on February 1, ‘03?

A. Well, like I said to Mr. Mesereau, that’s a different paragraph with the slant going different, and it’s a different kind of writing. I have different style writing, and like I showed everybody, including Mr. Mesereau, I scribble and write all over the place.

Q. Okay. But the question is, do you have an opinion as to whether that paragraph was written on a day other than February 1, ‘03?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. What is that opinion?

A. I just -- I just wrote it as I heard it, and it was later.

Q. At a later time?

A. Yeah.

Q. Do you have any way of knowing how much later that was?

A. Not unless I put a date on it.

Q. And you didn’t put a date on it on this occasion?

A. Huh-uh.

Q. Is your handwriting different in that paragraph than the paragraph that precedes it, the paragraph directly above it?

A. Yes, as in all -- my whole book I have different styles of writing based on urgency. And if I take my time, I really write well, and if I don’t, it looks like chicken scratch.

Q. Let’s go to the paragraph above it. There’s some reference to Mexicans in that, and there are a few references in your notes to that, correct?

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. When did you first hear that reference to Mexicans?

A. It was when the family first came to the -- Neverland Valley Entertainment and Gavin came in and went down to the bathroom.

Q. All right. Was that after the 1st of February?

A. That was -- yeah, that would have been after the 1st, but I had heard -- I had heard them talk about them --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Reference to “them.”

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Who are you talking about, “them”?

A. The family.

Q. The Arvizo family?

A. Yeah.

Q. All right. When was the first time you heard Marc Schaffel speak in a derogatory fashion about the Arvizo family?

A. Well, unfortunately, Marc is catty and spoke in derogatory terms about everybody. And so the first time, I think, was actually in January. But I don’t think I wrote it down till later. You know, not right when he said it, but when I heard it the next time, I wrote it down.

Q. Were you hearing conversation from Marc Schaffel about the Arvizo family as soon as you had read the transcript that was delivered to you by Kathryn Milofsky?

A. Yes. Oh, absolutely.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: When did you first start hearing commentary from Marc Schaffel about the Arvizo family?

A. That day.

Q. What day?

A. The 24th of January.

Q. And the 24th of January was --

A. I believe it was the 24th of January.

Q. Was what?

A. Oh -- oh, ‘03.

Q. When you received the transcript?

A. Right.

Q. Did the commentary from Mr. Schaffel about the Arvizo family change over time?

A. Well, the --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: You told us that at some stage they were speaking favorably of the Arvizo family?

A. Right.

Q. Who is “they”?

A. Vinnie, Frank, Marc, you know, because Marc had already started talking to -- he had been speaking to Frank for a while, trying to ingratiate himself back into Michael’s world and stuff. And he was informed from Ronald and Dieter, and this is what Marc had told me, that there was this family that the boy had cancer. And so they were wonderful, good people at that time. And so I heard that early on.

Q. Did they discuss the family in a religious context?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What did they say?
A. They were deeply religious, so -- Catholic I believe is what he said.
Q. Now, you’ve mentioned the term “crack whore.”
A. Oh, yeah.
Q. And who used that term?
A. They all did.
Q. When?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Who are “all,” if that sentence is even close to permissible?
A. Vinnie, Frank, Marc.
Q. I’m sorry?
A. Vinnie, Frank and Marc.
Q. Vinnie, Frank and Marc all used that term?

A. Yeah. I double-checked, and I said, “Did you see them smoke crack? On the ranch?” See, that didn’t make any sense.

Q. Did anybody acknowledge actually seeing anybody in the Arvizo family smoking crack?

A. No.

Q. Did you confront each of them with that?

A. Yeah, I asked them, because it just sounded stupid.

Q. Did all three of them use that expression?

A. Yeah, they said that, “Oh, well, no, Marc told me they were using crack.” And then, “No, Frank told me she was using.”

And I was like, “Oh, whatever.” So it was like --

Q. Did they say who in the Arvizo family was using crack?

A. The mom.

Q. The reference on that note on February 1, ‘03, to “Mom flipping out,” who was it who told you that?

A. Marc did.

Q. Did he --

A. Because -- oh. Sorry.

Q. Did he give you any other information about that?

A. No, not really, because I don’t know what she was flipping out about. I mean, she was kind of -- as I said, she was kind of cuckoo, so it could have been anything, I guess.

Q. And the reference to the subsequent paragraph where it says, “Who are these killers? Nobody but the press are calling” --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- what does that mean, “Nobody but the press are calling”?

A. Well, the 24th transcript comes, and the press are already calling. They want to ingratiate themselves to either Marc or whoever. That’s the game. You know, you get there first. You’re buddy-buddy.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did anybody from the press mention anything about killers?

A. No.

Q. Did you receive any telephone calls from people voicing threats against anyone?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I never -- I never heard any threats coming in.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you know anything about threats at all --

A. Huh-uh.

Q. -- other than these statements about killers?

A. I was hearing about this. That’s why I wrote it down. I was like, “What the hell? What are the killers?”

Q. The conversation you had with Ian Drew where the word “escape” came in, when was that conversation?

A. Gosh. A while ago.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; assumes facts not in evidence.

THE COURT: Overruled. The answer is in. Next question.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you begin recording conversations with people prior to the involvement of law enforcement?

A. No.

Q. Why did you record telephone conversations?

A. Well, I -- everybody had been doing so much shady crap, and I just was like -- I was just tired of it, you know. I was just tired, because it was involving me still and ruining my career, and I just figured, “You know what? I’m just going to do this for the right people and I am going to do it.”

And, you know, I hem-hawed for a long time, because I knew it would really -- in Hollywood, that would ruin your career.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. Well, it’s -- you know, it’s -- you don’t want people to think that of you. But I did it because I made a choice. You know, like I even told my father on his deathbed. He said, you know, “You have to live your life without regret.”

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; move to strike.
THE COURT: As to the last sentence, I’ll strike it.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Do you believe there’s going to be a consequence for you in your profession for having cooperated with law enforcement?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; calls for speculation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Have you had a consequence to your profession because of your involvement in this case?
A. Oh, yeah.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; calls for speculation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What is Steal the Stage, LLC?
A. It was a company that basically Vinnie, Marc -- and I don’t remember if Frank was involved or not, like I said before, but we decided that maybe we should open an LLC. It was in the office. It was early, whatever, but -- so that we could possibly do other things outside the realm of 8921

Michael Jackson. Not just use Michael Jackson’s name for things, but do our own things.

Q. Did you ever begin working on such a thing?

A. No. Nothing ever happened with it.

Q. Was there any project that had ever actually been commenced?

A. No.

Q. What did you mean by the statement “making money off or with Michael Jackson” in reference to Marc Schaffel?

A. Well, they would use his name to, you know, make money. I mean, they would -- you know, some things he was included and did things with, and then some things, you know, Marc was doing his own thing. So --

Q. Like what?

A. You know, like him and Dieter wanted to put out some book. You know, it was a table -- coffee table book or something. And it had Michael’s authorization, but they were kind of doing it. You know, but I wasn’t really -- the details on exactly who knew what, or whatever, isn’t clear to me. But I knew that that was something that they were pursuing, but it didn’t necessarily need Michael’s involvement every day like something like working on a charity single did.

Q. Did you believe that that was going to profit somebody other than Michael Jackson?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Calls for speculation; leading; foundation.

MR. ZONEN: It’s in response to his questions.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.

A. Everybody would have benefited I’m sure.

Q. Including Michael Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see at any time Marc Schaffel involved in any activity that you believed was done for purposes of cheating Michael out of money?

A. I think -- well, that’s why I kind of kept on keeping track. I was trying to figure out what the whole story was. So to answer yes or no, I guess -- I guess it would have to be probably -- I would say yes. He was doing things, and some things --

Q. Like what?

A. Well, like I don’t know if that coffee table book thing was on the level, you know.

Q. Okay.

A. And there was these MJ speakers. Like where in the heck did those come from? You know, all of a sudden --

Q. What is an MJ speaker?

A. I don’t know. They had some speakers that --

Q. Are you speaking people speaking, or --
A. Like speakers for his home stereo system. I was just like, “Where did those come from? And what the world were those?”
Q. Did you ever inquire as to whether that was a project that did or did not have Mr. Jackson’s permission?
A. It had his name on it, and Dieter and Ronald were practically living at the ranch, so when they showed up, I just was like -- also, they showed up at the RMAs in Las Vegas.
Q. All right. But did you have any information from any of them that these were projects that were done to the exclusion of Michael Jackson?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.
MR. ZONEN: I’m sorry, I didn’t hear.
THE COURT: All right. You may answer that “yes” or “no.” Do you want the question read back?
THE WITNESS: Yes, please.
(Record read.)
THE WITNESS: No, not the exclusion. They always said that Michael knew.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. What was Frank Cascio’s relationship with Michael Jackson?
A. He was a family friend.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: During the time that you knew both Frank Cascio and Michael Jackson, did you see them together?

A. Yeah, at the ranch and at the studio.

Q. Did you see them interact with one another?

A. Yeah. Especially at the studio.

Q. Did Michael Jackson ever tell you about his relationship with Frank Cascio?

A. No. Frank told me.

Q. Did -- did -- during the entirety of your two years of dealing with Michael Jackson or Neverland Valley Entertainment, was Frank Cassidy involved?

A. Cassidy?

Q. Excuse me, Frank Cascio.

A. Okay. Was he involved?

Q. Was he involved?

A. Yes.

Q. So was there any time during the time that you were involved with Neverland Valley Entertainment that you were not dealing at one point or another with Frank Cascio?

A. Gosh, you know what? No, because he was there bringing -- he would come to the studio, and then -- and then, you know, when, you know, there was the firing.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.

THE WITNESS: Oh.

THE COURT: After “No,” I’ll sustain that.

MR. MESEREAU: Move to strike.
THE COURT: Strike it after “No.”
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Mr. Mesereau had asked you if you had made the statement in an interview that Debbie Rowe was honest and sincere in her interview.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Do you recall making that statement?
A. Not really, no.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; asked and answered.
MR. ZONEN: Not by me.
THE COURT: The objection is overruled. And he did answer the question.
THE WITNESS: I’m sorry --
MR. ZONEN: The answer is in?
THE COURT: The answer is in. He said, “No.”
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Do you believe that Debbie Rowe was honest and sincere in her interview?
A. No.
Q. I’m sorry?
A. No.
Q. Mr. Mesereau was asking you questions about your answers to questions put to you by Detective Sergeant Robel in the January 24, ‘04, interview.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Did you have any pre-notice about that interview?
A. Pre-notice?

Q. Yeah. Did they call you in advance and say they were going to be coming by to ask you some questions?

A. In the very first time I meet them?

Q. That’s right.

A. No.

Q. Was that interview conducted on the very day that you met them?

A. Yeah. They just asked me basic questions.

Q. How long was that interview?

A. God, not more than 30 minutes. I mean, it was just like, “Where’s your car? Is this your computer?” Things like that.

Q. And you did cooperate with them; is that correct?

A. Yeah. I gave them my notes.

Q. Now, in the course of this interview, were they interested in conversations that you had with any of these other people that you’ve been testifying about today?

A. Well, yeah, but, you know, I was outside in pajamas, so it wasn’t like I was going to go very far.

Q. Is it the case that you were giving them as much information as you were able to recollect on a moment’s notice in your pajamas --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: -- about many people?

MR. MESEREAU: Move to strike.
THE COURT: Yes. Stricken.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Were you really in your pajamas?
A. Yeah. I was -- I was in my pajamas and freaking out, yeah.
Q. And in this 30-minute conversation, did you give them as much information as came to mind at that time?
A. Yeah. I mean --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What were the difficulties in your being able to recall facts at that time?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: I was just extremely nervous. Here was -- here was one explosion -- yet another Neverland explosion, so -- happening at my front door.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What does the expression “all fingers point to Marc” mean?
A. He was organizing, informing. He was taking care of some of the business of, you know, paying Vinnie and Frank. You know, money, receipts. It was a lot of, you know, that kind of business going on.

Q. There was a woman Mr. Mesereau asked you about from Japan. There was a woman that Mr. Mesereau asked you about from Japan. His question suggested that Mr. Schaffel stole from that woman.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Do you have information about that encounter?

A. I just know that -- that he had bragged and said that -- he didn't brag, per se, but he just said -- later on I said, "Well, how did you get that money?" And he said, "Oh, well, she died. It doesn't matter."

Q. All right. What was the nature of the transaction between this woman and Mr. Schaffel?

A. She was going to try to buy the rights to "What More Can I Give?" I guess, and then -- and hopefully Marc was going to convince Michael to do a show in Japan.

Q. All right. Did she advance money in that effort?

A. Yes.

Q. And then she died?

A. Then she died.

Q. Was it your belief that Mr. Schaffel should have returned the money to the family?

A. Absolutely. Absolutely.

Q. And he did not do that?

A. Yeah, and like I said, I didn't know exact -- you know, contract, maybe there was some clause in there, but I just thought it was the right thing to do. If somebody dies and you're in it, in the middle of an agreement, then you should give that money back, especially like a million bucks.

Q. You gave your point back to Mr. Jackson, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have a conversation with Mr. Schaffel at that time suggesting that he do the same with his points?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you?

A. I thought -- I thought we were all giving our points back because that was the right thing to do.

Q. Did he tell you whether or not he would do that?

A. He never answered me, but then I didn't care anymore.

Q. Do you know whether or not he did that?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know what your point was worth?

A. Well, I got an offer of a million bucks for it from this guy from Korea.

Q. Did you turn it down?

A. Oh, yeah. I turned it down.

Q. Why?

A. I mean, Michael gave it to me in the spirit of good faith. And I thought it was -- you know, that was going to be worth a lot of money, so I gave it back because I couldn’t miss what I didn’t have. And I thought -- I kind of felt sad for everybody. I mean, I kind of felt sad. I loved them and at the same time didn’t like what they were doing, but I felt sad for them, and at the same time I kind of figured, you know, I was a good person coming into this, and I think that I’ll be an okay person leaving, too, so --

Q. Are you intending on writing a book on this matter?

A. No, I’m not intending to write a book.

Q. What was the meaning of the reference, the statement to Cindy Montgomery?

A. The book just means this is a book. I mean, this is like -- this is like a story I don’t think anybody would believe. I mean, this is just -- it’s outrageous. It’s really an outrageous, ridiculous train wreck story.

Q. You said to Mr. Mesereau you weren’t allowed to talk on the phone at Neverland. What did you mean by that?

A. Oh. I was just told by everybody not to talk on the phone. We were always monitored.

That’s what I -- that’s why I didn’t really feel bad recording people. I was always monitored, so what the heck.
Q. Who told you that?
A. Frank, Vinnie and Marc.
MR. MESEREAU: Object.
THE WITNESS: Because I would say something, and they would shut me up and say, “Don’t say that on the phone here.” And I was like, “Oh, okay.”
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: You told Mr. Mesereau that Mr. Jackson gave one million dollars to Marlon Brando. Is that true?
A. Yes.
Q. When did that take place?
A. Right after the 30th Anniversary Special in New York before September 11. But the check actually didn’t get -- you know, because we were stuck there in New York. The check didn’t actually get to Marlon Brando until afterwards.
Q. When was the direction from Mr. Jackson to turn a million dollars over to Marlon Brando?
A. Well, he was upset that Marlon Brando got booed and just said, you know, in that kind of deeper voice, he just says, “You got to give him a million dollars.” And we were just like, you know, stunned.
Q. And where did this money come from?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Were you present at the time Mr. Jackson made that statement?

A. Yeah, we were in the dressing room. We were in the back.

Q. To whom did he make that statement?

A. To Marc.

Q. Were you there at that time?

A. Yeah, we were both standing there, because we were both -- our faces were set to stun, really. You know, I wanted to get booed, so --

(Laughter.)

Q. Incidentally, do you know what Marlon Brando did to warrant being booed?

A. Yeah.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; relevance.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. Let's go back to the million dollars. Was he paid a million dollars, Mr. Brando?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you have an opportunity to look at the bank records dealing with that transaction?

A. I saw the check.

Q. You saw the check. The check was made on whose account?

A. Neverland Valley Entertainment.

Q. All right. How long after that encounter was that check written on Neverland Valley Entertainment?

A. Well, as soon as we got back, because we flew back private jet. So as soon as we got back, you know, he started working and complaining about it.

Q. So was this part of the money that came from the Parviz loan?

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. This was part of your operations money; is that right?

A. Uh-huh.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: At the time the police came to your house when you were in your pajamas, did they have a search warrant?

A. They had one with them, but they didn’t need to serve it.

Q. And why is that?

A. Because I believe -- I believe that you should work with law enforcement.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Objection. Nonresponsive; relevance.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: You’ve been in the music industry, I think you said, 20 years; is that right?

A. Yeah, 20 years. Started when I was 18.
Q. Have you been involved with albums before?
A. Yeah, plenty.
Q. Are you familiar with people putting credits on the album jacket?
A. They're called liner notes, yes.
Q. Called what?
A. Liner notes.
Q. Liner notes; is that right?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. All right. Is it generally the habit and custom of artists to do that for people who they're close to or people who have a particular interest in the production of that album?
A. Yeah. Oh, yeah.
Q. Is it generally the case that they hold them in high regard?
A. Yes.
Q. Would there be people contained --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; move to strike; and calls for speculation.
THE COURT: I'll strike the last answer. Sustain the objection.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Is there any expectation in the record industry that a person would automatically be included in one of these things?
A. Huh-uh.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; calls for speculation; relevance.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. ZONEN: I have no further questions.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Now, Mr. Provencio, on cross-examination you admitted having a discussion with Cindy Montgomery about your notes and saying to her the following: “I’ll give my lawyer the bullet points, overview, but not giving him my detailed notes. Are you kidding me? That’s a book, honey.”

A. Uh-huh.

Q. What is your explanation now for that?

A. It’s -- it’s like -- it’s like a really bad fairy tale that -- it’s like a book nobody would believe. I mean, you wouldn’t believe it if you read it. It’s kind of unbelievable. It’s an unbelievable story, I think.

Q. Were you telling the jury when you made that statement in a recorded phone call with Cindy Montgomery you were not referring to your writing a book?

A. Not at that time.

Q. Whose book were you referring to when you said --

A. The tale.

Q. -- when you said, “That’s a book, honey”?

A. That’s a book. It’s a tale. It’s like an unbelievable tale and a book.

Q. When you said, “I’ll give my lawyer the bullet points,” which lawyer were you talking about?

A. An entertainment lawyer that I dealt with.

Q. You said, “I’ll give my lawyer the bullet points, overview, but not giving him my detailed notes. Are you kidding me? That’s a book, honey.”

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Are you telling -- excuse me. Are you testifying under oath that you were not referring to your writing a book?

A. That’s true.

Q. Okay. All right.

Now, the prosecutor for the government asked you some questions about your interview with Sergeant Robel of January 31st, 2004, correct?

A. Who’s the government? I’m sorry.

Q. These guys.

A. Oh. Okay. Law enforcement. Okay. So, state your question again, please. I’m sorry.

Q. The prosecutor asked you about your interview with Sergeant Robel of January 31st, 2004, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. That’s when you say you were in your pajamas and just don’t remember a lot of things, right?

A. Well, when the police show up, you freak out, so, yeah, that’s true.

Q. So you told Sergeant Robel in that interview that you were going to tell him everything you knew, but you didn’t want to be recorded, correct?

A. Oh, no, that was an interview -- oh, the 2000 -- wait. Hold on a second. So when they came to my house and served me with a search warrant, are you talking about that particular time, or are you talking about --

Q. Excuse me. I’m sorry. Let me rephrase the question.

A. Okay.

Q. You were interviewed by Sergeant Robel on January 31st, 2004, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Is that the interview you claim you gave while you were in your pajamas?

A. If that’s the interview at the hotel, I was not in my pajamas. The time I was in my pajamas is when they first came to my house with a search warrant.

Q. There are nine pages of comments you made about these events in that interview, right?

A. Uh-huh. I guess, if they’re there.

Q. Well, the interview took place January 31st, 2004, right?

A. Where? Does it say where?

Q. It says “in Los Angeles area.”
A. Okay.
Q. Right?
A. Not Calabasas?
Q. You gave an interview on January 31st, 2004, to Sergeant Robel, correct?
A. Right. Right.
Q. You said in that interview you were going to tell him everything you knew, but you didn’t want it tape-recorded, right?
A. Correct.
Q. You were given that report recently to look at, correct?
A. To correct spelling. I corrected the spelling.
Q. Well, you did a lot more than that with it, didn’t you?
A. Well --
MR. ZONEN: Objection; asked and answered.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: Yes, I made -- because it was not taped, I guess not everything I know is in my head made it on that piece of paper.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: So approximately two weeks ago would be --
A. Uh-huh.
Q. -- April of 2005, correct?

A. Right.

Q. Prosecutor Auchincloss gives you a police report about your interview on January 31st, 2004, right?

A. Right. The book, or whatever.

Q. He says, “Read it and correct it,” right?

A. No. He says -- he says, “Look it over.” “Look it over. Is this information correct, to your best ability?”

Q. And you started adding the name Michael Jackson to statements you had made about Dieter, Konitzer and Schaffel --

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Asked and answered; exceeding the scope of the redirect.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Was your memory of these events better two weeks ago than it was on January 31st, 2004, Mr. Provencio?

A. No, it’s like riding a bike. You either remember or you don’t remember. It’s in your head or it’s not. Like I remember what people wear, their shoes, if they smell. You know, weird things like that.

Q. Now, let me get this straight, your comments about your notes on February 1st, 2003.

A. Okay.

Q. You have a -- you put down “February 1st, 2003,” on the pad, correct?

A. Uh-huh. Straight up and down.

Q. You wrote a paragraph that goes how many lines under that day?

A. Four. In -- but the four -- the four lines are slanted to the right. So the “February 1st, ‘03” slanted upward and it says, “Family-kids,” and then there’s a couple lines and it slants to the right.

Q. Okay. And in that paragraph you say Schaffel made a derogatory comment about Mexican people, right?

A. That’s correct. And I’m Mexican.

Q. And you talk about “Mom flipping out” in that first paragraph, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Right?

A. Correct.

Q. In the next paragraph, you talk about a family, right?

A. Well, yeah, but it’s written in different writing again, so it’s --

Q. You say --

A. It’s a different paragraph. It’s a different paragraph. I’m scribbling at a different time.

Q. You say “Who are these killers?” in that paragraph, right?

A. Yes, uh-huh. Because the press are calling, 8941 and it’s after the 24th. So they were already calling.

Q. And you wrote those words underneath the date February 1st, 2003?

A. The first paragraph that you are referring to --

Q. Yes.

A. -- the first two lines --

Q. Yes.

A. -- “Family-kids” is written under February the 1st. There’s a paragraph there with different kinds of handwriting, and then it shoots down to another paragraph.

Q. Okay.

A. And that’s -- that’s -- you know, those things are unrelated thoughts, and they’re just scribbling thoughts.

Q. Sir, look at the last sentence that you wrote --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- on the first paragraph. Do you see that?

A. “I thought they used to be good people.”

Q. Right.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Are you saying that that handwriting is different from the handwriting in the next paragraph?

A. It’s similar, but I know my handwriting 8942 enough to know when I write things, so --

Q. It’s the same style of handwriting, true?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: So answer?

THE COURT: Yeah.

THE WITNESS: Okay. I don’t believe so. I think it’s different.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: How is it different?

A. Well, first of all, “family” is written different. It’s a different paragraph. If you take a look at the entire -- if the jury could see the entire thing, there’s many things on a piece of paper, and it all looks like kind of a collision/ mess, because it’s not meant to be an exact narrative. It’s meant for me to remember certain things as they occurred.

Q. During the break, the last break, did you talk to Prosecutor Zonen about your testimony?

A. Yes. I asked about -- I asked a couple questions.

Q. Did he ask you any questions?

A. He wanted to know about the threatening phone calls that I got.

Q. Did he tell you anything about what you had testified to?

A. Yes, he asked me a question, “Did you tell the truth?” And I told him, “Yes.”

Q. Did he ask you anything -- excuse me. Did he tell you anything about what he was going to ask you after the break?

A. No. He just asked me to clarify something for him on the date.

Q. Did he discuss your police interview of January 31st, 2004?

A. No.

Q. Isn’t it true that when you were interviewed by the sheriffs on January 31st, 2004, you did not hand over any notes?

A. I don’t know. Is that what it says? I’d have to look at it, but I don’t -- did I not hand over notes at that time?

Q. You didn’t hand over any notes during your police interview on January 31st, 2004.

A. When they came to my house? I sure did.

Q. When you were interviewed in the Los Angeles area, you gave no notes, correct, to Sergeant Robel?

A. I did give him notes, because I even gave him the address book. I remember that.

Q. So the report should reflect that, in your mind, right?

A. It should, yeah.

Q. When did you discuss these notes you had lost, the ones you took -- you turned over a couple weeks ago?

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Misstates the 8944 evidence, that they were lost.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When did you discover the notes that you had kept in storage all this time but I believe you said you forgot about?

A. I had stuck them in a box. I thought they were just lost. Like I said, I just stuck them in storage.

Q. And you found them when?

A. Do you want me to look? I can tell you exact dates.

Q. Approximately.

A. I have the receipt right here. Do you want me to look?

Q. Sure.

A. I believe I brought the receipt. Mid-April.

Q. That’s this year?

A. Yes, this year.

Q. Now, Prosecutor Zonen asked you a question on redirect examination about whether you thought Debbie Rowe was honest and sincere in her responses during the interview, right?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Did you discuss that issue with him during the break?

A. No.

Q. But you admit that on January 31st, 2004, you told Sergeant Robel that Debbie Rowe was honest and sincere in her responses, right?

A. Yes, some of it was. I think some of it was.

Q. You didn’t say “some of it.” You said she was honest and sincere in her responses?

A. Well, it wasn’t recorded. I know what I meant is that some of it was sincere.

Q. Okay.

A. She wanted her kids back, to see them.

Q. Just to clarify something in your notes of February 1st, 2003, you say that, “Mom’s flipping out about something,” correct?

A. Uh-huh. Yes.

Q. And you’re referring to Mrs. Arvizo, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Whom, at that point, you had never met, right?

A. No, just heard about.

Q. And that’s before the Bashir documentary aired in the United States, correct?

A. And after the transcript was received on the 24th of January, correct.

Q. By you, right?

A. I received it. Marc received it.

Q. Do you agree that in every police interview you’ve done, you’ve never mentioned the transcript of February 24?

A. I don’t know if I did or didn’t, but I know when I got it, because I had the e-mail.

MR. MESEREAU: I have no further questions.

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Do you remember to whom you turned over your notes when the police arrived at your door?

A. Who did I turn them over to?

Q. Yes.

A. The police officers.

Q. Do you remember which one that was?

A. Steve Robel and Jeff Klapakis -- Klapakis.

Q. Do you know whether it was Lieutenant Klapakis or if it was Sergeant Robel?

A. Yes, it was those two.

Q. It was those two, all right.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Was that on the first occasion that they came to your door?

A. Yes.

Q. That was at the time they had a search warrant?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. The interview that took place was at a -- was there some level of interview that was done at that time, at the time of the search warrant?

A. Yeah, but it was like I’m outside, and it’s cold, and I’m freaking out, there’s cops everywhere.

Q. Was there a follow-up interview that then took place --

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. -- soon thereafter?

A. Yep.

Q. Approximately how long after that was the follow-up interview?

A. I don’t remember. I just remember it was in the Calabasas area.

Q. Do you remember if it was longer than a week or two after the initial arriv --

A. No, I think it was within the first two weeks of that.

Q. Did you have additional notes to turn over on that occasion?

A. Yeah, just stuff -- you know, I mean, they asked, “Where’s your computer?” You know, “Do you have some notes?” And I said, “Yes, there’s some right here.”

You know, “What other information” -- “Can we talk to you outside?” And I said, “That’s okay.”

And I agreed -- you know, I mean, I was scared, but I agreed to, because I just felt that that was the right thing to do.

Q. Over the months that followed, did you take additional notes?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you turn those notes over periodically to Detective Robel, Detective Sergeant Robel or to Lieutenant Klapakis?

A. Yes.

MR. ZONEN: No further questions.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.

THE WITNESS: Okay. Where do I go?

THE COURT: Call your next witness.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, at this time we have some items to be moved into evidence.

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, we're going to start with a series of records that have been marked as People's 250 for identification purposes. It's one, two, three, four, five, six, seven -- eight pages, front and back. And I believe there's a stipulation that they may come into evidence.

MR. SANGER: Yes. So stipulated, Your Honor.

MR. SNEDDON: In addition to that, Your Honor, there are a series of records.

THE COURT: Just a moment.

MR. SNEDDON: I'm sorry? I guess I should wait.

THE COURT: 250 through 258?

MR. SNEDDON: No, 250 only, Your Honor. That's all one document.

THE COURT: Those are pages 1 through 8?

MR. SANGER: For the record, I think we should say they're records pertaining to Xtra Jet and Chris Tucker.

MR. SNEDDON: That's correct.

THE COURT: All right. No objection, 250 is admitted.

MR. SNEDDON: And then there is a series of records, Your Honor, from the Country Inn & Suites which have been provided through the custodian of records, and we've had a chance to look at them. And we're moving that People's 219, 220, 221 and 222 be admitted into evidence. They're all records dealing with the Calabasas Inn.

MR. SANGER: No objection.

THE COURT: They're admitted.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, Mr. Provencio was our last witness. However, there still remains the outstanding issue of the documents that are before the Court under consideration, and there are one other set of records that just came in today that I need to look at with counsel, but beyond that, we'd be prepared to rest.

And, oh, also we need to go over the exhibits, because there are several exhibits that you deferred ruling on, and we need to address those.

So there's some miscellaneous items that need to be done, but other than that, in terms of live witnesses, we're prepared to rest once all these are cleared up.

THE COURT: You're resting subject to those issues?

MR. SNEDDON: I am, Your Honor.

THE COURT: The Court will make the following rulings on the 400 series, which I've been briefed by both sides on and listened to the evidence:

401 is admitted.

402 is excluded as cumulative and restricted financial information.

405 is admitted. 409 is admitted. 410 is admitted. 413 is admitted.

And 423 is admitted -- no, excuse me, I'm excluding 423.

So then that leaves what issues?

MR. SNEDDON: I'm sorry.

THE COURT: I'm just waiting for --

MR. SNEDDON: We're consulting. We don't....

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

MR. SNEDDON: Judge, there are -- do you have your court exhibit sheet handy, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: There are several items that have been marked for identification but have not yet been admitted into evidence. We would be moving --

MR. SANGER: I didn’t know he was going to do that. Can I have a moment to get my sheet out?

MR. SNEDDON: Go ahead.

THE COURT: I was just thinking we could let the jury go a few minutes early, because we can go through the admitting of them.

MR. SNEDDON: That’s fine, Your Honor. That’s --

THE COURT: Let me speak to the jury for a second.

MR. SANGER: Excuse me. Just for planning -- I’m very sorry to interrupt, but there will be a motion when the People rest. For planning.

THE COURT: I understand that. I wanted to tell the jury that next Tuesday, the 10th, will be a half day. So we’ll stop at 11:30 on that day. And then what you’re suggesting, I think, is that they should come in a little later in the morning, because you’re going to make a motion. They’re really resting right now, and I don’t think you have time to make the motion this afternoon.

MR. SANGER: I -- I don’t think so. We also have a written brief which we did not, and should not, file until they rest. So I have that.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SANGER: They may want to take a look at it, so it may be more efficient to do it tomorrow morning.

THE COURT: Yeah.

(To the jury) So I think what we’ll do is, court will start at the regular time and I’ll hear the motion, and then I’ll have you come in at -- we’ll start with jury at 10:00. I don’t want you frivolously wasting that time of your day.

All right. I’ll see you tomorrow morning.

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: All right. Go ahead, Counsel.

MR. SNEDDON: Judge, may I inquire of the Court for just a moment before we start the process?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: With regard to the 418 that you excluded, was that on the basis of a lack of foundation or for some other reason? That’s the check.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: 418, page three.

THE CLERK: You didn’t mention 418.

THE COURT: I didn’t rule on that. The rulings were on 401, 402, 405, 409, 410, 413 and 423, which are the documents you took testimony on today.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.

THE COURT: That’s what I was keeping track of today.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.

THE COURT: In your briefs, you had covered other exhibits.

MR. SNEDDON: And we’ll --

THE COURT: But they were not addressed today, so I didn’t rule on them today.

MR. SNEDDON: Okay. I just was seeking clarification. And will there be an opportunity to address that, or are you going to rule on those without argument?

THE COURT: Well, if you’re offering something, you can offer it. I mean, that’s what you’re doing now, is it not, offering the rest of your exhibits?

MR. SNEDDON: Yes, sir. The ones that haven’t been previously admitted.

THE COURT: Right. So just go ahead and offer them, and we’ll see if there’s any --

MR. SNEDDON: I’ll do the ones that I know about, and I’ll have Mr. Auchincloss do the 400 8954 series, if that’s okay with the Court.

The one I’d like to begin with is 294, which for the Court’s recollection, it was a document that was found inside of the briefcase that contained several items of adult materials and was offered for indicia of ownership and knowledge of the materials inside. It was identified by the officer and contains the initials of the defendant on the document. So we’re moving that 294 be admitted.

THE COURT: All right. It’s admitted.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I at this point --

THE COURT: You need to speak into the microphone.

MR. SANGER: I just turned it on. I’m sorry.

I was going to say, at this point, unless the Court is absolutely clear, I don’t have an absolute clear recollection, without looking at that particular exhibit, and I -- I have notes on some of the items.

THE BAILIFF: No one can hear you.

MR. SANGER: Can’t hear?

THE BAILIFF: No.

MR. SANGER: It’s on. I’ve just got to bend over. What happened is the cord got shorter.

All right. All I’m saying is, if the Court has a clear recollection and is prepared to rule without hearing from the defense, I understand that, but if not, I’d like to have a chance to look at that exhibit.

THE COURT: I’m going to admit it. And if, for some reason, you want to readdress that after you look -- find it -- I think I do have a clear recollection. But then I thought the break was at quarter to 1:00.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you.

MR. SNEDDON: The next item, Your Honor, is 349, which is the orange bottle that you took under submission and we offered as demonstrative evidence. And I believe there’s case law that --

THE COURT: There is. That’s admitted. That’s clear to the jury that that’s not the -- it just looks like the bottle. It’s not the bottle.

MR. SNEDDON: Right.

MR. SANGER: We object there was a lack of foundation, and I believe we did object, but if we didn’t, I --

THE COURT: You did object, and that’s why I took it under submission. And there is a couple of cases on it, one I recall about a fire can that carried gasoline to start a fire, and they lost the can, and they brought a can just like it in, and that was just to show the jury what it looked like, and that’s admissible.

MR. SNEDDON: The next item, Your Honor, is 625, which is the series of letters between Mr.

Geragos and Mr. Dickerman.

THE COURT: All right. They're admitted.

MR. SNEDDON: We'll withdraw -- I mean 630 we're not offering, because that has not been admitted.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: With regard to the series of exhibits in 823 through 829, I believe we laid the foundation when we put Detective Alvarez and Bonner on to establish the foundation for these particular exhibits that they're the ones from which the DVDs were made from, so -- and seized by Detective Caldwell, so we would move that they be admitted.

THE COURT: I believe the foundation was laid. Is there any objection to that?

MR. SANGER: I just want to make sure that we don't have one in there -- I understand that there's been a foundation for most of them, but I'm not -- I'm not sure that all of them have been -- there's an independent relevance foundation laid. In other words, there's been a seizure foundation laid, that they were obtained and in the offices of Brad Miller, but there's nothing that -- as I sit here, I don't know which number, but there's nothing that lays the foundation for the relevance in this case.

MR. SNEDDON: Judge, they're the surveillance tapes.

THE COURT: They were all played to the jury. They were your surveillance tapes.

MR. SNEDDON: That’s why we thought they were in evidence.

MR. SANGER: Were they all played?

MR. ZONEN: All were except 829. 829 is a duplicate of another one. It’s the micro-mini. They made a copy of the micro-mini. We then played it off of the more conventional form, but 829, it is the micro-mini that was seized, and then the one we played was the one that was duplicated onto to be able to play it.

MR. SANGER: I didn’t understand that, quite frankly.

THE COURT: They made it -- they made one from this exhibit, so he didn’t show this exhibit, but he showed the copy they made from the exhibit.

MR. ZONEN: And the testimony was that they’re identical.

MR. SANGER: Okay. I think they showed the copies. They showed copies of all of these. They didn’t show any VHS tapes. So that’s not the issue. I believe there were two tapes that were similar, and one of them was not shown and one of them was shown.

MR. ZONEN: That’s 829.

MR. SANGER: So 829 was shown and 828 was not?

MR. ZONEN: 829 is the mini. That’s the one that was not shown.

MR. SNEDDON: Excuse me. The DVD copy of 829 was shown, so this is the foundation to show that this is the original.

MR. ZONEN: Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: And this was authenticated by the officer.

THE COURT: Well, in terms of what the jury should get, 828 has been authenticated. We’ll just put in 828. We’ll leave out 829. It’s in as an exhibit and it’s part of the --

MR. SNEDDON: Record.

THE COURT: -- record.

MR. SNEDDON: That’s fine. That’s perfectly acceptable to us, Your Honor.

MR. SANGER: There you go.

MR. ZONEN: I don’t believe that’s the duplicate of 828. I believe it’s actually the duplicate of 825.

THE COURT: Okay. Okay. Same ruling.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, since everybody’s still talking and we’ve only got a couple minutes, I understand the Court’s ruling is that you’re not going to let in both tapes of the same thing.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SANGER: And with that ruling in mind, if there’s some dispute, can we take it up later?

THE COURT: Absolutely.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you.

MR. SNEDDON: I believe, except for the 400 series, that covers all the issues, except for the one that I mentioned to the Court about having to check with the SDT records that just came in with United Airlines. Other than that, I think we’re -- oh, wait a minute. That’s right. I’m sorry, Your Honor, there are three photographs --

THE COURT: Okay. What I’m going to do is --

MR. SNEDDON: Yeah. 45, 46 and 47 should be admitted, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Any objection?

MR. SANGER: No objection, Your Honor.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Would you like me to address the 400 series at this time, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Well, no. Just tell me what other ones you want rulings on that I haven’t ruled on.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I believe at this point you’ve excluded 402; is that correct?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. We would ask that the remainder of the 400 series --

THE COURT: And 423.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And 423. Very well. We’d ask that the remainder of the 400 series be 8960 admitted, with the exception of -- the exceptions of 414 and 416.

MR. SANGER: When counsel says “the exception,” Your Honor, does that mean they’re withdrawn?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes.

THE COURT: I think they’re not offering that.

THE CLERK: There’s numerous in the 400 series that haven’t even been identified.

THE COURT: The only ones I’m going to consider are the ones that have been identified in court, which are the 400 series up to 424. After that, 425 through -- just so you all know, 425 through 449 haven’t been identified; 460 through 469. But I think you were just talking about the 400 series ending with 423, because that’s what your briefs covered.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: We have some additional exhibits under the 400 series that -- let me just have a moment to look at the notebook.

MR. SANGER: While they’re looking, Your Honor, you went so quickly through the numbers, when I tried to write them down, I don’t think I got them all.

402 was excluded. 401 was admitted?

THE COURT: 401 was admitted.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

THE COURT: 402 was excluded. 405 was admitted. 409 was admitted. 410 was admitted. 413 was admitted. And 423 was excluded.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And if your question was are we offering at this time, concerning the 400 series, only up through 423, which, as you said, has been excluded, that is correct.

THE COURT: Well, then I can make rulings on the others.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You may. But the one thing I'd request, Your Honor, if we have a dispute about exhibits that can be remedied by additional foundation, we'd just ask that the Court allow us to reopen to handle that evidentiary issue, if necessary.

MR. SANGER: Well, Your Honor, we had filed a written brief, and I believe we objected to all of these.

THE COURT: You did.

MR. SANGER: Okay. So the Court has ruled on some, but not all of them.

THE COURT: The only ones I ruled on were the ones that they laid foundation on today.

MR. SANGER: There you go. Okay. Now I understand. We did object to everything else, and I don't believe there is a foundation --

THE COURT: Well, that's true.

MR. SANGER: -- as to the remaining ones.

THE COURT: There are foundation problems as to other documents, there’s no question.

MR. SANGER: Yes.

THE COURT: Other than these documents that are hanging out here, what I would like to have us do is to have you rest, subject to my rulings on that, have you serve your 1118 motion, and be prepared to argue that motion tomorrow morning, both of you. And I’ll make rulings on the other documents in the 400 series that have been identified before you make your argument.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. My request is just because, as you know, of the timing of the admission of these documents, we’ve held off on them, but normally during the course of the presentation of our case, we would have an opportunity to lay additional foundation if there was a foundational issue on any of the documents. And there may be an issue that could be remedied fairly quickly, so I’d just make that representation to the Court, that that may be a request, depending upon the outcome.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SANGER: Well, Your Honor, just so I’m clear, I would like to be able to file -- I’d like to be able to serve and file the motion, and I think the Court has asked us to do that. My concern -- I’m sitting because I’m worried about getting too far away from that, so let me stand here.

My concern is that these are documents obviously -- let’s put it this way. Obviously, Count 1 is going to be the subject -- significant subject of our motion.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SANGER: And these are documents that, if they intend to reopen and call some more witnesses, we are giving them a road map to our objections, and they could then say, “Well, we said we’re going to reopen,” so, you know, call in a bunch of witnesses.

So I don’t want that to happen, and Mr. Auchincloss was very vague in what he’s requesting, so I’m going to object to what he’s requesting. Either they rest or they don’t rest.

I understand the Court can say, “I’ll take under submission whether these documents come in or not.” That’s not a problem. I just don’t want to file this and have them bring in another witness, or two, or three.

THE COURT: Well, I am taking under submission whether or not any of the other 400 series would be admissible under the present state of the record. They’re resting subject to that. They’ve said they may wish to reopen. I’m not ruling on that issue. So as of right now, you have a record. You have them resting, and all that’s left is my ruling.

MR. SANGER: Based on that -- Your Honor, thank you for clarifying that. Based on that, I will serve in open court a copy of a Motion for Judgment of Acquittal Under 1118.1, and I'll file the original and provide two copies to the clerk. And we'll expect to argue that tomorrow, if that's all right.

THE COURT: Right.

All right. Then court's in recess. I'll see you tomorrow at 8:30.

MR. SANGER: Thank you, Your Honor.

Oh, Your Honor? Not to take time, but there is one other motion that was still pending.

THE COURT: I'll rule on that in the morning. I haven't had time -- I got that late this morning. I haven't had time to -- I read it. That's all I've done with it, so --

MR. SANGER: Okay.

THE COURT: That's the motion to dismiss; the mistrial.

MR. SANGER: The mistrial and the Griffin/ Doyle.

THE COURT: I'll rule on that before you argue in the morning.

MR. SANGER: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you.

(The proceedings adjourned at 2:40 p.m.)

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: Good morning.

COUNSEL AT COUNSEL TABLE: (In unison) Good morning, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I want to talk about the 400 series exhibits before we start argument on the dismissal. I was trying to review some testimony yesterday.

Is someone from the District Attorney's Office prepared to address that?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Good morning, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Did you work on this at all last night, or --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, I'm prepared to address the Court's concerns. But I'm not certain exactly what areas you would like me to address.

THE COURT: What I was looking for is independent authentication of some of the documents. The documents were marked primarily by an officer just reporting what he'd seized in a search, and the fact they were seized in a search is not sufficient authentication to get the documents in. So I was trying to keep notes of the various independent authentication as you went through them. And I was looking at the list that I had and this morning I was trying to go through some testimony from yesterday and the day before, and I found that you had authenticated Exhibit 400, which I didn't admit yesterday. And I suspect you authenticated some others that I missed, so --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, in terms of the foundation for the admissibility of all the documents, as we pointed out in our brief, Your Honor, authentication --

THE COURT: I'm beyond your brief.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.

THE COURT: Let me tell you, like on Exhibit 400, we have -- maybe it would be best if I address particular problems with you than --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.

THE COURT: I think Exhibit 400 was properly authenticated by Mr. Provencio.

Mr. Sanger, rather than have him speak to that, and that's my -- my feeling at this point. Do you have anything you want to address on that document?

MR. SANGER: I will only because I think that this may -- this may have a carry-over to some of the others. So let me just say this in general.

At the time we filed our brief, of course, Mr. Provencio had not testified. His testimony, I think, is not sufficient for authentication in general. His testimony, besides being highly suspect, was to the effect that he went through a file cabinet that wasn't really necessarily his to go through, and that's where he saw certain documents. He doesn't -- he hasn't laid the foundation for what the document is.

If we look at 400 in particular, it appears to be -- let me move it up here so I can stand at the microphone. It appears to be one page of something that has some purported initials at the bottom. And besides authenticating the document in the sense that, "I saw it in this house" that was used by a number of people, including Marc Schaffel, there has to be some authentication as to whether or not this document was actually a document that was effective. In other words, is this something -- is this a draft? Is this a page of a draft? Is this something that the rest of which was discarded? Or, there was a new first page put on and that's why you have this page? I mean, none of that has been explained. So simply having a page, and having a witness say, “That looks like something I saw when I was flipping through my boss’s file cabinet” --

THE COURT: In other words, he didn’t identify the signatures or anything other than to say, “Yeah, that’s a document I saw in their office.”

MR. SANGER: That’s correct. And it’s only one page of a document. So, you know, we don’t have authentication as to signatures. We don’t have authentication as to the nature and extent of the document and what it means.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SANGER: Yes.

THE COURT: That’s sort of -- Mr. Sanger was able to sort of pinpoint the problem I’m having with these documents.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, our introduction of these documents, the foundation for them, as we pointed out with our citing of the Olguin case, is authentication may be established by circumstantial evidence. We don’t need a direct witness to come up and say, “I saw Marc Schaffel sign that document,” or, “I know Marc Schaffel’s signature and that’s his signature on that document.”

You look at the totality of all the evidence before the Court, and see if you can draw a reasonable inference as to whether or not this document is what it purports to be.

Now, we have an abundance of testimony that Marc Schaffel and Michael Jackson were involved in a business enterprise known as Neverland Valley Entertainment, and we found --

THE COURT: I’m not willing to go there with you.

The problem is that in your points and authorities, I think you represented that Mr. Provencio would testify that he was familiar with Michael Jackson’s signature and initials, and that he would identify them on Exhibit 400, but in trying to review the testimony, I didn’t recall that. But --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I don’t think that was produced.

THE COURT: But going back there, I don’t see that in the transcript. So....

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: If that is a predicate to the admissibility of this document, then that would be one of those foundational minor points that we would re-call Mr. Provencio to lay. If that’s the place where the Court has an issue. And that’s why we requested yesterday that we be able to address concerns of the Court regarding the admissibility of these documents as we normally would be during trial. We’re in an unusual circumstance here, because these documents are being discussed at the very end of our case.

THE COURT: Was there any document that I did not admit out of that series that you think you did authenticate that I just missed the authentication?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, in terms of direct testimony, we did provide evidence from the Bank of -- from the U.S. Bank.

THE COURT: Give me an exhibit number when you’re talking so I know what you’re talking about.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes. That would be exhibit number -- let me find it. 418, page three, the million-dollar check. We did ask the U.S. Bank representative about that exhibit, as well as --

THE COURT: 418 and 419 I think was authenticated by the U.S. Bank person who testified.

MR. SANGER: Only as to the pages that are checks. Not as to the other --

THE COURT: Documents.

MR. SANGER: -- documents.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That’s correct. That’s correct. 418-3 and 419-3, page three.

THE COURT: So I would be willing to admit those pages that she authenticated as those documents, 418 and 419.

MR. SANGER: And I would submit that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. I’ll admit the checks, and I’ll have the clerk separate the other pages and call -- redesignate the other pages as 418-A and 419-A. The actual 418 and 419 will be the checks themselves.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And that would be the only other documents that we provided direct testimony on.

THE COURT: Well, one of the things, Exhibit 403.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Certainly.

THE COURT: I do not think that you have had Mr. Provencio identify that document and those e-mails from between Rudy -- Rudy Provencio and Kathryn Milofsky. Although on cross, I remember Mr. Mesereau raising some questions about those e-mails.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: There certainly is testimony that Kathryn Milofsky was providing substantial information by way of e-mails to Marc Schaffel.

THE COURT: But I don’t think that’s sufficient to just dump, then, a bunch of exhibits in if they’re not -- and I’m asking you -- I’m asking for argument.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Certainly, yes, as I stated before, you can’t deny the circumstantial evidence in this case that -- we look at these documents, Your Honor, somewhat like you might look at some numbers scribbled on a piece of paper found in a drug dealer’s home that are introduced as pay/owe sheets. Now, there’s no authentication. Nobody comes in and says, that’s -- you know, that’s his handwriting. You don’t need that. You don’t need to have someone come in and say these are pay/owe sheets for a drug transaction. You might have some expert testimony to that effect.

THE COURT: I was going to say, I can’t imagine letting that kind of thing in without some authentication, but --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I mean, in terms of the admissibility of it, it's not as if there's any --

THE COURT: I think we're going down a side street here.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Our position is that these documents speak for themselves. They are words that are relevant to the conspiracy, and a conspiracy is a crime of words, in addition to some overt acts. And as we pointed out in our brief, each one of these documents impute either knowledge about facts that are relevant to this conspiracy, motive, reasons why these co-conspirators as well as Mr. Jackson would engage in this conspiracy, the relationship between the parties. For instance, phone sheets with every single -- virtually every single co-conspirator's name on them. I mean, those are coming in because Mr. Provencio testified to it.

THE COURT: I would really try to direct your attention to one exhibit at a time. It's not helpful to me to be doing that. I lose track of what you're saying.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I understand, Your Honor, there's a number of exhibits.

THE COURT: I think we're talking about Exhibit No. 403. That's what I want to talk about. So I'm saying what is the foundation that you've laid for 403 to come in. That's what I'm asking you.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. If I could just have a moment, here.

THE COURT: You may.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: 403. The "Fires Brewing" file. The Court has previously admitted evidence of the panic that was going on among the co-conspirators during this time. There's been extensive testimony by Ann Gabriel that -- of a laundry list of problems that confronted Mr. Jackson, public relations problems. The press was going crazy. Not only about the rebuttal -- or about the Martin Bashir film, but a number of other issues that came up, including Mr. Schaffel's prior history, the Jordie Chandler release of that -- of the Complaint over the Internet, issues regarding the other problems that Martin Bashir pointed out, such as child abuse or possible child neglect issues. You name it.

This is being offered as corroboration of Miss Gabriel’s testimony, and as evidence of the issue of the panic, the reasons for that panic that were generated and known by the co-conspirators.

Now, it’s offered as circumstantial evidence, because these words, these documents, were found in Martin -- in Mr. Schaffel’s home, in his files, in his locked closet, and they clearly show a group of files under an unambiguous heading, “Fires Brewing,” that Mr. Jackson had a number of problems on his hands. And the problems were to be addressed by the co-conspirators. That was the purpose of this --

THE COURT: Let me ask you this: Did Mr. Provencio testify about those documents yesterday or the day before?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: He testified that the phones were ringing off the hooks. That there was --

THE COURT: Did he testify about the “Fires Brewing” documents?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: No, he did not.

THE COURT: I think I remember him identifying who Kathryn Milofsky is.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: He did identify Kathryn Milofsky as being a conduit through which much of this information came, including, of course, the original script for the Martin Bashir film way before it was introduced -- played.

THE COURT: Okay. On 404, it seems there was the phone log and then there was a list of contacts; is that right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That’s correct. This came out of the Stuart Backerman file in Mr. Schaffel’s filing cabinet. As Mr. Provencio testified, the media was keeping them very busy. This is a list of messages showing contacts from the media, from Larry King, to Good Morning America, Barbara Walters. And this is on February 6th. Again, introduced to show the level of panic that was being inspired by this public relations disaster. Everybody was calling. “Who’s that boy that Mr. Jackson is sleeping with?” And it’s corroborative of Mr. Provencio’s testimony, and it shows --

THE COURT: Was there any specific authentication on that exhibit than -- besides the simple seizure of the --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: In Mr. Schaffel’s home? No. Other than, as I mentioned, the reasonable inferences that you can draw from finding it there, in light of all the testimony. And that’s what we’re asking for, is that the Court draw a reasonable inference as to what this document is, what it means.

THE COURT: Okay. On 406 --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Would you like to address the working group list that follows that, or --

THE COURT: I’m sorry.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: There are a couple of phone sheets in here. Again, this, as the 8980 authorities noted, provide that evidence of relationship between the parties is admissible on the issue of whether or not a conspiracy occurred. We have a production working group list that shows Ronald Konitzer, Dieter Weizner, Mr. Backerman, Mr. LeGrand, Marc Geragos on the same working group list in the possession of Mr. Schaffel. Now, Mr. Schaffel cannot contact co-conspirators unless he has contact information. Showing that he has their e-mail addresses, their phone numbers, their mobile phone numbers, their addresses is evidence that Mr. Schaffel is working with these individuals. It’s evidence of their relationship.

THE COURT: Okay. I understand that.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. Moving on to 405?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Or 406, I think the Court said.

THE COURT: 405 was admitted. 406.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: 406 is the contract for the FOX rebuttal. It's a $3 million contract. There's been quite a bit of testimony about the amount of money that was going to be made in this particular endeavor. This is corroborative of that testimony. It's -- appears to be on a Hale Lane fax transmittal sheet. We had testimony from Mr. Hamid Moslehi about receiving faxes from Hale Lane. This is identical to all of the other fax transmittal sheets that we seized during this warrant. There is no evidence or, I believe, reasonable inference you can draw that this document is anything but what it appears to be, a revised agreement of the FOX Broadcasting Company and Fire Mountain Services. And it's offered to show that this was a money-making enterprise, that Mr. Jackson was going to personally profit from it, as well as the co-conspirators.

THE COURT: You're talking about the --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Pages 1 through 4.

THE COURT: 1 through 4.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes. Now, we have introduced testimony that the Arvizo family was to be included in this FOX rebuttal and the reasons why they were never seen in that rebuttal film.

THE COURT: On that document, that's pages five through nine, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes.

THE COURT: And that's --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Five through nine are --

THE COURT: How do we know that Mr. Jackson had anything to do with that document?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, Mr. Jackson does not have to be linked to every aspect of the co -- of the conspiracy.

THE COURT: But you want to admit it to show his involvement in the rebuttal video, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: We want to admit this document to show that the special was a money-making enterprise, and that -- I mean, there has been quite a bit of testimony, or there was quite a bit of testimony with Ann Gabriel dealing with the issue of the problems with that, how that would be perceived by the media as negative. She felt it should be done without a profit motive, and how her advice was ignored by the team.

THE COURT: Okay. Exhibit 407?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Just -- if I may just remark about the remaining exhibits on 406, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Because there were some additional pages there.

THE COURT: Page ten.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And one of the pages is a fax to Michael and Al from Marc, appears to be, with a personal message from Marc Schaffel. It talks about the specifics of the clips, the editing, everything looks good, it’s all very positive, shows Mr. Jackson’s direct involvement in the second FOX rebuttal -- or FOX film, I should say, as well as, following that, there is the agreement in which the second FOX film was to produce $4 million in income. And we finally have a note from Mr. Jackson signed by Mr. Jackson, care of Al Malnik, that he authorizes giving the keys to Dieter Weizner at the warehouse for Optima Productions. Shows again Mr. Jackson’s direct involvement in these films, as well as his relationship to the parties, particularly Dieter Weizner.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: 407 is offered as a statement -- as statements in furtherance of the conspiracy.

THE COURT: Well, I’m sorry, did you want to -- that’s all right. Okay. 407. Go ahead.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: These are e-mails that were found, I believe -- let me just double-check my notes here -- in Marc Schaffel’s “Ronald” file. And that's how we -- just so you know, you can look at the index and see that we've divided these documents up into the various -- we've kept them in the various files that they were found in, so that's the reason why some of the documents do not always have a subject matter relationship, but they do have a relationship of the location in where we found them.

This is the "Ronald" file. There are a couple of e-mails in here from Ronald Weizner -- or Ronald Konitzer, excuse me, talking about -- talking to Marc and Stuart. The first one is really just to -- for purposes of showing the relationship of the parties, and their involvement back on February 6 of '03.

The second one entitled "Money," February 11th, '03, is highly relevant. It talks about the money split. It talks about how much money they're going to get for the FOX rebuttal. It talks about how they're going to split it up, about how some of it is needed just to pay for that rebuttal, the Jackson -- this goes to Mr. Jackson's financial crisis. He doesn't have money to pay for this rebuttal, so he has to generate money just to pay for the expenses. Some of it goes to -- is going to Hamid. The final page is really where you see the breakout.

THE COURT: Do you think the e-mail addresses need to be authenticated in this?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, the e-mail addresses for Mr. Konitzer are mentioned in the other address documents. I mean, assuming that the address documents come in, there's circumstantial evidence that they are accurate, correct e-mails.

THE COURT: That being the list --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: The previous list that we've talked about. These are identical e-mails that we have throughout and including the e-mails that are identified in the telephone and contact sheets.

There is -- and the last page, as I said, is really particularly revealing. It talks about $3,200,000 to be produced from the first rebuttal film. 200 goes to Hamid. A million-five to David's trust account to pay bills due now, and that's because of the vendors that are screaming for their money. $600,000 for Marc --

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, by the way, I'm going to -- I'm going to object to just gratuitous remarks for the press. There isn't evidence of vendors screaming for money in this case. Counsel should restrict his remarks to the Court's inquiry, which is what is the authentication, and not continue to make gratuitous remarks.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm making the -- sustained?

THE COURT: Yeah. We're really looking at a narrow issue here.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, I think, you know -- I'll draw your attention to the main thing, is that the -- the $600,000 for Marc, including all production and, quote, "vacation," end quote for Gavin.

THE COURT: What about the e-mail address of Milofsky? How do we know that's her? Do we have someone testifying to her e-mail address?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, what reasonable inference do you draw from the fact that Rudy Provencio testified that they received an abundance of e-mails from this woman?

THE COURT: I thought you just told me that you didn't have that testimony about e-mails. You had the testimony about the phone calls.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: No, he didn't identify the individual -- the individual e-mail, but he did say he received e-mails from Kathryn Milofsky, and that Mr. Schaffel and him both received e-mails from her. So I guess, I mean, I'm just drawing a reasonable inference that he says they received e-mails. We look in his file drawer and we find e-mails. There's -- it's not conclusive, but it's pretty close that these would be the e-mails that he received from Kathryn Milofsky.

THE COURT: Okay. 408?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: 408 is a printout from a disk. It just is offered to show the financial gain that Mr. Schaffel was obtaining through the marketing of the rebuttal film. Rudy Provencio did talk about foreign rights, so this would be something akin to the previous e-mail, which indicates that Mr. Jackson himself was going to benefit from this -- financially from this enterprise, and that there was -- there were additional profits out there. Offered on the issue of motive, to show the perception of the parties that this was a valuable enterprise that they could make money on.
THE COURT: How about 412?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Again -- I'm sorry, we're jumping ahead to --
THE COURT: Well, 409 has been admitted. 410 has been admitted. 411 --
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Is of no great moment.
THE COURT: Right.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That's not important.
THE COURT: So 412 was the one I was concerned about.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: 412. Ann Gabriel, I believe, did lay foundation on 412. She testified that David LeGrand sent her this virtually identical release that was ultimately placed before the Arvizos. He asked her to put "Gabriel Media, Inc.," on it and then send it back. It finds its way into Marc Schaffel's file in various permutations. One with "Gabriel Media," the second without, and then there is a third with "MJJ Productions."
THE COURT: Okay. What about 413?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: There has been some testimony on 413 that.
THE CLERK: It was received yesterday.
MR. SANGER: You received it, Your Honor.
THE COURT: All right. Thank you. 415.
THE CLERK: 414.

THE COURT: Withdrawn. 414 was withdrawn. 415?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: These are records that are found regarding the expenses for the rebuttal film. Circumstantial evidence that Mr. Schaffel was in charge of that film. And these records, notably on page four, have references to the Arvizos. And I draw that conclusion from the cash withdrawals that say, “JGSD Trip.” Janet -- I interpret that to mean Janet, Gavin, Star and Davellin trip.

On 225 and 226, there are petty cash withdrawals corroborative of what Mr. Provencio testified to, regarding cash paid out to Vinnie.

There are cash disbursements on page six that include $5,000 to Frank Cascio.

THE COURT: Okay. 417?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And I would just say that on page 17, there is a receipt which --

THE COURT: You know what I’m asking you, though, not what’s there, I’m asking you what’s the authentication. Your telling me what’s there doesn’t answer that question, so --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, I’m just telling you about areas of testimony that are relevant to -- that Rudy Provencio did testify about a cash receipt that was signed by Vinnie Amen and that is in that file under page 17.

THE COURT: But he didn’t identify that.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: He didn’t identify it, no.

THE COURT: You’re saying that’s the one that he must have been talking about, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yeah. I’m drawing a reasonable inference from the location of that document in the files.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: This is -- 417 is the -- are the documents -- the first document entitled “Janet Strategies” located in Mr. Schaffel’s files clearly provides some circumstantial evidence of an intent to come up with various strategies to deal with Janet Arvizo and her family. You can read the document. The same thing with the, quote, “David case.” The strategies are not always consistent, and they’re admitted for purposes to show consciousness of guilt and knowledge of the criminal purpose of this conspiracy.

THE COURT: To show whose consciousness of guilt?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: The co-conspirators.

THE COURT: Okay. 418?

THE CLERK: You admitted that this morning.

THE COURT: That’s already done.

419 is done.

420?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: 418, we’ve already --

THE COURT: No, we did 418 and 419, I’m sorry. 420 is where we are.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: 420 are the e-mails amongst the co-conspirators, including Mr. Schaffel. Some of these specifically reference the Arvizo family. They certainly reference the panic that existed at the time.

THE COURT: Were the e-mail addresses authenticated, identified, and how do we know who they came from?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: The e-mail addresses are -- well, I would submit that if we have an e-mail that is from Melanie at bellyard.com, and we have testimony that Bell Yard is the crisis management team in London that was dealing with Mr. Schaffel at this time and he’s one of the parties on the team, that that is circumstantially sufficient foundation that this e-mail is what it purports to be. There’s no evidence that these are all fabricated. To the contrary, that this was -- these are all seized in a search warrant.

So this is -- these came out of files that -- the personal files of Mr. Schaffel. So I guess, you know, I’m -- I keep drawing the same reasonable -- I mean, these are my inferences. They may not be yours, Your Honor, but that’s where we’re going with these.

THE COURT: On 421, that’s a contract after the alleged events. Is that --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It is.

THE COURT: What would the relevance of that be?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: The defense has announced -- and maybe -- well, I shouldn’t say that they’ve just announced it. They have attempted, through the introduction of evidence through cross-examination, to show that Mr. Jackson was an unknowing party to this conspiracy. They, in some respects, seem to concede there was something nefarious going on, but not involving Mr. Jackson.

If that is the case, then the continued association with the co-conspirators beyond the conspiracy, even after all of the fallout, would tend to rebut that claim. And we have -- this is just one link in the many links we have that Mr. Jackson maintained his affiliation with Mr. Schaffel, Mr. Weizner, Mr. Konitzer, for months and months and months past the conspiracy. So this was not a situation where some bad things happened and Mr. Jackson then fired everybody.

It also shows the financial motive of the various co-conspirators to continue in their relationship with Mr. Jackson. This is all about money. We don’t dispute that among the co-conspirators. They’re interested in a financial gain. But the financial gain they are seeking is from the success of Mr. Jackson, not from his fall.

THE COURT: Okay. 422.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: There was testimony about these documents. Mr. Provencio did look at them. He did identify them as the operative documents that established the loan with Royalty Advance Funding that bankrolled Neverland Valley Entertainment.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

Mr. Sanger, do you wish to address any of these?

MR. SANGER: Yes. Thank you.

I know we have other things to do, so let me try to go through as quickly as I can.

I think I addressed 400.

THE COURT: You did.

MR. SANGER: Okay. That takes us to --

THE COURT: 403.

MR. SANGER: -- 403.

One quick correction, and I think it really helps to illustrate how little foundation there is for this. Your Honor had indicated that you believed that Mr. Mesereau had referred to perhaps something in that exhibit or related to that exhibit.

If I'm not mistaken, Mr. Mesereau is referring to something totally different. He was referring to an instant message communication, which, although there's advertisements for instant messages at the bottom of some of those purported e-mails, they are not instant messages. The instant message is a realtime exchange where one person types something and the next person responds, and they go on in, more or less, realtime. And it was not, as far as I know -- and I've looked through it again quickly, it was not one of the documents in the 400 series that had been marked by the prosecution. So there's been no authentication, and this will apply to all these other e-mails, so I don't have to repeat it.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: No authentication. We don't know if -- who sent the e-mails, if they were received by somebody in particular, if they were reviewed by somebody in particular, if they were possessed, if anybody had knowledge of it.

Most importantly, it has nothing to do with Mr. Jackson's knowledge of anything. There's no indication from Mr. Provencio's testimony or anybody else that Mr. Jackson had knowledge of any of this stuff that's in here. And I'll say that generically so I don't have to repeat it.

There's a way to lay a foundation in a court of law, and it just wasn't done. I don't know if it could be done. I take it, because they didn’t do it, they didn’t have a witness who could do it. But whether they could or they couldn’t, it was not done, and therefore none of these things are admissible.

I’ll go to 404. Again, no specific authentication. The indication is 404 had something to do with Stuart Backerman. And the question is what did it have to do with Stuart Backerman, just like all these other documents. Quite frankly, I’ve forgotten exactly if it was in a Stuart Backerman file or whatever it was. We now have testimony that there were several people who were in that house, using that house as an office, several people maintaining desks and having phones, having files. How do we know who had what?

The People cannot -- the prosecution can’t get up here and say to the Court, everything is some kind of statement that is in furtherance of the conspiracy or it shows the state of mind of a co-conspirator, or some other thing like that, and not identify which, if any, co-conspirator it relates to. They haven’t alleged that Stuart Backerman was a co-conspirator. They haven’t alleged that Bell Yard was a co -- Bell Yard is a reputable public relations firm in England. And the testimony was is that they were a public relations firm. I mean, he can’t say everybody that helps a celebrity with regard to productions of -- or people associated with a celebrity, with a production of an event or a video or a television show, is involved in some kind of a conspiracy, and therefore, even though there’s been no proof as to who possessed it or what it is, it must belong to some nebulous co-conspirator in some giant conspiracy. And that, again, is an underlying problem with some of the subsequent ones, so I’ll spend just a moment on that at this point.

In other words, the proper way to prove something is to prove that it -- it was in the possession of and belonged to a particular person; that it was sent by somebody in particular; that it had some significance. It isn't just a piece of paper there. You have to authenticate it. Just the fact there's a piece of paper there doesn't cut it.

The analogy for a pay/owe sheet I think was actually telling. Because if you have somebody who is caught, you know, with the dope in their room and under their bed, and under the bed with the dope is a sheet that says so-and-so, somebody something, you still have to authenticate it. Now, it may not be an issue as to wrote it. If it's an issue as to who wrote it, and whether or not the person who's charged had knowledge and possession of that pay/owe sheet, then it would be a big issue. That's the issue that we're dealing with here. It's an issue as to what Mr. Jackson knew, if anything, about this.

This is a lot of junk that was taken out of somebody's house and thrown in with rhetoric that it's highly relevant. Highly relevant is what the District Attorney wants to make out of it. But that isn't the authentication. And that's where they're stuck and they haven't laid the foundation.

406, the first four pages are not authenticated as to signatures or significance or who it came from or what happened. It's just a document that's there. The next pages, five to nine, are pages that, once again, we don't know what it is. It's not signed. There's some notes by somebody, the handwriting hasn't been authenticated. Who possessed it, who had knowledge of it hasn't been authenticated. It, again, doesn't link Michael Jackson to anything, because there's absolutely no evidence Michael Jackson had anything to do with it.

Now, I'd remind the Court respectfully that the witness that did testify, the police officer that testified to the seizures I believe is Detective Bonner, said that he wasn't sure which pages were attached to which pages. He didn't know who wrote the numbers at the top until he took a break and was informed they were D.A. numbers. And in fact, he said that, at least as to a couple of the exhibits, it was questionable as to whether the items that were stapled together actually went together.

So we have a problem that the jury would be given a bunch of documents that are stapled together or put in a binder by the District Attorney that are given significance the District Attorney wants to give them, but there's no authentication that they belong together or have anything to do with each other or were actually known of or possessed by anybody.

Page ten of that exhibit, the words of Mr. Auchincloss were, "It appears to be a fax." That is exactly the problem, is that it appears to be a fax. We don't know what it is.

And then page 11 - I don't want to get ahead of myself here - is another document that -- if I'm in the right place, is another document that's unsigned. And the very last page was offered as a -- as a letter purportedly signed by Michael Jackson. And a lot of discussion was had by the District Attorney about how significant this is, that this shows Michael Jackson had a connection with Dieter Weizner. It's offered for the truth of the matter. You can't offer a document for the truth of the matter. And you can't say this is signed by Michael Jackson just because it's found in somebody else's house or office. You have to lay a foundation. You have to establish authentication. And that's all -- it wasn't done. That's all there is to it.

Go to 407, again, those documents are subject to all the same criticisms. I heard Mr. Auchincloss say they were accurate and correct e-mails. Well, that would be nice if there was evidence that they were accurate and correct e-mails. The fact that he says accurate and correct doesn't make them accurate and correct. It doesn't make them e-mails, it doesn't make them anything.

No foundation was laid.

Go to 409.

THE COURT: No, that was admitted. 410 was admitted.

MR. SANGER: Let me --

THE COURT: You need to go to 412.

MR. SANGER: Did I talk about 408?

I think 408 was -- I wrote 409. I meant 408. I'm sorry.

408, was that withdrawn or --

THE COURT: 408 would be your next --

MR. SANGER: All right. I misspoke when I said 409.

408, this was a document that we were told came off of a disk, and then as I recall, the officer said that he printed out or somebody printed out what was on the disk.

We have no idea who inputted this information into the disk, who had knowledge of this. There were quite a number of people at that house. The fact is it doesn't mean anything. And the prosecution wants to use it to imply that somehow Michael Jackson had some interest in the data on this disk. And there's absolutely no connection whatsoever with regard to that.

If we go to 412, there was reference to Ann Gabriel. Her name is actually Ann Kite. And once again, these are documents that are found, they're subject to all the same objections that I've already made. Same with 413. In fact, if you put 412 and 413 together, they're for the most part blank documents that are not signed. There's some other things in there, some handwriting. We don't know whose handwriting it is. This is not the way you present documents to the Court.

THE COURT: I did admit 413 already.

MR. SANGER: I'm sorry. Okay. Well -- and evidently, I'm sorry, this a good example of how you present documents to the Court.

(Laughter.)

MR. SANGER: Okay.

THE COURT: 415.

MR. SANGER: Go to 415. Interesting. 415, this is a collection of documents that I suppose there could have been some foundation laid for it. All we have is that they were seized. The prosecution is adamant about wanting to introduce 415, and they do not want to introduce 416, which is a summary of petty cash expenditures for Janet and the children, and is exactly the same except evidently they feel that it doesn't make their point.

We have the same objections to authentication on 415 that we have on the other matters. But if the People were going to successfully offer 415, then upon that, the Court's ruling in that regard, we would then offer 416. If that's an adequate foundation, I think the same foundation was laid for both, whatever it is.

And I did specifically ask the officer about -- some questions about 417. So whatever authentication he was able to give, he gave at least as much as was given by the People for the other document.

420? Actually, the correct discussion I think would be with regard to 420-A, if I'm not mistaken. 420 were the documents that were originally presented in the notebook, and then I believe the prosecution gave us a new set of documents which were marked 420-A.

Is that consistent with the clerk or the Court's recollection?

THE COURT: I'll look at my --

MR. SANGER: While the Court's looking, I think that the -- I think that the idea was that Detective Bonner, I believe, testified that 420-A was a better set.

THE COURT: You're correct.

MR. SANGER: So I assume that actually 420 was being withdrawn by the prosecution, and I would assume that their remarks pertain to 420-A, not 420. May I assume that?

THE COURT: I think so.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you. So I'll respond to 420-A. The offer was these are e-mails amongst co-conspirators. Once again, that's relevance, but it doesn't establish the authentication as to the e-mail addresses, where they came from, how they got in the file, who saw them, and so on.

421, I believe this is the -- this is the particular document, Exhibit 421, that Detective Bonner said that he couldn't be sure that the first page went with the other pages. In fact, as he looked at it, it probably didn't.

And I think if you look at the content, Your Honor will see that the cover page doesn't seem to match the dates of the subsequent document, nor does the cover page have a fax header. So it looks like somebody stapled a different fax sheet to two other documents, and that just plain highlights the problem that we have with these documents. And that's what happens when you don't have authentication and the Court's asked to just assume that if it's there, it's all okay.

Once again, there's a purported signature of Michael Jackson at the end of that, the very last page of that document. There are no other signatures. We don't know if this was a draft or a proposal. We don't have any authentication of his signature, that that is his signature. And I think, as we pointed out in our moving papers, if you look at the various signatures that the prosecution is offering as Mr. Jackson's signatures in this series from 400 to 423, Your Honor will see that there are remarkable differences between some of them. Some of them are similar. But there are others that look totally different. And not that we're asking the Court to do a handwriting analysis, but that's just an example of why authentication is necessary. You can't just assume, based on the fact it's found in somebody's house, that Michael Jackson signed it. Particularly if it's found in the house of Marc Schaffel, of whom the prosecution witnesses have said some pretty harsh things about his integrity.

So we have documents that are going to be held against my client in a criminal case that are in the possession of somebody who's been accused of being a liar and not a reliable person. And the signatures don't look the same, and yet the jury is going to be asked to assume that Mr. Jackson signed them all. That's exactly why you need authentication. And we don't have it here.

And that takes us to 422; am I right?

THE COURT: Yeah.

MR. SANGER: 422. And 422 is exactly -- suffers from the same problem. The only difference is that Rudy Provencio actually did look at these documents when he was on the stand, and said that he believed those were the documents pertaining to this transaction. How did he know that? He was apparently snooping in the file cabinet. He had no direct involvement in preparing these, dealing with these or anything else. And as the Court I think gathered - and more about that in a minute - Mr. Provencio was trying to be a very helpful witness to the prosecution and lied about things that we can conclusively show he lied about. So his testimony should be disregarded.

But if it's not disregarded entirely, at least there's something there. However, it does suffer from all of the other -- the other problems the other exhibits have.

And I'll submit it.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

Who's going to argue the motion to dismiss?

MR. MESEREAU: Mr. Sanger is, Your Honor.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: May I offer one more thought on that, that last one?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I mean, one thing we could do is to offer defendant's 977 waiver as evidence of his handwriting, ask the Court to take judicial notice of that.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

THE COURT: What I'm going to do -- I'm going to listen to the motion to dismiss. I have a pretty good idea now, having heard your arguments on the other exhibits, what -- I've made notes to myself as to their admissibility or nonadmissibility. I'm not going to announce those now because we need to move along.

MR. SANGER: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: But I wanted to take care of that before you argued the motion to dismiss so that I would know in my own mind what documents I would be considering, if any were alluded to in the motion.

MR. SANGER: Very well.

THE COURT: So you may go ahead. Mr. Sanger?

MR. SANGER: All right. We did have that other -- that Doyle motion, which is just -- I thought Your Honor --

THE COURT: The Court will deny the motion for a mistrial and deny the request for specific instructions. Basically I think that Mr. Mesereau, on his cross-examination, adequately covered the area. And I'm going to leave it with that. If you want to submit, as in other cases, a special instruction in the final jury instructions, I would consider it at that time.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you, Your Honor. All right. With regard to the motion for judgment of acquittal based on insufficient evidence, excuse me, that was coupled with a motion to strike statements allegedly made by the co-conspirators. Let me argue the main motion first, because I think that -- that would be a consequence of the Court's ruling, although the Court could independently rule to strike the co-conspirators' statements or it could do it first or second, I suppose is what I'm saying. So let me address the motion for judgment of acquittal. There are four areas of the prosecution's case that I want to address, and I want to address them in the context of the law that we have already briefed under 1118.1 of the Penal Code, and briefly indicate that that law includes the Court’s determination that the evidence is reasonable, credible, and of solid value from which a reasonable trier of fact could find the defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

THE COURT: Let me ask you -- I read your motion, which you really seemed to be asking me to make some credibility calls on the witnesses, and isn’t it true that that’s not my job? I mean, that is exactly what I shouldn’t be doing, is be the person who makes credibility calls on the witnesses.

MR. SANGER: No, I think that that is part -- that’s why we cited that.

THE COURT: You cited a general jury instruction, so --

MR. SANGER: We cited the case specifically of People vs. Allen, 2001 case, which cited -- that’s a Court of Appeal case, which cited People vs. Stanley, 1995 California Supreme Court case. It all goes back to Jackson vs. Virginia, which has nothing to do with Mr. Jackson, my client. Jackson versus Virginia was the United States Supreme Court decision in which the U.S. Supreme Court talked about the standard of review and whether or not a rational trier of fact could find a defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

That Jackson versus Virginia instruction has been used for the purpose of sufficiency of evidentiary view by appellate courts and it’s been incorporated into the California standard for the review of an 1118.1 motion for the review of the evidence under that code section.

And as these cases say, the California Supreme Court has said that the Court has to look to see that the evidence is reasonable, credible and of solid value. In other words, the mere fact that somebody threw something up on the wall and it wasn’t ruled inadmissible does not mean that the Court has to defer to it. So it is -- this is, in fact, different than the kinds of rulings the Court was being asked to make, for instance, on 352 evidence, and some other places where the Court was saying, “Well, I’m not supposed to weigh the credibility, or 1108 I’m not supposed to weigh the credibility.” We’ve had those discussions.

The Court, there, we argue -- well, you should anyway, but -- the Court took that position. However, with regard to 1118.1 motions, the Court does consider credibility.

Now, it doesn’t mean that Your Honor sits there and says, “I am going to pretend I’m a juror and I’m going to decide this case based on how I would vote if I would a juror.” But it does mean that this is now the one place where the Court can say the prosecution has put on all their evidence, they’ve rested, they took their best shot, this is it, and a rational trier of fact could not find the defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

The emphasis on “rational” in the case law, all the way back to the U.S. Supreme Court decision in Jackson vs. Virginia, is extremely important. It’s not just words. It’s based on the idea that the Court, as a jurist, a lawyer who’s become a judge and has sat and heard cases - in this Court’s case for a long time - a jurist --

THE COURT: I resent that.

(Laughter.)

MR. SANGER: Or you started early in life or something.

The point of the story is that a jurist, of course, is supposed to be able to look at things dispassionately, and we are supposed to be able to avoid submitting matters to the jury, where a jury, a rational trier of fact, cannot find the defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. So it is a much higher standard. This is not the 995 standard either, where the Court just determines whether or not there’s probable cause or a strong suspicion that a crime was committed, that being the standard for 995. This, under 1118.1, is rational trier of fact could not find the defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

So the Court does have a considerable burden to look at the evidence and determine whether or not a rational trier of fact could look at what just happened here over the last ten weeks, or whatever it's been, and find a defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

So there are four areas I'd like to talk about as far as the evidence is concerned. And I'll try to go through as quickly as I can, but this is important, so I do want to cover it.

THE COURT: I don't want you to feel compelled, because of a deadline, to hurry. Because I needed that extra time on those 400 exhibits. So --

MR. SANGER: Sure.

THE COURT: We're going to take our regular break and then I'm going to tell the jury that it's going to be a while, and give you time to argue this.

I didn't mean to reduce either side's time for this important motion.

MR. SANGER: Very well. Thank you.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: Go ahead, Counsel.

MR. SANGER: All right. May I proceed, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Just before the break, I indicated that there were four areas of evidence that I wanted to talk about in the context of the law, and I think I was just about to conclude my recitation or reference to the law which we have briefed. And we tried to keep our briefs short, so I’ll, with the Court’s permission, just make a quick reference to a couple of important legal points.

The four areas of evidence, or the four areas of this case or aspects of this case that I want to talk about are, number one, the failure of the People’s evidence in certain regards.

Number two, the fact that what resulted was inherently improbable and not credible.

Number three, the effect of the 1108 evidence, not only its nature, but the effect and the potential for causing a jury not to determine the case in a rational fashion.

And number four, willfully false statements and the effect that that should have on the Court's analysis of the prosecution's key witnesses.

And I do this in the context of all of the counts. But in particular, to start with, the conspiracy count requires that there be proof of two different elements that require specific intent. First, that there is a specific intent to agree or conspire. And second, that the intent to commit the -- there has to be specific intent to commit the offense. So there's actually specific intent required to prove both of those elements. Those are the intent elements. Obviously there are other elements. And that specific intent has to be the specific intent of the defendant, Mr. Michael Jackson in this case, not a nebulous intent that maybe one or more of the alleged co-conspirators might have had at one time or another in doing whatever they were doing.

I also will refer to the "witness willfully false" instruction, which is a CALJIC instruction, of course. But it is reflective of the law, and it's something that the -- a rational trier of fact would have to take into account, and that is, when a witness is willfully false in one part of his or her testimony, it is to be distrusted in others. And I won't read the whole thing. The Court knows the rest of it. I think that has a very significant impact on the evidence in this case.

So if I may refer now to those four areas of the People's case, and I'm going to do so -- even though the Court's given us additional time, I'm going to try to do so in horseback fashion, because Your Honor has sat here for the same ten weeks we did. There's no point in going over every single thing. But there's some, just, points that I want to cover that hopefully will make the ultimate point here, that I believe a judgment of acquittal is not only appropriate, but is really required in this case at this time as to all of the counts.

First of all, the prosecution indicated in its opening statement it was going to show certain things. The evidence that was actually put on, the People's witnesses that came in had a tendency to self-destruct. And I don't mean to be -- to be gratuitous in a negative remark, but I think it goes without saying, or it can't be escaped when I say that some of the witnesses got on the stand and testified either on direct or cross-examination in ways that were absolutely antithetical to what the prosecution was attempting to prove.

We had Cindy Bell, who is the flight attendant on the flight, who was on her feet the entire time on that flight, saw no molest, saw no children drinking alcohol.

We had Jesus Salas, who said he delivered wine and four glasses, but on cross-examination said, yeah, he delivered -- he delivered sodas as well.

So the "smoking gun" evidence that these witnesses were supposed to present just didn't come through. And these are -- again, are examples.

There was much made out of the scripting of the Janet Arvizo testimony. And earlier versions of stories indicated that witnesses were going to say that the Janet Arvizo and Star, Davellin and Gavin Arvizo interview that was filmed by Hamid Moslehi was scripted, and you could see the script and it sounded terrible the way it was said. And then there was going to be evidence that, well, not only that, but this is part of the modus operandi of this group of alleged conspirators. They script everybody and make them say things, "And we'll prove," they said, "that by bringing in Debbie Rowe."

And of course it was conclusively shown so far from the evidence, and where we are at this point, there was no script for the answers of Debbie Rowe. She got on the stand and said there was no script. The prosecution tried to impeach her as to whether or not she thought Mr. Jackson was a good father based on some remark she made a year ago when she admitted she was irritated with Mr. Jackson and contemplating a family law matter.

But they didn't impeach her on what they put her up there for. They put her up there, they made the offer that she was going to testify and show that this was the modus operandi, to script out the answers to questions, not just the questions, and that evidence did not exist. It didn't happen.

Similarly with the Arvizo situation. These are professional interviews that were intended to be used on national, international television. In fact, Maury Povich did a show that was professionally produced. There was reference to that. The Court has not -- the jury has not seen that. The Court has not seen the show in the context of the evidence at this point where the prosecution rests, but you've heard testimony that that happened.

It would be idiotic for an interviewer to go into an interview and not have questions scripted out to cover during the course an interview. So this turned out to be a big nothing.

Mr. Moslehi confirmed that there was no script. In fact, he felt that Janet Arvizo was sincere in her answers, and even gave her money at the end of it because he was so moved by her tale of woe and the world that she portrayed.

And they had other witnesses. They put Brian Barron up, who turned out to be a police officer, who was a sworn peace officer the entire time he was working at the ranch, or became a sworn peace officer shortly after he started, was there during all the relevant times. Never saw anything improper.

And those sorts of witnesses that were put on by the prosecution to show that terrible acts occurred or something was going wrong, it turns out, just didn’t do that, and couldn’t do that. And when they got up to tell the truth under oath, they told the truth. Many of them had told the prosecution exactly that before they were called. There were several other witnesses, but I don’t want to take the time to go over all of the witnesses. I use those as examples of the kind of failure of proof that has occurred in this case.

The second area is that if you look at the entire People’s case to this point, it is inherently improbable and not credible, and -- excuse me. Sorry.

When you look at the -- at the law that we cited, the Allen case, citing the California Supreme Court case of People vs. Stanley, credibility is part of the call the Court has to make at this time. It isn’t -- as I said, it’s not a matter of sitting as a juror and usurping their function and saying, “This is the way I would call it.” But it is a matter of determining whether or not a rational trier of fact could believe these stories.

In that regard, under the category of inherently improbable and not credible evidence to this point, we’d ask the Court to look at the timeline. The timeline is inherently preposterous. And this goes to the -- to the other counts besides the conspiracy count as well. And in particular it goes to that.

Look at the allegations that everybody -- if you listen to Mr. Auchincloss’s summary even trying to introduce exhibits, everybody, in his words, was in a panic. I don’t think it shows a panic. It shows people were excited about getting some kind of video out because they thought it would help Mr. Jackson, they thought it would help their own business interests. Sure, that’s not contested in this case.

And what’s not contested is that at that time, at least during the course of February, it became obvious that Janet Arvizo was not a very stable person. No matter how you look at this evidence, it became obvious that she was showing signs of being somewhat unstable in one way or another. And we can talk about that in more detail, but let’s just take the big picture.

It was not clear what her agenda was. And it was known that her boyfriend, Major Jackson, was calling and asking for money, more money than a college education and a house. It was clear that other things were going on.

It is just inherently improbable that anybody - anybody - and I’m not suggesting for one second that Mr. Jackson would do such a thing, but it’s inherently improbable that anybody would choose the moment somewhere late in that scenario in March to say, “Well, why don’t I molest this child.” I mean, it just makes no sense. It makes no sense. It’s inherently improbable.

Secondly, what’s inherently improbable about the timeline is that Janet Arvizo and Major Jackson, on at least one occasion, went to visit Attorney Dickerman, maybe two occasions. Janet Arvizo visited him several times. She visited with Jamie Masada. The children visited with Attorney Dickerman. This occurred in April, I think, for Dickerman. April, May, on into June. They eventually go to Attorney Feldman sometime in April and into May. On all of these meetings with all of these people, there’s never an allegation of molest.

The molest allegations come up only after they’re sent to Dr. Katz and only after they see Dr. Katz, after Janet Arvizo talks to him a couple times, and then he sees the children late May and early June, and then the lawyers, Dickerman, Feldman, and Katz meet and then they decide to go to Child Services at that time.

Thank you.

So the -- it’s inherently improbable that this -- that this supports a molest charge or a conspiracy charge.

But the Court also has to look at this in the context of what’s already come in about Janet Arvizo's modus operandi and the modus operandi of this family. On at least two other occasions she followed the exactly the same scenario, and that evidence has already come in. It hasn't come in in full force yet, but it's come in sufficiently in the conclusion of the People's case that the Court can consider it.

The J.C. Penney's case. It came in through her testimony that she first made claims, not right away, but months later, that she was assaulted and falsely imprisoned, and then was -- from the testimony we had, toward the end of the statute of limitations, she comes in and makes allegations of sexual assault, which ultimately there was some testimony about that in the deposition.

She eventually settles that case.

The same progression occurs over time with her ex-husband. Right -- the evidence is there. And from the evidence you have, you can put two and two together from the dates that were there. Right after she settles the case at a mediation with J.C. Penney's, but before she and her husband have decided who's going to get the money, she accuses him of assault and imprisoning her and her family. Later, and the evidence is there, just before the money is finally going to be divided, while they're still fighting about it, she accuses him of sexual molest.

The same pattern that occurred here. As things progressed, you go from assault, to imprisonment, to sexual molest.

This -- that evidence makes it highly improbable in and of itself that just somehow, out of all of the people of the world, these people are going to be victims of Michael Jackson.

The next point in this category of the highly improbable case is that obviously, as the Court's heard, this is a family who is taking advantage of a lot of benefits of being associated with Mr. Jackson from February through March of 2003, and those benefits include the shopping sprees, the body waxes, the nails, all the other things particularly that Miss Arvizo had admitted to. And they're staying in hotels, they're doing all sorts of things that are just inconsistent with being imprisoned.

It's highly improbable because they claim they escaped three or more times, depending on how you count it, from Neverland, whereas they came back each time. They were sent in a Rolls Royce the first time that was checked out, and everybody checked out at the gate. There was nothing secret about it.

Sure, that may have made people nervous that were trying to put together a rebuttal video because they're hoping that this family is going to cooperate and they're hoping they don't go to the tabloids and sell a salacious story. They're hoping they don't turn on them one way or another. And it turns out their hopes and their fears in that regard were well-founded, because that is ultimately what happened.

But the escapes and the return and the escapes and the return are just improbable, highly improbable, and not credible.

All of the Arvizo family members, although it seems it was a long time ago now, but when they were on the stand, I think the Court recalls that they had incredibly selective memories. They were very able to recite some rote facts that were the core of their claims against Mr. Jackson, but they couldn't remember much of anything else, including who they met with recently and so on.

So, on the sexual offense charges, it's inherently improbable and there is not credible evidence of those charges.

When I get to "witness willfully false" testimony at the end, I'm going to cover some more points on that, but for now, I think it's safe to say the Court heard all that evidence, it's not credible, it's inherently improbable.

On the conspiracy charges, there's just a total failure of proof, so I'd say it's more than inherently improbable and not credible. There's just a failure of proof in tying Mr. Jackson into any kind of a conspiracy. There is nothing to show his specific intent to agree to -- there's no agreement and no specific intent to agree to commit a crime, and there's no specific intent that that crime actually occurred. You just don't have him in this.

You've got witnesses called by the prosecution who basically -- even Rudy Provencio, who was their blockbuster witness, who basically says Mr. Jackson was not involved in things. You had Debbie Rowe, who said people would take advantage of him. You've got witness after witness who's testified that Mr. Jackson is a creative genius. He is -- he does a lot of things very well. You have from time to time people say he's a very good businessman, but -- and I don't mean to say that he's not, but that doesn't mean that he has hands-on control of what people are doing. And in particular in this case, there's no evidence that he had hands-on control of anything with regard to this alleged conspiracy.

I don't think a conspiracy has been shown even among the other people, but this is a case against Mr. Jackson. And there's been nothing shown that's credible to establish that he is a member of a conspiracy. He was a person who had all sorts of other things going on in his life. Certainly he would have been aware of this Bashir tape. He would have been aware of some things, but -- in general one might assume that, but beyond that assumption, there's no indication that he was running anything, directing anything, or doing anything.

Now, the third area of evidence I'm going to talk about is the 1108 evidence. And I want to talk about that in two different regards.

First of all, the 1108 evidence was highly improbable. But secondly, it has the danger -- even if it was credible evidence, it would have the great danger of causing a rational trier of fact to not hold the prosecution to the standard of proof required in this case, proof beyond a reasonable doubt of the current offense. And that is the danger of 1108 and that’s -- that’s something that needs to be addressed.

In that regard, every witness that was called with regard to the 1108 evidence either sued Mr. Jackson for money, sometimes -- never successfully, but sometimes settling, other times being blown out of the water rather dramatically, or they sold their stories to the tabloids or the tabloid television shows, or they had a book deal, or in some cases like Adrian McManus, Chacon and Abdool, they had all three. They did a book deal with Mr. Gutierrez. They did tabloid -- selling of their stories through Splash, to Star Magazine, and elsewhere. And they had one of their members appear on Inside Edition, all for money.

The other ones, as the Court has heard -- I won’t go through every witness, but as the Court has heard, everybody has been involved in that. Out of the literally thousands of people whose lives intersect Mr. Jackson’s during that period of time -- and we’ve heard about that. He has -- you know, he had 100 employees or more, maybe not all at one time at the ranch, but over that period of time certainly he had at least that many. He’s had countless friends and relatives and other people who have visited the ranch, guests of all sorts. Obviously he’s had all sorts of connections with people in the music industry, and so on. And there’s been some testimony about other celebrities with whom he’s friends. And yet who comes forward in this case under 1108 but the Abdools, McManuses and Chacons, who sell their story and the other witnesses who sell their stories.

Phillip LeMarque, who was out there bidding and admitted that he was told, “Well, if you can do better about the story it would be worth more,” his answer is, “Well, I was just playing along,” when he was asking for $500,000.

So you look at that evidence and it’s very, very weak and very suspect evidence. I realize that it met the burden, that the Court determined it met the burden. I can’t concede anything, as you know, Your Honor. But the Court concluded it met the burden for 1108 and made some cuts and calls as to what could come in. But that doesn’t mean that it makes the cut when it comes to being determinative so a rational trier of fact can find a defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

More importantly, as I indicated at the beginning of this segment of my argument, this creates a high risk that a false conviction could occur. Because the 1108 evidence isn’t really probative on anything except propensity, and that’s what it’s brought in for. There’s minimal 1101 evidence. But it’s really 1108 evidence. It’s only on propensity. And that means that the jury then is told, “You can conclude that this defendant has a propensity to do these sorts of things.”

If there’s a total failure of proof, and there’s a lack of credible, reliable evidence that could persuade a rational trier of fact beyond a reasonable doubt on the charges that he’s sitting here facing, there’s a lack of that kind of evidence, there is a high risk that that kind of 1108 evidence can cause an emotional reaction rather than a rational reaction. So you risk that the jury could -- an emotional jury could find the defendant guilty as opposed to a rational jury or a rational trier of fact.

And I don’t mean to insult the jurors, but that’s precisely why the Court is asked to entertain an 1118.1 motion. It’s because the Court can sit here more dispassionately and look at the evidence and make the kinds of distinctions that we talk about when we talk about the law in this area.

Whereas the jury, as much as they’re going to be instructed and as much argument as there’s going to be, this is their one case and they’re going to sit here and it’s going to be very difficult for them to make that cut. So it’s all the more important in a case where 1108 evidence has come in to -- for the Court to make a careful determination on 1118.1 as to whether or not this case should make the cut and go to the jury.

And I realize -- and I’ve got to parenthetically insert this somewhere, so I’ll do it here. There’s no question this is a hard call. And the Court has made hard calls throughout this whole case, and it’s a hard call.

But I think we have to look at it and -- as I’m sure the Court is doing, and I don’t mean to be, you know, insulting in any way to bring it up, but we all have to remind ourselves, it doesn’t matter if this is the Michael Jackson case or any other case, any other person sitting in that chair, whether there are cameras out there or there are not cameras out there, whether there’s a lot of press going on about this or not. The fact of the matter is, as a friend of mine used to say, it’s balls and strikes, and the Court, of course, has to call it.

And when you look at this, one has to wonder -- after looking at those first three categories of the case that I just talked about, one has to wonder would this case have ever gone anywhere like this were it not for the fact that Michael Jackson was the defendant.

How many -- and I don’t want to refer to other cases, but I think it’s reasonable to raise the question as to how many cases, murder cases, death penalty cases, do you have nine fingerprint technicians and experts working on fingerprints? How many cases do you spend the kind of resources and the time, and bring people in, try to find anybody who will come in and say anything to try to put together a prejudicial case, if not an actual legal case of the elements against a defendant?

So having said that, Mr. Jackson, as I said before, is not only -- you know, he’s entitled to no more, but no less respect than anybody else in this regard. And the Court also has to look at it and say, “Well, wait a second. All of these resources have been spent and where are we?” We’re nowhere in this case.

Now, the last category that I want to talk about I think makes the Court’s decision a little easier. And I hesitate to use that word, because I suspect there’s nothing easy about the Court’s determination. But if there is -- if there’s any way to make it less hard, I think this does, because as we have briefed and as I have alluded to at the beginning, if a witness is willfully false, the Court can disregard or the trier of fact can disregard the entire testimony unless the overall evidence persuades the Court of the truth of their testimony.

And we have witnesses who have committed perjury on the stand, who were put up on that stand, and who got up there and lied. And I’m not just arguing this. I’m going to point out, through a few witnesses, where I believe the evidence conclusively shows that there are lies. And that anybody who looked at this case from any aspect, whether it be the jury box or the bench or the counsel table, would have to say these people have been willfully false. And if the key witnesses have been willfully false, and the other witnesses that were put on have pretty much self-destructed to a large extent, what is this case all about?

I think the Court has to look at it and say there is not credible evidence at the end of the day supporting the prosecution’s theory of this case, and therefore an 1118.1 motion should be granted as to everything.

Let me refer to some of the “witness willfully false” statements. And I chose statements that I think will be noncontroversial. I say that, and we’ll find out if there’s a controversy, but I tried to pick some of the statements that are just so clearly false that there really isn’t an argument about it, or there shouldn’t be an argument about it.

Let's take Gavin Arvizo to start with.

One of the statements that was so clearly false, not a close call at all, is he got on this stand in this court and alleged that Michael Jackson told him that he had to masturbate because if boys don't masturbate, they get to a certain level and they may rape women.

Now, we know that's false, because I believe it was Sergeant Robel -- and I was going to go check, but I believe it was Sergeant Robel who was on the stand, and I asked him, "Did you ever hear that statement before in this case?" And he said, "No." And then I asked him if he had interviewed Gavin Arvizo previously, and he said, "Yes." And who did he attribute that statement to? And it was his grandmother. And I believe we brought out that it was -- that's what he also said at the grand jury.

Now, this isn't something that innocent misrecollection may cause a witness to just, you know, make a little mistake on the stand. This is something that somebody says when they are lying. And that's why we have the "witness willfully false" instruction and that's why, when you look at these willfully false statements, at the end of the day, the only rational thing that anybody can conclude is the People have failed to prove their case beyond a reasonable doubt.

Look at the changed dates of the alleged incidents. Gavin Arvizo at first said it was from February 7th on. And what happened was, as the case progressed, rather than memories fading, memories got much more specific in all of these prosecution witnesses, these key prosecution witnesses. And they got more specific in a way that helped the prosecution get over hurdles.

What happened, as we know, is that nobody had the Bashir tape. Nobody had the Brad Miller tape-recording. And the Arvizos free-wheeled and said, "Hey, this is the way everything was," and made their statement.

As this came out, all of a sudden the prosecution did what they should have done, and I agree they should have done: They took the tape and they showed it to these people, and said, “What do you have to say about that?” Okay.

Well, for one thing, what they did is, they decided to move the dates. So they moved the dates to the point where it happened at the end of the stay. And now, from the evidence that the Court has before it, and including travel records and logs that were just admitted by the prosecution, it’s clear that Mr. Jackson was there only a very brief period of time during those days in March when the Arvizo family was there. But they moved the dates. It’s willfully false.

As I alluded to the change in testimony with regard to the tapes, remember that, until the prosecution had these tapes, they had no idea that these people had gotten up there and said, you know, “Michael Jackson is a wonderful guy,” and “Everything was fine and nothing happened,” and “We’re happy,” and, you know, “We wish him the best and we love him and he’s like a daddy,” and everything else.

They show them the tapes and what happened? This came out in cross-examination. Each one of those Arvizo children said that what they said on the tape was false and they said Dieter made them say it. And Janet embellished on that, which I’ll get to in a moment, but they said Dieter made them say it. Gavin himself said, two places, 99.9 percent of that tape was false and Dieter made him say it.

That’s a witness willfully false. It’s a witness willfully false. And we know that, why? Not only because it’s all inherently improbable when you watch the tape and they’re goofing off and they’re laughing and they’re saying whatever they’re saying, but we uncovered the cards that were sent by the Arvizos.

And I’m sorry, I don’t have the exhibit number right here, but Your Honor remembers the cards that were sent.

Why were the cards sent? They were sent in 2001 because Gavin had recovered, and Michael Jackson was no longer at that point inviting them to the ranch. Mr. Jackson had other things to do, I’m sure. But he wasn’t inviting him to the ranch. They claim they had his phone number or a phone number. They had to call Evvy Tavasci, which everybody else has to call, as we found out, who everybody has to call. They didn’t like that. They didn’t have communications, so they started sending these over-the-top cards. And these over-the-top cards had exactly the same language that they used in that video that they -- that Gavin has now claimed is 99 percent false because Dieter told him to say it.

So it’s a witness willfully false. And I’m sorry, I mean, we can feel sorry for this young man because apparently he had these serious health problems, and everybody’s glad to see when a child recovers and so on. But the problem is he’s making serious felony accusations against my client and he’s lying. And he’s lying. That’s all there is to it.

We know that the cards, by the way, were sent for what? They were sent for gain. They wanted to get back into Michael’s world. That’s when they weren’t able to do it. We know that cards were sent to Louise Palanker that were just the same kind of cards, that called her “Mommy,” “Wheezy,” and made the same kind of things. What happened? Those were sent after she said, “You can’t have any more money.” It’s the same pattern.

So they got on this tape and they said over-the-top things, not because Dieter told them to say them or anybody else. It’s because that’s what they do when they want to get into somebody’s world and they want to gain something from them, whether it’s money or just being a part of the celebrity or whatever.

But what we do know from that is that when he got up there, he made that statement, that it was 99 percent false, on the stand. He said, “Well, I didn’t really mean that.” “Well, maybe I meant it.” That’s willfully false. It’s willfully false.

Dieter didn’t tell him to do that. We know that.

We can’t look the other way and say it’s close enough for government work. These things are too big.

Gavin lied about what happened on the plane.

We had Cindy Bell, who came to testify. She was a People’s witness. She was clear. She was on her feet the whole time. It was a small plane. She said it would be like the front part of the jury box to where she was there. She walked back and forth. She could see everybody. She was constantly worried about their well-being. She stayed on her feet the entire trip. Nobody ever said she sat down. The mother was there, Dr. Farshshian was there. We had the testimony that the security guard was there. Other people are there.

It’s inherently improbable, but Cindy Bell makes it very clear that the testimony in particular was false. Gavin wasn’t drinking alcohol. Gavin was obnoxious when he got on the plane to start with, and remained obnoxious throughout the flight. He threw food at the sleeping doctor, which was kind of a humorous picture, but it shows that the testimony of these people in this case, Gavin in particular, is willfully false. Can’t get around it.

So on Gavin, if the statement attributed to Michael Jackson to try to convict him of a felony that he had routinely said in the past was what his grandmother told him, just taking that one statement alone, I don’t see how any rational trier of fact could say, “Well, let’s regard the rest of his testimony as truthful.”

Going on to Star, claiming there was wine in the Coke can because he saw red around the rim. The only problem was these kids had some core facts they got right or they got consistent with each other, but they didn’t have some of the other facts. All the other testimony was that Michael Jackson had white wine in his Coke can.

Star Arvizo denied that he ever pulled a knife on Kiki Fournier. Your Honor heard Kiki Fournier. She was called by the prosecution. She said the kid pulled a knife on her. I mean, it’s -- that’s not something that is just you don’t remember.

And then he lied about what happened on the plane as well. He lied about where he was sitting and he lied about all sorts of things. But certainly the Cindy Bell testimony makes it clear that he was lying.

So we have witness willfully false, Gavin and Star.

Davellin had some other issues.

And again, I want to emphasize, there are lots of things that I disagree with in the testimony, I think maybe the way the testimony indicates that these people are lying in other regards and it just didn’t happen. I mean, don’t get me wrong, but I’m just picking out these specific willfully false episodes.

Look at Davellin. She lied. She said she stayed in the guest cottage with her mother, and her mother didn’t want to leave, so they cowered there and they stayed there. I forgot her exact words. But she was imprisoned with her mother there in the guest cottage, in the Unit 4.

And what happened? It turns out they brought the police officer on, sworn police officer, Officer Barron, who moonlighted there. He said not only did the gate logs reflect that she was out at the theater staying with Marie Nicole, but I asked him, “Do you remember that?” He says, “Oh, yeah, I remember she was out there. She was hanging out with Marie Nicole. She was out there at the theater. That’s where she stayed.” That’s not cowering in her room with her mother. That is witness willfully false.

They are trying to convict Michael Jackson and they have the assistance of the prosecution doing things like bringing in this 1108 to try to make their otherwise absolutely fantastic stories seem more saleable to a jury.

Davellin also said -- and this is a witness willfully false. That’s why I pick it out. She also said her brother was a sweet, nice boy who never had problems until after they left the ranch at the end, in March of 2003.

There was clear evidence from people called by the prosecution, from a teacher and an administrator, who went through the records and summarized everything else that was in his record, that he was completely out of control. He was profane. He was obnoxious. He would disrupt class. He was actually kicked out of class repeatedly prior to 2003.

So this idea that she was going to get up and sell the product here to this jury that her brother was a sweet, nice boy and Michael Jackson caused all this, and therefore he should be convicted of child molest, is a witness willfully false on a material issue. Forgetting, again, about all the other details of her testimony that don’t match with reality or other evidence in their arguments, that’s just clearly refuted.

Then we go to Janet Arvizo. And we can spend forever on Janet Arvizo, but I won’t. I’ll just hit some of the highlights of things that are clearly a witness willfully false.

I mean, anybody who saw her affect in the courtroom would have to conclude by virtue of her affect alone and the glib way that she tried to testify and the way she tried to add things whenever it suited her purpose, and so on, was the testimony of somebody who wasn’t telling the truth. But look at some of the particulars.

She claimed the entire Bashir tape was scripted. Every single word. She said she made three mistakes. She said something about God -- I forgot what the three were. But there were three little mistakes. Otherwise, it was absolutely scripted.

We got to get real. I don't care whose case this is. That witness was bizarre. And she says it was scripted. She said the outtakes were scripted. The hand-holding, the laughing, the gang signs, everything was scripted, she claimed, when it's clear -- I mean, you'd have to be an idiot to believe that. Excuse me for putting it that way. But I mean, it's clear when you look at the tape the first time -- as Your Honor mentioned, we saw the tape many times. When you look at the tape the first time, one of the things that strikes you right off the bat is she doesn't know the camera's on and she's laughing and fooling around and giving suggestions how to make this look better and telling the camera people what to do. And she's claiming now on the stand that that was scripted, she was told she had to say all those words and she memorized it.

Now, the memorization part of it. I'm just taking the real big whoppers that you can really pin down so we don't have to talk about everything else. The memorization part of it is so clearly false.

She said the Brad Miller interview was all from the heart and what she said to Brad Miller was all true.

The Brad Miller interview included a lot of the exact same kind of language and it was -- they weren't the exact same words. Some of the same words were used, but it's the same phraseology, it's the same thoughts, it's the same this and that, that she had in the -- conveyed in the rebuttal film with Mr. Moslehi.

The Brad Miller interview was on February the 16th. The rebuttal video was February the 19th at night, going into the morning of the 20th. Probably the camera started rolling right around midnight or so, okay?

She said, when she was asked, how could you have memorized however many hours that was of conversation, including outtakes and giggling, and doing that -- I mean, that takes a lot of rehearsal. How did you do that? She said she met with Dieter ten times a day, who coached her and had the script, and she memorized every word, except for the three words that she got wrong.

Okay? Inherently improbable to start with. But it's also just absolutely bizarre. I'm sorry to laugh, but it's just so bizarre, because from the 16th to the 19th, she's staying at Jay Jackson's house. She didn't see Dieter between the 16th and the 19th. The only time that she would have seen Dieter was from February 6th, when she said she briefly talked to him in Miami, and then from February 8th, after everybody returned on the 7th from Miami to the ranch, the 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, when she went out and got her body wax and then had Jesus Salas drive her home in the middle of the night in the Rolls Royce.

So is she claiming that we should believe or any rational trier of fact should believe that she was coached ten times a day on the 8th, 9th and 10th and 11th, took her out for a body wax, and then forgot it all. When she talked to Brad Miller, it was from the heart, and then came back on the 19th? Or are we to believe that this happened between the 16th and the 19th when she -- when this was scripted and she was given every word? It's just preposterous.

So she's a witness willfully false, clearly, on these issues, and I don't mean to, by taking those examples, to ask the Court not to think about the big picture. This is one of the most clearly deceptive witnesses that has ever appeared in any court.

Look at the testimony about the -- what she called the leg wax. We'll give her the benefit of the doubt for the purpose of the end of the People's case here. She gets a leg wax on 2-11. She knows that's coming up. And a number of the prosecution witnesses did this. They knew something was coming up, and so they tried to head it off at the pass.

And she knew this was coming up and she raised her hand, as I recall. I was sitting there, and I thought, “What’s happening?”

But she raises her hand and said something. “Oh, I paid for this. I paid for this.” And she wasn’t asked. She just was volunteering this. And how did she say she paid for it? She said the plastic bag that was tied onto her luggage handle had gotten lost on the Xtra Jet flight, and therefore somebody owed her money for her shoes that were in there. And so she considered that Michael Jackson paying for her leg wax was, in fact, her paying for the leg wax because she lost her plastic bag.

Besides that just being improbable, the way she did it, it was clearly lying. Clearly lying. It had no relation to reality, no relation to the other evidence in the case. No relation to her own internal testimony. It was just an effort to lie to try to persuade this jury that Mr. Jackson should be convicted.

She admitted that she lied under oath in the J.C. Penney case. She lied about had what happened on the plane. It’s clear from Cindy Bell’s testimony and everybody else’s testimony, it just doesn’t match up.

As we were precluded from going into -- and I understand the Court can’t consider it. I suppose the Court can’t consider it. I won’t concede that, but for the sake of this argument I will concede it, without conceding the case, whether the trier of fact can consider her taking the Fifth adversely to her, even the Court doesn’t do that, and we didn’t get into -- directly into the welfare fraud allegations through her testimony. Her husband, Jay Jackson, took the stand and, said, “Yeah, I had” -- “I had base pay.” And we all know, base pay is just the start for the military. After you get all the allowances, housing allowance and all that, his pay is 5,000 a month. He’s depositing her welfare checks into his account. He said that. Clearly this is a person who's not telling the truth.

Now, as I say, the rest of her story is inherently preposterous. But one of the things that's not just preposterous but it's obviously a witness willfully false that recurs throughout her testimony, and so I select it just to use as a further example, is that she claimed that she was imprisoned and couldn't call 9-1-1. And yet, once all the telephone records come in, and they're in, for instance, from the Calabasas Inn, she said -- in her direct, I believe, she admitted she called her mother. She called Jay Jackson routinely from Calabasas. She called Aja Pryor from other locations, including the ranch. She called Jay Jackson. She called other people. She talked to Aja Pryor numerous times. She was able to meet with her lawyer, Mr. Dickerman. Was able to meet with Jamie Masada. She was able to go to all sorts of restaurants, do all sorts of other things, go in and get documents from the federal building where there are all sorts of federal officers. She had her lawyer send her her divorce papers. I believe she indicated that's where she got them from, so she could get her passports. She met with her lawyer in court.

She had every opportunity to talk with somebody or to make that 9-1-1 call. Louise Palanker said that she called and said something to the effect that -- Miss Palanker said she called and said, "Well, can I come over?" And Miss Palanker didn't want her to come over for -- using some good judgment. And at that point she says, "Well, maybe I could meet you tomorrow at the mall." And any rational person will say, "Well, wait a second. Meet at the mall; what's the story."

And Miss Palanker said -- I asked her, "What do you mean?"

"She said, 'Well, they let me go shopping.'"

I mean, that's not a person who's falsely imprisoned. That's a lie. These are just plain lies.

Now, the Court can speculate as to why she was lying. I mean, there is certainly some cross-examination about the fact that she didn’t want to be separated from Michael Jackson. And there’s a lot of other things going on in her life that you could put together to see how inherently improbable her testimony is; for instance, why she would have this wax, and then Jay Jackson calls, and then she calls him back, and then all of a sudden she decides after that, when he wasn’t able to get ahold of her while she’s having her body wax and whatever else she’s doing there, that she tells him, “No, everything’s okay,” and she’s got to leave right away. That’s not escaping from the ranch. That’s escaping to go back to Jay Jackson and patch things up before they fall apart.

We could talk about the different theories. But forgetting about the theories for the moment, you got a witness willfully false. She couldn’t call 9-1-1? She could make outgoing calls from the ranch to Jay Jackson. She could make outgoing calls from the ranch to other people. She can call Aja Pryor. She made all these -- completed all these calls and talked for -- if you look at the records of the Calabasas Inn, she talked for, you know, 30 minutes, 45 minutes. I mean, she’s yakking on the phone. Her testimony is, “Well, I was leaving little hints.” That is just absolutely a witness willfully false.

And then that leaves us with the prosecution’s last blockbuster witness, who they, I think, represented but clearly intended that he’d tie things up for the People and somehow make their case after everything has fallen apart. And what happened but his testimony fell apart. And that was Rudy Provencio.

He got up, his affect was very strange for a witness in a serious case who really had something to say, and then we find out why. It turns out that when he was first interviewed at length on January 31st, he had never said anything about killers. He never said anything about escape. He said Debbie Rowe was sincere. He never said anything about questions being -- I'm sorry, answers being scripted. He only said there were questions. That's what he told the police officers.

Then he decided to go to work for the police and start tape-recording stuff. None of which came into evidence, because it wasn't significant. It didn't come into evidence or it would have been here, I'm sure. He tape-recorded stuff during 2004 trying to get people to say things. And he was trying to be helpful to the prosecution, all right?

What does he do? He comes in with these notes that he claims he found two weeks ago. And what does he do? He even comes with the receipt from the -- from the storage place to show that he went there to clean out his storage two weeks ago. He's a witness willfully false. He was lying through his teeth.

And we know that. We not only know that he was lying and perjuring himself on the stand, as were these other witnesses -- and I don't say that lightly and I don't say it rhetorically. I'm saying it specifically, clinically, for a reason. That's what happened. We know he manufactured evidence. And how do we know that? We know that from the evidence in this case. It is just absolutely clear.

And the reason we know that is he claimed that he wrote these notes contemporaneously. And the new notes that he just turned over that he never told anybody about, he never told the police about escape, killers, or anything else until two weeks ago, when at the same time he's finding these -- miraculously finding these notes that he manufactured in violation of Penal Code Section 134, a felony. He should be prosecuted.

He said these notes were written on February 1, 2003. When he was confronted with the absolute impossibility that those notes couldn't have been written at that time, then he said, "Well, look down here. Paragraph two is a different handwriting, so I must have done it on a different date, even though February 2 comes after February 1." And, "Look, I had February 17 earlier, so, see? It could all be a big mistake."

Okay? But what he said, and he stuck by it through the very end through Mr. Mesereau's questioning, was the part about "The mom is flipping out" was definitely part of his notes. That was right under the January -- I mean, the February 1, 2003, notation. And he said and he claimed and swore under oath that that was February 1.

And he offered the explanation on January 24th, we've got a transcript from Kathryn Milofsky, a CBS correspondent who was at one time in England and apparently is here now, whose name pops up every once in a while on various things. She seems to be corresponding with a lot of people. Of course, I suppose you haven't ruled on the 400 series yet, so I won't talk about the content of that. But that was part of the offer there, part of the offer by Mr. Auchincloss.

It turns out that that story, that -- he thought he saved the day, so he could be the blockbuster witness. I don't know what his motivation is. He wants to be the big star witness. He's a wanna-be cop, he's a wanna-be this. I don't know. But he was a liar on the stand. And I don't say that lightly, and I don't say that just to insult him.

We know that because the weight of all the other evidence in this case indicates that Janet Arvizo didn't have any idea what Bashir was about when the press started calling her mother's house on February 4 and February 5. She doesn't have any idea. She had no idea. There is no contest on that. Jay Jackson, Major Jay Jackson confirms that. That's when the press comes around, on February 5, and he tries to get them to pay him money, and they eventually offer $15,000, and it's not enough.

That's February 5. Nothing is happening on February 1. Nothing is happening on February 2. Nothing is happening on February 3. He created these notes to make himself a key witness in this case. And that’s why, when I say Mr. Jackson is entitled to no more, but no less fairness than anybody else, and I don’t care if I’m standing here representing another client who has absolutely no status as a celebrity or status in any other regard, I would make the same argument. He is entitled to have this Court determine if there are witnesses lying up there, and they’re willfully false, that their testimony should be disregarded, and when you look at the whole body of evidence, reject it and grant the 1118.1.

Now, to make matters worse, he tried to lie about that further by saying, well, it was because of the transcript. And you recall that the transcrip - or the report - it was unclear whether it was a transcript or a report that he went through - Mr. Mesereau asked him, “Well, you went through two weeks ago and you started adding ‘Michael Jackson’ to everything.”

“Well, I made corrections as to spelling.”

“Well, you added ‘Michael Jackson.’ You added some other things.”

“Well, I did add that.”

He manufactured all this, and he manufactured this story that was the script. The problem is that we all know from this evidence -- if we don’t know anything else, we know from this evidence that Janet Arvizo had absolutely no knowledge of a script from the Bashir film whatsoever. And she didn’t even know about the Bashir film airing in England and she didn’t even see the Bashir film when it came out on February 6th in the United States. And so it is much more consistent -- not “much more.” It’s -- the only thing that’s consistent with the facts that you’ve seen from multiple witnesses is that after the 6th and it was shown, the Bashir tape was shown in the United States, did Mr. Schaffel get himself back into the group.

And remember, he was sent a letter -- and this Witness Provencio tried to make fun of the lawyer, Zia Modabber. He was sent a letter, Schaffel was sent a letter saying, “Stay away from Michael Jackson,” and his -- he was trying to get back into Michael Jackson’s world, like everybody does, to try to be a part of this celebrity world and get the benefits and make money behind Mr. Jackson’s back or with his -- with his approval in some regard, make money, make yourself a big wheel. That’s what he was trying to do. We had that testimony.

And in his original statement to the police, he was clear it was after the Bashir tape aired in the United States on February the 6th, and that’s the only thing that would be consistent. Not that Marc Schaffel or anybody else were making conspiratorial statements, let alone the other things he attributed to them in the February 1st and the February 2nd calls. That’s absolutely false. It’s a lie. It couldn’t have happened. But it’s not only a lie, but it’s a lie by somebody who came in here and manufactured notes to give to the prosecution, who gave them to the defense, and we all sat and looked at his notes, and that was false evidence, a felony violation of Penal Code Section 134. The man should be prosecuted for that, and we’ve seen people prosecuted for a lot less.

So when you look at that, he is the only witness that they’ve been using to try to somehow tie Michael Jackson into some kind of a conspiracy by saying, “Well, he was on the phone. Well, I listened to all the phone calls.”

“Oh, you did?”

“Well, because he had them on speaker.”

And “Marc Schaffel was a terrible person. He was very happy to put down anybody he wanted to.”

And then he went into his own office, and he picked up the phone and he listened in secretly to calls. That testimony can’t be believed. That man never said Michael Jackson had anything to do with anything. And in fact, he had told others that Michael Jackson didn't know what was going on.

He comes into court to be a hero for the prosecution. And they put him up, and I choose to think they put him up unwittingly. I don't suggest they put him up deliberately saying, "Get up there and lie." But at some point they had to know he was lying.

And I'll tell you what. There was something that was very telling. Mr. Mesereau asked Mr. Provencio, after this incredible testimony that any lawyer, like Mr. Zonen, who knows the facts of this case, would have to see is not only improbable, but it's a lie. And the one question was, "What did Mr. Zonen ask you at the break?"

"He asked me if I was telling the truth."

Don't you think that any lawyer in his right mind would have asked that witness, "Are you telling the truth?" And might have asked him a few more questions like, "How in the world could you possibly do that?"

I'm disappointed that they tried to rehabilitate him after that, and they didn't succeed. I'm disappointed in that. I would expect them to say, "This man is lying, and we want to withdraw his testimony."

Even defense lawyers, because defense lawyers are always picked on, and prosecutors have a higher standard when it comes to some things, but lawyers, as lawyers, have certain high standards we have to abide by. The Court's well aware that even when a defendant takes the stand, over the objection of counsel, and wants to say something untrue, a defense lawyer has an obligation not to -- not to aid and abet in that, even though it's an exercise of a Constitutional right by a defendant. Any lawyer, prosecution or defense, has an obligation to not try to rehabilitate somebody who's gotten up there and lied through his teeth so clearly and emphatically. There's just no way around it.

Now, having said all of those things, when you put all of that in context, that's why it says -- that's why I say it makes the Court's job easier or less hard, because I know it's a hard task to perform.

If this wasn't the Michael Jackson case, I don't think the prosecution would have tried anything, and the prosecution would have said, "You're lying. We want to stop. Let's disclose this to the Court and let's have a hearing. Let's do something. Let's dismiss the case." But they went ahead and they're going ahead, and they're going to get up after I sit down and they're going to argue these people weren't lying, I suppose.

It's up to the Court to look at this and say, "We cannot permit this case to go any further." Why? The jury may well see it the same way, and I think they probably do, to a certain extent. They're not lawyers. They don't know all the rules. They don't know exactly what they're supposed to do yet.

At the end of the case, they may well do the right thing and acquit Mr. Jackson, but they might not, because they might be moved by the innuendo. They might be moved by the 1108 evidence in particular. That is extremely dangerous. It's extremely dangerous in this case where it is propping up people who are witnesses willfully false.

So I'd ask the Court to grant the 1118.1 motion as to the conspiracy count and as to all the other counts.

Thank you.

THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Sanger.
On behalf of the People?

MR. SNEDDON: Be right with you, Your Honor.

First of all, Your Honor, let me address the question that we began discussing with Mr. Sanger at the beginning of his remarks.

I believe Mr. Sanger is wrong in the law.

I believe his interpretation of the law with regard to what the Court’s responsibility is with regard to this motion is incorrect. And while I believe that -- that that was a nice final argument that Mr. Sanger made, unfortunately, the point that we are at with regard to an 1118 motion is after a defendant has been convicted. And at that point is there substantial evidence to support the conviction, drawing all favorable inferences in favor of the jury’s verdict. That’s the standard.

And I cite to the Court two cases that clearly set forth that standard. The first case is People vs. Cuevas, C-u-e-v-a-s. It’s a 1995 case at 12 Cal.4 252. And then there’s a rather recent case -- and that’s at page 260, if I didn’t indicate that, Your Honor.

And then there’s a more recent case which is called People vs. Coffman, with a C, f-f-m-a-n, and Marlo, M-a-r-l-o, which is found at 34 Cal.1 at page 90.

Both of those cases make it very clear that the Court is not in a position on an 1118 to make credibility issues and decisions, but only to decide whether or not there is substantial evidence that the jury believe the evidence was credible. And so that’s a considerably different matter than what Mr. Sanger was urging upon the Court.

Having that in mind, what we have to do is assume, it’s a starting point, that every argument that Mr. Sanger just made to you, that he would have made to the jury, and the jury didn’t believe it or didn’t find it persuasive, and convicted the client in any case, and are there reasonable inferences in what remains in the testimony and the evidence that supports the reasons that the jury found against everything Mr. Sanger just stood here and told you? That’s where we really are in this case.

Having said that, I’d like to begin with a little bit of analysis, first of all. And I won’t spend much time on it, but I think it’s important to put things in perspective in terms of the law of conspiracy in light of some of the things that Mr. Sanger said.

There are three charges here. One charge of conspiracy, with an allegation of three particular crimes that were involved: Extortion, false imprisonment and child abduction.

Now, I share, in one respect, Mr. Sanger’s notion that there is a double agreement and a double intent that’s required to commit this crime. And I do not take exception with that. However, I do take exception with this little bit of selective memory in terms of the rest of the law on conspiracy.

For Mr. Jackson to be guilty of the conspiracy does not require him to be the puppet at the top of this, moving all the strings to the little puppets below. It requires that in whatever role Mr. Jackson plays in the conspiracy, that he does so with the intent to commit the crimes that are alleged and he does so with the intent that there be a conspiracy to commit those crimes. All he needs to do is share in the overall goal of the conspiracy; that is, that there was an attempt to conceal or an agreement. Not an attempt, but it was an agreement to conceal or to falsely imprison, to abduct and to extort.

The crime of conspiracy is unique, because it does not require that the crime actually be committed or accomplished. And that’s why we have a whole series of overt acts. And that’s why the law of conspiracy is set forth in the instructions to the jury as they need not find that these crimes were actually committed, only that there was an agreement and an intent and a conspiracy to commit these crimes, and there was at least one -- one overt act done towards the commission of the goals of that crime.

Now, that’s the law of conspiracy. That’s the proper perspective for which this case and this 1118 motion needs to be heard.

And it’s a fundamental principle of the law of conspiracy that when you have many people involved in a conspiracy, that many people have different roles. And I don’t think we have to stretch very far if you just take the common analogy sometimes that I’m sure this Court is familiar with, and I don’t mean this in any disrespect to Mr. Jackson, but I’m only using it as an analogy. The one that comes before us more often than not, if you look at those cases that this Court has seen and if you look at the cases on the laws of narcotics and drug cases, and when you try to get to the top of the cartel, you try to move to the top of the big sellers, oftentimes what you’re talking about is moving through other people through that syndicate that’s reflective of what the agreement is at the top. It doesn’t mean that the person at the top doesn’t know or share in the agreement of what the people are doing down below.

So I think that the attempt by the defense to portray Mr. Jackson as somehow being the mastermind behind the conspiracy is a false attempt. It is not something that we’ve alleged during the entire time that we’ve tried this case to the jury and the time we put this case on to the grand jury, or the time that we talked with you at the 995. The fact of the matter is, Mr. Jackson had a role. The fact of the matter is, I’m going to point to you evidence that shows that he was in agreement. The fact of the matter is that he was the beneficiary of everything that happened in this case.

And it’s not necessary that the -- that they succeed in their attempts to falsely imprison, or to abduct the children, or to extort something out of someone, although I do believe that there is strong evidence that they did succeed in certain extents in all of those goals, as I will point out.

Now, I’d like to start, first of all, and I want to say that there’s another thing that I think needs to be said to the Court. There’s another fundamental principle of the cases that interpret the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain a conviction on appeal that deals with how you prove a conspiracy.

Lord knows nobody is dumb enough to get together and have five or six or seven or two or three people sign a contract and say, “We’re going to go out and commit these crimes, and I agree to do this, and you agree to do this, and he agrees to do this.” Nobody does that. I dare say that all the time you’ve been on the bench, you’ve never heard of a conspiracy where they had a contract and they walked in here and showed you everybody agreed by way of contract to do this.

And that’s why the case law in California is replete with cases that demonstrate over and over and over again that the thing that you look for on the substantial evidence review is, is there association? Is there a way to link these people together in some common purpose? Is there a motive among the people? Are the goals and the acts of the people reasonably calculated to accomplish what is alleged to be the goals of the conspiracy?

And that’s where I think our starting point has to be. What’s the motive in this particular case?

The motive of Mr. Jackson is clear. The Bashir tape, and even Mr. Sanger, to an extent, admitted it in his argument to you, the evidence of one thing has been proven in this case so far. The evidence is overwhelming that this was a death threat to his career. He was hemorrhaging financially and had been for several years. He had a cash flow problem. And for some reason -- as Mr. Duross indicated, for some reason he couldn’t get out and market himself, and didn’t, or chose not to, to try to do something about this debt.

But the Bashir filming was the thing that was just the last stroke that was going to end his career if something wasn’t done immediately to turn that around.

Now, sure, some people are going to make money off that. There’s no reason that some of these people involved in trying to resurrect his career couldn't make money in a venture trying to resurrect it. There's no reason why these people involved in this couldn't benefit from being associated with whatever was left of Mr. Jackson's career, and to the extent that they were able to resurrect his career, to benefit by being on the inner circle.

But the motive was to resurrect his career.

And that's what was clear, that the only person who really benefited first, foremost, was the defendant in this case, Michael Joe Jackson.

It's totally unrealistic to believe that at this particular point in time, when his entire career, his entire financial situation, his entire entertainment, his entire record career is on the line, that Mr. Jackson is going to sit on the sidelines, allow people to come in from the outside, run his career, what's left of it, and try to salvage it without knowing what's going on.

And one thing that has also been proven here, I believe, that there's substantial evidence that Mr. Jackson is a hands-on person. He likes to get involved to some extent and to be informed, and likes to make the ultimate decisions as to what's going on. He's been described as the captain of the ship. And I think that the evidence that circumstantially has been shown here establishes that just to be the case here, and I want to start to just direct the Court's attention to some of the things that I think are important.

First of all, I think we need to comment on the associates themselves. These are people that came in from different places. One's from Canada. One's from Germany. Mr. Schaffel is local. Mr. Schaffel had a history. Mr. Tyson had been a friend, a close family friend, and his family has been a close family friend of the defendant's for years. Absolute years.

Now, who is it that's involved the most in actually executing many of the overt acts in this case? Frank Tyson. Frank Tyson, the defendant's closest friend, is the person who's out there doing many, many, many of these overt acts. Who's at the ranch hanging out with the defendant while all this conduct is being conducted? Frank Tyson. And his friend, Vinnie, that he brought in to help him do all of these things.

You look at the phone analyses that were presented to the jury in this case, and you look through the key times when things are going on, like when the Arvizos left on the 12th, and the video on the 19th and the 20th, there are very few phone calls up there of Marc Schaffel. The majority of the calls are going back and forth between the defendant's closest friend, Frank Tyson, his cohort Vinnie Amen, Neverland Valley Ranch, and phone calls to Michael Jackson's investigator's cell phone. And we have testimony from at least, I believe, three different witnesses in this case that that's how Mr. Jackson communicated with people.

I think it's significant that the Court in this particular case also has to put into context what happened here when this whole thing got started, when the bad news came out, when they learned about the transcript on the 24th, when Schaffel went to Dieter and Ronald and when they went to Miami where the defendant was. Those people were called to Miami to be with the defendant to consult. "What are we going to do to solve this problem?"

What comes out of the product of that, Your Honor? The product of that is the defendant is the first one in this case who mentions "killers." It's the defendant who is the first one in this case who reaches out his hand across the nation through the telephones to contact the Arvizos, who he has not had a single solitary contact with for months, and that last contact was simply to manipulate Gavin Arvizo to participate in the Bashir tape. And he hadn't seen Gavin and the family for months and months and months before that. It's the defendant who reaches out first.

The Arvizos are minding their own time. They're getting bombarded by the media because of the Bashir tape. But they're not calling Jackson. It's Jackson calling them. It's Michael Jackson who says, "I want you to come to Miami." It's Michael Jackson who said, "I want you to come here for a press conference."

Now, I think we have to stop and think about something here, something that Rudy Provencio said on the witness stand. Mr. Jackson said he didn't really like to do press conferences. Well, if he wasn't going to do a press conference, why did he want those people in Miami? And why was there a one-way ticket bought, or going to be bought, before they put them on the charter jet with Chris Tucker? A one-way ticket? They wanted those people out of circulation. They wanted that family out of circulation. And it was the defendant that reached out to them and brought them to Miami, to him and to the other members of the conspiracy in this case.

And who was it who speaks first in Miami? It's the defendant, Michael Jackson. It's not Dieter. It's not Ronald. It's not Marc Schaffel. It's not Frank Tyson. And it's not Vinnie Amen.

And he sets the tone. Again, he says, "the killers." "And if you want to appease them, if you want to appease them, the killers, do what these two people who work for me tell you to do." And he set the whole tone for the entire relationship and the situation at that very point in time.

And we know for a fact, or there's no evidence to the contrary, that there were no killers. There were no people to appease. It was false. It was made -- it was something that was made up to induce a mother, who is fearful for her children, who has no father figure in the family, to go to somebody they thought was their friend, his friend, Michael Jackson.

And it worked. And it worked.

And when they get there, what are the first two things that Dieter and Ronald do? The people that Janet Arvizo is instructed to rely on? The people who are going to take her out of this problem? The people who are going to appease the killers? They don’t do anything to try to make money off of Michael Jackson. What they do is, they have her sign blank pieces of paper which are eventually used to try to infer that she’s part of a lawsuit with Michael Jackson against Bashir that she says never -- wasn’t on the sheet of paper when she signed it in blank.

What else do they do when they’re in Miami? They don’t try to do anything to take money from Michael Jackson. They issue a press release, which statement’s attributed to the family and to Janet Arvizo and to Gavin Arvizo that they’ve never made.

Who benefits by that? The defendant is the only one that benefits by that.

When they decide to go back to California, you can’t reasonably assume that Mr. Jackson didn’t know that the Arvizos were going to come to the ranch. It’s his ranch. It’s his charter plane. It was his invitation. Why is he doing this? There was no press conference. Why not take them home? Why not let them go? Why take them to the ranch?

Again, the reason is clear. They wanted to isolate these people. They wanted to keep them away from the media. They wanted to convince them to do a rebuttal film, all things that Mr. Jackson was aware of. He was aware of it, because on the conversation that Rudy Provencio tells us about, he not only talks about Debbie Rowe doing the rebuttal film, but he also talks about the fact that they talk about the fact that the Arvizos were to be part of that film. So he’s aware that that’s part of the project. So why do they have to go the ranch? Why do they have to stay on the ranch if that’s part of the project?

And the defendant ‘s the one who’s involved in making those kinds of decisions as to who can stay at his ranch and under what circumstances and who gets on his charter jet. That’s not a decision made by Dieter Weizner. It’s not a decision that’s made by Marc Schaffel, who’s in California. That’s not a decision that’s made by Ronald Konitzer. And it’s certainly not a decision that would be made by somebody like Frank Tyson.

I think the evidence is fairly clear in this, by the way, this “killer” statement, that it was false, was not true. We have from several different witnesses in this case now that confirms that. Not only through the -- through Rudy Provencio, but he said he heard the same thing from Ian Drew. And so there’s several different sources of the fact that this kind of language was used to scare the Arvizos in this case.

Now, with regard to what happens in the next 12 days, whether you want to call it an escape or not between lawyers, or whether you want to categorize it as a situation where somebody was there against their will, I don’t think we have to quibble about it, because the people associated with the defendant in this case clearly called it what it was. It was Ronald Konitzer on the phone with Ann Gabriel Kite, and it was the other people that talked about the conversation that they escaped that we heard about in this case. They used the word “escape.”

Now, I don’t think any reasonable person could understand the use of the word “escape” unless somebody was being held against their will, unless there had been a lack of an opportunity to voluntarily leave or -- why would you use that term? And just the circumstances itself that they have to go to a person and speak in Spanish and then leave in the middle of the night in a hurry and leave and go back to Los Angeles bears that out.

But the thing I think that bears it out more than anything else is the eventual telephone conversation between Frank Tyson and Janet. And you hear that conversation on the phone. And it indicates several different things about the continuing nature of that conspiracy.

It indicates -- number one, it corroborates the fact that there had been contact between Dieter and Ronald and Janet; that those contacts had been nasty, I guess is the easiest word you could use; that she was upset about that; that she didn't want to be there anymore with those people there.

The second thing that it shows is that they still wanted the rebuttal film. They still wanted the Arvizos to participate in what they hoped to be the FOX program at that time, because they committed publicly to FOX to have the Arvizos on that program, because Frank's heard to say on that tape, "I want you to say beautiful things about Michael. Come back. Come back." He says several times on that tape -- if you recall, Your Honor, several times he alludes to the danger that they're in. "Danger," over and over again.

And he then tells her several times, speaking on behalf of the co-conspirators, Michael Jackson, "Michael misses you, Michael cares for you, Michael wants you to come back."

Now, it's unreasonable to believe -- now, we have to understand, they leave on the 12th. This conversation take place two, three days later with Frank Tyson. It's unreasonable to believe that the defendant was not aware of the fact that that family had left the ranch. For every day and every night since that he arrived at that ranch on the 7th, he had been in the presence of those children. At least Gavin and Star. It's unreasonable to believe that he didn't know for several days that they were gone from the ranch, when they'd been sleeping with him and playing with him, and doing whatever they did the rest of the time of the day.

It's just as unreasonable to believe that Frank Tyson, his closest friend, would be making representations to Janet that weren't representations made on behalf his closest friend, Frank Tyson. Frank even lies to her to get her to come back to the ranch by telling her that the Germans are gone, that the problem's over with, and, "Come back."

Janet makes it very clear on her behalf, Your Honor, that she’s not interested in making any money on this case. She makes it very clear in that conversation with Frank. She still cares very much about Michael Jackson. She’s told on the tape, you can hear it, “There are letters all over my mother’s table in El Monte. We’re getting calls by the press.” “If I wanted to make money,” she could have made money, she said. “I didn’t want to make any money off Michael Jackson.”

And then what happened? She goes back to the ranch. And what did she see? She sees Dieter and Ronald. She’s been lied to, and she leaves. But who is it that says the children must stay? It’s the co-conspirators, Dieter and Ronald, who are there. And at that point she’s deprived of her children. She says, “You can leave, but the kids are staying here. They’re staying here, whether they want to be here or not.”

The fact of the matter is, they did. She couldn’t have taken them with her even if she’d wanted to.

Now, the other thing I think we have to take into consideration is that there is evidence that Dieter and Ronald were at the ranch with Michael Jackson during this whole period of time, not the entire six weeks, but the entire time from around the 8th or 9th through the 12th and then later. And that Frank Tyson is there at certain critical points and times and then later.

And to believe that the ranch is being used by these people without Michael Jackson knowing a thing that’s going on I think is an unreasonable inference to draw from the conduct of the parties, from the fact that they’re seen together meeting. And I think illustrative of this is the fact that -- and this wasn’t something that Gavin testified to on direct examination. This was something Mr. Mesereau brought out on cross-examination.

That at the very time before the video is going to be filmed, Brett Ratner and Michael Jackson were at the house trying to get Gavin to sign a release to participate. It clearly shows that the defendant is still actively involved in the project to get the Arvizos on that rebuttal film, and knows the significance of that in terms of the preservation of his own career.

I don't think there can be much doubt of the fact that at that point in time, after the children returned, with the case -- and the state of the evidence in this case, we have a witness, Barron, who says there's a sign that Gavin's not to leave, and we have logs that say that Gavin and Star, et cetera, are not to leave. We have testimony from Mr. Barron he never saw anything like that before or after during his time he was employed there. We have Hamid saying that Joe Marcus wasn't going to let the kids leave the ranch to do the rebuttal film until it was cleared. I don't think it can be argued that these children were free to go wherever they wanted to go, or this family was free to go wherever they wanted to go.

The trip to Brazil. The trip to Brazil.

They take them down to a hotel. And have you ever heard anything more bizarre than that, than having people sit in the hotel two to three doors down with the door open so you can't even walk by in the hallway? And then a private investigator sitting in the lobby? For what purpose, other than to confine, and to intimidate, and to control, and to isolate those people.

The trip to Brazil, I think, is also illustrative, and then again, this is something Mr. Jackson, the state of the evidence is, Mr. Jackson knew about. You recall that Gavin testified that he was present during a conversation where he and Frank Tyson and Mr. Jackson testified that Mr. Jackson said that he would join them later. To entice them. So you can't say he wasn't aware that they were trying to get this family out of the country.

Why are they trying to get this family out of the country? What have they done that deserves for them to be taken out of the country? And why do, when they go to check him out of school, they tell one person they’re going to Arizona? And why, when they go to get passports, do they tell them they’re going to Italy and France, and then they eventually get visas for Brazil, another country?

I think the only logical reason for that is they’re trying to hide the trail so nobody can track this family, ever. And take them down to Brazil where at least two people connected with the defendant are familiar with things down there. We have testimony that Mr. Schaffel goes down there. And Mr. Hugo, who was present at the rebuttal filming, was down in Brazil and making phone calls back to people during this particular point in time that was critical to the trip to Brazil.

THE COURT: How much -- I think we’ll take our break. How much time do you need to finish?

MR. SNEDDON: I don’t think I need much longer. Maybe 15 minutes. But counsel had an hour, so --

THE COURT: I just was asking.

MR. SNEDDON: Okay.

THE COURT: All right. We’ll take our break.

(Recess taken.)

MR. SNEDDON: I’ll try to wrap this up pretty quickly.

Oops, sorry.

THE COURT: They’re waving at you.

MR. SNEDDON: I heard. I could feel it back there. It was like a breeze, a nice one.

(Laughter.)

MR. SNEDDON: I said, and so everybody can hear it again, I’ll try to wrap this up rather quickly, I think. The break helped me do that.

I just want to go back and address a couple other items on the conspiracy, and then I’ll turn my attention -- and I want to say this at the outset. I believe that we correctly analyzed the state of the law to the Court before we -- when we started this, but I think I’d be remiss if I didn’t address at least some of the factual credibility issues that were raised by the defense, but I really don’t believe that that’s pertinent to this particular proceeding, but there’s some things I think need to be clarified about what was said. I’m not going to do it in detail. I’m just going to hit some highlights about things, so....

First of all, I just want to get back to the conspiracy. I think there’s another thing that needs to be noted about the associates that the defendant was involved with in these particular adventures that I think that bears some noteworthiness or some reasonable inferences in this case.

A lot has been made about the fact that Marc Schaffel was a person of low credibility, and there’s been evidence that he may have taken a million dollars that he shouldn’t have taken from a lady in Japan, and that Dieter and Ronald may have taken money from Mr. Jackson, a lot of conversations about that.

But I got to tell you that the one thing that stands out about that in relationship to this case is that if you’re going to be involved in a conspiracy to save your career, you’re not going to go out and try to hire somebody to help you that’s honest, if you’re going to try to extort something out of somebody, if you’re going to try to control and isolate individuals and falsely imprison them and move them around and keep their kids away from them.

You’re going to get the kind of people that you know are willing to do things that are dishonest. These are people that the defendant’s been associated with for many, many years, and he knows their character, and he knows what they’re capable of. Or you can out and find somebody who is blindly loyal to you, who you can trust implicitly, because it’s somebody who will be at your side and has been at your side and will always be at your side no matter what you request of them. Somebody like Frank Tyson. Those are the kind of people that go to making up a conspiracy of this type with the stakes that are this large.

And I think it needs to be clarified that when -- in relationship to Mr. Jackson knowing about what goes on, Mr. Sanger glossed over the testimony in this case where he said, “Even Rudy Provencio said that he doesn’t always know what’s going on with Ronald and Dieter and Marc Schaffel.”

Well, that’s not exactly what his testimony was.

What his testimony was is that in relationship to what was going on from the crisis from the Bashir tape, that Mr. Jackson was in the information loop and in that loop regularly. That the things -- if you check the transcript, the things that he said that Jackson didn’t know about were the other ventures that these people had going on that did not involve this particular crisis. But he was very clear in his testimony that as to this particular crisis, Mr. Jackson was in that loop, and he was in that loop on a regular basis.

I think the other thing that needs to be borne out about much that Mr. Sanger makes about “scripted.” I guess the difference is, and I think perhaps there’s some legitimacy to this, given the fact that Mr. Jackson’s an entertainer, that there’s a common-sense meaning for “scripted” and then there’s an entertainment meaning for “scripted,” I would think.

The fact of the matter is, whatever way you want to put it, that Debbie Rowe interview was not a legitimate, truthful interview by any stretch of the imagination. And why it should take somebody nine and a half hours to say something nice about the defendant is beyond me. And why they should have to stop the tape and say that, “You didn’t cry well enough, so we’ll go back and cry again,” now if that’s not scripted in the common-sense term, I don’t know what is.

And I think that proves just the point we were trying to make with the Janet Arvizo tape is, whether you talk about it's written, or it's not written, and for Pete's sake, look at the photograph that's in evidence. There's papers all over that room. You see Marc Schaffel sitting on the ground writing. They weren't doing their income tax returns. Those were scripts of questions.

Now, whether you want to technically say that they were -- that something was told to be said this way and that way, obviously they tried to do that. They just weren't successful with her. She was going to tell the lie that she and the defendant made up years ago. And she was going to stick to that, and she was going to tell it her way. It wasn't that they didn't want it another way.

I think another thing that needs to be borne out with regard to something I said earlier this morning, Your Honor, and that's with regards to this ranch sign, the one that said Gavin can't leave, the one that's in the logs. I don't think there's a shred of evidence in this case that indicates that Marc Schaffel has the kind of power to tell Joe Marcus what to do at that ranch and to tell the people what to put in those logs.

It was Joe Marcus who said the kids can't leave the ranch. And who does Joe Marcus report to? He reports to the defendant in this case, not to Marc Schaffel.

I'd like to just finish up by a direct -- addressing just a few, and I'm not going to go into all of that, because I don't think there's any sense in doing final arguments on a day like this, particularly when I don't believe the credibility issues are on point. But I think there's some things that need to be clarified, and frankly, this is a good opportunity to say this.

I am -- I am offended and I'm sick and tired of the defense standing up in this case, as they've done for months and months and months and months, saying that they don't take it lightly when they accuse somebody of perjury. They said this when they accused me of perjury. They said that when they accused me of suborning perjury. They accused Mr. Auchincloss of that. And now they're accusing Mr. Zonen of some impropriety. I think they do take it lightly, and the fact of the matter is, there's a common denominator. Anybody who stands in their way, whether it's Janet Arvizo, Gavin Arvizo, Star Arvizo, Davellin Arvizo, Rudy Provencio or anybody else in this case that says one thing bad about the defendant in this case are perjurers.

I don't think the law of coincidence is that high. None of us get anything out of this except a lot of grief. So to say that they don't take it lightly I think is nonsense, and I'd like to show you why some of these things are nonsense.

If Rudy -- Rudy Provencio is a media guy. He works in the media. He knows the media. Now, if he wanted to go get a notebook and make up a bunch of things about Michael Jackson and implicate him in this case, all he has to do is go to smokinggun.com, download the grand jury transcripts, have an accurate depiction of every single event that occurred in this case and a date reference, and he could have made up the greatest notebook in the world and came in here and testify to it.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, excuse me, I'm just going to object to keep it on track. This argument is limited to the evidence that's before the jury at the conclusion of the People's case. So I don't want to object unnecessarily, but I think we're going afield from that particular issue talking about "The Smoking Gun" and things that are not in evidence.

THE COURT: Overruled. Go ahead.

MR. SNEDDON: He could have gone out and constructed a notebook that would have been devastating to the defense in every respect. Every date right, every event, every conversation. He could have manufactured conversations that occurred between he and Schaffel, or he and the defendant, or any other parties to this conspiracy that occurred, not only just the two he testified to. He could have made up other conversations if he wanted to be a hero in this case and a perjurer in this case and to do the defendant in in this case. That just doesn’t hold water, like the pay/owe with a big hole in it.

If he wanted to be the hero -- and one thing, if you could tell, he’s not a dumb person. He didn’t need to do it that way. And probably the reason and likely -- the more likely reasonable inference is he did it that way because that’s the truth and that’s the way it happened. And people do things at certain points in time and they’re not looking back that there’s going to be a trial. There was no investigation going on when he took these notes. There was just a crisis going in the media over the defendant and his career.

This timeline change makes Gavin a liar.

Let’s put it in perspective, if we can.

First and foremost, this whole thing about there’s no disclosure until after they go to the lawyers and after they go to Dr. Katz, well, actually there wasn’t a disclosure even with Dr. Katz, so there was nothing for the lawyers to muck around with because he doesn’t disclose to Dr. Katz. As you recall, Dr. Katz’ testimony is he got very emotional, and he terminated the conversation because he felt something had happened, but he didn’t want to go any further.

The first disclosure was to law enforcement.

Now, what’s the testimony in that case about the disclosure to law enforcement?

The testimony elicited by the defense, Mr. Sanger himself did it, elicited from Sergeant Robel, when he was testifying, was they -- “they,” Santa Barbara Sheriff’s Department, after having received the information from Mr. Feldman that there had been a report made, or that was the report, to be more accurate -- tried to get this family to come to Santa Barbara in order to do an interview with them to see whether or not anything had happened. In other words, to follow up on that responsibility because they had received a mandated report.

And what did he say? They didn’t want to be involved. They didn’t want to come. They didn’t want to do it.

And, now, does that sound like a family that has a lawsuit on their mind? Or does that sound like a family that just wants to be left alone, that’s tied up in this thing now there was a mandated reporter involved?

It just doesn’t hold water.

And the timeline never changed. The timeline was, as the testimony disclosed from Gavin, that was consistent with his grand jury testimony, which was consistent with his trial testimony, that he told Sergeant Robel early on during the investigation, that the crimes -- the molestations occurred during February and March. Gavin doesn’t pick the time period. The prosecutors pick the time period that’s involved.

Now, before the grand jury, Gavin testified to two incidents involving the defendant. And what he told the grand jury and what he told the jury here is, “I believe that I was molested on other occasions. I have a feeling that I was,” which is what he was talking about to Sergeant Robel in an interview. “But,” he said, “I have to testify under oath. Under oath, I only remember two.”

Now, does that sound like something that a perjurer would do? My Lord, the only two people present when all this happens is the defendant and Gavin. He could have made up 20 allegations if he wanted to. He could have made up more horrendous things if he wanted to. Instead, the kid’s honest enough to say, “I think it might have happened on other occasions, but Lord, I’m not going to come in here under oath and say something against Mr. Jackson that I don’t believe that I can credibly say without doubt.”

And that’s what he did. And they want you to believe that he’s a perjurer because he did that?

That doesn't make sense, like a lot of the things that the defense is urging in this case.

I just want to clarify two other things and I'm about to sit down, Your Honor.

With regard to Janet -- and I'm not going to be an apologist for Janet Arvizo. I'm also not going to sit here and tell you that I think that she's a perjurer or that she's willfully false in her testimony. I will tell you that, as I think has been clear and from a lot of things that happened, that she is a woman who projects a person who has been involved in a domestic relationship with a lot of abuse for 16 years, and it's showing, and it showed here in the courtroom.

And I think it's a little unfair for counsel to stand up here and say that Janet created false information about her husband beating her up, created false information about a molestation, just like happened in this case, from what happened before, when there is public records that exist that show that her husband was publicly convicted, beyond a reasonable doubt and to a moral certainty, of not one, but two offenses of abusing not only her, but her daughter. And that a Judge, a neutral magistrate, was so offended by the conduct that he took away visitation rights for that father for three years, along with a lot of other things that happened.

Now, that's a little unfair. That's a tad unfair to say somebody's a perjurer and somebody's setting up the defendant, Michael Jackson, when there's objective proof of the fact that what she said was truthful.

And this whole thing about the sexual molestation, can anybody forget -- can you forget? I'm sure you haven't. Can anybody forget, any of these people who are sitting here, hearing Davellin on the stand talk about that conversation involving her mother and herself and her father where her father confesses to her that he molested her when she was a child and she breaks down and she cries? Can anybody forget that? And that makes her a perjurer? That makes Janet a perjurer for making up something that actually happened?

I'd just tell the Court, you know, it's things like this, all the way through this case, that when you look at this thing with the standard, not only eventually, but right now, that's required of this Court, I could stand up here for another two hours and make a final argument to you just like Mr. Sanger did, and I could go through point by point by point and show you the unreasonableness of their position, and I think I've just given you some isolated examples of just what I'm talking about.

And I just submit to the Court that given the standard in this case and given the evidence before this Court, that this jury ought to be able to be given the opportunity to decide for themselves the credibility of these issues -- of these witnesses, given the totality of the circumstances, and that's the very standard that the Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court sets out for an 1118 motion.

Thank you.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

No, Counsel, you don't need to stand.

MR. SANGER: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: The Court's going to deny the 1118 motion. The request to dismiss the charges is denied.

I'm going to bring in the jury. Are you prepared to call your first witness?

MR. SANGER: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. MESEREAU: Excuse me, Your Honor? There's a motion in limine that the prosecution made about a couple witnesses we plan to call.

THE COURT: They don't seem to be the first two.

MR. MESEREAU: They're not the first two.

THE COURT: So I'll put that off.

Get the jury in.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Thank you.

(The following proceedings were held in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

DIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. MESEREAU:
Q. Good afternoon, Mr. Robson.
A. How you doing.
Q. How old are you?
A. I am 22.
Q. And would you please give the -- please just summarize your employment history.
A. My employment history.
I started dancing when I was two, professionally when I was five. In Australia originally. And moved to America when I was eight. Became a professional dancer. Started teaching dance classes when I was 12. I was in a rap duo when I was 11 and 12. Started choreographing for different artists when I was 14, and now I’m directing film.

Q. And where do you live at the moment?

A. I live in Tarzana, California.

Q. Okay. And you say you’re directing films?

A. Yeah.

Q. And can you summarize what you’re doing in that regard?

A. The main focus right now, I did a short film that I wrote and produced and directed last year, and that’s doing the whole film festival circuit right now. And I have a three-picture deal with Disney as a film director, and we’re developing an original musical.

Q. Do you know the fellow seated at counsel table to my right?

A. Yes.

Q. And who is that?

A. That’s Michael Jackson.

Q. How do you know him?

A. I met him first when I was five years old. I think it was ‘87. And Michael was touring, he was doing the “Bad” tour. And I was imitating him as a dancer at that point. And he was holding these -- it was in connection with Target or something like that, holding these dance, like, contests all around wherever he traveled. So I entered one of the dance contests and ended up winning it, went on to the finals and won that, and then the prize was to meet Michael.

So I met him after one of his concerts in Brisbane, Australia. And it was just like in a meet-and-greet sort of room. And we met, and I was in my whole, you know, “Bad” outfit and everything. He was sort of laughing and tripping out on my outfit and asked if I danced. I said, “Yeah.” And he asked me to perform with him in the show the next night.

So after -- it was like the end of the concert, I pulled up, performed in the show with him. The next -- the next -- I think within the next couple of days, my mother and I went to visit him at his hotel room, and we stayed for a couple of hours. It was in Brisbane, Australia. Just talking about what I want to do. And then that was kind of it at first.

And then for the next two years, we didn't have any contact at all. And I continued pursuing my dance career in Australia. And then the company that I was with, the dance company, was traveling to America to do a performance at Disneyland.

So we all went. Came out, did that performance. As I said, we'd had no contact with Michael or anything. Somehow my mother got in contact with Michael's secretary at that time, who was Norma Stokes.

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, I'm going to object to the narrative form of the answer.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: After your mother got in contact with Norma Stakos, what happened next?

A. She talked to Michael about -- we wanted to see if we could hook up with him again and meet him again. She talked to Michael. Michael remembered me from when I met him when I was five years old, wanted to meet me again.

So I was out there with my mother, sister, my father, and grandparents. We all went to meet him at Record One Recording Studios. And this was -- this was ‘89.

Q. Where is Record One Recording Studios?

A. I don't remember exactly. It's somewhere in the valley, yeah. In California. Yeah.

Q. And what happened next?

A. We met up with him. He was in between, you know, working on music and that sort of thing. He was doing a photo shoot at the time at the studio. We took some photos with him. My family and I all went into his -- sort of like the green room, and played him some videotapes of all the dancing stuff that I've been doing over the last two years. And, you know, he was just really excited, checking out everything I had done. And then by the end of the time, he invited my family and I up to the ranch that weekend.

Q. And did you begin a friendship with Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you spend much time at Neverland?

A. Yeah. Spent a lot of time, yeah.

Q. When do you think you first went to Neverland?

A. It was right after that visit. I’m pretty sure it was that night that we went, my whole family went to the ranch. And, you know, we stayed for, I don’t know, about a week or something like that.

Q. And approximately what year do you think you first went to Neverland, Mr. Robson?

A. That was 1989.

Q. Okay. And who did you go to Neverland with the first time?

A. Went with my mother, my sister, my father, and my grandfather, grandmother.

Q. And how long did you stay during that first visit?

A. I think it was about a week.

Q. And after you spent a week at Neverland, what did you do?

A. Went back to Australia.

Q. Okay. Did you see Mr. Jackson again?

A. Yeah. We would -- I don’t remember exact dates, but over the next two years, my mother and I would come out, I don’t know, maybe twice a year, something like that, and spend a couple of weeks with Michael.

Q. Would you spend the night at Neverland?

A. Some of it was at Neverland. Sometimes it would be at the -- he had an apartment in I think it was Westwood at that point that we would stay at sometimes, too.

Q. That’s your mother and you would stay at the apartment in Westwood?

A. Yeah. That first time, I think a couple times, sometimes I would stay by myself. Always -- I think -- sometimes -- most of the time my mother and I went to the ranch together. I think once I was there by myself without my mother. There was other people there.

Q. And did you stay in contact Mr. Jackson through those years?

A. Yes.

Q. And how would you communicate with Mr. Jackson?

A. When we weren't there, you know, we'd talk on the phone or we'd send faxes back and forth.

Q. At some point did you move to the United States permanently?

A. Yeah. We moved in September of 1991. My mother and sister and I.

Q. Have you lived here ever since?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you lived in Los Angeles ever since?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, your mother's name is?

A. Joy Robson.

Q. And how about your sister?

A. Chantel Robson.

Q. Okay. How many times do you think you've stayed at Neverland?

A. Um, it's got to be somewhere in the twenties or something like that. Mid-twenties.

Q. And have you stayed there for varying periods of time?

A. Yeah. Most of the time it's usually like a weekend, you know. Friday, Saturday, Sunday.

Q. What's the longest amount of time, do you think, you've ever stayed at Neverland?

A. You know, I would say a week to a week and a half.

Q. Do you consider Michael Jackson your friend?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you consider him a close friend?

A. Yes.

Q. You're aware of the allegations in this case, are you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And are you aware, as you sit here today, that there's been allegations that Mr. Jackson molested you?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Robson, did Michael Jackson ever molest you at any time?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. Mr. Robson, did Michael Jackson ever touch you in a sexual way?

A. Never, no.

Q. Mr. Robson, has Mr. Jackson ever inappropriately touched any part of your body at any time?

A. No.

Q. When you first visited Neverland -- and I think you said it was about a week you and your mom stayed there?

A. Yeah.

Q. Where did you stay?

A. I stayed in Michael's room.

Q. And could you please describe the room for the jury?

A. When you walk in, there's -- there's a bed, sort of like the main bed, diagonally to your left. Wood floors. There's a second floor that you go around to the right and up, which also has another bed. There's a bathroom to the left. There's bathrooms on both sides of the main bed on the first floor.

Q. And you stayed in Mr. Jackson's room?

A. Yes.

Q. The first time you were there?

A. Yes.

Q. To your knowledge, has your mother ever stayed in Mr. Jackson's room?

A. In the room? No.

Q. How about your sister?

A. Yes.

Q. And when do you recall your sister staying in the room?

A. On that first trip, the first time we went to Neverland.

Q. Okay. What do you recall doing at Neverland during that first visit when you spent approximately a week?

A. Well, at that point he didn't have many of the rides. We would watch movies in the theater. You know, we'd play video games. We'd drive around on the golf carts, look at the animals. Those sort of things.

Q. Has Mr. Jackson ever helped you with your career?

A. Yes.

Q. What has he done?

A. When I first moved out here, when I was nine, he put me in a couple of his music videos. I was in the "Jam" music video, "Black or White" music video, and "Heal the World." And that sort of helped me get a dance agent, dance agency, and -- and, yeah.

And then the next thing, when I said I was in a rap duo when I was 11 and 12, that was on Michael Jackson's label under Sony.

Q. Do you recall the second time you ever visited Neverland?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you recall staying in Mr. Jackson's room on other occasions?

A. Yes.

Q. And typically when you'd stay in Mr. Jackson's room, what would you do?

A. What would we do as far as just --

Q. Sure. Anything.

A. Yeah. We'd watch -- same thing. We'd watch movies, we'd play video games, you know, we'd have a pillow fight every now and then. We'd talk. Hang out.

Q. How many times do you think you've stayed in Mr. Jackson's room at Neverland?

A. Same amount of times as I’ve been there. Well, no, that’s not true, I’m sorry. I’ve been there a bunch of times without Michael, just with other friends and family traveling there. But, I don’t know, maybe 15 to 20.

Q. And at no time has any sexual contact ever occurred between you and Mr. Jackson, right?

A. Never.

Q. Have you ever taken a shower with Mr. Jackson?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever gone swimming with Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. And please explain what you mean.

A. One time with my sister and I, my sister and I and Michael, we went in the Jacuzzi at Neverland Ranch.

Q. And do you know approximately when that was?

A. I don’t. I can’t say for sure. I have a feeling that it was within that first trip in ‘89 when I went there.

Q. Do you recall what Mr. Jackson was wearing in the Jacuzzi?

A. From my recollection, he was wearing shorts. You know, like swimming shorts. And that was it.

Q. Did anything inappropriate ever happen in that Jacuzzi?

A. No.

Q. Has anything inappropriate ever happened in any shower with you and Mr. Jackson?

A. No. Never been in a shower with him.

Q. Did you get to know any of the employees at Neverland when you were there?

A. I wouldn’t say “get to know.” You know, I knew of them and we’d know each other’s names, but it never went beyond that.

Q. Do you recall someone named Blanca Francia?

A. Yes, I remember her name. And I remember her presence. I can’t place her. I can’t remember what she looks like or anything like that.

Q. Do you know whether or not Blanca Francia ever was in a room when you were with Mr. Jackson?

A. Not that I can remember.
Q. Okay. Did you ever meet anyone named Ralph Chacon?
A. No.
Q. How about Kassim Abdool?

A. No.
Q. Do you recall anyone named Adrian McManus?
A. No.
Q. Did you have much interaction with the security people when you were visiting and staying at Neverland?
A. No. The only interaction would be is, I don't know, if -- if they were trying -- if we were out, you know, watching a movie or something like that, they'd come tell us that dinner was ready or something like that.
In later years, when I would go there and just visit with my family and that sort of thing, sometimes we'd have water fights and get the security involved. But other than that, no.
Q. Did you come across anyone named Mrs. Chandler when you were at Neverland?
A. Yes.
Q. And when do you think this was?
A. I think I was about 13. But I can't pinpoint any more -- anything more definitive than that. Around that time.
Q. Do you recall ever seeing someone at Neverland talking to Mrs. Chandler?
A. Sorry? Can you repeat that?
Q. Did you ever see Mrs. Chandler talking to anyone at Neverland?
A. Yeah, I mean, maybe chefs or -- you know, or maids or something like that.

Q. What do you recall Mrs. Chandler doing at Neverland?
A. I think I mainly saw her if we'd sit down to eat dinner or something like that. That's the only time I saw her.

Q. Did you ever see her ordering people around at Neverland?

A. Yeah, well --

MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object as leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When you saw Mrs. Chandler talking to these people at Neverland, what do you recall her doing?

MR. ZONEN: I'll object as irrelevant and vague.

MR. MESEREAU: There's been testimony by her, Your Honor, about what she saw.

THE COURT: I'll allow the question. You may answer. Do you want it read back?

THE WITNESS: Yes, please.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: I remember her, you know, ordering food, that sort of thing, from maids or chefs, or whatever.

And, you know, the thing I sort of noticed was she was always sort of -- you know, she would sort of act like the place was hers, you know. Sort of order people around a bit.

And, you know, I guess I noticed it because my mother, when we went there, she always made it really clear that this was Michael Jackson's house. This was somebody's house and --

MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object as nonresponsive to the question and narrative.

THE COURT: All right. The last sentence is stricken.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Mr. Robson, has anyone told you what to say in this courtroom today?

A. No.

Q. Is everything you've said the complete and honest truth?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson ever do anything wrong with you?

A. No.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.

THE COURT: Cross-examine?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Mr. Robson, good afternoon.

A. Good afternoon.

Q. Have you been living in the United States continuously since you were eight years old?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Mr. Jackson instrumental in your being able to move to the United States to pursue your career?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you grateful for Mr. Jackson’s help and assistance in the development of your career?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you go to high school or college at all?

A. No.

Q. Not either one?

A. I didn’t go to a public high school. I did home studies.

Q. You did home studies all through high school?

A. Yeah.

Q. And no college at all?

A. No.

Q. So you began your dance career early on and continued through to today; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, the first time that you slept with Mr. Jackson you were seven years old; is that correct?

A. I slept in the same bed with him. But, yes, I was seven.

Q. Did you understand my question to mean something other than that?

A. Sounded like it.

Q. All right. But you slept in the same bed with him when you were seven years old; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Was anybody else in that bed with you?

A. My sister, Chantel Robson.

Q. She was ten years old; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it true that there was not another adult anywhere in that room at the time you crawled into bed with Mr. Jackson?

A. True.

Q. And in fact, you continued to sleep with Mr. Jackson through the balance of that week during your seventh year; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Was your sister there the entire time during that week as well?

A. Yes.

Q. Was she in that bed with you as well?

A. Yes.

Q. Did she continue to share a bed with you and Mr. Jackson thereafter, or did you sleep only with Mr. Jackson thereafter?

A. What do you mean by “thereafter”?

Q. Well, on all the occasions that you returned to visit Mr. Jackson’s ranch, did you stay in his room, by yourself, with him?

A. Yes. But my sister wasn’t in -- wasn’t with us at all in America.

Q. All right. So when you moved here -- and incidentally, your father was there during that first week when you were seven years old; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. But your father did not return to visit thereafter?

A. No.

Q. All right. So you stayed in the United States. Your father stayed in Australia.

A. Yes.

Q. Did your mother stay in the United States?

A. Yes.

Q. For the balance of the next number of years, your father was simply not in the picture while you were in the United States; is that right?

A. He wasn't there with us, no.

Q. And Mr. Jackson understood that as well, did he not, that your father was not in the picture while you were at Neverland?

A. Well, he understood that he wasn't there, yes.

Q. Okay. And did you have any contact with your father at all?

A. Yes. We talked on the phone.

Q. By telephone?

A. Yeah.

Q. Did you visit him?

A. I'm sorry, are we talking about once I moved to America?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, yes, we would go back at least every two years for Christmas.

Q. Did he ever come to the United States to visit you?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he have any other visits with you at Neverland?

A. No.

Q. Did you talk with your mother, prior to that first week that you slept with Mr. Jackson with your sister, about the sleeping arrangements at all?

A. Well, yeah, the first day that we got there, to Neverland Ranch -- you know, I think we got there in about the afternoon. We hung out a bit. When it was time to go bed, I asked Michael if I could stay with him in his room. And then Michael and I went to -- mom was staying in a guest room. We went to her room and I asked her. Michael asked her if that was okay. And she said yes.

Q. All right. Now, you asked Michael Jackson if you could share his room with him. Now, what caused you to do that? You were seven years old. What caused you to ask him if you could stay with him in his room?

A. Well, it's the same way with any child.

When you -- you know, when you have a best friend or a new friend that you found, you always want to stay in the same room with them.

Q. He was in his mid 30s; is that right?

A. Yes, I guess so.

Q. Had you ever crawled into bed with a 30-year-old man prior to that day?

A. My father.

Q. Okay.

A. But other than that, no.

Q. Any person who you had just met?

A. No.

Q. All right. And in fact, throughout your entire adolescent years, you had never slept with any other man other than Michael Jackson and your father; is that correct?

A. Never slept in a bed with any other man, no.

Q. Now, you had a conversation with your mother about where you would sleep that night, that first time. Again, you're seven years old; is that right?

A. Yeah.

Q. Did your mother talk to you about perhaps you should stay with her in the guest cottage?

A. No.

Q. Was she the one who suggested that your sister should go with you and stay in that room with Mr. Jackson?

A. I don't remember that. I remember Chantel, my sister, wanted to as well.

Q. Had your mother actually seen the room that -- or the rooms that constitute Mr. Jackson's bedroom suite?

A. Yeah. When we first got to the ranch, he took us around, a tour around everywhere, in his room.

Q. So she understood at the time that the bedroom suite was composed of a number of different rooms with actually beds in at least two of them; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And there were bathrooms on both levels; is that right?

A. I don’t think there’s a bathroom on the second level. There’s two on the first level.

Q. Was your mother under the impression that you would be sleeping in a different location from Michael Jackson when you first went to his room at age seven?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. All right. Had you talked with her the next day about where you actually slept that prior night?

A. No, not that I remember.

Q. At any time during that first week when you were there at age seven, did you ever tell your mother that you actually shared the bed with Michael Jackson?

A. I’m sure.

Q. You think you did?

A. Yeah.

Q. Do you remember your mother’s response to hearing that?

A. No.

Q. Did your sister, in your presence, tell your mother that she was also sleeping in the same bed with Michael Jackson at age ten?

A. I can’t say for sure. I don’t remember, but --

Q. At any time during that first week that you were there, did you have any conversation with your mother wherein your mother expressed concern about where you were sleeping?

A. No.

Q. Were you seeing your mother during the day?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. After that first week, did you go back to Australia?

A. Yeah.

Q. You were in Australia for what, about a year?

A. I think so. I don’t remember.

Q. And then you returned to the United States for good at that point?

A. Well, we had a couple of visits back to America before we returned in ‘91 for good.
Q. With what rate of frequency did you continue to visit with Michael Jackson after returning at age eight?
A. I would say twice a year.
Q. All right. And during those periods of time, you would stay for up to a week at a time, no?
A. Yeah.
Q. Were there times that you actually stayed at Neverland for many weeks at a time?
A. Not that I can remember. Like I said, a week to a week and a half. Maybe it was two weeks, but I don’t remember any more than that.
Q. Were there periods of time when you were at Neverland and working with Mr. Jackson on dance routines?
A. No. I mean, we would mess around and dance a little bit in the studio every now and then, yes.
Q. Was there ever an occasion where you were on the dance floor with Mr. Jackson and he was showing you a routine and he grabbed your crotch in a manner similar to how he would grab his own crotch while doing those performances?
A. No, that’s not true.
Q. You have no recollection of that?
A. No.
Q. That didn’t happen?

A. No.
Q. During the period of time from age eight on, did you stay in Mr. Jackson’s room virtually the entire time?
A. I’m sorry?
Q. The times that you would come and visit Mr. Jackson from age eight on --
A. Uh-huh.
Q. -- did you stay in Mr. Jackson’s room?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. By age 11, you were asked to give a deposition, were you not?
A. Yes.
Q. And you actually did give testimony under oath in the presence of two prosecutors from Los Angeles; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. There was also an attorney present who represented you; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. After that deposition, did you continue to sleep in Mr. Jackson’s room?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you continue to sleep in Mr. Jackson’s bed?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, during that period of time from age eight until age 11, did you frequently visit Mr. Jackson?

A. From -- I’m sorry, from eight to 11?

Q. Age eight to age 11, did you frequently visit Mr. Jackson?

A. Yeah. Same amount of time. Maybe twice a year, or every couple of months, something like that.

Q. Is it safe to say that during each of those visits, you stayed in Mr. Jackson’s room?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Were there ever occasions where you went to visit Mr. Jackson when your mother wasn’t there?

A. Yes. I think a couple of times he had an apartment in Century City that my mother would drop me off and I’d stay for, you know, a night or so by myself with Michael there.

Q. Was that a place called “The Hideout”?

A. I remember a place called “The Hideout.” I don’t remember if it was that place.

Q. Were there more places where you visited and stayed overnight in Century City?

A. Yeah, there was a hotel that was -- I mean, I’m sorry, an apartment that was in Westwood and then one that was in Century City.

Q. Was there a place where Mr. Jackson was living in, either Westwood or Century City, where there was a hotel across the street?

A. Yes.
Q. And would it be the case that periodically you would visit him there, your mother would stay in the hotel, but you would stay with him in his room?
A. One time when we came over, we stayed -- I think it was the Westwood apartment, his Westwood apartment. There was a Holiday Inn that was across and we stayed there most of the time. And then certain nights I would go over to Michael and stay with him.
Q. Mr. Robson, were there ever occasions where you stayed with Michael Jackson where you didn’t sleep with him in his bed?
A. Yes.
Q. How often did that happen?
A. I don’t know. Maybe three, four times.
Q. Three or four times over years we’re talking about; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. So, for the most part, the overwhelming majority of times you shared his bed with him?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, at any time did you start to develop conversations with your mother about the propriety of sleeping with this man who’s now well into his 30s?
A. No.
Q. Did you consider it unusual at all?

A. No.
Q. Did your mother consider it unusual?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever talk to your father about it?
A. Yeah.
Q. You talked to your father about your sleeping with Michael Jackson?
A. No, I mean, you know, everybody knew, and nobody ever said that it was -- we never talked about it being unusual or anything like that.
Q. Did your mother ever ask you if anything inappropriate happened in bed with him?

A. No.

Q. Did she simply assume nothing happened?

A. Yes.

Q. You’re telling us nothing happened; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. What you’re really telling us is nothing happened while you were awake; isn’t that true?

A. I’m telling you that nothing ever happened.

Q. Mr. Robson, when you were asleep, you wouldn’t have known what had happened, particularly at age seven, would you have?

A. I would think something like that would wake me up.

Q. On those occasions that you were at 9116 Neverland, you used to play very actively, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. There was a lot to do at Neverland; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And on some days you were actually working out heavily with the defendant, engaged in dance routines, weren’t you?

A. Yeah.

Q. And on other occasions you would be playing very actively. There’s just a host of things that a seven-year-old can do and have fun with; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And you can play -- all manner of video games that exist anywhere in the world can be found at Neverland; is that right?

A. Yeah.

Q. And there’s video games, there’s movies, there’s a zoo, there’s all kinds of parks, and the trains. You’re very active during the entire day; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And at night you’d go back to his room and you’d play more video games or you’d watch television; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And there's movies of any kind that you can see with Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. Did your mother ever complain to you that you were losing contact with her and that she was losing her contact with you? Did she ever say that?

A. No.

Q. In fact, she was very upset over the fact that she was losing her ability to have access to her son, wasn't she?

A. No.

Q. Was there, in fact, a shower at Neverland in the suite, the bedroom suite?

A. Yes.

Q. But you didn't use it?

A. I used it by myself.

Q. Was he in the room while you were using it?

A. In the bedroom, not in the shower room, which had its own door.

Q. You were seven years old when you started using that shower; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you stop sleeping with Mr. Jackson?

A. I guess when I was about, I don't know, maybe 13, 14, something like that.

Q. Why did you stop?

A. I didn't stop sleeping with him. I just haven't spent the night with him, I mean, in his room or anything like that since then, I don't think.

Q. You haven't gone back to Neverland since you were 13?

A. I have. Not with him.

Q. Have you gone back to Neverland since you were 13 and actually stayed overnight?

A. Yes.

Q. On how many occasions since you were 13?

A. A lot. Same thing. 20, 25. Something like that.

Q. Did he take you to other locations such as Las Vegas?

A. Yes.

Q. And while you were at Las Vegas, you went to see Siegfried & Roy?

A. Yes.

Q. And being with Mr. Jackson back then was a very exciting experience, wasn’t it?

A. Yes.

Q. He was able to go anywhere he wanted in Las Vegas and take you with him?

A. Yeah.

Q. Did you start to dress like him?

A. I always did before I met him.

Q. All right. And during the time that you were with him, he enjoyed you wearing clothing similar to what he wore; is that correct?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did he ever tell you that he wanted you to dress like him?

A. No.

Q. Did he ever give you hats similar to the type of hats that he wears?

A. Because I would ask for them.

Q. And did you, in fact, wear those types of hats when you were out with him?

A. Yes.

Q. And when you were in Las Vegas, did you wear those hats as you wandered around Las Vegas with him?

A. Yes.

Q. When you were in Las Vegas, where did you stay?

A. We stayed at The Mirage Hotel.

Q. Who went to Las Vegas with you?

A. My mother.

Q. Just your mother?

A. Yeah.

Q. Was your sister with you at all?

A. No.

Q. Did your sister move to the United States with you?

A. Yes.

Q. But she didn’t go to Las Vegas with you?

A. Well, we weren’t -- we didn’t live in the United States at that point. We still lived in Australia. We were out on a visit.

Q. When you were in the hotel in Las Vegas, it is true that you stayed with Mr. Jackson in his bed?

A. Yes.

Q. And your mother stayed in a separate room; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, were there other boys that you knew about who were sleeping with Michael Jackson during that time?

A. No, not that I knew of. I mean, the only other time I was around other boys, other kids at the ranch, I think once or twice, and, you know, we’d all stay in the room and we’d kind of fall asleep on couches, beds, cots, wherever they were.

Q. Did you know Jordie Chandler?

A. Yeah.

Q. You just described -- you just told the jury that -- that you knew Jordie Chandler’s mother; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. What’s her name?

A. I know her -- June. June Chandler.

Q. All right. Describe her for us. What does she look like?

A. She has dark, almost black hair. Sort of -- sort of brown eyes. I think some -- kind of like a -- a little bit of a darker complexion.

Q. Slim woman? Heavy woman?

A. Slim woman.

Q. Now, do you remember her son Jordie?

A. Yes.

Q. On how many occasions did you meet Jordie?

A. Once.

Q. Only one time?

A. That’s all I can remember, yes.

Q. And did you spend the night with Jordie?

A. Yeah, we all stayed in Michael’s room.

Q. You say “we all stayed.” Were there other people there besides Jordie?

A. Yeah, Macaulay Culkin was there and his brother Kieran Culkin.

Q. Now, Macaulay Culkin has sisters, does he not?

A. I don’t know.

Q. Were there any girls that were staying with you that night?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. Were there ever any girls, other than your sister, at age seven, who actually spent the night in Mr. Jackson’s room with you during the years that you knew him and spent the night in his room?

A. Yes.

Q. Who?

A. There was Brandy Jackson.

Q. I’m sorry?

A. Brandy Jackson, who is Michael’s niece.

Q. And she spent the night on how many occasions with you?

A. Only one that I can remember.

Q. One night?

A. Yeah.

Q. All right. So we’re talking about a period of about five years; is that right?

A. Yeah.

Q. In the five years, you can remember Brandy. Who else do you recall?

A. As far as females?

Q. Yes.

A. My sister. Brandy. That’s all I remember.

Q. Now, your sister actually never went back into that room and spent the night with you after that first week when you were seven; is that correct?

A. Yeah, not that I can remember.

Q. Is it an accurate statement to say that the boys who stayed there for long periods of time started getting pretty rowdy?

A. Rowdy?

Q. Yeah.

A. What do you mean?

Q. Well, goof off, and simply kids who weren’t under a lot of supervision?

A. Oh, yeah. I mean, you know, boys will be boys. We’d go around and have fun.

Q. Loud and boisterous?

A. Yes.

Q. And on occasions break things?

A. Accidentally, yeah.

Q. And be somewhat disobedient?

A. Some of them maybe.

Q. Were there ever occasions where you and Mr. Jackson were throwing stones at the lion in the zoo?

A. Stones at the lion. Yeah, I think so.

Q. That did happen, didn’t it?

A. Yeah.

Q. Mr. Jackson was throwing stones at the lion in your presence; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he encouraging you to do the same thing?

A. Yeah. Little pebbles, but, yeah.

Q. They weren’t exactly pebbles. They were good-sized stones, weren’t they?

A. No, I remember small stones.

Q. It was designed to irritate the lion, wasn’t it?

A. Yeah, we were trying get him to make some noise.

Q. Because it was entertaining to Mr. Jackson and to you?

A. Yeah.

Q. How old were you at the time?

A. I think I would have been seven or eight.

Q. Were there any other kids around at that time?

A. No. Maybe my sister.

Q. Now, you said that you spent one night that you can recall with Jordie Chandler. Do you know Brett Barnes?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever spend a night with Brett Barnes?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever meet Brett Barnes?

A. Yes.

Q. How old were you when you met Brett Barnes?

A. I think I would have been nine. It was soon after we moved to America.

Q. On that occasion when you spent the night with Jordie Chandler, Macaulay, and his brother, was Brett Barnes there as well?

A. No.

Q. Do you know if Brett Barnes spent nights with Michael Jackson?

A. I don’t know.

Q. Do you know if they ever shared a bed?

A. I don’t know.

Q. Did Michael Jackson ever talk to you about the propriety of sleeping with him?

A. Could you rephrase that?

Q. Did Michael Jackson ever have a conversation with you wherein the subject of the conversation was that it was okay for you to sleep with a 30-something-year-old man?

A. Yeah.

Q. He did?

A. We would both talk about it.

Q. Really. From what age? When did that first conversation happen?

A. I don’t remember.

Q. Were you seven?

A. I don’t remember.

Q. Was it the first week that you were there?

A. No.

Q. Do you think it was soon after you moved to the United States?

A. I really don’t remember.

Q. What was the nature of that conversation?
A. I don’t remember an exact conversation. I’m sure it’s just something, you know, we talked about at some point; that -- you know, that it’s fine.
Q. Did Mr. Jackson ever tell you that you were family to him?
A. Yes.
Q. Did he tell you that often?

A. Yes.
Q. Did he tell you that he would take care of you?
A. No.
Q. Did he tell you he would protect you?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Did he ever tell your mother in your presence that you were family?
A. Yes.
Q. And that your mother could trust him?
A. Yes.
Q. In fact, the word “trust” came up in many conversations with Michael Jackson, did it not?
A. Yeah, we’d talk about trust in, you know, other people, and that sort of thing.
Q. But he encouraged you particularly to trust in him, did he not?
A. No, there was no particular emphasis on it.
Q. How much time did you spend with Macaulay Culkin?
A. Um, there was that -- the trip that we spoke of, that I think was a couple of days. I think I was with him one other time at the Century City apartment, which was a night. I think that was about it.
Q. Now, the trip you described, that trip was where now?
A. Which trip?

Q. Maybe I misheard you. Did you say “the trip I just spoke of”?
A. Oh, the one I spoke of. That was the one where I said where Jordie Chandler was there at Neverland.

Q. That was Neverland?
A. Yeah.
Q. He was there and you were there for what period of time together? Just one night?
A. No, it was a couple days.
Q. Did it go over more than one night?
A. Yes.
Q. On both of those nights, did both of you spend that time in Mr. Jackson's room?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, did either one of you actually spend the night in Mr. Jackson's bed with Mr. Jackson?
A. No. I think -- from I can remember -- I can only remember one night in particular, and I remember myself and Kieran Culkin, I think, slept on Michael's bed, and Michael slept on a cot, or something, on the side of us, and I don't know, Macaulay fell asleep on a couch or something.
Q. I'm sorry.
A. Go ahead, no.
Q. The Century City apartment, I believe you said you spent some time there with Macaulay Culkin as well?

A. Yeah. I think it was one night there, yeah.
Q. Was his brother there?
A. I don't remember for sure. I don't remember him being there.
Q. Mr. Jackson would periodically kiss you, would he not?
A. No.
Q. Periodically hug you?
A. Yes.
Q. Touch you?
A. Hug me. That would be --
Q. Put his hands through your hair?
A. No.
Q. Touch you about the head and the face?
A. Yeah.
Q. Did he ever kiss you on the cheek?
A. Yeah.
Q. Did he ever kiss you on the lips?

A. No.

Q. Do you remember any other children being there about that time?

A. Which time?

Q. From the time that you were seven until the time you stopped sleeping there at age 13.

A. Being at the ranch?

Q. Yes.

A. Other than we spoke of, no.

Q. Did you know Blanca Francia’s son?

A. No. I knew of him. But I don’t think I ever met him.

Q. What was his name?

A. I don’t know.

Q. Does “Jason” sound familiar?

A. Yes, but I think because I’ve heard it recently. But, yeah.

Q. Now, were there ever occasions after you were 14 years old that you came and stayed at Neverland Ranch and Michael Jackson was, in fact, there?

A. Yes.

Q. And you did not stay with him in his room?

A. The only time I can remember was a time I went up there with a few family members and friends, and we didn’t know he was going to be there. And, you know, we sort of ran into him and hung out a bit, and, no, I didn’t sleep in his room.

Q. Did you ever talk to Michael Jackson about the fact that at some age it was too late for you to be sleeping with him?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever have a conversation with him about whether or not you should continue to sleep in his bed?

A. No.

Q. Remember the last time you slept in his bed?

A. The last -- I think it might have been when I was about 14. It was at a Sheraton Hotel in Los Angeles.

Q. And how did you happen to be there with him?
A. I stayed with him for I think it was just one night.
Q. Did you call or did he call you?
A. I don’t remember.
Q. Was your mother there?
A. No.
Q. Do you remember how you got there?
A. No, I don’t.
Q. Were there occasions that Mr. Jackson would summon you to Neverland Ranch?
A. Summon me?
Q. Yes. Call you up and ask you to come and be there; invite you to Neverland Ranch?
A. Invite us, yeah.
Q. All right. Without your mother?
A. Like ask if I could come without my mother, do you mean?
Q. Or just ask you to come, and you came by yourself.
A. The only time I remember being there -- sorry. The only time I remember being there was that -- that trip that we spoke of by myself with Jordie Chandler and Macaulay.
Q. On the occasions that you stayed in bed with Mr. Jackson, would you ever cuddle in bed?

A. No.
Q. Would you lie next to one another?
A. No.
Q. Would you touch?
A. No.
Q. Would you consider it to have been inappropriate to have cuddled in bed?
A. Sorry?
Q. Would you have considered it to be inappropriate to have cuddled in bed?
A. No.
MR. ZONEN: I have no further questions.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. MESEREAU:
Q. Mr. Robson, the prosecutor for the government asked you about your dressing like Michael Jackson.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And I believe you said something about you dressed like him before you met him.

A. Yes.

Q. Would you please explain that?

A. Well, you know, I became a fan of Michael Jackson when I was two years old, when I saw the making of “Thriller,” and started dancing like him when I was, you know, three or four. So I think when I was about five, I started, because I was imitating him. I got costumes made and that sort of thing. So I would dress like him from that point, before I met him.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson ever encourage you to dress like him?

A. No.

Q. Did you dress like him because you were a fan and friend of his?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, the prosecutor talked about your throwing pebbles at a lion.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Would you please explain what you were describing.

A. Well, there’s a lion that was in a cage. And, you know, went to see the lion roar, and it’s pretty much just sitting there, you know, not doing anything. So we picked up a couple little stones and threw them at the cage, you know.

Q. And the prosecutor used the word “stones,” and you said “pebbles.” How big were these things?

A. Little, you know -- I don’t know, quarter-inch sort of things.

Q. Were you trying to hurt the lion?

A. No.

Q. To your knowledge, was Mr. Jackson trying to hurt the lion?

A. No.

Q. Okay. The prosecutor asked you questions about whether or not you were considered family. Did you consider yourself to be part of Mr. Jackson’s family?
A. Yeah, I mean, in a friendship sort of way. Because we were that close. It was like family.
Q. And did you use the word “family” once in a while --
A. Yes.
Q. -- when you spoke to him?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you hear your mother or sister using the word “family”?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you think anything was strange about that?
A. No.
Q. The prosecutor for the government asked about Mr. Jackson giving you a kiss on the cheek.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. And you said that happened sometimes?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you think there was anything inappropriate about that?
A. No.
Q. Did you do it in front of your mom?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you do it in front of your sister?

A. Yes.
Q. Did your mother kiss him on the cheek?
A. Yes.
Q. Did your sister kiss him on the cheek?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you kiss Mr. Jackson on the cheek?
A. Yes.
Q. Did your mother used to hug Mr. Jackson?
A. Yes.
Q. Did Mr. Jackson used to hug your mother?
MR. ZONEN: I’ll object as irrelevant what happened with his mother.
THE COURT: Overruled. Go ahead.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did Mr. Jackson used to hug your mother?

A. Yes.

Q. Did your sister used to hug Mr. Jackson?

MR. ZONEN: I'll object as leading as well.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did your sister used to hug Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. And would you see Mr. Jackson hug your sister?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever think there was anything inappropriate about Mr. Jackson hugging any member of your family?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever think it was inappropriate to see any member of your family hug Mr. Jackson?

A. No.

Q. Now, you said your sister would sometimes stay in Mr. Jackson's room, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And how often do you recall that happening?

A. I remember it just within that first trip we were there. So it was -- it was, you know, three or four nights or something like that.

Q. And you mentioned Brandy. Is that who you mentioned?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was Brandy again?

A. She was Michael Jackson's niece.

Q. You saw Brandy staying in his room?

A. Yeah.

Q. What's the largest number of kids you ever saw stay in Mr. Jackson's room, if you remember?

A. Yeah, probably four to five.

Q. And what do you recall the children doing in his room?

A. Well, before we went to sleep, same sort of things. We'd play video games, watch movies. Have pillow fights. You know, yeah.

Q. Did you ever see anything of a sexual nature between Mr. Jackson and any of those children?

A. Never.

Q. Now, the prosecutor mentioned Macaulay Culkin. Did you get to know Macaulay Culkin at Neverland?

A. Yeah. I mean, we hung out a little bit, yes.

Q. Was that where you first met him?

A. I think I might have met him on a -- on a set of a commercial or one of his videos or -- or, no, I think I met him on “Black or White” the first time, the music video.

Q. Did you stay in contact with Mr. Culkin?

A. No.

Q. Is he someone you communicate with on a regular basis?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Now, would you see Mr. Culkin’s family at Neverland?

A. Other than his brother Kieran, I don’t remember.

Q. And approximately how old was his brother, do you think?

A. At that time, he would have been, I guess, nine or ten, or something like that.

Q. Have you seen Mr. Jackson hug other children at Neverland?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you seen other children hug Mr. Jackson at Neverland?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever thought any of this was inappropriate?

A. No.

Q. Have you seen Mr. Jackson kiss children at Neverland?

A. On the cheek, yes. Or on the head, or on the top of the head, something like that.

Q. Ever seen kids kiss Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. Any of that ever look inappropriate to you?

A. No.

Q. Have you seen lots of children visit Neverland on occasion?

A. Yes.

Q. And what do you mean?

A. I think we were there once when he had one of his gatherings, like a Heal the World Foundation thing where he had a bunch of kids come up there and -- you know, and have the day there.

Q. And how many kids are you talking about, do you think?

A. Probably about 100 or 50. 75 to 100, something like that.

Q. Were there adults with those children?

A. Yes.

Q. And you said, “Heal the World.” What did that mean to you?

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as exceeding the scope of the direct examination, and irrelevant, and beyond the scope of his knowledge.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Could you repeat the question?

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Yeah. What was “Heal the World,” as far as you remember?

A. As far as I knew, it was a foundation or a charity that Michael had created that, you know, raised money for kids with illnesses. I don’t know exactly what kind, but --

Q. Did you interact with any of these kids that visited that day?

A. I may have, yeah, I mean, waved at them or met a couple of them or something like that.

Q. Did you see Mr. Jackson hugging other children?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see them hugging him?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Mr. Jackson kiss children?

A. Yeah.

Q. Have you seen them kiss him?

A. Yes.

Q. Ever seen anything inappropriate?
A. No.

Q. Did you see Mr. Jackson hug adults who were with those children?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you see adults hug Mr. Jackson who were with those children?
A. Yes.
Q. Ever think any of that was inappropriate?
A. No.
Q. Now, the prosecutor for the government asked you questions about whether he touched your hair.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Do you recall Mr. Jackson ever touching your hair?
A. I can’t recall an exact thing, but it seems like something he might have done at some point.
Q. Do you ever recall Mr. Jackson doing anything inappropriate with your hair?
A. No.
Q. Ever seen Mr. Jackson touch another child on the head?
A. Yes.
Q. Have you seen that many times?
A. Many times.
Q. Did it ever seem like anything inappropriate was going on when you saw that?
A. No.
Q. The prosecutor asked about disobedience at Neverland, and you said you did see kids act up sometimes?

A. Yeah, I mean, act up as far as kids go. I mean, you know, driving golf carts around and throwing water balloons at each other, and things that, I guess, I don’t know, maybe parents would get upset about at some point, but that was the extent of it.
Q. And did you engage in some of that, too?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you ever see Michael Jackson in a water balloon fight with kids?

A. Yes.

Q. Ever see kids throw water balloons at Michael?

A. Yes.

Q. Ever see Michael throw water balloons at kids?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see Michael in golf carts with kids?

A. Yes.

Q. When you used to play at Neverland during the day, would Michael often be with you?

A. Yes.

Q. And what would Michael do with you?

A. We'd go on rides together, you know, where we'd drive around in the golf cart together, look at animals together, watch movies together.

Q. Did you see Mr. Jackson act in a similar way with other children?

A. Yes.

Q. Ever see anything inappropriate go on when he was doing any of these things?

A. No.

Q. Now, how often do you recall your mother going to Neverland with you?

A. It's been every time except for that one time that I spoke of when I was there with Jordie Chandler and Macaulay and I.

Q. What do you recall seeing your mother do at Neverland?

A. A lot of the same things with us.

Q. Would she sometimes be with Mr. Jackson when all the kids were playing?

A. Oh, yes. She was playing along with us.

Q. Now, you mentioned visiting an apartment in Century City with Mr. Jackson, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And what do you recall doing in the apartment with Mr. Jackson?

A. Same sort of things. He had arcade games there. You know, candy. We'd eat, we'd watch, you know, T.V. shows, Stooges. Hang around, play games, you know.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Jackson do anything inappropriate with any child at that apartment?

A. No.

Q. Where else have you been with Mr. Jackson?

A. Like I said, we covered Las Vegas. Westwood apartment, Century City apartment. Sheraton Hotel. He came and stayed at my place once.

Q. Where was that?

A. That was in Hollywood. It was -- my mother and I had a condo, and my sister.

Q. Did you see Mr. Jackson do anything inappropriate at any of these locations?

A. No.

Q. Ever seen Mr. Jackson touch any child in a sexual way at any of these locations?

A. Never.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson ever touch you inappropriately in any of these locations?

A. No.

Q. Now, have you been following media reporting in this case?

A. Yeah. On and off.

Q. You're aware of allegations that were made that Mr. Jackson --

MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object as leading and exceeding the scope of the direct -- cross.

THE COURT: I don't know what the question is yet.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. You've been following these reports that somehow Mr. Jackson was seen inappropriately touching you?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you think of them?

A. I think it's --

MR. ZONEN: I'll object.
I'll withdraw the objection.

THE WITNESS: I think it's ridiculous.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. When Mr. Jackson stayed with you at your Hollywood apartment, how old were you?

A. I would say 11 or 12.

Q. Did he share your bed with you at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. There was one bed that you had in your room; is that correct?

A. No, it was actually -- it was a -- like a futon that was our couch down in the living room.

Q. So both of you stayed on the couch in the living room?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that couch your normal residence? Was that where you normally slept?

A. I think that’s where I was sleeping at that point, yeah.

Q. You think that’s where you were sleeping?

A. Yes.

Q. You slept in other rooms at different times?

A. Yeah.

Q. Now, all those places that you mentioned are all places that you mentioned, a series of places, you had been with Michael Jackson. On all of those occasions you slept in the same bed with him; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you think that’s appropriate, for a 35-year-old man to be sleeping with an eight-year-old boy?

A. I don’t see any problem with it.

Q. Suppose the 35-year-old man has an obsession for sexually explicit material. Would that change your view?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; 352.

MR. ZONEN: It’s in evidence.

MR. MESEREAU: Calls for speculation; assumes facts not in evidence.

THE COURT: I’m going to sustain the objection because of the use of the term "obsession."

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: If you knew that the person, the 35-year-old man who was sleeping with an eight-year-old boy, possessed a great quantity of sexually explicit material, would that cause you concern about that person's motivations while he was in bed with the boy?

A. Yes.

MR. ZONEN: No further questions.

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. If you had known Michael Jackson, as a grown man, was reading Playboy, Hustler, Penthouse, magazines like that showing naked women, would that have concerned you?

A. No. That's what I was going to say afterward. Depends on what kind of material, what kind of pornographic material you were talking about.

Q. Would that have concerned you?

A. No.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.

MR. ZONEN: May I approach the witness?

THE COURT: Yes.

FURTHER RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. I'd like to show you a couple exhibits, 841 and 842, that have been shown previously in this court to this jury.

Let's start with one titled "Boys Will Be Boys." I'd like you to take a look at a few of the pages. Just go ahead and start turning pages, please.

Stop there for a moment.

Would you describe the picture on the right side?

A. There's a young boy with his legs open and he's naked.

Q. All right. The picture prominently displays his genitalia, does it not?

A. Yes.

Q. That boy looks, to you, to be approximately how old?

A. Maybe 11 or 12.

Q. That's how old you were when you were sleeping with Michael Jackson; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Go ahead and flip a couple of more pages, if you would.

You can stop right there, the next page.

A. Just a young boy who's naked standing on a rock.

Q. His genitalia is prominently displayed in that picture; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Appears that that child is about the same as the other one?

A. Yes.

Q. Flip a couple more pages. Please keep going.

Okay. Stop right there.

What's in that two pages, series of two pages?

A. There's a boy, about the same age, 11 or 12, who's naked.

Q. All right. And in those pictures his genitalia is prominently displayed as well; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. In fact, if you'll take just a second and strum through the balance of that book -- you can do it fairly rapidly, if you would. You don't have to go page by page, but as you wish.

Is it true, Mr. Robson, that all of the pictures in that book are of boys about the same age?

A. Yes.

Q. 10, 11, 12 years old?

A. Yes.

Q. And that many of the photographs, if not most of the photographs, depicted in that book are of boys nude; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And in fact, in most of those pictures, the genitalia is prominently displayed; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you be concerned with a person who possesses a book like that?

A. No.

Q. Would you be concerned about having your 12-year-old child in bed with a person who possesses a book like that?

A. No.

Q. You would have no such concern?

A. No. It’s -- to me, it doesn’t -- it’s not a pornographic book. It’s sort of, you know -- I don’t know, just a book.

Q. I’d like -- and I’d like to show you Exhibit 596, please. Take a moment and look at that book.

Let’s stop there for a moment.

That’s the first, in fact, picture in that book; is that correct?

A. I didn’t notice, no.

Do you want me to go to the first picture?

Q. You know, no, you can pick any picture, actually. Just go ahead and open the book at random.

Right there.

A. Oh, sorry.

Q. Is it a fact, as you look through that book, what is depicted in that book throughout that book are a series of photographs of two men engaged in sex acts with one another?

A. Yes.

Q. And in fact, the sex acts are all acts of either masturbation, oral sex or sodomy; is that right?

A. From what I saw, yes.

Q. And sodomy, as you understand, is an act of anal sex; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you be concerned about a person who possesses that book crawling into bed with a ten-year-old boy?

A. Yes, I guess so.

MR. ZONEN: No further questions.

MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

FURTHER RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Mr. Robson, I want to show you Exhibit No. 841. It says, “Boys Will Be Boys.” Do you see this?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, I’d like you to read the inscription on that book, okay? Read it out loud, if you would.

A. Okay. “Look at the true spirit of happiness and joy in these boys’ faces. This is the spirit of boyhood, a life I never had and will always dream of. This is the life I want for my children. MJ.”

Q. Having read that inscription and having looked at this book, would you have any concern being in bed with Michael Jackson if you knew this book was found in his home?

A. No.

Q. Let me show you Exhibit No. 842. Please read out loud the inscription on that book.

A. Is that, “To Michael”? Yeah. “To Michael, from your fan. Kiss, kiss, kiss, hug, hug, hug. Rhonda. 1983.”

Q. You’ve looked through that book - okay? - and it says, “The Boy; A photographic Essay,” right?

A. I didn’t look through that book.

Q. Okay. Why don’t you look through this book the prosecutor showed you, and please say whether or not you would have a problem being in the same bedroom with Michael Jackson based upon what you see in that book and the inscription.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Now, let me show you -- let me show you Exhibit No. 596 that the prosecutor showed you. Just read the cover, if you would.

A. “Man, A Sexual Study of Man. Illustrated With Photographs and Art Prints.”

Q. Okay. Now, you’ve seen those photographs, and you’ve said you were somewhat disturbed by the pictures, right?

A. Well, I wasn’t disturbed by the pictures.

Q. Well, if you -- if you read this book, and it appeared to be a book dealing with male sexuality in all different areas, and you knew that this book existed with hundreds of editions of Hustler, Playboy, Penthouse --

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as leading.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: -- would that bother you?

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Can you repeat it?

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Sure.

Let’s assume that you learned that Michael Jackson had ten years’ worth of Hustler, Playboy, Penthouse - okay? - magazines, heterosexual-type magazines, and let’s assume that -- have you ever seen Mr. Jackson’s library?

A. Yes.

Q. How many books do you think are in there?

A. Thousands.

Q. And let’s suppose in the middle of all those books you found, “A Sexual Study of Man, Illustrated With Photographs and Art Prints,” okay?

A. Yes.

Q. Putting all this together, would being in bed with Mr. Jackson concern you?

A. No.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.

FURTHER RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Of course nobody’s told you where this book comes from, did they?
A. No.
MR. SNEDDON: Ron?
THE COURT: It’s time for the break.
MR. ZONEN: It’s not quarter to.
THE COURT: My bailiff told me.
(Recess taken.)
MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor?
MR. ZONEN: Thank you.
MR. MESEREAU: I’m going to object that the questions have become cumulative and there’s no foundation for it to go any further.
BAILIFF CORTEZ: Your microphone is off, sir.
MR. MESEREAU: It’s beyond the scope. And this is not a character witness.
MR. ZONEN: I don’t recall which question he’s referring to.
THE COURT: I’m looking for it myself. I don’t have a question.
THE REPORTER: Would you like me to read the last question, Judge?
MR. ZONEN: I’m prepared to start with a new question.
THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Mr. Robson, the three books that are in front of you that you’ve already taken a look at, I’d like to go back over the inscription that -- 842 is a book, and you were asked to read that inscription out loud.
Take a look at that inscription again, would you, please?
A. Do you want me to read it again?
Q. No, you don’t need to read it again.
Go to the last word, which is the name.
What is the name on that?
A. Rhonda.
Q. Notice anything unusual about the name?
A. No.
Q. Do you notice it’s written with quotations on both sides of it?

A. Yes.

Q. Doesn’t that usually mean that that’s not the name when somebody writes it in quotation marks?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Have you ever written your name in quotation marks?

A. No.

Q. That’s actually from somebody who’s not named Rhonda, right?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: The three books I’ve given you so far to take a look at, they all feature either boys or adult men, predominantly nude, and the one on adult men is engaged in sex acts; is that correct?

MR. MESEREAU: I’m going to object; asked and answered. This is cumulative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: I’m going to show you three additional books now, if I could. Let’s start with Exhibit 578, if you’ll take a look at that one, please.

MR. MESEREAU: Same objection. Cumulative; it’s not character; it’s beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: I’ll start with the first picture. What do you see right there?

A. I see in the center of the picture, it’s a drawing. And there’s a naked man with his genitalia exposed, and there’s kangaroos on either side.

Q. Okay. Go ahead and proceed.

You can keep going. Just keep going through it.

You can stop.

What you’ve seen so far are all pictures of naked men; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And pictures with their genitalia prominently displayed; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Some of these are bondage pictures, are they not?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

MR. ZONEN: It's cross-examination, Your Honor.

MR. MESEREAU: Assumes facts not in evidence.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Is that correct? Like that picture right there?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you consider this to be homoerotic material?

A. Yes.

Q. Exhibit No. 590-B, take a look at that, please. Tell us the title.

A. "Before the Hand of Man."

Q. Go ahead and take a look at the content of that book.

That's enough.

Pictures of naked young men; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you consider that to be homoerotic material?

A. No.

Q. Why not?

A. I look at this more as sort of -- it's about the photography and it's more of an art book, to me.

Q. Do you think it's the background setting that makes it unique?

A. Unique?

Q. Well, they're all naked men in it; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Look at No. 599, if you would.

You can stop.

Those are all pictures of boys and men, all nude; is that correct?

A. I didn't see any boys. I saw men.

Q. How old do you think is the youngest person you've seen in this book so far?

A. Maybe 19. 18, 19.

Q. Teenaged?

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. They're all about that age or a little bit older; is that right?

A. Yeah.

Q. Do you think this person is 19?

A. 18, 19, yeah.

Q. Okay. And in fact, in each one of them, genitalia is prominently displayed; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Take a look at this book, please, No. 590-A.

You can stop here. What are you taking a look at? Particularly the page you're focused on at the moment, what do you see?

A. There's two naked men and it looks like they're about to kiss each another.

Q. In this book, in fact, each of the pictures depict two naked men; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And in each instance, both of them are doing something with one another of a sexual nature; is that right?

A. No.

Q. They're hugging, they're touching, they're caressing?

A. They're posing.

Q. They're posing. And they're all naked?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you consider this to be homoerotic art?

A. Mind if I look a little more?

Q. Go ahead.

A. Yeah, it's -- I don't think it's so erotic. It seems more loving in a way, like not so much about sex.

Q. Well, how about the one you just turned to? Where is his hand?

A. Down his pants.

Q. Okay. You can go ahead and close that one right now.

Mr. Robson, are you concerned about a man possessing these seven books being in bed with a 12-year-old boy?

A. If it was a man I didn't know, maybe. But not Michael.

Q. Is that because you view Mr. Jackson as being, for the most part, asexual?

A. No.

Q. Because you believe that he doesn't really have a sexual interest?

A. I believe that he has a sexual interest in women.

Q. Did you know that he possessed these magazines?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection, Your Honor, he didn't let the witness complete his answer.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. MESEREAU: Could the witness complete his answer, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

THE WITNESS: I believe that he has a sexual interest in women.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: In women?

A. Yes.

Q. These books don't suggest otherwise?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. All right. Let's go to some other side of the counter.

Exhibit No. 575, have you ever seen this magazine before?

A. No.

Q. Not that specific one. A magazine of that nature?

A. Of that nature, yes.

Q. Okay. And go ahead and turn through it.

You can stop there. You don't need to go too much further.

This magazine depicts naked women, or a woman in this case, inserting things inside of her; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. You would consider this to be very graphic --

A. Yes.

Q. -- in terms of sexually explicit material?

A. Yes.

Q. Exhibit No. 520, tell us the title of that.

A. “Hard Rock Affair.”

Q. Okay. Go ahead and turn through a few pages.

You don’t have to turn any further.

That magazine depicts graphic sexual pictures of a man and a woman engaged in acts of intercourse and oral sex; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. You would consider this to be pretty much as hard-core as sexually graphic material goes; is that right?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Misstates the evidence; 352.

MR. ZONEN: I asked him what he considered.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: That’s as hard-core as it goes, is that what you asked?

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Yes.

A. No, not as hard-core as it goes.

Q. What could be more than that?

A. I’ve seen crazy things, crazy bondage things, all sorts of stuff.

Q. You saw the bondage in the last publication; is that right?

A. Yeah, but they weren’t really doing anything.

Q. All right. You would consider bondage to be at the height?

A. Yeah. When it gets into, you know, really unusual stuff.

Q. What’s the title of this one? The magazine that we have here is 522.

A. “Double Dicking Caroline.”

Q. Go ahead and turn a couple pages.

Okay. That’s fine.

These are all photographs of a man and a woman engaged in pretty much anything a man and a woman can do; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Including acts of intercourse, acts of oral sex, and the picture right in front of you, acts of anal sex; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. This you would consider to be fairly hard-core, would you not?

A. Yes.

Q. The title of this one, please? No. 510.

A. “Stiff Dick Lynn.” Or “for Lynn,” sorry.

Q. “For Lynn”?

A. “Stiff Dick for Lynn.”

Q. Let’s get our prepositions right.

A. Get it right, yeah.

Q. Go ahead and turn the page, if you would.

A. I never thought I’d have a room of people watching me do this.

Q. That’s enough.

You would agree that this is a depiction of a man and a woman engaged in virtually every variation that a man and woman can do with one another; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Sexually.

The collective material that you have just been shown does not cause you a moment of pause when you think about the prospect of this person who possesses all of this crawling into bed with a ten-year-old boy?

A. No.

Q. And you would allow a child to crawl into bed with such a person?

A. If I knew the person, yes.

Q. If you knew them?

A. Yes.

Q. Your own child, you'd have no problem sleeping with a 35-, 40-year-old man?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Have you seen one book that depicts child pornography in that group?

A. No.

MR. ZONEN: I believe there was a Court restriction on the use of that word, Your Honor, one initiated by the defense. Unless that reservation is finished.

MR. MESEREAU: He’s correct. And I made a mistake using the word. I’ll withdraw it, and I apologize.

THE COURT: All right. The problem is that sometimes it’s an appropriate word to use and sometimes it’s not. But the jury’s been instructed on it. And so if you want to rephrase it, that's fine.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.
Q. In those books that the prosecutor for the government showed you, you see books about men, right?
A. Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.

FURTHER RECROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Mr. Robson, when did you first learn that Michael Jackson possessed material of the nature that's before you right now?
A. Right now I did.
Q. All the years that you have known Michael --
A. Actually, no one's told me where this came from.

Q. Assuming this comes from Michael Jackson's residence.
A. Assuming it does, this is the first I know.
Q. All right. And you had never, ever known that Mr. Jackson collected sexually explicit material?
A. No.
Q. This is something new that you're learning just today; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. You're telling us that this would have no effect at all on your belief that this bears on some suitability for him sleeping with ten-year-old boys?
A. No.
Q. You knew that there were a succession of ten-year-old boys that he slept with, didn't you?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Misstates the evidence; the Court ruling.
THE COURT: Sustained.

A. No.
Q. Has anything this prosecutor for the government has said to you changed your opinion of Michael Jackson?
A. Not at all.
Q. Does it change your opinion as to whether or not he ever did anything inappropriate with a child?
A. Not at all.
MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.
MR. ZONEN: I have no questions.

THE COURT: Thank you. You may step down.
Call your next witness.
MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, may I remove the materials from the witness box?
THE COURT: Yes.
THE BAILIFF: Oh, I'll get it for you.
THE COURT: When you get to the witness stand, please remain standing.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Mr. Barnes, how old are you?

A. I'm 23 years old.

Q. Where is your home?

A. Melbourne, Australia.

Q. And what kind of work do you do?

A. Right now I'm unemployed. I actually had to quit my job to come here.

Q. Okay. And what job is that?

A. I was a roulette dealer at the casino.

Q. In Melbourne?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Do you know the fellow seated to my right at counsel table?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Who is he?

A. It's my good friend Michael Jackson.

Q. And you say your good friend. How long have you known him?

A. Since I was five.

Q. How did you meet him?

A. I actually -- I was a big -- well, I was as big a fan as you can be at that age, of his, and he was in Melbourne for the "Bad" tour. And so my mom thought it would be a good idea for us to write a letter. My sister wrote the letter, but put it in my name as if I was writing the letter.

And we went to meet him -- well, see him at the airport when he touched down. And while we were there, we gave the letter to one of his dancers, and then we left the airport after it was all over.

And I'm not sure exactly how much time passed, but after a little while, he -- we received a phone call from him, and ever since then we've been really good friends.

Q. And is he a friend of your family?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Okay. Have you ever visited Neverland Ranch?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. When did you first visit Neverland Ranch?

A. It would have been December of ‘91.

Q. And do you remember why you visited Neverland?

A. Because he was there, and it’s his house, I guess.

Q. Who did you go with?

A. My whole family went, my mother and my father and my sister and myself.

Q. Did you stay at Neverland?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. How many times do you think you visited Neverland?

A. Too many to remember. Probably -- it would be ten or more, even. More than ten times.

Q. And how many times do you think you’ve stayed over at Neverland?

A. Every time.

Q. Okay. Did you ever stay in Michael Jackson’s room?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. How many times do you think you’ve done that?

A. Countless as well.

Q. And how would you describe his room?

A. It’s big. It’s pretty cool because it’s got lots of fun stuff to do there. Video games, such as stuff like that. And it’s probably the best as I can describe it.

Q. Have you ever stayed in Michael Jackson’s bed?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. How many times do you think you have?

A. Countless as well.

Q. Has Mr. Jackson ever molested you?

A. Absolutely not. And I can tell you right now that if he had, I wouldn’t be here right now.

Q. Has Mr. Jackson ever touched you in a sexual way?

A. Never. I wouldn’t stand for it.

Q. Has Mr. Jackson ever touched any part of your body in a way that you thought was inappropriate?

A. Never. It’s not the type of thing that I would stand for.

Q. When you stayed in Mr. Jackson’s bed --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- on any of those occasions was anyone else there?

A. Yeah.

Q. Who?

A. Well, I can’t -- see, I was pretty young at the time, so I can’t remember exactly. But I know my sister as being there, his cousins have been there. And -- yeah, Macaulay has actually been there as well, Macaulay Culkin. So there’s been a few people.

Q. What is the longest period you think you’ve ever stayed at Neverland?

A. I couldn’t tell you. I don’t remember really.

Q. Would it be a week, or three days?

A. Longer than that.

Q. Longer than that?

A. Yeah. It would probably be a couple weeks, maybe a month at Neverland at one time.

Q. And what do you recall doing at Neverland during the times you stayed there?

A. Playing arcade games. Going ATV/motorbike-riding around the property. Going on amusement park rides. And watching plenty of movies, plenty of cartoons. Eating very good food.

Q. Do you consider Michael Jackson to be your family friend?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Do you stay in communication with him?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And how do you typically communicate with Michael Jackson?

A. Like he’s a member of the family. Just always had warm conversations, reminisce about old times.

Q. Are you familiar with a Jacuzzi at Neverland?

A. Yeah.

Q. Ever been in the Jacuzzi?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Do you recall Michael Jackson ever being in the Jacuzzi with you?

A. I don’t recall. He possibly could have, but I don’t really remember.

Q. Do you recall ever taking a shower with Michael Jackson?

A. Never.

Q. Now, have you visited Neverland without your parents being with you?

A. Yes.

Q. And how many times do you think you’ve done that?

A. It wouldn’t be that many. But I couldn’t give you a ballpark figure even.

Q. Now, have you followed this case in the media?

A. No, I haven’t.

Q. Okay.

A. I chose not to.

Q. Are you aware of any allegations being made that Mr. Jackson inappropriately touched you when you were with him?

A. Yes, I am. And I’m very mad about that.

Q. You’re mad about it?

A. Yeah.

Q. Why?

A. Because it’s untrue, and they’re putting my name through the dirt. And I’m really, really, really not happy about it.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Mr. Barnes, do you consider it disgraceful to having been molested?

A. Absolutely.

Q. All right. And why would it be a disgrace for somebody to have been molested?

A. Well, a child is --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. This calls for speculation; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: How old were you when you first started sharing a bed with Michael Jackson?

A. Couldn’t tell you. Don’t really remember.

Q. How old were you when you first started visiting Michael Jackson?

A. When I first started visiting, I was nine.

Q. And you visited Neverland with whom?

A. With my parents.

Q. Both your mother and your father?

A. And my sister as well.

Q. Your sister as well. And how long did you stay at Neverland?

A. The first time?

Q. Yes.

A. I don’t exactly remember.

Q. Did you stay over the week?

A. Yeah.

Q. Did you then visit Neverland on a regular basis thereafter?

A. I wouldn’t say regular, but, yeah, it was quite frequent.

Q. Did you visit Neverland at least once a year thereafter?

A. Yeah.

Q. And when you visited Neverland, would you always stay with Michael Jackson?

A. Yeah, most of the time.

Q. All right. Now, I asked you, I believe, the age the first time you went. Did you answer that question?

A. Yeah.
Q. And you said what? About nine?
A. Yeah.
Q. Okay. And then you would continue to go each year thereafter?
A. Yeah.
Q. Did you sometimes go more than once a year?
A. Yeah.
Q. And would you stay for longer than one week at a time?
A. Sometimes, I guess, yeah.
Q. Were there occasions where you would stay two or even three weeks?
A. I was young at the time, so I don’t really remember the time frames.
Q. Okay.
A. So it would be purely speculation.
Q. Would it have been summer vacation; that is, your summer vacation in Australia?
A. I really couldn’t tell you.
Q. Did you ever go to Neverland without a parent going with you?
A. Yes.
Q. So sometimes you would fly all the way from Australia to Neverland, is that right, by yourself?
A. Absolutely.
Q. Were you much older than nine years old when you did that?

A. I couldn’t tell you. But -- well, right -- yeah, I was older than nine.
Q. Did you visit in your tenth year and your eleventh year and your twelfth year as well?
A. I really couldn’t tell you that.
Q. Did you ever visit in your thirteenth year and your fourteenth year?
A. I don’t remember much about ages.
Q. You can’t tell us how old you were when you stopped visiting Neverland?
A. I still -- I continue to visit to this day.
Q. Do you still sleep with Michael Jackson?
A. No, I don’t.
Q. How old were you when you stopped sleeping with Michael Jackson?

A. I couldn’t tell you that.

Q. Why don’t you still sleep with Michael Jackson?

A. Well, he’s got kids now.

Q. And?

A. And I -- it would be purely speculation if I told you. I could not answer that knowingly, like -- it’s just --

Q. But during the years that you were visiting Michael Jackson at Neverland, you never stayed anyplace but in his room; is that correct?

A. I couldn’t tell you.

Q. You’re telling us that you don’t remember if you stayed in a guest lodge by yourself or with your mother or if you shared a bed with Michael Jackson?

A. I don’t remember staying in the guest lodge by myself.

Q. But it’s true, sir, that you stayed virtually the entire time in his bedroom; is that right?

A. Yeah.

Q. And during that time nobody else stayed in the bedroom with you other than you and Michael Jackson; is that true?

A. No, that’s not true.

Q. On what percentage of the occasions that you visited Michael Jackson was there somebody else staying in that room?

A. I couldn’t tell you.

Q. Can you tell us the names of the people who stayed in the room with you?

A. My sister. Macaulay Culkin. There was Levon and Elijah. There was Frank, Eddie, and Dominick.

Q. Was Frank --

A. Prince as well.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection, he hasn’t finished the question.

THE WITNESS: His son Prince as well.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Prince? Prince is how old now?

A. I'm not quite sure.
Q. About what, seven?
A. Yeah. I guess so.
Q. And how old was Prince when he stayed in the room with you and Michael Jackson?
A. I think he was three.
Q. All right. So it was about four years ago?
A. Yeah.
Q. So you stayed in the room with Michael Jackson when you were 18 years old?
A. Yeah.
Q. You're 22 now?
A. 23. 23.
Q. So you were 19 years old?
A. Yeah, I guess.
Q. Did you share a bed with him at that time?
A. Yeah, I did.
Q. You did. Have you been sharing a bed with him consistently from age nine until age 19?
A. What do you mean by "consistent"?
Q. Well, in all the times that you visit, predominately do you stay in his room, in his bed?
A. Yeah.
Q. Did you do it when you were ten years old as well?
A. Yeah.
Q. Did you do it when you were 11 years old as well?

A. Yes.
Q. Most of the times you did it, there was nobody else in the room; is that correct?
A. I guess you could say that.
Q. Because Macaulay Culkin was only in the room with you once or twice; isn't that true?
A. I couldn't tell you how many times.
Q. Could he have been in the room 20 or 30 times?
A. Probably not.
Q. So really it's closer to once or twice; is that right?

A. Yeah, I guess so.
Q. All right. And your sister stayed there the first time you visited; is that right?
A. Not just the first time.
Q. Did she stay there the second time?
A. I -- look, I don’t really remember.
Q. Did your sister share a bed with you and Michael Jackson ever?
A. I can’t recall.
Q. You can’t recall if your sister shared a bed?
A. I can’t remember.
Q. When did your sister stop visiting Neverland?
A. She still visits to this day.
Q. Does she still share a bed with you and Michael Jackson?

A. No.
Q. When was the last time your sister shared a bed with you and Michael Jackson?
A. I couldn’t tell you. I don’t know the exact period of time.
Q. Could you have been 15 or 16 years old?
A. I couldn’t tell you.
Q. Could you have been ten?
A. I couldn’t tell.
Q. Mr. Barnes, the best you can tell us about when your sister last shared a bed with you and Michael Jackson, you have no idea?
A. It’s not something that I think of. What -- why would I try and remember that?
Q. Is there --
A. Why would I think about it?
Q. Is there any other 35-year-old man that you slept with when you were ten years old besides Michael Jackson?
A. Yes.
Q. Who?
A. My uncle.
Q. All right. A family member.
A. Yeah.
Q. Who else?

A. That would probably be it. I can’t recall any others.

Q. All right. Now, with whom do you live at this time?

A. My parents and my sister.

Q. And both your parents?

A. Yeah.

Q. And that’s in Australia?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Did your father ever visit Neverland with you?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. When your father visited Neverland with you, where did you stay?

A. Both in the guesthouse and both with him.

Q. Both in the guesthouse and with Mr. Jackson?

A. I stayed with Mr. Jackson, yeah.

Q. Did you ever have a conversation with your father about the propriety of sharing a bed with a 35-year-old man?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Did you ever have a conversation with your mother about that, whether that was a wise thing to do, to share a bed with a 35-year-old man?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Did he ever show you any sexually explicit material?

A. Absolutely not.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Overruled. The answer is, “Absolutely not.”

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Were you aware that he possessed sexually explicit material?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever travel with Michael Jackson anywhere?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Where?

A. South America, North America, Africa, and Europe.

Q. On those occasions --

A. And Australia as well, I’m sorry.

Q. On those occasions did you share a bed with him?

A. Yes.

Q. Were any other people present while you were in the room with him?

A. I don’t recall. I can’t -- I can’t remember.

Q. Was your mother with you when you traveled through South America?

A. I think so.

Q. You think so?

A. Look, when I was young, I wasn’t really thinking about this sort of stuff. I wasn’t trying to retain in my memory this sort of stuff. And what’s sad is that I traveled to all these countries and I really don’t remember much of them. So it’s all sort of -- it’s all sort of meshed into one.

Q. Mr. Barnes, how old were you when you traveled through South America with Mr. Jackson?

A. To tell the truth, I cannot remember.

Q. You can’t tell whether you were 19 or 10?

A. Well, I wasn’t 19. It was in my middle teens, maybe -- no, it would have been in my early -- early teens.

Q. 12?

A. It could have been possibly 12.

Q. So you were 12 or 13. You don’t know if your mother was there with you when you traveled through South America?

A. She was, actually.

Q. In fact, you traveled quite a bit with Mr. Jackson without your mother being present; isn’t that true?

A. No.

Q. Did you travel through North America with Mr. Jackson without your mother?

A. Yes.

Q. And in how many cities through North America did you go without your mother and Mr. Jackson?

A. I’m not too sure.

Q. Six or seven, perhaps eight?

A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. Was he performing at the time, Mr. Jackson?

A. For which?

Q. On the trip through North America, was he performing?

A. No, he wasn't.

Q. Did you travel with him when he was performing?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that -- in South America, was he performing then?

A. Yes.

Q. And every night after the performance, you would go with him to his room; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you stayed in his bed that night?

A. Yep.

Q. In North America when you traveled, your mother was not there?

A. Not -- well, see, she went to some cities, like we all went to some cities, and sometimes we -- I went. Like on some of the occasions when I was gone, coming over here alone, we'd go around. But sometimes when my whole family was there, we'd go around, too.

Q. How many times did you come to the United States by yourself?

A. Probably only two or three maybe.

Q. And did Mr. Jackson arrange for that to happen?

A. He arranged for all of our trips.

Q. So all of the transportation for you and your family from Australia to Neverland; is that correct?

A. Yeah.

Q. And then all the travels that you did through the United States and through South America?

A. Uh-huh. I was very fortunate.

Q. I'm sorry?

A. I was very fortunate.

Q. When you slept with Mr. Jackson, what generally did you wear?

A. Sorry?

Q. When you slept with Mr. Jackson in the same bed, what would you wear?

A. Pajama pants, T-shirt, pajama top sometimes.

Q. Always?

A. Well, always pajama pants, always a T-shirt.

Q. And Mr. Jackson?

A. Exactly the same thing.

Q. Always pajamas and pajama bottoms?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. I'd like to show you a series of photographs and tell me if you recognize them, the people in this photo. Let's start with 893.

A. Yep.

Q. Who's that?

A. That's me and him.

Q. Are these Polaroids? 9188

A. They look so.

Q. Do you remember taking these pictures?

A. Not at all.

Q. Do you remember where you were?

A. Not at all.

Q. Can you tell us about how old you were?

A. Probably about 11 maybe, 10.

Q. I notice you've changed your hairstyle since then, haven't you?

A. Yes.

Q. You were about nine or ten. So this was early on in your meeting with Mr. Jackson; is that right?

A. Yeah, I would say so.

Q. All right. This is 893, and that has two photos on the front, and two photos on the back; is that right?

A. Yep.

Q. And that's you in the two photos in the back as well?

A. Yep.

Q. All right. 892, is that you as well?

A. Yep.
Q. And Mr. Jackson?
A. Yep. Yep.
Q. And the two on the back? Do these appear to have been taken at the same time?
A. These?

Q. Yes.
A. Yeah, I'd say so.
Q. 891, who is that?
A. That's Michael Jackson.
Q. Did you take those pictures?
A. Couldn't tell you.
Q. They appear to have been taken at the same time; no?
A. Possibly.
Q. All right. If I were to tell you that they were all found together, would that suggest that they were all taken at the same time?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; calls for speculation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Turn it over, if you would, to the back side. Three more pictures on the back. What are they?
A. Of Michael Jackson.
Q. Do you remember those pictures?
A. Not at all.
Q. Does that look familiar to you?
A. No.
Q. Mr. Barnes, did you take those photographs?
A. I couldn't tell you. I don't -- I couldn't tell you, no.
Q. 890, two pictures on the front. Would you take a look at those two pictures?

A. Uh-huh.
Q. One of those is you; is that right?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. You appear to be in bed.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. The other picture is what?

A. Appears to be Michael Jackson.

Q. And he’s in his underwear; is that right?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. 889, is that you?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And anything on the back?

A. Yep.

Q. Is that you as well?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. All right. Do you remember those pictures?

A. Don’t remember taking them, but I can tell you where they were taken.

Q. Where?

A. They were taken at the ranch.

Q. They were taken at the ranch?

A. In a photo booth.

Q. There’s a photo booth at the ranch on that one there?

A. Yep.

Q. Do you recognize the background on any of the other photographs?

A. On these?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I don’t. No.

Q. Are all of these photographs accurate photographs of the subjects depicted within? In other words, the photographs of Mr. Jackson really are Mr. Jackson and the photographs of you really are you?

A. That one’s a bit sketchy, but the rest, yeah.

Q. The one in his underwear?

A. Yeah.

Q. You’re not sure that’s him?

A. Well, you can’t really see the face properly.

Q. Mr. Barnes, before coming from Australia, did you speak with anybody about your testimony?

A. No.

Q. They simply flew you from Australia to California?

A. Well, they explained that I’d be a witness.

Q. And then they interviewed you after you got here?
A. The interview?
Q. Yes. You had an interview with an investigator --
A. Yes.
Q. -- who works for Mr. Mesereau; is that right?

A. Yes.
Q. And that interview took place after you got to California?
A. Yes, it did.
Q. So they had no way of knowing what you were going to say while you were still in Australia?
A. No.
Q. Because they never talked with you at all?
A. Not about the case, not being a witness. I signed a declaration.
Q. You signed a declaration from where?
A. From -- I was at home. Melbourne, Australia.
Q. Melbourne, Australia?
A. Yeah.
Q. All right. So somebody wrote a declaration and they sent it to you, is that right, in Australia?
A. Faxed it.
Q. I'm sorry?
A. Faxed it.
Q. They faxed it you. But you had to have talked to somebody to tell them what to put in the declaration, didn't you do that?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. So you did talk with somebody while you were in Australia?
A. Yes.

Q. Who was the person that you talked with while you were in Australia?
A. It was Brian Oxman and some -- I think it might be Scott Ross as well. But I'm not exactly sure.

Q. And then they prepared a declaration, they sent it to you; is that correct?
A. That’s correct.
MR. ZONEN: Madam Clerk, could I have another sticker that says....
Q. Let me show you 894, four photographs on it.
MR. MESEREAU: Excuse me, Counsel. Are these what I saw before? Are these what you showed me earlier?
MR. ZONEN: Not the first set. Let me show you.
Q. 893, would you take a look at that, please, both sides of that?
A. Yep.
Q. That contains a total of six pictures, two on one side, four on the back; is that right?
A. That’s correct.
Q. And those are all pictures of you, one picture of Mr. Jackson?
A. Correct.
Q. 894?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. That’s who?

A. Michael Jackson.
Q. All four of those pictures?
A. Correct.
Q. Do you recognize the location?
A. No, I don’t.
Q. You have no recollection of that?
A. No.
Q. Could that have been a hotel you stayed in?
A. Quite possibly.
Q. All right. 896?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Does any of that look familiar to you?
A. Is this New York? I don’t remember any of these pictures.
Q. Do you remember any of those pictures being taken?
A. Not at all.
Q. And your age, approximately, in those photographs?

A. I would have absolutely no idea.

Q. You would have no idea at all?

A. Well, these ones of me?

Q. Yes. You.

A. Probably about the same age.

Q. Okay. Does it appear that those photographs were taken about the same time?

A. Purely speculation, but, yes.

Q. Is your hairstyle the same as --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; move to strike.

THE COURT: Stricken. Speculation.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Based on your familiarity with yourself, does it appear that you are about the same age in each of the photographs so far shown to you?

A. Yes.

Q. And all those photographs are you with Michael Jackson in a room someplace; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. You have no recollection of when those photographs were taken?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. And the pictures of Mr. Jackson, you have no recollection of actually taking those yourself?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. Were there many occasions, when you were ten years old, that you traveled by yourself with Mr. Jackson?

A. I wouldn’t say -- well, I’m not sure I understand the question.

Q. Did you travel more than one trip with Mr. Jackson when you were about the age of 10 by yourself?

A. Do you mean from my home?

Q. Yes.

A. Around?

I can’t really remember. I can’t remember how many times. It might have been one, might have been two. I can’t really tell you.

Q. On the occasions when you traveled with Mr. Jackson and he was on tour, did you go to all of the concerts?
A. I’m not sure.
Q. Was there ever a woman traveling with Mr. Jackson while you were traveling with him?
A. A woman?
Q. Yes.
A. I’m not -- what do you mean, though?
Q. Somebody with whom he was close to. I don’t mean an assistant. I mean a friend or a girlfriend.
A. Not that I recall.
Q. At the time that you were traveling with him in South America, was he ever traveling with a woman? And I don’t mean an assistant. A girlfriend.
MR. MESEREAU: Object as beyond the scope.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Were there ever any other people traveling with you as part of your unit?
A. Where?
Q. When you traveled.
A. Sometimes.
Q. Did any of them sleep in the same room with you and Mr. Jackson?
A. I can’t really recall. I don’t remember.

Q. Did anyone ever share a bed with you and Mr. Jackson, where there were three of you in the same bed together?
A. Can’t really remember.
Q. Did your sister ever sleep with you in the same bed and Mr. Jackson?
A. Unfortunately, I can’t really remember that either.
Q. Do you know Wade Robson?
A. Yes.
Q. How well do you know Wade Robson?
A. Not very.
Q. Have you kept up some kind of friendship with Mr. Robson?
A. Nope.
Q. Is that a “no”?

A. That's a "no."
Q. When was the last time you spoke with Mr. Robson?
A. Today.
Q. All right. Today you saw him. When was the last time prior to today?
A. Yesterday.
Q. Okay. So you've been staying at Neverland, have you?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you have an opportunity to talk with Mr. Robson?

A. I had an opportunity, yeah. Yeah.
Q. And did you speak with Mr. Robson?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you discuss your testimony?
A. Absolutely not.
Q. And why not?
A. Because it was explained to us that we were not allowed to.
Q. Who was that who told you that?
A. The lawyers did.
Q. Did they say why you weren't allowed to?
A. Isn't it against the law?
Q. Is that what they told you, it was illegal to talk with each other?
A. No, they didn't. They just explained that it wasn't -- they just said, "Don't talk about the case."
Q. Were you aware of Wade Robson spending long periods of time with Michael Jackson?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Beyond the scope; relevance.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did Michael Jackson ever speak to you about other boys who spent nights with him in his room?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Beyond the scope; relevance; foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you ever talk with Michael Jackson about the propriety of sharing a bed with him?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Beyond the scope; foundation; and relevance.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead and answer the question.
A. Not that I recall.
Q. At no time did you ever have a conversation with Michael Jackson where the subject of the conversation was whether or not you should be sharing a bed with him?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. Did he ever tell you that you were like family to him?
A. All the time.
Q. All the time. Did he ever tell you that you should trust him?
A. Yeah.
Q. Did he ever tell you that he was like a father to you?
A. He may have, yes.
Q. Did he ever tell you that he considered you to be like a son to him?
A. Yes.
Q. Was that something he frequently said to you?

A. Not frequently.
Q. Was that something that he frequently said to you during the early stages of your relationship when you were about age eight?
A. Never met him when I was age eight.
Q. You were about nine?
A. Yeah.
Q. Okay. So how long after you had begun visiting Neverland did Mr. Jackson speak to you in such terms, tell you you were like family to him or like a son to him?
A. I couldn’t tell you.
Q. Did he ever have a conversation with your mother of that nature, tell your mother that he considered her to be like family to him as well?

A. Wouldn’t have a clue.
Q. That was never done in your presence?
A. Possibly. I don’t remember.
Q. Did your mother ever have a conversation with him about anything in your presence?
A. Quite possibly.
Q. Is it the case that when you were kids and running around Neverland, on occasion you would get fairly rowdy?
A. Nope.
Q. You were always fairly well disciplined and behaved?
A. I was brought up right.

Q. How about the other kids who were at Neverland while you were there?
A. As far as I remember, yeah, we were all pretty -- there were a couple maybe, but I never really saw an outbreak.
Q. You never saw what?
A. An outbreak.
Q. An outbreak?
Who were the other boys who were there about the time that you were there?
A. I saw Mac there, Macaulay Culkin. His -- Levon and Elijah. Frank, Eddie, Dominick --
Q. How old was Frank at the time?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. He hasn’t finished his answer yet, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.
A. Aldo. Marie Nicole. My sister, of course.
That’s all I really remember.
Q. Of the ones that you’ve mentioned, how many of them shared Michael Jackson’s bedroom while you were there?
A. All of them have.
Q. Did -- all of them?
A. I’m pretty sure.
Q. On how many nights do you think, all at the same time?
A. Not at the same time, because like one trip we'd see -- we saw Mac, and the other trips we saw everyone else.

Q. And would they share the same bed with you and Mr. Jackson?
A. I can't honestly recall that.
Q. Do you remember any of those people who you just mentioned sharing a bed with Mr. Jackson in your presence?
A. Yeah.
Q. Who?
A. Mac.
Q. Macaulay Culkin?
A. Yeah.
Q. Who else?
A. Frank.
Q. Frank Cascio?
A. Yeah.
Q. How old was Frank Cascio at the time?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. He hasn't finished his answer yet.
THE WITNESS: Eddie.
THE COURT: I can't tell if he has or not. Have you finished your answer?
THE WITNESS: No, I haven't.
THE COURT: Go ahead.
THE WITNESS: Eddie. That's probably -- that's all I can recall.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: "Eddie" is Eddie who?

A. Cascio.
Q. That's Frank's brother?
A. Yeah.
Q. How old was Frank at that time?
A. Wouldn't be able to tell you.
Q. Well, was he a child?
A. I never knew him as a child. He's -- he's older than me, so....
Q. You only know Frank Cascio as an adult?
A. No. He's like a year older, two years older than me.
Q. You said you never knew him as a child?

A. Well, as a child, I consider to be under the age of 10.

Q. How about as a young teenager?

A. Yeah.

Q. So you saw him there as a young teenager?

A. Yeah.

Q. Would he share Michael Jackson’s bed as well?

A. If I recall correctly, yeah.

Q. And Eddie, how old was Eddie during that time?

A. Like he’s -- it would have been a young teenager as well.

Q. What’s the longest period of time that any of those people stayed in Michael Jackson’s room while you were there? In other words, how many consecutive days did that happen?

A. Can’t recall properly.

Q. Did Michael Jackson ever tell you that he loved you?

A. Yeah, all the time.

Q. Did he ever touch you?

A. In what manner?

Q. Did he ever kiss you?

A. On the cheek, on the forehead, yeah.

Q. Often?

A. I wouldn’t say often, but, yeah. I’ve -- I can’t really remember these things. It’s not something that would -- you know, I would try to remember.

MR. ZONEN: I have no further questions.

MR. MESEREAU: I have no further questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.

I think we’ll start the next witness tomorrow.

(To the jury) I’ll see you tomorrow at 8:30. Remember the admonition. Have a good evening.

(The proceedings adjourned at 2:30 p.m.)

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Good morning, Miss Robson.

A. Good morning.

Q. Miss Robson, where is your home?

A. In Sherman Oaks, California.

Q. And do you know the fellow seated at counsel table to my right?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Who is he?

A. That’s Michael Jackson.

Q. How long have you known him?

A. 18 years.

Q. And how did you meet Mr. Jackson?

A. Originally, in Australia in --

Q. I think you need to speak up a little bit.

A. Sorry. In Australia. He was touring on the “Bad” tour, and my son Wade was five years old and won a Michael Jackson look-alike/dance-alike competition.

Q. Did you develop a friendship with Michael Jackson?

A. Not immediately. Two years later, we returned to the United States for -- Wade was dancing here, and we reassociated with him at that point, and became friends from there, from 1989.

Q. Are you still Michael Jackson’s friend?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Have you been to Neverland?

A. Many times.

Q. How many times do you think you visited Neverland?

A. I have no idea. We average about four times a year since we’ve lived in the United States, which is 14 years now, and quite a few times before that.

Q. Do you remember the first time you visited Neverland?

A. Yes. It was in January of 1990.

Q. And how did you end up visiting Neverland?

A. When we were here, we called around, trying to find Michael again. He had told us if we returned to the United States to contact him. So we called around, and we eventually were put onto his personal assistant, which at that time was Norma Stakos, and they called Michael.

He remembered us, and said he would like to see us again. So we met him at a recording studio where he was working at the time.

Q. And did you stay at Neverland on that first visit?

A. Yes, he invited us to stay that weekend, so we did. We went -- we were touring the United States, we were here on vacation as well. We went away for the week, and came back for the second weekend.

Q. Have you seen Michael Jackson’s bedroom at Neverland?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you first see Michael Jackson’s bedroom at Neverland?

A. That first weekend when we stayed with him.

Q. Ever stayed in that room yourself?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall your son staying in Michael Jackson’s room at Neverland?

A. Yes.

Q. And explain that, if you would.

A. Well, the first -- the first night they had been out doing the usual thing at Neverland, playing. And later that night, they all came back to the suite where my husband and I were staying, and my parents were with us, as well. We were all talking in the suite.

And Wade had been impersonating Michael for some time and had lots of costumes of Michael’s that we had made. And Michael was looking at them, and we were just all discussing those.

And then it was getting late, and my children said to me, both Chantel and Wade, my daughter, said, “Can we stay with Michael.”

And my husband and I sort of looked at Michael, and said, “Well, if that’s okay with you.”

And he said, “Oh, absolutely. If they’d like to stay, that’s fine.”

Q. And did you allow your son and daughter to stay in his room?

A. Yes.

Q. How many times do you think your son and daughter stayed in his room?

A. Many times. I have no idea.

Q. Did you ever have a problem with them doing that?

A. Not at all.

Q. Have you ever traveled with Mr. Jackson?

A. Only once. We went to Las Vegas with him.

Q. What was the purpose of that trip?

A. We went to see Siegfried & Roy.

Q. How did you get to Las Vegas for that trip?

A. We went on a private jet. I think it belonged to Steve Wynn. We were staying at The Mirage.

Q. And did you stay at The Mirage Hotel?

A. Yes.

Q. And where did you stay?

A. We had a penthouse suite. There were two bedrooms, and I stayed in one of them.

Q. And who stayed in the other room?

A. Michael and Wade sort of went between both rooms. He did stay in Michael’s room most of the time.

Q. And were you ever in Michael’s room on that trip?

A. Yes. As a matter of fact, we spent a whole day sitting in bed, the three of us, eating popcorn, watching cartoons.

Q. Ever see anything inappropriate happen on that trip?

A. Never.

Q. Ever see anything inappropriate happen at Neverland?

A. Never.

Q. Okay. When’s the last time you spoke to Michael Jackson?

A. Two weeks ago. We visited his children at Neverland.

Q. Okay. And do you consider yourselves friends of the family of Mr. Jackson?

A. We consider us very good friends, if not family.

Q. Okay. Did Mr. Jackson ever use the word “family” to describe you and your children?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Did you ever have any problem with that?

A. Never.

Q. Ever seen Mr. Jackson hug your children?

A. Mr. Jackson hugs everyone.

Q. Ever seen Mr. Jackson kiss your children on the cheek?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever have a problem with that?

A. No.

Q. Ever see Mr. Jackson hold any of your children by the hand?

A. I think so, yes.

Q. Did you ever have a problem with that?

A. No.

Q. Ever seen Mr. Jackson playing with your children?

A. Yes.

Q. And what did you see him do?

A. He’d play -- I’ve seen him play games, hide-and-seek. I’ve seen them climb trees. I’ve seen them play in the water fort at the ranch. They play constantly.

Q. Did you ever have any problem with any of that?

A. No. We all did it together often. We were -- all played together.

Q. How would you describe Neverland?

A. I would have once said the happiest place on earth. I -- I always felt that when we arrived at Neverland, you forgot all your problems, you forgot everything. It seemed like a world on its own. You would drive in there, and it was very serene, very peaceful, very beautiful. Inspirational. And everything was perfect when you drive out and reality would hit again.

Q. What did you like to do there?

MR. SNEDDON: Object as immaterial, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: What did you do at Neverland?

MR. SNEDDON: Object as immaterial.

MR. MESEREAU: They put an issue what Neverland’s all about, Your Honor.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: What did you do at Neverland?

A. We watched movies. I particularly liked the chimpanzees. I spent a lot of time playing with the chimps. All the animals, I enjoyed. We would play on the water fort. We’d drive the quads around the hills. Just a fun time always.

Q. And did you ever meet someone named Blanca Francia?

A. When you say “meet” her, I mean, I knew she was working there, and I basically would say “Good morning” to her if I saw her, but that would be the extent of it.

Q. Ever see your son in a shower with Michael Jackson?
A. No. Never.
Q. Ever seen the Jacuzzi at Neverland?
A. Yes.
Q. Ever been in it yourself?
A. Yes.
Q. How many times, do you think?
A. Oh. Maybe six or eight times.

Q. Now, to your knowledge, has your daughter ever been in Michael Jackson’s room at Neverland?
A. Yes.
Q. And did she ever stay over there, to your knowledge?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you have any problem with that?
A. Not at all.
MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.
THE COURT: Cross-examine?

CROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. SNEDDON:
Q. Good morning.
A. Good morning.
Q. Before you testified here today, did you review any documents?
A. I did review my testimony from the grand jury last time, and the civil suit.
Q. Mr. Feldman’s grand jury --
A. Yes.
Q. -- deposition?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Good. I just want to go back and see if we can discuss some of the things you testified about this morning.
As I recall, you first met the defendant at a dance contest in Australia, correct?

A. Correct.
Q. And that was in what year?

A. That was in 1987.

Q. And then your first trip to America was -- or maybe not the first trip, but in 1990, in January, you came here with the dance troupe, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And the time that you met Mr. Jackson in Australia was in connection with your son winning a dance contest?

A. Yes.

Q. And the occasion of you meeting Mr. Jackson was you were brought behind the stage with a lot of other people who were back there; is that right?

A. It was a meet-and-greet situation, yes.

Q. There wasn't a lot of substance to it?

A. No, it was just, "How are you? It's a pleasure to meet you," type of thing.

Q. Okay. And then the next time that you meet Mr. Jackson is when you come to the United States in January of 1990, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And when you came here, there were no arrangements when you first came here to meet with Mr. Jackson?

A. No.

Q. And it was as a result of you making contact with Norma Stakos that you were able to make contact with Mr. Jackson, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you were invited up to the ranch, as I understand it, for a weekend?

A. Correct.

Q. So you weren't there for an entire week?

A. No.

Q. Just for the weekend?

A. Yes.

Q. And when you went there for the weekend, the first night, your son and daughter spent the night in Mr. Jackson's bedroom, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, as I understand it, then, this was only the second time that you had met Mr. Jackson; is that correct?

A. Yes.
Q. And the first time you’d really met him on a one-on-one personal basis, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And how old was your son at this time?
A. When we were at Neverland?
Q. Yes, ma’am.
A. He was seven.
Q. Seven. How old was your daughter?
A. Ten.
Q. So your son and your daughter spent the first night with Mr. Jackson, and this was really the first night you’d ever met Mr. Jackson, that’s correct, on a substantive level?

A. Well, basically we’d spent the day with him, yes.
Q. That was the first time?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, did you know that your son and daughter spent the night with Mr. Jackson in his bed?
A. They did not.
Q. They did not.
A. They slept on the mezzanine level.
Q. That’s your belief?
A. That’s what they had told me.
Q. So that -- if your son testified here in trial yesterday that he slept in the same bed with Michael Jackson with his sister, that would be inconsistent with what he told you before?
A. That was the second night.
Q. I’m asking you the first night.
A. Well, that’s -- what I’ve been told by my daughter and my son was the first night they slept on the mezzanine level.
Q. So it would be correct that if your son testified to that yesterday, that on the first night he and his sister slept with Mr. Jackson in Mr. Jackson’s bed, that statement would be inconsistent with what they had told you before?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Improper question, referring to the testimony.
THE COURT: I’ll sustain the objection.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: The second night your daughter did not stay with Mr. Jackson?

A. She did.

Q. The second night also?

A. Yes.

Q. Both nights?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall telling Mr. Feldman during the deposition that on the second night your daughter did not stay with the defendant?

A. Yes, as a matter of fact, when I read that testimony, and my daughter has told me since that my memory was incorrect, that she did stay.

Q. So you're basing your testimony here today on something your daughter told you as opposed to what you recall when you were under oath in a deposition?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, is it your testimony that your husband was present during the first visit?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you go back for a second weekend?

A. Yes.

Q. And was there a weekend between, or more than one week in between?

A. There was a week in between.

Q. So it was the following weekend you went back?

A. Yes.

Q. And when you went back on that occasion, who was present from your family?

A. My husband, my daughter, my son, and my parents.

Q. Now, on the occasion of the first visit, were your husband and your parents with you?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall testifying at a deposition that your parents and your husband were in San Francisco on a trip the first time you visited the ranch?

A. No, they went -- we were all there for the weekend. They left -- we all left and went to San -- no, they went to San Francisco the second week. We went back to Los Angeles with Michael.

Q. The question was, do you recall testifying to that?

A. I wouldn't have testified to that.

Q. Okay. Now, during that first visit, the first weekend that you were at the ranch, did the subject of your son going on a trip to Japan come up?

A. Yes.

Q. So this would have been on the first day or the second day?

A. I don't recall, I'm sorry.

Q. One of those two days, in any case?

A. Possibly.

Q. And the subject of the conversation was that you had agreed to allow your son to accompany Mr. Jackson on a trip to Japan if they wanted to go, correct?

A. I think we talked about it.

Q. Well, did you agree to allow him to go with Mr. Jackson on a trip to Japan?

A. I can't remember really. I think I may have, but we decided not to.

Q. Mr. Jackson decided he would rather spend time with your son than go to Japan?

A. I think the decision was Wade preferred to stay here. Stay at Neverland.

Q. So it wasn't Mr. Jackson's decision. It was Wade's decision?

A. It was Wade's decision.

Q. Do you recall testifying in the deposition with Mr. Feldman that that was Mr. Jackson's decision to decide not to go to Japan, because he wanted to stay and have the time with your son?

A. I think what happened was that Wade was given the choice.

MR. SNEDDON: Move to strike, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Stricken.

THE WITNESS: I don't remember testifying to that.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: During the first weekend trip to Neverland, did you go to Toys-R-Us?

A. No.
Q. Was that the second weekend?
A. I never went to Toys-R-Us.
Q. Did your children go to Toys-R-Us?
A. Yes.
Q. Which one of those weekends did they go?
A. I don't recall.
Q. But you do recall a trip?
A. Yes.
Q. And they went with Mr. Jackson?
A. Yes.
Q. And it was after hours, the store was closed?
A. I don't remember.
Q. And they were allowed to buy anything -- or allowed to get anything they wanted and Mr. Jackson paid for it, correct?
A. I think so.
Q. So as I understand it, then, it's your testimony that if Mr. Jackson had wanted to go to Japan with your son, on this first time that you'd met him, that you would have allowed that?
A. I doubt that --
Q. You had agreed to that?

A. I don't think so. I don't think I would have agreed to that.
Q. Do you recall testifying in your deposition that you had agreed to allow him to go to Japan?
A. No.
Q. You had decided early on in your son's career, or life, actually, that you wanted to get him into the entertainment business, correct?
A. He decided. Not me.
Q. Well, he was five years old.
A. Yes. He made that decision at five.
Q. At five. It was all his decision?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And you were going to do everything you could as a good mother to try to support that decision, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And you felt that your having a good relationship or connection with the defendant in this case could promote that career; isn’t that correct?

A. That’s -- you’re putting words in my mouth. I’ve never said that.

Q. I didn’t ask you whether you said it or not. I asked you if that’s what you were thinking.

A. No.

Q. You weren’t thinking that at all?

A. Not at all.

Q. You weren’t thinking that Mr. Jackson could help propel your son in an entertainment career?

A. That was not my motive.

Q. I -- I’m not trying to --

A. Yes, you are.

Q. -- demean your motives.

No, I’m not, ma’am. I’m asking a simple question. Did you, in your mind, think that by having a friendship and a connection with Mr. Jackson that could help promote your son’s career?

A. I can’t answer that, because I don’t think that that -- you’re make -- you’re trying to make me say that that was my basis for our friendship, and that’s not true.

MR. SNEDDON: Move to strike as nonresponsive.

THE COURT: Stricken.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: I asked you a question about whose decision it was to cancel the trip to Japan. And I asked you if it was, in fact, Mr. Jackson -- that you had stated previously in your testimony it was Mr. Jackson, and you said you had no recollection of that, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you have a chance to review your deposition for Mr. Feldman prior to coming to court here today?

A. I don’t remember reading that.

Q. Would it help you to refresh your recollection if I showed you the deposition?

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: With the Court’s permission, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You may.

MR. SNEDDON: Or Mr. Mesereau? Bob?

MR. MESEREAU: That’s okay.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: The procedure is you just read that to yourself quietly, and then I’ll ask you a question, okay? And I want to direct your attention to page 181, and from lines 4 to line 9. And you can read anything else you want.

A. Okay.

Q. Having read that, does that refresh your recollection as to whose idea it was to cancel the trip to Japan?

A. Well, it says that Wade was given the choice, and Wade preferred to stay at Neverland.

Q. It says, “After the first weekend that we were there, he cancelled the trip because he wanted to stay and spend some time with us,” does it not?

A. If you read further down.

Q. Yeah, it says, “But he asked to go on this trip with your son,” and “I offered to let Wade go with him”?

A. Further.

Q. Do you want me to read the whole thing?

A. No, just a couple, few more lines.

Q. It doesn’t get any better.

A. Just a few more lines. It will say exactly what I said.

Q. And then Wade had a choice of going to Japan or staying at Neverland, and he chose to stay?

A. Yeah. That’s what I said, Wade was given the choice. And he decided to stay at Neverland.

Q. But it was the defendant’s choice not to go to Japan, as you testified.

A. He had a business trip and he cancelled it, and because Wade decided to stay at Neverland, but it was Wade’s choice.

Q. Thank you.

After this trip, you went back to Australia, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And before we get to when you come back, which I think is in May of 1990, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. I want to ask you a few things about the tour of the house. And when you went to the house at Neverland Ranch, did you go throughout the entire house?

A. The first trip?

Q. Yes, ma’am.

A. Actually, yes.

Q. So you were shown the entire house?

A. Yes.

Q. Including Mr. Jackson’s bedroom?

A. Well, actually, we arrived before Mr. Jackson, my parents and I. And Mark Quindoy showed us through the house.

Q. Okay.

A. I don’t think we went into Michael’s bedroom initially.

Q. At some point during that tour or during that weekend, did you go into Mr. Jackson’s bedroom?

A. Yes.

Q. When you go into Mr. Jackson’s bedroom, you walk down a hallway before you get to the entrance to the door to his bedroom, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And as you go down that hallway and you approach the door, a little chime goes off, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And the door cannot be opened from the outside, correct, it’s locked?

A. I think so, yes. From memory.

Q. Now, when you went through the rest of the house, did you find any chimes that went off in any of the other rooms in the house?

A. No.

Q. And it’s true, is it not, that none of the other doors in the house had locks on them?

A. There was no one else staying in any of the other rooms.

Q. No, I asked you whether there were any other rooms in the house where you had to have somebody from inside open the door in order to get into the room?

A. No.

Q. So you were aware of the fact that at the time that you allowed your children to sleep with Mr. Jackson on the first day or night that you met him, that those children were going to be in a location which you could not get to without somebody from the inside opening the door, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there something funny about that?

A. I just -- it’s not a problem.

Q. I can understand. You weren’t concerned about it at all?

A. Not at all.

Q. Somebody you just met?

A. I -- I think there’s a certain trust that we developed immediately. Nothing ever crossed my mind that there would be a problem there.

Q. In May, when you came back, it was for the purpose of your son participating in an L.A. Gear commercial?

A. Yes.

Q. And who arranged for him to be in that commercial?

A. Michael.

Q. And Mr. Jackson paid his way over here, correct?

A. L.A. Gear paid.

Q. And how did you -- how was yours paid?

A. L.A. Gear. He was a minor.

Q. L.A. Gear paid for that?

A. Yes, they have to if a minor’s working.

Q. Do you recall testifying at your deposition that that was paid for by Mr. Jackson?

A. I testified that L.A. Gear paid for it. I read that when I reviewed it.

Q. Now, at the time that you came over here for the L.A. Gear commercial, you were staying in The Holiday Inn?

A. Yes. In Westwood.

Q. And you were here for approximately six weeks?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Jackson had a condo right across the street?

A. Yes.

Q. And you testified before, I believe, that during that six-week period on at least half of the occasions that your son was with Mr. Jackson in Mr. Jackson’s bedroom in that condo, correct?

A. I think so.

Q. And on a couple of those occasions, you actually were in the condo with them and you and your daughter, or you, slept on the floor; do you recall that?

A. I think that was the first trip that my daughter and I slept on the floor. It wasn’t during that time.

Q. The first trip back in January?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there a time that you visited Mr. Jackson in his condo in January?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, these visits to The Holiday -- these visits to Mr. Jackson when you were staying at The Holiday Inn, many of those calls from Mr. Jackson were very late at night; isn’t that correct?

A. Yes, he was working.

MR. SNEDDON: Move to strike as nonresponsive, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I’ll strike the last -- after “Yes.”

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: And he would call, and on some occasions you would walk your son across the street, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you’d leave him there and go back to the hotel?

A. Yes.

Q. And there was just he and Mr. Jackson together?

A. Yes.

Q. And you knew that at that particular point in time, that he was sleeping with Mr. Jackson in Mr. Jackson’s bed, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. When you came over to make the L.A. Gear commercial, did your husband come with you?

A. No.
Q. At this point in time, were you and your husband separated?
A. No.
Q. And your daughter didn’t come with you?
A. No. She was in school.
Q. Okay. Now, during the six-month period, I want to just concentrate on the period that we’re talking about, the May visit, you also visited the ranch on occasion, did you not?
A. Yes.
Q. And when you visited the ranch on those occasions, you slept in the guest cottage, correct?
A. No, I slept in the house.
Q. And where in the house?
A. In the rose bedroom. In the rose bedroom.
Q. Okay. And your son slept with Mr. Jackson?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, do you recall an incident that occurred on Mother’s Day during 1990 on a trip to the ranch?

A. Yes.
Q. And you were upset, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And you were crying at one point?
A. Yes.
Q. And the reason for that was that you had not seen your son all day, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And it was Mother’s Day?
A. That’s right.
Q. And you found out that the reason that you hadn’t seen your son that day was because he had been sleeping all day, correct?
A. I think so. Yeah.
Q. And you spoke to some people at the ranch about your feelings, did you not, one of the employees?
A. I think someone asked me if I was okay.
Q. And you told them that you felt that your son would rather be with Michael Jackson than with you, correct?
A. I don’t remember saying that.

Q. Do you know somebody by the name of Charli Michaels?

A. Yes.

Q. And who is Charli Michaels?

A. I think she worked security at the ranch.

Q. And did you tell Charli Michaels that you felt that the defendant, Michael Jackson, was separating you from your son?

A. I don't recall saying it.

Q. Do you recall testifying to that in your deposition with Mr. Feldman?

A. No.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I showed you a copy of the deposition?

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: May I approach, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Does that refresh your recollection?

A. I don't remember saying it, but I testified to it.

Q. I'm sorry?

A. I said I don't remember saying it, but obviously I testified back then about it. I don't remember saying it.

Q. You said that Wade would rather be with Michael than with yourself and you were upset about it?

A. Well, I read it, but I honestly don't remember saying it.

Q. At the time that you were at the ranch on the first occasions that you were there, to your knowledge, did Michael Jackson have a personal maid?

A. Yes.

Q. And who was that?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember meeting anybody by the name of Blanca Francia?

A. I remember her being there. I think she did clean Michael's room, I think.

Q. Now, during the time that you -- let me just go through this real quickly so we can get up to the time frame involved here.

You came back in May of 1990, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were here for six weeks, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you came back again in February of 1991, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. For about seven days?

A. Yes.

Q. And during the time that you were here in 1991, you spent time on the ranch, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You and your son?

A. Yes.

Q. And then in September 1991 -- well, let me go back. When you came here in February of 1991 for seven days, did your husband come with you?

A. No.

Q. When you visited in September of 1991, you came permanently, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You had no intention of going back to Australia?

A. No.

Q. And you had your son and your daughter with you?

A. Yes.

Q. And your husband did not come?

A. No.

Q. And at that point you had been separated from your husband?

A. Yes.

Q. And then from that point, from September of 1991 up till, let’s just say, September 1993 - okay? - the time frame involved, you and your son spent a great deal of time with Michael Jackson, you were around him a lot, correct?

A. I don’t think so.

Q. You were not at the ranch on a number of occasions during 1991?

A. My memory is in the entire time we’ve lived here since 1991, we've only been at the ranch with Michael on four occasions in 14 years.

Q. Four occasions?
A. Every other time we've been here without him.

Q. Would that be the same for your son?
A. Yes.
Q. So --
A. He came one -- all the time by himself.
Q. You testified that you've been out at the ranch on an average of about four times?
A. Four times a year, but Michael was never there.
Q. Was that all the way through today?
A. Yes.
Q. He's never there when you go there?
A. Very rarely. I can only remember four times in 14 years that we've been there with him since we have lived here.
Q. So when you were testifying for Mr. Mesereau and you were talking about ever seeing any inappropriate touching, there were only on four occasions that you were even at the ranch to see anything, correct?
A. Since we've lived here, 1991.
Q. You didn't see anything before that, did you?
A. No.
Q. Do you recall having a conversation in which you -- with June Chandler? Do you know who June Chandler is?
A. Yes.
Q. June Chandler is whom?

A. Jordie Chandler's mother.
Q. You've met June Chandler?
A. Yes.
Q. You've met Jordan Chandler?
A. Yes.
Q. Jordan Chandler was at Neverland Valley Ranch at the same time as your son, correct?
A. We were all there together on one weekend.
Q. Okay. And do you recall testifying to a situation in which your son, Wade, was upset because Jordan Chandler was going to spend the night in Michael Jackson’s room and Wade had to stay with you in the guest cottage?

A. I don’t remember that. I remember reading it in my testimony, but I don’t remember him being upset.

Q. Maybe I’ll use a different word. Disappointed?

A. Possibly.

Q. But you do remember the incident?

A. No.

Q. You don’t?

A. No.

Q. So when you said you read your transcript, it’s in your transcript, right?

A. I read it in the transcript, but it’s 12 years ago. I don’t remember it.

Q. I understand. Do you have any reason to believe that you would testify to something under oath in a deposition that wasn’t true at the time that you said it?

A. No, I just don’t remember it now.

Q. Okay. Do you recall a conversation in which you told June Chandler that some day Jordan was going to be replaced by another one of Michael Jackson’s friends?

A. Yes.

Q. And you referred to these people as “special friends,” correct?

A. According to my transcript, yes.

Q. You don’t ever remember using that phrase now?

A. No.

Q. But you did use it in your transcript back in 1993?

A. Yes.

Q. And in a conversation you told June Chandler that with these special friends, that when Mr. Jackson moves on to the next special friend, that it has a tremendous emotional impact on the children when they’re no longer the favorite, correct?

A. As does everybody when they lose a friend.

Q. I’m sorry?
A. As does everyone if you lose a friend or a friend becomes friendly with somebody else.
Q. Did you not, in that conversation, specifically refer to the situation where a young child was a friend of Mr. Jackson’s and is replaced by another young child and that that has -- and you were reflecting upon the emotional problems it creates for that child?

A. Yes.
Q. Now, during the time that you were at the ranch -- you described a situation this morning for the jury, you told them that when you go to Neverland it’s like walking through a door and you forget all your worries and all your cares.
A. Yes.
Q. That’s a paraphrase so....
Now, it’s also true that what happens at Neverland Ranch, is it not, that when children come on the ranch, they sort of lose all of their rules and guidelines for conduct?
A. Well, that depends on the child.
Q. Okay. With regard to the time you were at the ranch, the children that you saw were your son --
A. Yes.
Q. -- correct?
And your daughter, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And you saw Jordan Chandler, correct?
A. Once.
Q. And you saw Macaulay Culkin?

A. I don’t think I’ve been there with Macaulay Culkin.
Q. Brett Barnes?
A. I’ve never been there with Brett.
Q. With regard to the conduct of your son when he was on the ranch, did he get carried away, do things there that he didn’t do other places in terms of manners?
A. No.
Q. He was perfectly --

A. My son was always respectful, always considered it a privilege to be there.

Q. Did he ever do anything that you would think that would not be a good thing to do?

A. Not that I'm aware of.

Q. Are you aware that he was throwing pebbles or rocks at the lions with Mr. Jackson?

A. I think that's been paraphrased. I think what they did is they threw them at the cage, not the lion.

MR. SNEDDON: Move to strike as nonresponsive, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Overruled. Next question.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: So you make a distinction between throwing them at the cage and the lion itself?

A. Absolutely. They were just trying to make the lion roar. All it did was make a noise.

Q. I see. How about -- does your son ride the go-carts there?

A. Go-carts or the golf carts?

Q. The golf carts.

A. Yes.

Q. Ever have any problems with getting in any accidents while he was there or driving too fast or being admonished for driving too fast?

A. He may have been admonished for driving fast. He was never in an accident.

Q. The other children that I've mentioned, did you seem them acting out at all at Neverland Ranch?

A. I heard stories. I've never seen it.

Q. Now, when you testified about Mr. Jackson and his special friends in your deposition, you mentioned that the first of the ones that you knew about was your son Wade in 1990, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And then in 1991 was Macaulay Culkin, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And in 1992, Brett Barnes, correct?

A. I think so.

Q. And then in 1993, towards the end, was Jordan Chandler, correct?

A. Yes.
Q. With regard to Brett Barnes, you went to Chicago with your -- or I should ask you this: Did you go to Chicago with your son to shoot a commercial?

A. A music video, yes.
Q. And did you go there?
A. Yes.
Q. And with your son?
A. Yes.
Q. And did you meet Brett Barnes there?
A. Yes.
Q. And was Brett Barnes with the defendant?
A. Yes.
Q. And in fact, Brett Barnes was staying with the defendant in the defendant’s room, correct?
A. I don’t know.
Q. Did you see whether or not -- did you meet any of the Barnes’ parents there?
A. His mother and his sister were there on the set.
Q. You sure of that?
A. Yes.
Q. And was it your -- you became aware of the fact that Mr. Jackson referred to some of these young boys as his cousins, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And you were asked why Mr. Jackson referred to them as his cousins, correct?
A. I was asked?
Q. Didn’t you say that Mr. Jackson used the term “cousins” because he didn’t want the kids to get jealous of each other?

A. Yes.
Q. Now, do you recall an incident that occurred where you were supposed to catch a plane and you couldn’t find your son?
A. Yes.
Q. And the fact is that you hadn’t seen or heard from your son for two or three days?
A. I think two.
Q. And he had been with Mr. Jackson during that entire time; correct?

A. Yes.
Q. And I believe what you said was you were upset and you were hurt by this, correct?
A. I don’t remember that.
Q. You called a number of people trying to locate your son, correct?
A. I was trying to call Michael, and he was in the recording studio, not answering, not receiving phone calls. And I think I called Neverland to see if they had gone to Neverland.
Q. Well, you called Neverland and you got the Quindoy -- Mr. Quindoy, correct?
A. I don’t remember.
Q. Do you know who Mr. Quindoy is?
A. Yes.
Q. And you were very upset and wanted your son to be returned so he could make the flight?

A. I called to ask if they perhaps were at Neverland. That’s all I remember.
Q. You don’t remember saying that you needed your son returned, that you were very upset and you were going to miss the plane?
A. No, I don’t.
Q. Did you call Norma Stakos trying to locate your son?
A. Yes.
Q. So just to recap just a little bit, when you were in Las Vegas, you went there by jet. Do you know whose jet that was?
A. Steve Wynn.
Q. I’m sorry?
A. Steve Wynn’s jet.
Q. Steve Wynn. And you went to a hotel?
A. Yes.
Q. Which is The Mirage?
A. Mirage.
Q. And you stayed in a suite?
A. Yes.
Q. And except for the night -- or the day when you all stayed in bed watching cartoons, eating popcorn, your son slept with Mr. Jackson and you slept in the other room?

A. It was one night, yes.

Q. And now, when you came to the United States in 1991, in September, you came here on a -- originally you came here on a visa, temporary visa?

A. A six-month visitor's visa.

Q. Okay. And your goal was to stay here permanently?

A. Yes.

Q. And your goal was that you came because Mr. Jackson had indicated to you that he was going to help your son in his career, correct?

A. I'm not sure about that.

Q. Do you remember testifying in your deposition that the defendant had arranged deals for Wade with his -- Sony records, Sony movies and Sony T.V.?

A. No, that came after the fact. After we'd been here. He didn't promise anything when we came. He actually came to work on the "Black and White" video.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, move to strike the comments. No question pending.

MR. MESEREAU: I'll object, Your Honor, the prosecutor didn't allow her to complete her answer.

THE COURT: Sustained. The request to strike is denied.

MR. MESEREAU: May the witness be allowed to complete her answer, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

Do you want your answer read back as far as you gave it?

THE WITNESS: No.

He came here originally in 1991 to work on the "Black or White" video, and we stayed after that. That was the reason for coming in the first place.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Okay. I want to ask it again, just to be clear.

Did Mr. Jackson tell you, before you left Australia, that he would help you in any way he could with his record company, his movie company, and his television company, and these were three deals that he had organized with Sony, correct?

A. There were no deals organized. He did say he would do what he could to help, but there were no deals organized.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if you looked at your testimony before the grand jury?

A. There were no deals. If I testified -- I don't think I would have testified to that.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if you looked at it to see whether you testified to that?

A. Yes.

Okay.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection as to what you told the grand jury?

A. No. I don't remember that.

Q. You don't remember telling them that he'd organized three deals for your son?

A. Well, he didn't, so I don't remember it.

Q. But that's what you said?

A. I don't know what I meant there. There was nothing organized.

Q. Did you say in the grand jury that you considered these arrangements to be a personal commitment from Mr. Jackson directly to you?

A. No.

Q. You didn't say that?

A. I don't remember saying that. There was no commitment.

MR. SNEDDON: May I approach, Your Honor?

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I showed you your testimony before the grand jury?

A. Yes.

THE COURT: Yes, you may approach.

MR. SNEDDON: May I approach?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: It's just one line. Or two lines.

Does that refresh your recollection as to what you told the Santa Barbara County Grand Jury?

A. No.

Q. It does not at all?

A. No.

Q. But you did say that?

A. Obviously I did. I have no memory of it.

Q. And when you came here in September 1991, Mr. Jackson also helped you with some rent for the first month, correct?
A. That was part of the video -- you're always housed when you come to work on a music video.
Q. I think the question was did Mr. Jackson pay for your rent the first month you were here?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, when you came here in September, you also went to work for MJJ Productions, correct?
A. No.
Q. You -- let's see if I get this right. You had a job in a -- cosmetics?
A. Yes.
Q. And because you were here on a certain kind of visa, they couldn't pay you; is that correct?
A. They did pay me, but they paid me through Michael Jackson's company.
Q. So your checks were from MJJ Productions?
A. Well, that makes it sound like MJJ Productions was paying me. They were not.
Q. I just -- the question was, the checks came from MJJ Productions?
A. They were diverted through Michael Jackson's company.
Q. In other words, your company would pay them the money, and then Mr. Jackson's company would pay you the money?

A. Yes.
Q. Just in all fairness. I'm not trying to trick you.
A. Okay.
Q. And that arrangement was worked out with the approval and the help of Mr. Jackson, correct?
A. I think so. I'm -- I mean, I didn't speak to him about it. I spoke to Norma Stakos about it.
Q. Do you recall telling and testifying to the fact that what actually happened in September of 1991 is that Mr. Jackson was your sponsor when you came to the United States with your son?
A. Not initially. We were here for six months and then he offered, he offered to sponsor after we arrived.

Q. You mentioned to this jury that at some point in time, you realized that your son was spending time in bed with Mr. Jackson, correct, sleeping in the same bed with Mr. Jackson?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And in fact, you indicated in prior testimony that you realized that and knew that early on in the relationship between your son and Mr. Jackson, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. We’re almost done. Let’s fast-forward a little bit to 1993. You were -- you were at the ranch in 1993 and Jordan Chandler was there, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And in 1993, that was the occasion of you having the conversation with Mrs. Chandler that you’ve described to the ladies and gentlemen of the jury previously, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And during this particular point in time, not January, but in 1993, at some point, your son was in the process of putting together an album deal where he -- he or somebody with him would cut some records, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And the negotiations began on that deal when?

A. From memory, June of ‘93.

Q. And I think you described that process as about a six-month process?

A. Well, it varies. But that one took that long, yes.

Q. And the deal was finally signed on December 6th, 1993, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And the deal was signed with -- with MJJ Productions, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And in the deal, your son -- not your son -- the total deal was for $100,000, correct?

A. The production company.

Q. Right. And your son’s share of that was $30,000?

A. Correct.

Q. And 15,000 of that was given as an advance?

A. I think so.

Q. And this was in December of 1993, correct?

A. I don’t really remember. I think according to the transcripts that’s what it said.

Q. And you took -- well, let me go back. There was a period of time -- where were you on Thanksgiving? Do you remember where you went Thanksgiving? Did you go to New York Thanksgiving?

A. I read the transcript. We were in New York recording.

Q. Okay. With who?

A. With the production company and they were recording for the album.

Q. Okay. And up until the point of Thanksgiving of 1993, the record deal had not been finalized yet between your son and their representatives and Mr. Jackson’s company, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And there had been -- there had been some delay in the signing of the contracts, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And one of the things that had happened in between the time that you first started negotiating the contracts in June or July and December 6 when you finally signed the contract with Mr. Jackson’s company was that Jordan Chandler had gone to the Department of Social Services in the Los Angeles District Attorney’s Office and reported that he’d been molested by Michael Jackson, correct?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Objection; assumes facts not in evidence.

MR. SNEDDON: I’m asking what she’s aware of, Your Honor, and it has to do with motive and bias.

THE COURT: Just a moment.

MR. MESEREAU: No foundation.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

You may answer.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: You were aware of that, were you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And in fact -- well, let me ask you this: You know a person, or knew a person by the name of Anthony Pellicano, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Pellicano was Mr. Jackson's private investigator, correct?

A. Correct.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: And Mr. Pellicano was the one who was holding up the deal, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. He told you that?

A. Yes.

Q. And the deal was finally signed on December 6th because the defendant intervened and said, "Go ahead and sign the deal," correct?

A. Correct.

Q. In the meantime, Mr. Pellicano had given you a $12,000 loan, correct?

A. 10,000.

Q. 10,000, you're right. Absolutely. Pardon me. $10,000 loan?

A. Correct.

Q. And did you ever repay that?

A. Yes.

Q. When?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you have any proof?

A. Probably. I don't remember when it was.

Q. When's the last time you saw Mr. Pellicano?

A. I haven't seen him since. I have not seen him since '93.

Q. Since '93. So it's your testimony you paid him back in '93?

A. It was sometime after that.

Q. Mr. Pellicano was Mr. Jackson's investigator and you had at least four conversations with him, interviews, you and your son, correct?

A. Probably.

Q. And that was after Mr. Jackson got back in December of 1993?

A. I don’t remember.

Q. You were asked by Mr. Feldman to give a statement to an investigator, and you refused -- for his office, and you refused to do that, didn’t you?

A. I don’t remember. I’m sorry.

Q. Do you remember the Los Angeles Police Department coming to your apartment?

A. Yes.

Q. And you didn’t give them a statement either, did you?

A. Yes.

Q. You gave them a very brief one and then said you had to go somewhere. Isn’t that what happened?

A. No, they were trying to interview Wade without me and I told them they were not to do that.

Q. Was there some concern on your part that trained law enforcement officers shouldn’t talk to somebody who could possibly be a suspect (sic) of a crime?

A. I was concerned of manipulation.

Q. That the consequence, law enforcement would manipulate your son?

A. Absolutely.

Q. You felt that your son could be manipulated easily?

A. No, but I wasn’t going to take that chance. He was ten.

Q. You weren’t concerned about the fact that the defendant in this case, Mr. Jackson, might manipulate your son?

A. No concern at all that he would manipulate my son.

Q. But two law enforcement officers, you thought they would?

A. Possibly. I don’t know them. I know Mr. Jackson.

Q. Okay. Now, you received another -- you received actually a loan from Mr. Jackson for $10,000 in 1992, correct?

A. Yes.
Q. You never paid that one back?
A. No.
Q. And did you receive another loan from Mr. Jackson after the record contract was signed?
A. I don’t think so.
Q. Do you recall telling an investigator that you had gotten a loan from Mr. Jackson for $10,000 and you tried to buy a car? Do you remember that?
A. He paid -- he paid for the balance of the car.
Q. Mr. Jackson did?
A. Yes.

Q. That was $10,000?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, in December of 1993, after the allegations with Jordan Chandler had surfaced, Mr. Jackson came back to the United States, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And on -- to your knowledge, on the very first night he was back he called your son, correct?
A. He called me.
Q. He called you?
A. I think so. From memory.
Q. Do you remember testifying that you weren’t at the house when the call was made, that you were out with some ladies?
A. I do remember reading that, I’m sorry.
Q. So you weren’t there?
A. Possibly.
Q. You came home, and then both of you, late in the night, drove to Neverland Valley Ranch, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. When you got to Neverland Valley Ranch, it was about 1:30 in the morning, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. When you got there, you went to the guest quarters and your son went to Mr. Jackson’s bedroom, correct?
A. I don’t remember where I slept, but he did go to Michael’s bedroom.

Q. But he went inside the house?

A. Yes.

Q. Where was your son going to school when school started in September of 1993?

A. I think he was doing home schooling by then.

Q. Do you remember him at some point in time going to school with a family named the Kennedys?

A. No.

Q. He had a close friend?

A. No.

Q. Do you remember a young boy by the name of Teja, T-e-j-a?

A. No.

Q. Is the reason that you took your son out of school because the kids at school had found out that he had been sleeping with Michael Jackson and they were making cruel statements about him?

A. I took Wade out of school after the fourth grade. He was -- it was before any of this surfaced.

Q. So he was not in school during the fifth and sixth grades in the valley?

A. Never been in school in the valley.

MR. SNEDDON: Okay. May I have a moment? Excuse me just a second, Your Honor, I'm trying to find a report.

Okay, let's just do it this way. Ahh, here it is.

Q. Kenneth Clark, I'm sorry. Do you know Kenneth Clark.

A. No.

Q. You don't remember Kenneth Anthony Clark being a good friend of your son's?

A. Never heard of him.

Q. Did your son ever go to Garden Street School in West Hollywood?

A. He went there for the fourth grade.

Q. Just the fourth grade?

A. Yes.

Q. Not the fourth, fifth and sixth grades?

A. No. He started with Laurel Springs School when he was -- when he got the record deal.

Q. Yeah, 1993.

A. He was fifth grade.

Q. So it’s your testimony that your son was only there in the fourth grade?

A. From memory. Maybe part of fifth.

Q. And is your testimony that your son never received -- that the home school didn’t start at Laurel Springs because of the fact that your son was being teased at school because people found out he was sleeping in bed with Mr. Michael Jackson?

A. He’s never been teased at school. He started home-schooling because he was a recording artist and could not be in school. He was traveling.

Q. I just asked you is that the case?

A. That’s the absolute case.

MR. SNEDDON: Okay. Thank you. No further questions.

THE COURT: Redirect?

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, please, Your Honor.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Miss Robson, in response to the prosecutor’s questions with regard to manipulation you said, “I know Mr. Jackson.” Do you remember saying that?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Please tell the jury what you meant by that.

A. Well, I’ve known Michael for a long time. I know him very well. I’ve spent many hours talking to him about everything. I feel like he’s a member of my family. I know him very well. I trust him. I trust him with my children.

Q. Why?

A. Because Michael is a very special person. Unless you know him, it’s hard to understand. He’s not the boy next door. He’s Michael Jackson. He’s very -- he’s just a very unique personality. He loves children. And he has a very pure love for children. And to know him is to love him and to trust him.

Q. And when did you begin to know Michael Jackson?

A. I felt like I knew him from the very beginning. He just has that wonderful way of making you feel at home; that I felt like I knew him very early on.

But particularly in the two years when we were living in Australia before we moved here, and I talked to him every day. We had very long conversations about everything that was going on in his life and my life and my children's lives. And you get to know someone very well when you talk to someone several hours a day over a two-year period.

And then once we moved here, too, we continued that. We've always been able to talk about just about anything.

Q. Now, the prosecutor asked you about Mother's Day at Neverland?

A. Yes.

Q. Remember that?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And you learned that Wade and Mr. Jackson were in a recording studio that day, correct?

A. Not that day. That was -- that was the time that we were staying in Westwood, and Wade and I had our ticket booked to return to Australia. And he had been at the recording studio with Michael for a couple of days, and I just hadn't heard from them. I know that they were working long hours, and then they'd take off again the next day. And I was getting --

MR. SNEDDON: Move to strike as a narrative, Your Honor. Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember anything else about that day at the recording studio?

A. No, just -- I had called Norma looking for him, and she found them. She said they were in the recording studio and, "Michael is bringing him back to you. They're on their way."

Q. To your knowledge, did your son spend a lot of time with Michael Jackson at recording studios?

A. Often, yes.

Q. And why was that?

A. Because Wade was interested in being a recording artist, he was interested in being a producer. He was learning. He loved to be around that and absorb that. He was like a sponge. And he -- that was the relationship that he and Michael had. It was -- a lot of it was a working relationship and Michael was teaching him.

Q. Now, the prosecutor asked you questions suggesting that you were allowing your son to be with Michael just to further his career. Is that true?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. What do you mean?

A. He was -- as I say, he was learning things from Michael. Michael was teaching him everything he knew, and he couldn’t -- that was part of the friendship, but it was more of a friendship than anything else. And I certainly never asked Michael for anything where my son’s career was concerned. I believe in my son, and I moved here for him to further his career. I believed that he could do that.

MR. SNEDDON: Objection, Your Honor, narrative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you allow your son to spend time with Michael Jackson learning the entertainment business?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Why did you do that?

A. Because he was learning from the best. Michael offered to teach him everything he could. He believed in him, so why would I not?

Q. Now, your son has had a pretty successful entertainment career so far, right?

A. He has.

Q. And has he worked exclusively with Michael Jackson or has he done other things on his own?

A. He’s done most of it on his own.

Q. What has he done?

A. He’s become a choreographer. He started --

MR. SNEDDON: Object as immaterial, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Well, the prosecutor suggested that you were making decisions about what to do with your children because Michael Jackson could help their careers, correct?

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I'm going to object as argumentative and leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever allow Wade to be with Michael Jackson only because Michael Jackson could help his career?

MR. SNEDDON: Object as leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Never. We were friends first.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Why did you allow Wade to spend a lot of time with Michael Jackson?

MR. SNEDDON: Object.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Please tell the jury.

MR. SNEDDON: Asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Please tell that to the jury.

A. They enjoyed each other. They -- they were very similar people. I remember Michael telling me early on that it was like looking in the mirror, he saw himself all over again. His interest was because he saw Wade's potential. And Wade loved everything that Michael did and wanted to learn as much as he could.

Q. Did you ever lose your trust in Michael Jackson during any point in time that your son was with him?

A. Never.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson ever do anything that made you suspicious about his behavior towards your son Wade?

A. Never.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson ever do anything that made you suspicious about his behavior towards your daughter?

A. Never.

Q. Now, the prosecutor asked you questions about children being jealous if Michael Jackson had another friend who was a child. Do you remember those questions?

A. Yes.
Q. Please tell the jury what you meant.
A. It’s like any child who has a favorite uncle or someone in the family that everyone wants to be around.
And Michael’s the sort of person that everybody wants to be around. He has that sort of aura. So naturally, when he was spending time with one child, another child would be jealous. It’s the same in any family, if you spend time with one child more than the other.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: The prosecutor asked you questions about Michael Jackson having special friends who were children. Do you remember that?
A. Yes.
Q. And what did you mean by that?
A. Well, you know, there would be people who would spend time with him at particular times more so than others.
It didn’t mean that he didn’t still spend time with all of them. They were all friends of his. But when he spent particularly more time with one than the other, then they were special for the time.
Q. Based upon what you’ve observed of Mr. Jackson, would it be accurate to say that all over the world children flock to him, don’t they?
A. Absolutely.
MR. SNEDDON: Object. Immaterial; leading.
THE COURT: Overruled. The answer is in.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And have you seen children from time to time get jealous because Mr. Jackson is being nice to another child?

A. Yes.
Q. Has that ever appeared unusual to you?
A. Not at all.
Q. Did you ever see something that you thought was very suspicious when one child would get jealous of Mr. Jackson’s attention to another child?

A. No, I think that’s normal with children.

Q. When you used the term “special friends,” what did you mean?

A. I think just the one that he was spending time with for now. That he considered all of his friends special.

I don’t know why I would have said that.

I don’t remember saying “special.” But I imagine it would have meant just the child that he was spending time with now.

Q. When you used the term “special friends,” did you mean to suggest anything criminal was going on?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. When you used the term “special friends,” did you mean to suggest that anything sexual was going on?

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, that’s a leading question. I object.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: The word “special,” you used that term, right?

A. Apparently, yes.

Q. Why?

A. Well, I guess because all children are special and Michael considers them all special. There’s nothing -- no -- nothing necessarily of a bad connotation in that.

THE COURT: I think it’s time for the break now.

MR. MESEREAU: Oh.

THE COURT: You just took that one breath too long.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

THE COURT: (To the jury) You know, I’m going to take -- you’re going to get an extra five minutes because at the end of our break I want to talk to the attorneys. Just so you know, you’ll have a little longer break. It’s not a long item.

Don’t worry.

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: I just know that you’re about to call another witness, which, according to my list, would be Chantal Robson; is that correct?

MR. MESEREAU: That's correct, Your Honor.

THE COURT: And there was a motion to limit testimony on her and also on Karlee Barnes on the same documents. And I've reviewed those documents, and I'm not going to grant the motion. I'll decide the issues on a question-by-question basis. But for your guidance, it seems, based on the attached police reports, that the information that's in those reports would be the type of information that he would be allowed to ask about.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes. Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, we also filed a motion with regard to Lisbeth Barnes. Is that one that the Court will address at some time?

THE BAILIFF: You can't be heard.

THE COURT: The Lisbeth Barnes issue, I will rule on that on a case-by-case basis. But I will order that the -- that she not be allowed to give opinions about her -- her opinions about how vigorous, et cetera, a prosecutor Mr. Sneddon is. I've already ruled that's out of bounds, not an issue in this case. It's not going to be a personal attack on him.

MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, if I could just ask for guidance on that issue. Excluding personal attacks, certainly we can discuss with Mr. Sneddon their willingness to cooperate, what he said to them, et cetera, about these issues without making it a personal attack, can't we?

THE COURT: Within limits.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes.

THE COURT: The line there -- there is a probative issue there, but the line about personal -- her opinions of him --

MR. MESEREAU: Yes.

THE COURT: -- I won't allow that.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes.

THE COURT: So while we're doing -- I'm going to do one more that was there. Might as well cover it. I don't see this person on your list, though. You had a person named -- there was a question about witness Michael Viner, V-i-n-e-r.

MR. SNEDDON: That’s --

MR. MESEREAU: Michael Viner. Michael Viner. V-i-n-e-r, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yeah. He’s not on the list, but --

MR. SANGER: I should address that.

MR. MESEREAU: I’ll address it.

THE COURT: What my ruling on that would be, I’m not going to allow him to testify about overhearing the opinion of Mr. Feldman as to veracity. That’s not admissible.

MR. MESEREAU: If I may, Your Honor, I think we were going to file an opposition, which didn’t get filed. Our position was going to be the prosecution allowed -- I believe, I will double-check.

THE COURT: I’ll withhold that ruling if you intend to file an opposition.

MR. MESEREAU: We do.

THE COURT: That person’s not on the list at this point. But that’s where I was going with it based on just what the District Attorney had filed.

MR. SANGER: It should be filed now.

MR. SNEDDON: Judge, may I address the Court on a matter that I indicated to the clerk that I wanted to take up with the Court?

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SNEDDON: And I was told I could do it at a later time.

THE COURT: All right. What is the issue?

MR. SNEDDON: Discovery. We have a --

THE COURT: Does it relate to any immediate --

MR. SNEDDON: Yes.

THE COURT: -- witness right now?

MR. SNEDDON: Yes. Not to this lady, but to the future of the day. And it -- I want to alert the Court that we have a very substantial problem, and I’d like to -- I know that the Court doesn’t want to keep the jury waiting, but --

THE COURT: On which issue?

MR. SNEDDON: We got a list with three witnesses, Francine Orozco, Russ Birchim and Jimmy Van Norman. Francine Orozco --

THE COURT: What I'm going to do is -- what I'm thinking of doing is letting the jury go an hour or so early today, because there's another issue that Mr. Mesereau wants to take up, so that we can do that when they're not waiting in the hallway.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. Your Honor, then I just want to ask one other thing. And while I don't want to hold things up, but I believe that this witness and the witnesses yesterday have testified to their opinion about character. And we filed the brief this morning, so I was just going to ask, when she's excused, that she's subject to re-call. If the Court agrees with us, then we can then cross-examine her further on those topics.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SNEDDON: Thank you.

THE COURT: The Court has not excused any witnesses yet. Our agreement was that the witnesses, unless specifically asked, I would not excuse them, they're still bound, because both parties have indicated they want to -- they may want to re-call witnesses. So no witnesses have been excused except where I've specifically excused them, and there are very few of those.

MR. SNEDDON: Judge, I understand. I wanted to make sure I preserved it as a witness coming back on cross-examination and not having to call her as my own witness. I believe that I would be entitled to cross-examine her on have-you-heard statements based on her testimony. That's all I was trying to do was just to preserve the record for that.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SNEDDON: Thank you.

THE COURT: I'll have the jury brought in.

(The following proceedings were held in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: All right. You may proceed.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. Miss Robson, the prosecutor asked you questions about borrowing $10,000. Remember that?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you please explain why you borrowed $10,000?

A. The first $10,000, we had been here for, I think, a year, 18 months. And it was a lot more difficult to establish ourselves here than I had anticipated, so Michael offered to help us out for a while. So we borrowed $10,000 at that point.

The second one was a car. I had been here for a while. My credit from Australia cannot be transferred, so I had no established credit in the United States. I was listed as an employee because of the cosmetics company paying through Michael Jackson’s company. Because I was being sponsored by MJJ Productions, I was listed as an employee of the company. So I had asked if the company would co-sign for my car because I was unable to get the credit to buy a car, and Michael just offered to pay for it rather than co-sign.

Q. Was it -- as you recall, was it his idea to help you or was it your idea?

A. I had asked for help. And he was there for me. He was a friend.

Q. Okay. Was there anything, as far as you know, improper or illegal about anything you did?

A. Nothing.

Q. Okay. The prosecutor asked you some questions about whether or not you had borrowed other funds. Do you remember?

A. Do you mean the Anthony Pellicano situation?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. And what were you referring to?

A. Well, that was because the record label -- the deal had been held up, and the advance was something that we needed to survive. And because it was held up, Anthony Pellicano offered to loan the money to me until the balance came through from the record deal.

Q. Okay. Now, did you ask Mr. Jackson for help from time to time?

A. I asked a couple of occasions with the car and the initial 10,000.

Q. And he did help you on those occasions?

A. Yes.

Q. The prosecutor asked you questions about your son’s entertainment career. Did you ask for help from Mr. Jackson once in a while as far as your son’s entertainment career was concerned?

A. No. I had called a couple of time to see if -- when he was doing music videos, to see if he remembered Wade, because he said he would put Wade in his music video. To remind him more than anything. But that was all.

Q. And to your knowledge, did Mr. Jackson help Wade with his career?

A. Yes, he’s always very supportive. He’s always very interested in what Wade did with his career. He would check on him. He would ask him to send him -- keep him in touch and send -- when he was doing music production, he would ask him to send him demos of the music that he was producing so that he can listen to it and encourage him and teach him what he was doing correctly and not. Always very supportive, always very interested.

Q. Now, were you allowing Wade to spend nights with Mr. Jackson because you just wanted to further his career?

A. No.

Q. Why were you letting Wade spend those evenings with Mr. Jackson?

A. Those evenings just happened because they were having fun together. They would play till all hours of the night. They would watch music videos. They would watch cartoons. And they’d basically just go to sleep.

Q. Did you do that with Mr. Jackson as well?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. How often?

A. A couple of times.

Q. Okay. The prosecutor asked you questions about Wade and Michael throwing some pebbles at the lion cage. Do you recall that?

A. Yes.
Q. How -- when did you learn about Wade and Michael throwing some pebbles at a lion cage?
A. I think Wade had told me about it at some point after the fact. He was basically telling me that he heard the lion roar. And it didn't roar very often, so I was surprised. And he told me what they did to make it roar.

Q. Well, was it your impression that they were engaging in animal cruelty or anything?
A. Absolutely not. That's the last thing that either of them would do.
MR. SNEDDON: I'm going to object.
THE COURT: What was that?
MR. SNEDDON: I said I object. It calls for a conclusion. It's narrative. And it's leading.
MR. MESEREAU: I think the prosecutor asked her about her knowledge and state of mind.
MR. SNEDDON: I'm not objecting to the subject matter. I'm objecting to the form of the question.
THE COURT: All right. I'll sustain the objection. Strike the answer. Next question.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Who told you about Wade and Michael Jackson throwing some pebbles at the lion cage?
A. Wade.
Q. And when did he tell you about that?
A. I think possibly a day or two after it happened, or that night. I really don't remember.
Q. And did he tell you that he had tried to be cruel to an animal?
A. No. Wade loves animals.

Q. Did he tell you that Michael Jackson had tried to be cruel to an animal?
A. No. Michael is -- loves all animals as well. Neither of them would ever do that.
Q. Now, the prosecutor asked you questions about the word "cousin." Do you recall those questions?
A. Yes.

Q. And did you hear Michael Jackson use the word “cousin” in describing children?

A. Yes. He pretty much called everybody cousins, I think.

Q. And did you know why he did that?

A. No. That’s just something that he -- I mean, I think at some point he may have said it so that they weren’t jealous of each other, because that tended to happen.

Q. Did you ever suspect there was something criminal about Mr. Jackson using the word “cousin”?

A. No.

Q. Ever think there was something sexual about Mr. Jackson referring to children as his cousin?

A. Never.

Q. Ever think there was anything inappropriate about Mr. Jackson referring to various children as “my cousin”?

A. No.

Q. The prosecutor asked you questions about Brett Barnes. Do you know Brett Barnes?

A. I don’t know him. I’m associated with him.

Q. Okay. How so?

A. I met him once when he was in Chicago and Michael was shooting the “Jam” music video.

Q. Did you maintain any communication with the Barnes family through the years?

A. No.

Q. Would you call the Barnes family good friends of your family?

A. Not at all.

Q. Okay. How many times do you think you’ve traveled with Mr. Jackson?

A. Just the once, to Las Vegas.

Q. Okay. Now, you referred to Chicago at one point in your testimony.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you go to Chicago?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was the purpose for that trip?

A. Wade was dancing on the music video “Jam.”

Q. Okay. And was that a music video involving Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.
Q. And was Mr. Jackson in Chicago with you?
A. Not with us. He was there.
Q. Okay. And what do you mean by “not with us”?

A. Well, we weren’t staying with him. We were flown in as Wade was working. And we stayed at a hotel. He did the job, and we returned to Los Angeles.
Q. And to your knowledge, where did Mr. Jackson stay on that trip?
A. I have no idea.
Q. Did you see Mr. Jackson on that trip?
A. On the set, yes.
Q. Did you see him in any other location?
A. No.
Q. Okay. Do you know approximately when that was?
A. I’m not sure. I want to say ‘92. Maybe in the middle of ‘92 somewhere.
Q. Okay. The prosecutor asked you some questions about whether you were concerned about manipulation. Remember that?
A. Yes.
Q. Were you ever concerned about Mr. Jackson manipulating you?
A. Never.
Q. Did you ever tell anyone you were concerned that Mr. Jackson was manipulating Wade?
A. No.
Q. Ever tell anyone that you were concerned that Mr. Jackson was manipulating your daughter?
A. No.

Q. Did you use the word “manipulation”?
A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. Are there any other entertainment-related transactions that you recall either you or your son being involved in with Michael Jackson?
A. And what do you mean by “entertainment transactions”?
Q. Any type of entertainment, transaction, project. You name it.

A. He did three music videos. He did a Pepsi commercial. And the original L.A. Gear photo shoot. I think those are the only things he's ever done with Michael.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson, to your knowledge, help Wade with those projects?

A. What do you mean by "help"?

Q. Any kind of assistance.

A. I mean, he offered -- he decided that he wanted -- he would want Wade to work on it, because he was the best person for the job. Other than that, no.

Q. Okay. And to your knowledge, when is the last time Wade worked with Mr. Jackson on any entertainment-related project?

A. The last thing he -- Michael performed with 'N Sync I think on an MTV Music Awards, and Wade was choreographing and directing it. He put that together.

Q. Do you know approximately when that was?

A. I want to say 2000, something like that.

Q. Now, you said that many times you went to Neverland and Mr. Jackson wasn't there, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And when you did that, how would you arrange to visit Neverland?

A. Through his office. Through Evvy.

Q. Had Mr. Jackson given you permission to visit Neverland when he wasn't there?

A. Yes.

Q. And approximately when did he say you could do that?

A. He's always said that, that we're welcome any time.

Q. And I believe you testified that you were there more times when he wasn't there than when he was there; is that right?

A. Absolutely, yes.

Q. How many times do you think you visited Neverland when Mr. Jackson wasn't even there?

A. Maybe 40, 50 times.

Q. And where would you stay when Mr. Jackson wasn't at Neverland?

MR. SNEDDON: Object as immaterial, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Before he had the children, I would stay in the house. But since he’s had the children and they’re now the children’s bedrooms, we stay in the guest units.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: How many times do you think you stayed in Mr. Jackson’s main house before Mr. Jackson had his own children?

A. Maybe 15, 20 times. I’m not sure.

Q. And where would you typically stay?

A. In the rose bedroom.

Q. Please describe to the jury what the rose bedroom is.

A. Its a large-sized bedroom with an adjoining bathroom. Hardwood floors. Beautiful wood -- carved wooden ceilings. Overlooks the front of the house. It’s on the second floor.

Q. And how far away is the rose bedroom from Mr. Jackson’s bedroom?

A. Mr. Jackson’s bedroom is on the ground floor. I don’t know how to describe how far away. It’s probably the length of two rooms, but on another floor.

Q. Now, do you recall freely walking in and out of Mr. Jackson’s bedroom?

A. Yes.

Q. And when you say “bedroom,” you’re talking about these two levels?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Did Mr. Jackson ever put any restrictions on your walking in and out of his own room?

A. No.

Q. And you freely walked in and out of his own room?

A. Yes.

Q. The prosecutor asked you questions about a lock and alarm. Do you remember that?

A. No. Oh, the chimes, yeah.

Q. Do you recollect your always having to go through a locked door to get into his room?
A. I mean, I would always knock first before I went anyway, so I don’t have any idea whether the door was locked or not. But I would never just walk in. I would always knock and someone would open the door.
Q. What typically would happen when you’d knock?
A. Wade would answer the door, or Michael.
Q. Okay. And would someone open the door for you?
A. Do you mean --
Q. When you knocked and someone responded, would they typically open the door for you or would you open the door yourself?
A. I think someone would open it for me.
Q. Did you go into Mr. Jackson’s room at all hours of the day?

A. At any time I wanted to, yes.
Q. Do you recall being in his room during the day?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you recall being in his room during the evening?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you recall being in Mr. Jackson’s room late at night?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you ever get the feeling that somebody was trying to keep you out of Mr. Jackson’s room?
A. No.
Q. Do you recall spending much time in Mr. Jackson’s room at Neverland?
A. I have spent time in there on occasion watching television with them, but not often.
Q. Where would you typically watch television when you were in Mr. Jackson’s room?
A. On the bed.
Q. Would that be the bed on the second level?
A. No. On the ground level.
Q. Okay. Now, the issue of Mr. Jackson helping you with an automobile, when did that happen?

A. I think maybe ‘93. Early ‘93.
Q. And did you go to him and ask for some assistance in getting an automobile?

A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And what was his response?
A. Well, I had asked him to co-sign. I wasn’t asking for money. I was just asking for a signature. And his response was, “Well, why don’t I just pay for it.”
Q. And did he do that, to your knowledge?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you feel that he was doing that because he wanted something in return in any way?
A. Not at all.
Q. Did you feel there was any quid pro quo when he helped you with the car?
A. Absolutely not.
Q. Did you feel there was any quid pro quo when he helped you with money?
A. Never.
Q. Did you feel there was any quid pro quo when he helped you as a sponsor?
A. Not at all.
Q. Now, what was this issue -- you needed him as a sponsor for what purpose?
A. To remain in the United States. We -- permanent residence. To be able to have a green card, we had to have someone sponsor us into the country.
Q. Did you go to him and ask him if he would be your sponsor?

A. I talked to him about it, and he said he would do whatever he could to do. He just instructed his office to do whatever was needed.
Q. To your knowledge, what was done to help you?
A. An offer -- they put me on their books as an employee of the company.
Q. Did Mr. Jackson have to actually sign anything to be your sponsor, if you recall?
A. Yes.
Q. And did you ask him to do that?

A. Yes. Pretty much. Basically I asked for help. So that was the only way we could stay, so, yes.
Q. And he did help you, right?
A. Yes, he did.
Q. Did you feel like you owed him anything after he helped sponsor your family to stay in the U.S.?
A. No. Not at all.
Q. Now, you received some payment through Michael Jackson Productions; is that right?
A. My earnings from the cosmetic company was diverted through the company, through his company, yeah.
Q. What cosmetics company was that?
A. Pigments. P-i-g-m-e-n-t-s.
Q. Where is that company located?

A. On Burton Way in Beverly Hills.
Q. And you actually were working there?
A. Yes.
Q. When did you begin working at that cosmetics company?
A. I think ‘93. ‘92 or ‘93.
Q. And the idea was that because you weren’t a resident, you were not supposed to be employed; is that the idea?
A. I was on a working visa, but it was through MJJ Productions. I was -- I was employed to be employed by MJJ Productions only. So I managed to find this job for myself. And in order to make it legal, it had to be diverted through MJJ Productions.
Q. And where were you living at the time?
A. I was living in Hollywood.
Q. And who else was living there with you?
A. Chantal and Wade.
Q. And were you the main person providing for your family at that point?
A. Yes.
Q. You needed a job, didn’t you?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Mr. Jackson helped you get a job, correct?
A. Well, he helped me, yeah. I mean, he didn’t get the job for me. I got the job, but he made it possible for me to be allowed to do that, yes.

Q. And how long did that arrangement last?

A. Oh, I think three years.

Q. Okay. So for approximately three years you were paid through MJJ Productions, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Michael's Jackson's company?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you the primary wage earner for your family at that point?

A. Yes.

Q. And why did that arrangement end?

A. Wade booked a feature film. He was working as an actor on a feature film. And because he was a minor, I had to be there with him. So I left the job and worked with him on the film.

Q. Okay. And did Mr. Jackson ever ask anything in return for what he had done for you during those three years?

A. No.

Q. Ever feel you had to repay him for any of that?

A. No.

Q. Now, you spoke to Mr. Sneddon before today, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were actually questioned by Mr. Sneddon before today, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. When were you questioned by Mr. Sneddon?

A. Before the grand jury, I think in '93 or '94.

Q. Was that the only time?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall Mr. Sneddon trying to get you to agree that your son had been kidnapped by Michael Jackson?

MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object. Argumentative; hearsay; and irrelevant.

MR. SNEDDON: It's my objection.

MR. ZONEN: Oh.

MR. SNEDDON: Let me do it this way. I object. Same basis.

THE COURT: I'll sustain both of you.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: To your knowledge -- all right. To your knowledge, has your son ever been held against his will by Mr. Jackson?

A. Never.

Q. To your knowledge, has your son ever been kidnapped by Mr. Jackson?

A. No.

Q. To your knowledge, has your son ever been abused by Mr. Jackson?

A. No.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, object. Leading; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: The prosecutor asked you questions about seeing June Chandler at Neverland. Do you remember that?

A. I do.

Q. Did you see her at Neverland?

A. I did.

Q. Did you talk to her at Neverland?

A. Yes.

Q. Was she a friend of yours?

A. No.

Q. You didn't care for her, right?

A. I did not.

Q. Why?

A. My impression of June Chandler was that she wanted to be mistress of Neverland; that she was ordering the staff around as if she owned Neverland; that she wanted everything that went with it. My impression of June Chandler was that she was a gold-digger.

Q. Did you see her interact with Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you feel she was trying to use Mr. Jackson?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Did you ever talk to Mr. Jackson about it?

A. No, I did not.

Q. The prosecutor asked you about someone named

Blanca Francia.

A. Yes.
Q. Did you know Blanca Francia?
A. I don’t know her. I remember her working there.
Q. Did you ever chat with her?
A. No.
Q. Do you remember seeing Blanca Francia in Mr. Jackson’s room?
A. I remember seeing her go in there to clean. I don’t remember seeing her in there.
Q. Do you recall being at Neverland when large numbers of children would visit?
A. Yes. Once.
Q. And when was that?
A. I don’t remember when it was. It was -- I’m trying to work out about what age Wade would have been. It’s probably around ‘99, 2000. There was a group of children there from the -- the Wish Foundation or Create-a-Wish Foundation.
Q. Did you spend time with those children?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. What did you do with those children?
A. We played with them on the -- in the amusement park.
MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, beyond the scope of cross.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. MESEREAU: No further questions, Your Honor.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. SNEDDON:
Q. Miss Robson, you’re not jealous of June Chandler, are you, because she displaced you?
A. Not at all.
Q. Not at all?
A. Not at all.
Q. That wasn’t the feeling you had at the ranch, because she was in control?
A. Absolutely not.
Q. And her son had replaced your son?

A. My son was there.
Q. Yes, but he wasn't in the bedroom with Michael Jackson anymore, was he?
A. I don't know that he wanted to be. He was Michael's friend. They were there together as friends. I had no wish to be June Chandler.
Q. Well, I didn't ask you whether you wished to be June Chandler. I asked you whether you were jealous of her position.
A. Certainly not. What position would that be?
Q. Of being able to be close to Michael Jackson at that point in time.
A. I don't think she was close to Michael Jackson at that time.
Q. You don't?

A. No. As a matter of fact, Michael spent a good deal --
Q. Do you know --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. She hasn't completed her answer, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Overruled. Next question.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Do you know how many trips they went on together?
A. No.
Q. Do you know how long they spent with each other?
A. No.
Q. You have no idea, do you?
A. No.
Q. So you don't have any idea how close she was to Mr. Jackson at that point in time, no personal knowledge?
A. My personal knowledge from that weekend was when I saw Michael Jackson trying to elude June Chandler for the entire weekend.
MR. SNEDDON: Move to strike as nonresponsive, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: And you said that the defendant, Mr. Jackson here, was the person who easily created trust in people; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. And in relationship to you and your family, he created that trust very easily and very quickly, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You saw him do that with other people, too, correct?

A. No.

Q. You didn’t?

A. No.

Q. You were the only ones that you observed him to be trust --

A. The only time I was ever around anybody else with Michael would have been on the set in Chicago with the Barnes family and that one weekend with the Chandler family.

Q. So your opinion about Mr. Jackson and his ability to form trust quickly and easily has to do simply with your family?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, did I understand you correctly that you stated that when you came to the country, your visa only allowed you to work for MJJ Productions?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Mesereau asked you questions about were you aware of what was going on in the evening in Mr. Jackson’s room. Do you recall that?

A. He asked me if I’d been into the room.

Q. In the evening.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you have no idea, once you left that room, what went on inside that bedroom, do you, of personal knowledge?

A. Only what my son tells me.

Q. Well, you don’t know whether they were playing video games, correct?

A. If my son tells me they were, they were.

Q. Okay. I think I asked you of personal knowledge.

A. That is personal knowledge from my son telling me. I believe him.

Q. Something you saw with your own eyes or heard with your own ears, not from your son. Do you have any personal knowledge what went on behind those closed doors in that bedroom?

A. Not on every occasion. I was not there on every occasion, no.

Q. For instance, have you talked to Mr. Mesereau since the testimony yesterday?

A. No.

Q. Did you talk to him at all in preparation for your testimony?

A. We had a brief conversation about how things would be in the courtroom, yes.

Q. And did -- are you aware of the fact that at the time of the execution of the search warrant in this case at Neverland Valley Ranch, that there was a whole assortment of sexually explicit magazines and books that were found in Mr. Jackson’s bedroom?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: You told Mr. Mesereau in response to his questions that you came to the country without any promises from Mr. Jackson; is that what you said?

A. That’s my memory.

Q. That’s not what you told the grand jury back in 1994, was it?

A. Well, I read something different. I don’t remember that.

Q. Well, that was you testifying, wasn’t it?

A. Well, I’m saying I don’t remember it now. Apparently that’s what I testified to.

Q. Under oath?

A. Verbal -- maybe they were verbal. What I’m saying is there were no contracts. There may have been something verbal.

Q. It didn’t say that in your testimony, did it? It said, “Mr. Jackson had arranged the following”?

A. Well, that’s incorrect.

Q. But you said it?

A. Well, I’m sorry. I made a mistake back then. There was never anything verbal, never any contracts.

Q. You remember better today than you did back then?

A. Apparently.

MR. SNEDDON: No further questions.

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. In response to the prosecutor’s questions, you said you believe your son?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Why do you believe what your son told you?

A. We just have a very close relationship.

MR. SNEDDON: Excuse me, I didn’t ask any questions about believing her son. It’s beyond the scope of examination.

THE COURT: I don’t think it’s beyond the scope. But it’s an improper question. I’ll sustain the objection.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Could you clarify this issue of something being arranged when you came to the United States; what was arranged, what wasn’t arranged?

A. Well, there were no contracts. I honestly don’t know what I was referring to in the grand jury. Perhaps -- from my memory -- I mean, we’re going back 12, 13 years.

From my memory, I remember Michael saying that he would help in whatever way he could. That he had movie companies. He had, you know, record companies. If there’s something he could do, he would help. But there were certainly no arrangements. We came here and -- I mean, I had to get a job to work. There was no -- there were no contracts. There was nothing arranged. I didn’t come here expecting Michael Jackson to give Wade a career.

Q. Has Mr. Jackson always been available to help your family when you needed some assistance?

MR. SNEDDON: Object, Your Honor. Beyond the scope and leading.

MR. MESEREAU: I don’t think so, Your Honor. He talked about arrangements.

THE COURT: You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Michael’s a friend. And like any friend, if we needed anything, he would be there, and -- and vice versa. We were there for each other as friends are.
MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.
MR. SNEDDON: No questions.
THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You’re not being excused. There’s an issue about some other questions that I’m going to take up, so you may be called back.
THE WITNESS: All right.
THE COURT: For now, you may leave.
THE WITNESS: Thank you.

THE COURT: Call your next witness.
MR. MESEREAU: Yes. Defense will call Lisbeth Barnes, Your Honor.
May I take a second?
She’s not right here, so we will call Chantal Robson, Your Honor.
THE COURT: All right.
When you get to the witness stand, please remain standing.
Face the clerk here and raise your right hand.

CHANTAL ROBSON
Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.
THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.
THE WITNESS: Hi, Chantal Robson.
C-h-a-n-t-a-l; last name Robson, R-o-b-s-o-n.
THE CLERK: Thank you.

Q. To your knowledge, has your family traveled with him?

A. Yes.

Q. What is your knowledge about that?

A. I know that my brother and my mother have been to Vegas. I take that back. I have been to Los Angeles with him. On my first trip. I went to Los Angeles, just me and my mom. Sorry, me and my brother.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. I’m a dancer.

Q. Now, are you aware of any efforts Mr. Jackson made to help your family move to the U.S.?

A. Yes. He helped us, like any friend.

Q. What do you recall him doing?

A. He basically just helps us with immigration. Helped us, you know, get certain attorneys to help us deal with moving over here.

Q. Did you ever feel that he was doing this because he wanted something in return?

A. No. Never.

Q. Did he ever help you with your career?

A. No.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Good morning, Miss Robson.

A. Good morning.

Q. You first met Mr. Jackson in 1990; is that correct?

A. ‘89.

Q. ‘89. All right. And that was in Australia?

A. No. That was in America.

Q. All right. So the first time you met Mr. Jackson was the time -- the first time that you visited Neverland Ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Neverland Ranch seem to you to be an awe-inspiring place when you first visited it?

A. I’m sorry, an awe --

Q. Awe-inspiring.

A. Yes. It’s a beautiful place.

Q. Very impressive?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you impressed with meeting Mr. Jackson the first time you met him?

A. Not really impressed. I was young, so the idea of the fact that he was being famous really didn’t mean anything.

Q. Okay. It didn’t strike you as anything remarkable to meet a superstar at that time when you were ten years old?

A. No.

Q. Had you ever listened to his music?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have any of his albums?

A. Yes.

Q. And then after your first visit to Neverland, you returned to Australia?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. With your family?

A. Yes.

Q. And your brother Wade?

A. Yes.

Q. And did Wade communicate with Mr. Jackson during that period of time?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he call him?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson call Wade?

A. Yes.

Q. Would this be a frequent occurrence?

A. Yes.

Q. And would they talk on the phone for hours?

A. Yes.

Q. Weekly?

A. Yes.

Q. More than once in a week?

A. Yes.

Q. During that period of time, did your brother seem to be fascinated with his relationship with this star?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: He was fascinated with the friendship.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It was something very important to him, wasn’t it?

A. Yes.
Q. Did they send faxes back and forth?
A. Yes.
Q. How often would they do that?
A. I don’t remember. It wasn’t as often as the phone calls.
Q. But this was a very special bond that Wade had with Michael Jackson, wasn’t it?
A. Like any other friend, yes.

Q. But this was a special friend, wasn’t it?
A. I don’t know what you mean by “special.”
Q. Well, did Wade have anybody else that he had a relationship with that you could compare to his relationship with Mr. Jackson?
A. Me.
Q. Okay. But let me paraphrase -- or let me rephrase that.
Any relationship with an adult like he had with Mr. Jackson, an adult who’s not a member of his family?
A. No.
Q. And your first night at Neverland you stated that you slept in Mr. Jackson’s bed?
A. Yes.
Q. Bedroom?
A. The second night. The first time I was in the room.
Q. All right. So the very first night that you went to Neverland you spent the night in Mr. Jackson’s bedroom?
A. In his bedroom, yes.
Q. And on that first night, you slept downstairs in the bedroom, correct?
A. No.
Q. You slept upstairs?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you -- or I’ll rephrase that.

Were you interviewed by Scott Ross, an investigator for Mr. Jackson, on May 2nd, 2005?
A. Yes. Not quite sure if that was the date, but, yes.
Q. That was just a few days ago?

A. Yeah.
Q. And did you tell Mr. Ross that you recalled the first night that you slept downstairs, and Wade went upstairs and slept with Mr. Jackson?
A. No. It would be the other way around.
Q. Okay.
A. Michael and Wade slept -- Michael and Wade slept downstairs and I slept upstairs on the first night.
Q. All right. So Mr. Jackson and Wade slept together separately from the area that you slept in?
A. Yes.
Q. Why was that?
A. Because I left and went upstairs.
Q. Why did you leave and go upstairs?
A. Because I was a little older at that point and I felt like I was interfering in Michael’s bedroom, so I left and went upstairs.
Q. Because you wanted to give Mr. Jackson some privacy?
A. Yes.
Q. And he was alone with your brother at that time?

A. Yes.
Q. And your brother was seven years old?
A. Yes.
Q. And that night, your brother slept in the same bed with Michael Jackson?
A. Yes. I told him to come up with me.
Q. You told him to come up with you?
A. Yes.
Q. Was that because you felt like he shouldn’t be sleeping in a bed with a grown man?
A. Not at all.
Q. Then why did you tell him to do that?
A. Because I didn’t want to make Michael feel like two people were invading his space.
Q. Something about that first night made you feel uncomfortable, didn’t it?
A. No, not at all.
Q. Didn’t you say you felt more comfortable the second night to Mr. Ross when you spoke to him a few days ago?

A. Comfortable with my friendship with Michael, yes.

Q. And that next night, you slept in the same bed with Michael Jackson?

A. I did.

Q. And your mother knew about it?

A. Yes.

Q. He was 35 years old?

A. Yep.

Q. And you were ten?

A. Yep.

Q. Was that the first time you'd ever done anything like that?

A. Done anything like what?

Q. As a young girl, sleeping with a grown man who's unrelated to you, that you just met.

A. That was the first time I'd ever done that. It's not the first time I've ever slept with somebody over 35.

Q. As a ten-year-old, did you sleep with someone over 35, other than Michael Jackson?

A. I've slept with my dad.

Q. I'm talking about an unrelated person.

A. No, that was the first time.

Q. As a child, how many unrelated men did you sleep with that were over the age of 30?

A. None.

Q. Just Mr. Jackson?

A. Other than my father, yes.

Q. Whose idea was it that you sleep in Mr. Jackson's bed?

A. It was actually our idea.

Q. Sorry?

A. My brother and I. It was actually not an idea. We just fell asleep.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson discourage this? Did he say in any way that this is not appropriate for two small children to be sleeping in the bed with a 35-year-old unrelated man?

A. No.

Q. And as you sit here today, as an adult, you think it's appropriate for a ten-year-old girl to sleep in the same bed with an unrelated 35-year-old man that she's just met?

A. I think it's appropriate for a ten-year-old girl to sleep in a bed with a friend.
Q. All right. What about a 35-year-old man that she has just met. That's my question. Do you think that's appropriate?
A. If she feels comfortable that he is a friend.
Q. If the ten-year-old thinks it's okay, she should do it?
A. And the parents. Yeah.
Q. Something you would allow?
A. Yes.
Q. What about a seven-year-old boy?
A. Yes.
Q. You would allow your own seven-year-old son to sleep with a 35-year-old man that he has just met?
A. If I trusted the man, yes.
Q. Do you think that type of trust can be earned in one day?

A. I don't think trust is always earned.
Q. How do you gain trust, other than earning it?
A. I think it's a feeling. It's a friend.
Q. Mr. Jackson's pretty good at that, isn't he, at gaining trust?
A. I don't understand how you could say somebody's good at gaining trust.
Q. He makes you feel very comfortable when you first meet him; isn't that true?
A. I think it depends on who's meeting him.
Q. Well, you felt very comfortable, true, the very first day?
A. Well, I was his friend.
Q. And your mother felt very comfortable the very first day, true?
A. My mother had already met him two years prior.
Q. But she just met him as an acquaintance. You know that, right?
A. They spent a lot of time together before that, though.

Q. They had spent what?

A. They spent time together before that.

Q. On how many occasions?

A. Just the once when they were in Australia. But she actually spent hours and had conversation and got to know Michael, so she had a relationship prior.

Q. So your testimony is that your mother knew you were going to be sleeping in the same bed with Michael Jackson that night?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Michael Jackson ever refer to you as a member of his family?

A. No.

Q. Did he ever refer to Wade as a member of his family?

A. Not to my knowledge, no.

Q. Are you aware that there are other boys that have spent the night in Michael Jackson's bed?

A. I am.

Q. Do you know their names?

A. Some of them.

Q. Which ones do you know?

A. Jordie Chandler, Macaulay Culkin and Brett Barnes.

Q. Mr. Jackson has been very generous to you, hasn't he?

A. It depends on what you mean by "generous."

Q. Well, he's allowed you the run of his ranch anytime you wanted, true?

A. Yes.

Q. And he picks up the tab, correct?

A. The tab at his house. It's like me going to any other friend's house and spending time there.

Q. Neverland's not like any other friend's house, is it?

A. No, but I have a lot of friends that have beautiful homes. And when I go there, they allow me to eat for free.

Q. And Mr. Jackson has given your mother loans in the past?

A. Loans?
Q. Yes.
A. Yes.
Q. And at Neverland, you pretty much have -- get to do whatever you please as a child?
A. Well, I don’t know about “whatever you please.” I mean, you’re protected. You can’t --
Q. Within the bounds of safety.
A. Yes.
Q. You pretty much have the run of the ranch, true?
A. Yes.
Q. Get to stay up late?
A. Yep.
Q. Eat all the candy you want?
A. Yes.
Q. There are really no rules, are there, except for your safety?
A. Depending on whether your mother has certain rules for you or --
Q. But when you’re away from your parents and when you’re with Mr. Jackson, you get to do whatever you want?

A. Well --
Q. Pretty much, true?
A. As long as they’re not what your mother’s told you not to do.
Q. All of these families that you’ve mentioned spend time with Mr. Jackson, right, the boys of families?
A. Yes.
Q. And all of these families have one thing in common, don’t they? They all have boys?
A. And sisters.
Q. Right. But each one has boys?
A. Yes.
Q. And each one of those families has a boy that forms a special relationship with Mr. Jackson; isn’t that true?
A. Your idea of special relationship, yes.
Q. Well, Mr. Jackson had a relationship with Wade that was far closer than the relationship that you had with Mr. Jackson, true?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Jackson chose Wade to sleep in his bedroom night after night after night?

A. I don’t think Michael Jackson chose Wade to sleep in his bedroom.

Q. Well, he allowed it, true?

A. There’s a difference between allowing and choosing.

Q. Well, you don’t really know what he chose, do you?

A. I think that we had the ability to leave.

Q. That’s a “yes” or “no” question. Do you know what Mr. Jackson was choosing when he and Wade were sleeping in the same bed together?

A. No.

Q. Ever heard of the “Apple Head Club”?

A. No.

Q. Never?

A. Apple Head Club? No.

Q. How about the “Doo-Doo-Head Club”?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever heard those expressions?

A. Yes. Not “Club.”

Q. Was Wade an “Apple Head”?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how many times Wade slept with Mr. Jackson alone in his bed?

A. I do not.

Q. And Miss Robson, you really have no idea what happened between Mr. Jackson and Wade on those many nights that they slept alone behind closed doors in Mr. Jackson’s bedroom, do you?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. You weren’t there, though, were you?

A. It doesn’t matter.

Q. You’re just judging that based upon what Wade told you?

A. Based upon what my brother tells me and my friends tell me, yes. But just like anything, we base a lot on what people tell us.

Q. Would it surprise you to learn that there has been an expert who testified in this case that up to 50 percent of all children --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection to the question.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I haven’t finished the question.
MR. MESEREAU: Referring to other testimony.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Based to challenge her credibility.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Do you think all child molest victims divulge, as children, that they’ve been molested?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Assumes facts not in evidence; beyond the scope; improper opinion.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Do you think that?
A. Can you repeat the question, please?
Q. Do you think that all child molest victims divulge the fact that they’ve been molested when they are children?

A. I honestly have no idea. I haven’t studied up on all the requirements of a child molester.
Q. Do you have an impression of the type of shame that would be associated for a child to admit that he’s been molested?
A. Again, I don’t really know what goes through somebody’s mind.
Q. There would be a great deal of guilt associated with a family, parents, that allowed their child to sleep with Michael Jackson or an adult, any adult, if they found out that that child had been molested by that person, wouldn’t there?
A. I don’t think there would necessarily be guilt. I think there would be anger and they would do whatever they could to have that person not around.
Q. It would upset them, though. It would be disturbing, wouldn’t it?
A. Yes.
Q. That’s a feeling they’d like to avoid, wouldn’t it?
A. No, I think it’s a feeling that they would want to solve.

Q. But if they chose to deny that feeling, you could understand why, couldn't you?

A. I don't know. I've never been put in that position.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I have no further questions.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Miss Robson, if you thought your brother had been molested by Michael Jackson, would you go to a lawyer first to seek money?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Requires speculation; argument.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: The prosecutor asked you questions about whether or not you believed your brother Wade felt his friendship with Michael Jackson was important. Do you remember that question?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And you said you thought so, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Why do you think so?

A. Because I think that anybody that gains a friendship with anyone thinks that that relationship is important, otherwise they would not be friends with that person.

Q. And was it your belief that your brother had a good friendship with Michael Jackson?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever see a problem with that?

A. No.

Q. The prosecutor asked you about a special bond between Wade and Michael Jackson. Remember that question?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you think he had a special bond with Michael Jackson?

A. I think like any other friend.

Q. Do you think you have a special bond with Michael Jackson?

A. I do.

Q. Why?

A. Because he is my friend and I love him.

Q. Do you think Mr. Jackson has a special bond with your mom?

A. I do.

Q. Why do you think that?

A. Same reason. We're friends, and we're there for each other.

Q. Now, the prosecutor asked you about whether or not you were comfortable with the fact that children have slept in Mr. Jackson's room. Remember that?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you comfortable with that?

A. Yes.

Q. Why?

A. Because I trust Michael Jackson.

Q. Why?

A. Because it's a feeling that I have. He's a friend, and he's never, ever made me feel like I shouldn't trust him.

Q. Now, the prosecutor asked you questions about the words "Apple Head" and "Doo-Doo Head," right?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you heard those words before?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Let's start with "Apple Head." Where have you heard the word "Apple Head"?

A. Michael has called me and my brother "Apple Head."

Q. Where have you heard the word "Doo-Doo Head"?

A. Michael has called me or my brother "Doo-Doo Head."

Q. When Michael Jackson called you "Apple Head," did you ever get suspicious that some crime was occurring?

A. No.

Q. When Michael Jackson called you “Doo-Doo Head,” were you ever suspicious that there was some sexual reason for that?

A. No.

Q. When Michael Jackson called your brother “Apple Head,” did you ever suspect some abusive type of thing was going on?

THE WITNESS: No.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

MR. MESEREAU: I think he opened that, Your Honor.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Same objection.

THE COURT: The answer was, “No.” Next question.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When Mr. Jackson called your brother “Doo-Doo Head,” did you ever suspect something nefarious was happening?

A. No.

Q. The prosecutor asked you questions about victims of child molestation, okay? Did you ever think your brother was the victim of a child molestation?

A. I did not.

Q. Why not?

A. Because he would have told me.

Q. Did he ever tell you that he had been improperly touched?

A. No, he did not.

Q. Did your brother ever tell you that he had been molested?

A. No.

Q. In fact, did your brother ever tell you, “I have never been molested by Michael Jackson”?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Isn’t it true you don’t think for one second that Mr. Jackson ever abused your brother?

A. That is true.

Q. You don’t think for one second that Mr. Jackson ever molested your brother, do you?

A. That is true.

Q. You don’t think for one second Mr. Jackson ever touched your brother in a sexual way, right?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: I do not think for one second.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Why not?
A. Because --
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Prosecutor Auchincloss asked you questions about a family feeling guilty for allowing molestation to occur.
Do you feel guilty about anything involving your relationship with Michael Jackson?
A. I do not.
Q. Why not?

A. I have no reason to feel guilty. It’s a normal friendship.
Q. To your knowledge, does your brother feel guilty about anything involving his relationship with Michael Jackson?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Speculation; hearsay.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Have you discussed with your brother the prosecutor’s allegations that Michael Jackson improperly touched him?
A. Yes.
Q. Have you had many discussions with him?
A. A couple.
Q. Your brother’s pretty upset with these allegations, isn’t he?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Hearsay; leading.
THE COURT: Overruled.
THE WITNESS: Yes, he is.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Why?
A. Because they’re not true.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Are you upset with these allegations?

A. I am.

Q. Why?

A. Because they’re not true. And a friend of mine is being accused of something that’s not true.

Q. Have you ever felt guilty about having a friendship with Michael Jackson?

A. I have not.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: The answer is in. Next question.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you feel guilty about ever staying in Michael’s room?

A. I don’t.

Q. Do you feel guilty about ever visiting Michael’s room?

A. I do not.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled. The answer was given.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever get the feeling Michael Jackson was trying to talk you into being in his room?

A. Never.

Q. Did you ever get the feeling Michael Jackson was trying to talk your brother into being in his room?

A. Never.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.

THE COURT: Overruled.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. You said that you trusted Michael Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you trust him never to give alcohol to a child?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you trust him never to show pornography -- well, excuse me, erotic -- adult erotic materials to a child?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you trust him not to keep those things laying around his bedroom when he has children in that room?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Assumes facts not in evidence; improper question.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: There’s evidence that he had --

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Can you please repeat your question?

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Would you trust him not to have adult erotic materials sitting around his room when he had children in his room?

A. I don’t know if that’s a trust issue.

Q. Well, would you like him -- would you trust him enough to think that he’d keep those materials separate from children?

A. It would be nice. But I also understand it’s somebody’s house and sometimes things are lying around.

Q. Would you trust him enough to -- would you trust him not to have statues, figurines of nude women in bondage attire sitting around on a desk where he has his own children visiting him?

A. I don’t know if he’s ever had that, so --

Q. I’m asking you, would you trust him not to do that?

A. Yes.

Q. So if he did any of these things, he would be violating your trust, wouldn’t he? You’d have to evaluate your level of trust, wouldn’t you?

A. No, I don’t think it would violate my trust.

Q. If he showed -- if he showed erotic -- adult erotic materials to a child that he’s been giving alcohol to, wouldn’t you have to reevaluate whether you trust this man or not?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Repeat the question, please.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: My question is, if Mr. Jackson showed adult erotic material to a child that he'd been giving alcohol to, you'd have to reevaluate whether you really trust this man or not, wouldn't you?

A. If Michael Jackson did do that, yes, you would have to reevaluate.

Q. So you wouldn't trust him if he did that?

A. If he did that, yes. But I don't believe he did it, so....

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I have no further questions.

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. You've heard about the allegations in this case, right?

A. Yes.

Q. You've discussed them with your family, right?

A. Yes.

Q. You don't believe Michael Jackson ever molested the Arvizo children, do you?

A. I --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. That calls for a conclusion; impermissible question.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you trust that Michael Jackson never molested any alleged victim in this case?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Same objection.

MR. MESEREAU: He raised the issue of trust,

Your Honor.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It is -- well --

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you trust Michael Jackson?

A. I do.

Q. Why do you trust Michael Jackson?

A. Because he is my friend.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Asked and answered; beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You can complete your answer if you didn't.

MR. MESEREAU: Let me withdraw the question.
THE COURT: She answered it.
MR. MESEREAU: Okay.
THE COURT: But I’m not sure she wasn’t cut off in the middle.
THE WITNESS: That’s okay. He’s my friend.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Are there any other reasons why you trust Michael Jackson?
A. He has never, ever given me any reason not to trust him.
Q. Do you think he’s honest?
A. I do.
Q. Do you think he’s a sensitive man?
A. I do.
Q. Do you think Mr. Jackson would ever, ever harm a child?

A. I don’t, no.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you trust --
THE COURT: Wait a minute. I’ll strike the answer.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you trust that Mr. Jackson would --
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, I’m going to object. I’m going --
MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, the prosecutor asked her all these questions about her trust in Mr. Jackson. I’m just --
THE COURT: That’s correct.
MR. MESEREAU: I’m just examining on those issues.
THE COURT: You may on some issues. And some you may not.
MR. MESEREAU: Okay.
THE COURT: So take it one question at a time.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you trust that Mr. Jackson would never give alcohol to a cancer patient so he could commit the crime of molestation?
A. I do.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading. Also calls for an ultimate issue, ultimate conclusion.

THE COURT: I'll sustain the objection.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Please tell the jury every reason why you trust Michael Jackson.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer that.

THE WITNESS: He has been my friend for many years. He has cared for me like an older brother and a father. There has never been one time in my life where he has ever turned his back on my family. Vice versa. My family has never turned our back on him. We love him.

It's hard to explain. When you have a friendship with someone and you know that it's a true person and it's a friend --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm going to object as a narrative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Were you through with your statement?

THE WITNESS: It's just that he's a true person and he's a friend, and I trust him always.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.

FURTHER RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Just one last question.

In your eyes, Mr. Jackson can do no wrong, can he?

A. That is not true.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I have nothing further.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.

THE COURT: All right. You may step down.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

THE COURT: Call your next witness.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes. The defense will call Lisbeth Barnes.

THE COURT: When you get to the witness stand, please remain standing.

Face the clerk right here, and raise your right hand.

MARIE LISBETH BARNES
Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE WITNESS: Do you -- Marie, M-a-r-i-e; Lisbeth, L-i-s-b-e-t-h; Barnes, B-a-r-n-e-s.
THE CLERK: Thank you.

A. 19 -- December 1991.
Q. And how did you meet him?
A. Well, actually, when I met him personally was in December of 1991, but I had spoken to him for several years prior to that. I -- he invited us to his home in December 1991, and that’s when I met him for the first time.
Q. Okay. Now, you said you’d been speaking to him for a while before that?
A. Since 1987.
Q. And why were you speaking to him?
A. Because he had called -- my son had written a letter to him when he was very young, when Michael was touring Australia. And he received the letter and he -- well, he pulled out a letter out of the bag, that's what he told me, and it was Brett's, and he decided that he'd call him to thank him for the letter. And he spoke to all of us, and we developed a friendship, and he continued calling us and speaking to us.

And then one day he decided to invite us over to his home, and since then we've been regular visitors.

Q. Do you still consider Mr. Jackson to be your friend?

A. Oh, definitely.

Q. Where are you staying at the moment?

A. I'm staying at his -- at Neverland Valley, at his place.

Q. How many times do you think you have stayed over at Neverland?

A. Several times. I can't count.

Q. Can you give an estimate?

A. No.

Q. Would it be ten times?

A. Could be. Yeah.

Q. Could it be 20?

A. No, maybe not 20. Probably about ten, I guess, or a little bit more, a little bit less. I'm not sure. I'm -- I know it's several times. I can take time and count back, but I haven't thought about it.

Q. Okay. And your first visit to Neverland was when, what year, if you know?

A. December 1991.

Q. Okay. And who did you visit Neverland with?

A. Our family. My husband, my two children.

Q. Okay. And how long did you stay there?

A. About three weeks. Well, we stayed with Michael for that three weeks. He took us to Disneyland, to Las Vegas, and, yes, we were together for three weeks.

Q. Okay. And where did you stay during those three weeks?

A. Sometimes at Neverland Valley. Sometimes at Disneyland, and Las Vegas, depending on the places we were visiting. And sometimes at the hotel in Los Angeles.

Q. Okay. Now, let me direct you to the first time -- first night you were at Neverland, okay?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. What did you do?

A. We -- he took us on a tour of the place, and we -- pretty much that. And then we watched a film at the theater, had dinner, sat down and talked, and pretty much that.

Q. Where did you stay that evening?

A. In one of the guesthouse -- guest units at the ranch.

Q. And do you know where your children stayed that evening?

A. Same -- well, one of the other units at the -- they're just a group of units, and they were in the next one.

Q. To your knowledge, has your son ever stayed in Michael Jackson's room at Neverland?

A. Yes, he has.

Q. And when was the first time that happened?

A. I couldn't tell you. I couldn't remember. I can't remember. I'm sorry.

Q. To your knowledge, has your daughter ever been in Michael Jackson's room?

A. Yes, she has also.

Q. And to your knowledge, has she ever stayed in his room?

A. Yes, she has.

Q. And how about you, have you ever been in his room?

A. Yes, I have. And I have been invited to stay over because we were watching videos and talking, and he just suggested, "Well, why don't you stay; stay here," because it was raining outside. And he said, "Well, you can stay here." And I stayed for a little while, but then I went back to my room. It was just more comfortable.

Q. How many times do you think you've been in Michael Jackson's room at Neverland?

A. Oh, several times.

Q. Has it been all times of day?

A. Yes. I had pretty much free rein -- just anytime I wanted to, I was allowed to.

Q. Now, let me ask you about that. You’ve been in Michael Jackson’s room during the day, right?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. You’ve been there during the evening, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you been there late into the night?

A. Well, yes. Pretty much when we were watching videos, it would be -- go pretty well late into the night.

Q. How often do you think you’ve watched videos late into the night in Michael Jackson’s room?

A. Several times.

Q. Okay.

A. Or times we were just talking, or --

Q. When you visited Neverland with your children, did you feel that you had free access to Michael Jackson’s room?

A. Yes.

Q. And why did you feel that way?

A. Well, he gave me free access. He -- he -- I remember a particular occasion when I wanted to borrow some CDs, and he said, “Just come into my room and” -- that is where they are kept and he showed me where the selection of CDs were kept, and he said, “Anytime you want to come and borrow the CDs, feel free to do so.”

Q. And how would you describe Mr. Jackson’s room?

A. Just a huge room and -- with lots of things in it. Very, very warm and -- but nothing ostentatious. I don’t know what sort of description you’re looking for.

Q. Is it two levels? Do you recall an upstairs and a downstairs in the room?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Have you been into both parts of his room?

A. Uh-huh. Yes.

Q. Do you recall having to knock on a door to get into his room?

A. Well, I do that normally when I go into -- doesn’t matter whose place I go, it’s just common courtesy to knock before you enter.

But I could have just -- the door was never locked, so I could go in anytime I wanted to.

Q. Were you ever denied access to his room?

A. Never.

Q. Did you ever go into the room when your children were in the room with him?

A. Yeah.

Q. Have you done that often?

A. Yeah.

Q. Now, what have you seen your children doing with Mr. Jackson in Mr. Jackson’s room?

A. Just talking, watching films, and listening to -- just reading stories or just having fun. Just chilling out, you know. Playing with games, toys, whatever.

Q. Have you ever seen Mr. Jackson do anything inappropriate with either of your children?

A. No. Never.

Q. Ever seen Mr. Jackson inappropriately touch your son?

A. Never.

Q. Ever seen Mr. Jackson inappropriately touch your daughter?

A. Never.

Q. Have you ever seen Mr. Jackson hug your son?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever been suspicious of the fact that Mr. Jackson hugged your son?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever seen Mr. Jackson hug your daughter?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever been suspicious of Mr. Jackson hugging your daughter?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever seen Mr. Jackson kiss your son on the cheek?

A. Yes.

Q. Has that ever made you suspicious of Mr.

Jackson?
A. No.
Q. Ever seen Mr. Jackson kiss your daughter on her cheek?
A. Yes.
Q. Have you ever been suspicious of that behavior?
A. No.
Q. Okay. Now, you gave your son permission to stay in Mr. Jackson’s room, correct?
A. Yes, correct.
Q. Did you give your daughter permission to stay in his room?
A. Correct.
Q. Why?
A. Why not?
Q. Did you trust Mr. Jackson?
A. Implicitly. I always trusted him and I still trust him.
Q. Why?
A. Because he’s just a very nice person. And you just feel when you can trust someone and when you can’t trust someone. And I had total trust in him.
Q. And your son traveled with him at some point, correct?
A. Uh-huh. Correct.

Q. When was that?
A. It would have been January 1992, I think.
Q. Did you allow your son --
A. January, February.
Q. Did you allow your son to travel with Mr. Jackson?
A. I allowed him, yes.
Q. Why was that?
A. Because, to me, it was a learning experience, and -- visiting other countries, and I couldn’t -- you know, I was -- it didn’t bother me at all.
Q. Did you ever suspect that Mr. Jackson had inappropriately touched your son?
A. Never.
Q. Have you discussed with your son allegations that Mr. Jackson inappropriately touched him?

A. Well, there were allegations, and we had talked about it, and I have asked him. I said, “Look me in the eyes and tell me that nothing has happened to you, that Michael has never done anything inappropriate to you.”
And he said he --
MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object to the response as hearsay, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. ZONEN: Move to strike the answer.
THE COURT: Stricken.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: As you sit here today, do you think Mr. Jackson has ever inappropriately touched your son?
MR. ZONEN: I believe that’s character opinion. I’ll object, unless this witness is a character witness.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.

CROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. ZONEN:
Q. Miss Barnes, good morning.
A. Good morning.
Q. Your child Brett was how old when he first met Michael Jackson?
A. Nine.
Q. And was that on the occasion of your first visit?
A. Going on ten. Yes.
Q. He was nine years old?
A. He may have been ten.
Q. And your daughter was how old?
A. 12.
Q. And your daughter’s name is what?
A. Karlee.
Q. Karlee? Am I doing that right? Karlee?
A. Uh-huh. K-a-r-l-e-e.
Q. And both of them stayed with Michael Jackson that first night that you were at Neverland?

A. Well, we all stayed together and they -- like I said, they slept in the -- in one of the guest units, and we slept in the other guest unit.

Q. They slept in one of the guest units. Who are “they”?

A. My children. Brett and Karlee.

Q. All right. They both stayed in one of the guest units?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And you stayed in a separate guest unit?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And Mr. Jackson stayed in his residence?

A. That’s correct.

Q. All right. And the guest unit, of course, is an entirely different structure than his residence; is that right?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. You would have to walk outside and some distance before you would get to his house?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Did you continue to stay in the guest unit while you were there?

A. Yes.

Q. And for what period of time did you stay at Neverland before you finally returned to Australia?

A. Well, we were -- we were at Neverland on -- on and off for over a three-week period, but we didn’t stay at Neverland the whole time.

Q. How long did you stay at Neverland?

A. Well, it was a few days in Neverland and a few days outside of Neverland, coming back, so altogether -- I couldn’t tell you exactly how many days altogether.

Q. Was your husband there as well?

A. Yes, he was.

Q. And other members of your family?

A. Well, my son and my daughter, and that’s the complete family.

Q. Okay. You didn’t have any aunts or grandparents or cousins or anything like that?

A. No.

Q. So it was the four of you; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And you wandered between Neverland and other locations in California; is that right?

A. And Las Vegas.

Q. And Las Vegas.

Did you travel with Mr. Jackson during that time?

A. Yes.

Q. So he took you to different locations; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. At what stage did your son begin to stay in his room or with him in a hotel room, together?

A. I don’t remember.

Q. Well, the first time you’re telling us --

A. It’s not the first few nights. It could be -- I’m not really sure exactly when.

Q. By about the third night?

A. Could be. It could be a little bit later.

Q. Fourth night?

A. I don’t remember.

Q. This is a trip that went about three weeks; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. The trip was paid for entirely by Mr. Jackson?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And that included all of the transportation for you, your husband and your two children from Australia to California and back; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. As well as all of your housing accommodations, travel needs and entertainment; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Did he purchase gifts for the four of you while he was there?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And by the fourth night, your son was sleeping in his room; is that correct?

A. No, I didn’t say by the fourth night he was sleeping in his room.

Q. What night was it, then?

A. I’m not sure what night it was.

Q. Was it within the first week?

A. It could have been. It may have been. It may not have been. I don't remember.

Q. But he was sleeping with your son in the same bed before this trip was over; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. All right. Was he sleeping in the same bed with your son for an extended period of time?

A. On -- no, not -- not continuously, no. Just on-and-off basis when they were -- the times when my son would fall asleep when we were there, and he stayed there and -- rather than having to go back to -- outside into the unit.

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor?

THE COURT: Thank you. We'll take our break.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: You may proceed.

MR. ZONEN: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. Miss Barnes, we were on a -- the initial visit, your initial visit to California to Neverland, and I believe you were telling us --

BAILIFF CORTEZ: Your microphone's off.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: We were discussing your initial visit to California and to Neverland, and I believe that you said it was when your son was about nine years old. How much older was your daughter?

A. I said ten, actually. Nearly ten.

Q. I'm sorry, ten years old he was?

A. Well, he was going to be ten in January, so it was December, so he was nearly --

Q. Close to his tenth birthday?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And your daughter was how old at the time?

A. 12.

Q. And you took trips with the defendant to a number of different locations, including Las Vegas?

A. That's correct.

Q. What other cities did you go to besides Las Vegas?

A. Well, Los Angeles. We went to Disneyland. This is Anaheim, I believe --

Q. Okay. Where else?

A. -- on that trip.

That’s about it, I think.

Q. All right. Would it be fair to say that most of the time that you were there, you were at Neverland; is that correct?

A. Not quite. Not really, no, because we spent a few days in Las Vegas. We spent a few days at Disneyland. And when we were in Disneyland, I know we went to Century City, so I’d say -- I wouldn’t say most of the time, no.

Q. Well, a few days in Century City?

A. A hotel there. There’s a hotel in Century City.

Q. Was that across the street from his condominium?

A. That’s correct.

Q. When you were at the hotel in Century City, was your son staying with Mr. Jackson in his condominium?

A. No, he stayed with us.

Q. He stayed with you for the entire time?

A. I believe so.

Q. When you were at the Las Vegas hotel, did your son stay with Mr. Jackson?

A. We were all together.

Q. In Mr. Jackson’s room?

A. Well, we shared a villa, so there were several rooms in the villa. It’s like a --

Q. And in which room did your son sleep?

A. With my daughter.

Q. Your son slept with your daughter?

A. Yes.

Q. So he didn’t stay with Mr. Jackson at any time while you were in Las Vegas?

A. I don’t recall. I don’t remember.

Q. He didn’t stay with Mr. Jackson at any time when you were in Century City?

A. He may have. I’m not sure. No, I’m not -- I cannot tell you, because I don’t remember.

Q. Did you stay at a hotel when you were at Disneyland?

A. We were at The Disneyland Hotel.

Q. For how long? More than one night?

A. Yes.

Q. Two nights?

A. Probably four, five nights, I would say.

Q. Four or five nights?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. At Disneyland Hotel?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And did your son stay with Mr. Jackson while --

A. We were all, again, in the same --

Q. Suite?

A. Yes.

Q. Did your son stay in Mr. Jackson’s room in that suite while you were at The Disneyland Hotel?

A. I don’t remember. Possibly. I don’t remember.

Q. You’re not certain?

A. No.

Q. All right. Now, the first time that your son ended up staying in Mr. Jackson’s room, had you had a conversation with Mr. Jackson prior to that event? Did Mr. Jackson talk with you about your son staying with him in his room?

A. No. It was my son’s decision to stay the night.

Q. It was your son’s decision to stay?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Well, explain how that happened.

A. He wanted --

Q. Your son came to you and asked you if he could stay with Mr. Jackson?

A. No, we just happened to be in the room, and he said he wanted to stay. He wanted to stay there for the night, because they were having fun, and he -- he just said he was going to stay there and --

Q. Was this is at Neverland we’re talking about?

A. That’s correct.

Q. It’s not at one of the hotels?

A. No.

Q. It’s before you began your series of trips around different places; is that correct?

A. That’s correct. Uh-huh.

Q. So it was in the early part of your stay in California?
A. Yes, I would say so.
Q. And your son came to you -- and your son came to you and said that he would like to spend the night --
A. He didn’t come to me. Well, I was there with him.
Q. And your daughter was there as well?

A. Uh-huh.
Q. You were all on the bed together?
A. Well, we were in the room together.
Q. Which room is that? The downstairs room?
A. That’s correct.
Q. And there is a bed in the downstairs room?
A. That’s correct.
Q. And there’s a bed in the upstairs room?
A. That’s correct.
Q. Were you watching T.V.?
A. We were at the time. I don’t remember what we were doing. I’m sorry.
Q. Was your husband there as well?
A. I don’t remember.
Q. Was your daughter there as well?
A. I presume so.
Q. Do you know at what hour it was that your son --
A. No, I don’t remember.
Q. -- that your son expressed the desire to remain in Mr. Jackson’s room?
A. I don’t remember.
Q. Was it late at night?
A. I don’t remember. I’m sorry.
Q. Was it potentially very early in the morning?
A. I don’t -- I don’t remember. I’m sorry. I just don’t remember. It was just a long time ago.

Q. Did you understand him to mean that he was going to be sleeping in Mr. Jackson’s bed?
A. I would imagine so, because eventually he would have fallen asleep.
Q. Is that where he was at the time that you left the room?

A. What do you mean?

Q. At the time that your son said he wanted to stay there, was Mr. Jackson there?

A. Yes, he was.

Q. Was Mr. Jackson on the bed?

A. No. He was just in the room, sitting on one of the chairs, walking around. He likes walking around.

Q. He walks around?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. So he was walking around, and your son was on the bed?

A. I'm not really sure whether he was on the bed or whether he was playing with something on the floor, or --

Q. Do you remember the conversation where he asked you -- your son asked you to remain in Mr. Jackson's room? Do you remember that conversation?

A. No, I don't.

Q. But you do remember -- but you do remember that it was your son who asked if he could stay there?

A. It was his decision, yes.

Q. Was Mr. Jackson party to that conversation?

A. No. Well, he was there. But he wasn't party to -- he wasn't actually taking part in the conversation, if that's what you mean.

Q. Did you say to your son, "No, that's not appropriate. Come back to the guest cottage with your family"?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. You said it was all right for him to stay in that room?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson say to you, "It's okay with me, he can stay here"? Did he say that to you?

A. Well, I don't remember what he said at the time. I just asked him if it was okay. And --

Q. Who asked who if it was okay?

A. I asked Mr. Jackson if it was okay, and he said, "Yes. If he wants to stay, that's fine."

Q. So you did have a conversation with Mr.

Jackson about your son remaining?

A. Well, I can’t say that it’s a conversation. If I just asked him something, it’s not really a conversation as far as I’m concerned, I’m sorry.

Q. Now, your son at the time was almost ten years old?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And Mr. Jackson at the time was in his mid-30s?

A. Yes.

Q. Had your son slept with any other man in his mid-30s up to that point other than a relative?

A. Well, he slept with my brother at my parents’ place.

Q. Do you understand your brother to be a relative?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. The prosecutor is not letting her complete her answer.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled. You may answer the last question. Do you want it read back?

THE WITNESS: I’m sorry, I didn’t quite hear.

THE COURT: I’ll have the court reporter read it to you.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. Do you understand that the question I asked was other than relatives? Had your son, at that point in his life, slept with any other men other than relatives; adult, grown men?

A. No.

Q. All right. Since that date, has he slept with any adult, grown men during the balance of his adolescence other than a relative?

A. Not that I know.

Q. All right. Now, Miss Barnes, at the time that he first spent the night in Mr. Jackson’s room, in Mr. Jackson’s bed, you had known Mr. Jackson what, a couple days?

A. Well, I had met him a couple of days, but I had known him -- I had been friends with him -- I consider myself being friends with him, because we had communicated over the phone for several years prior to that.

Q. You'd had telephone conversations --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- with him. The first time that you actually spent any time in his home with him was the occasion of this first visit just prior to your son's --

A. That's correct.

Q. -- tenth birthday. All right. Did your son continue to sleep with him thereafter?

A. Not every day.

Q. But many days?

A. On occasions.

Q. And your son visited Mr. Jackson on a regular basis over the years for the balance of his adolescence, did he not?

A. And we did as a -- we did as -- my daughter, myself and my son. We did.

Q. Yes.

A. And my husband was present on occasions, but he had to work on other occasions.

Q. Yes. And other occasions your son came by himself?

A. And other occasions, yes, he did come by himself.

Q. Some occasions he went with you?

A. That's correct.

Q. On some occasions he traveled with Mr. Jackson extensively, did he not?

A. I would say so.

Q. He traveled rather extensively with Mr. Jackson throughout the United States, didn't he?

A. I believe so.

Q. Do you know how many cities he traveled with your son, he traveled to with your son?

A. I couldn't tell you how many cities, no.

Q. Were you present when he traveled through the United States with your son?

A. To some places I was present, yes.

Q. Which places were you present?

A. Chicago, Las Vegas. I’m not really sure. There were several occasions where I was present.

Q. Several occasions beyond Chicago and Las Vegas?

A. Well, not several cities, but several occasions where --

Q. Were you with your son on all of the occasions when he traveled with Mr. Jackson throughout the United States?

A. Not all. Not all the occasions, no.

Q. Were there occasions when you stayed back in Australia?

A. Yes, there were occasions when I stayed back.

Q. And your husband stayed back in Australia as well?

A. That’s correct.

Q. For what periods of time would your son be in California or traveling in the United States with Mr. Jackson without you being there?

A. I don’t recall.

Q. And you have no idea what cities they went to?

A. Well, I have an idea of some of the cities they went to.

Q. All right. You just said Las Vegas and Chicago. Do you remember any of the others?

A. I know that he’s been to New York with Mr. Jackson.

Q. He went to New York. Okay. Where else?

A. Chicago.

Q. And Chicago?

A. I don’t really recall any other cities in the United States.

MR. ZONEN: May I approach the witness?

THE COURT: You may.

MR. MESEREAU: May I see?

MR. ZONEN: Same ones we did yesterday.

MR. MESEREAU: Oh, okay.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: I’d like to show you a series of photographs, if I may, and please tell me if you recognize these photographs. Number 889 I'll begin with; two photographs in the front, two photographs in the back.

Go ahead and look at the back side as well.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Who's the subject of those photographs?

A. My son.

Q. Brett?

A. That's correct.

Q. And approximately how old was he when those pictures were taken?

A. Like I said, probably about ten, I guess. 10, 11.

Q. Do you have a recollection of those pictures being taken?

A. These ones, definitely, because he was just playing games. And him and my daughter were playing games in the photo box, and they were just pulling faces.

Q. This is a photo box at Neverland?

A. That's correct.

Q. All right. And the two photographs you're talking about are the two on the back side of 889; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. How about the two photographs on the front side of 889, do you recognize those?

A. No, I don't recognize anyone's face in those.

Q. Do you recognize the setting?

A. I believe I do, yes.

Q. And where is that?

A. Or do I? No, I'm not really sure actually.

Q. That's fine. Take a look at Exhibit 890, two photographs in the front. Do you recognize the two photographs?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you recognize the people in either of the two photographs?

A. I do.

Q. Who are they?

A. The top photo is Mr. Jackson, and -- I believe so. And -- I need my glasses for that one.

And the bottom one is my son.

Q. All right. Number 891, do you recognize the subject matter of those two photographs?

A. I believe they're Mr. Jackson.

Q. Okay. Are you familiar with the setting of those photographs? Were you there when they were taken?

A. No.

Q. You don't have a recollection of these photographs being taken; is that correct?

A. No.

Q. The three photographs on the back of 891, do you recognize those?

A. I believe them to be Mr. Jackson.

Q. Number 892, two photographs in the front.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Who are they?

A. The top one of my son Brett, and the bottom one of my son with Mr. Jackson.

Q. How old do you believe Brett is in those photographs?

A. About 12, I would say. Probably 12, 13. Probably 12, I'd say.

Q. He had long hair that he wore at the time?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Did he wear long hair for a number of years like that?

A. He did. And then he had -- he had a haircut in 1993, and then he grew it again.

Q. On the back side of Exhibit No. 892, who is that?

A. Again, my son with Mr. Jackson.

Q. Number 893?

A. Same.

Q. Again, your son and Mr. Jackson, both photographs?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And the photograph on the back, the top one --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- is your son?

A. That's correct.

Q. Okay. And the bottom one as well?
A. The bottom one is my son.
Q. Number 894, four photographs?
A. Uh-huh. Mr. Jackson.
Q. And the two on the back?
A. Again, Mr. Jackson.
Q. And 895, we have two photographs in the front and four on the back.
A. Uh-huh. My son.
Q. Okay. Now, 896, we have two photographs in the front and two on the back. Take a look at these and tell me if you recognize them.
A. No, I don't believe I know the location.
Q. The two photographs on the back and the one photograph on the front on the bottom are of buildings and a skyline; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And you don't remember that setting at all? That's not familiar to you?
A. No.

Q. Okay. Did you travel to Chicago with your son and Mr. Jackson?
A. I did on one occasion, with -- when he was filming the video for the song "Jam" with -- with Mr. Michael Jordan in that video. Yes, that was the occasion I traveled with --
Q. Where did your son stay in Chicago during that trip?
A. He stayed with -- with me at times and --
Q. With Mr. Jackson?
A. -- with Mr. Jackson at times, yes.
Q. Yeah. How long did that tour go on? Was he actually on a tour?
A. No, that was just a few days that we went to Chicago, and then we had to come back. We had to go back again.
Q. Do you remember how old your son was at that time?
A. About 11.
Q. Between the ages of ten and --
A. Ten.
Q. -- and 13, how often did your son travel to Neverland?

A. Several times.
Q. “Several times” meaning what?
A. I don’t remember.
Q. More than once a year?
A. I would say probably, yes.

Q. More than twice a year?
A. Probably, on average, about two, three times.
Q. Two or three times a year. On how many of those occasions did you accompany him to Neverland between the ages of 10 and 13?
A. Most of the time I did.
Q. Now, your son traveled with him extensively in South America, did he not?
A. No, we were present, my family. My husband, my daughter and I were present when we toured South America.
Q. All right. And how long of a tour was that?
A. I don’t quite remember. Couple months maybe. I’m not sure. I don’t remember.
Q. Did you travel for the entirety of that tour?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. So for a couple months you traveled throughout South America?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. And your son was there as well the entire time?
A. That’s correct. And my daughter and my husband.
Q. Your daughter and your husband and you for the entire time?
A. Yes.

Q. That was a couple months?
A. I would say probably -- it could be -- could have been three months. I don’t remember.
Q. Three months?
A. Could have been.
Q. Your husband was able to take three months off from work?
A. Yes, because he had long service leaves.
Q. He had what?

A. Long -- in Australia, after you work for, say, ten years, you’re entitled to long service leave, so you have three months every ten years. And he had two lots of long-service leave that he was able to take.

Q. And that trip was paid for entirely by Mr. Jackson, was it not?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And is it true that during the entirety of that trip your son slept in Mr. Jackson’s room with Mr. Jackson?

A. I wouldn’t say during the entirety.

Q. Most of it?

A. I would say at times.

Q. At times?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. What does that mean? Once a week?

A. Well, I can’t give you an exact number of times, because it happened quite a while.

Q. Your son was how old at that point, the time of the South America trip?

A. 12, I would say.

Q. I’m sorry?

A. 12. I --

Q. 12? 12 years old? Did your husband ever express any concerns to you about your son sleeping in the same bed with Mr. Jackson?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever discuss it with him at all?

A. Yes. We talked -- well, we didn’t see any -- any reason -- we talked about it. It wasn’t a discussion, as such, that -- because I couldn’t make a decision and say, “Well, yes, it’s okay,” and not consult my husband, because he’s part of the family. So….

Q. So at some point in time there was a discussion that you had with your husband about your son sleeping with Michael Jackson?

A. A conversation that we decided whether we should -- whether it was okay, because we didn’t want to impose on Mr. Jackson.

Q. Was this the sole issue that you were dealing with was whether or not your son sleeping with him was an imposition for Mr. Jackson? That was the sole concern you had?

A. Yes.

Q. How many conversations did you have with your husband about the question of where your son slept?

A. I don’t remember.

Q. More than ten?

A. No. I don’t remember.

Q. Do you remember at what age your child was at the time of that discussion?

A. No. I don’t remember.

Q. He could have been ten?

A. I don’t remember. I’m sorry.

Q. Could have been 13?

A. I don’t remember.

Q. Do you know if he had already been sleeping with Mr. Jackson for a period of three or four years by the time you had this conversation with your husband?

A. I don’t think so.

Q. Well --

A. I think it would have been before, before that.

Q. Perhaps a year?

A. No. It would have been at the beginning, I guess.

Q. So your son was closer to age ten, or perhaps age ten at the time this happened?

A. That’s correct. Yes.

Q. All right. And then your discussion with your husband took place where? Was it in Australia or was it in the United States?

A. While we were here.

Q. So “here” being what? Neverland, California?

A. Yes.

Q. So early on, then. Was it perhaps the first visit that you had taken to Neverland?

A. I’m sorry?

Q. Was it perhaps the first visit that you had taken to Neverland?

A. What's the question?

Q. The question of when you had the conversation with Mr. -- with your husband about your son sleeping with Michael Jackson.

A. I would say that would have been perhaps at the -- during the first visit, yes.

Q. During the first visit?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And the only subject of that conversation with your husband was whether or not it inconvenienced Mr. Jackson to have your son in bed with him; is that true?

A. I believe so.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson ever tell you that he thought of you as family?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he do that often?

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. Did he encourage you to think of him as family?

A. Yes.

Q. And did he, in fact, suggest that you consider that he be family to you?

A. I believe so.

Q. Did he tell you that he was going to be in the picture for a long time with you and your family?

A. I believe so.

Q. That he would be a friend to you and your family and assistance, and that he would have your family as his family?

A. Well, that we would be his friends for a long time, yes.

Q. Did you ever tell him that you loved him as much as you loved any other member of your family, including your children?

A. I believe that I would have said that I love him very much.

Q. Did you ever tell him that you loved him as much as any other member of your family, including your children, as much as you love your children?

A. I don't remember saying that.

Q. Did you ever send Mr. Jackson any letters?
A. I probably have.
Q. Did Mr. Jackson ever ask you to leave Neverland?

A. Never.
Q. Did you believe that you had to leave Neverland at some point?
A. No.
Q. Was Mr. Jackson going to send you to Paris?
A. No.
MR. ZONEN: May I approach the witness, Your Honor?
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. ZONEN: Mr. Mesereau, here's the original of the letter I gave you.
Q. I'm going to show you Exhibit 897, 8-9-7, a two-page letter. Go ahead and take a moment and look at it.
You can hold on to it. I may ask you a couple questions about it.
Did you read the letter in its entirety?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Do you recognize that letter?
A. I believe so.
Q. Is that a letter that you wrote?
A. I believe so, yes.
Q. It's in your handwriting?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. Do you have a recollection of having written it?
A. Uh-huh.

Q. Is it true that you said in that letter, "I love my family deeply, and I love you as much as I love them"?
A. I believe -- well, I've read this. Yes, I did say that.
Q. I'm sorry?
A. I did write that, yes.
Q. And was that a true statement when you wrote it?
A. Yes. Well, I wanted to let Mr. Jackson know that I loved him very much, and I -- I believe that

I had hurt him at some stage because I was behaving inappropriately. And that’s why I wanted to apologize profusely, just to let him know that I was regretful of what I had done.

Q. This was written September 9th, 1992; is that correct?

A. That’s correct, yes.

Q. You wrote in the letter that, “Bill told you yesterday we were responsible for your illness. I felt like killing myself.”

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And that is something that you wrote; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. All right. “Bill” is who? Bill Bray?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Who is Bill Bray?

A. He was Mr. Jackson’s head of security.

Q. Okay. And in 1992, your son was how old?

A. Ten. Oh, 10 going on 11 at that stage. Ten and a half.

Q. So you had known Mr. Jackson about a year at that point?

A. That’s correct.

Q. What illness was it that you believed that you were responsible for?

A. Well, from -- from my recollection of this particular incident, we were on tour and -- with Mr. Jackson on -- in the European tour of the “Dangerous” tour --

Q. Ma’am, what illness was it that you believed --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. He’s cutting off the witness.

MR. ZONEN: I’ll object as nonresponsive, the answer.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Tell us what illness it was that Mr. Jackson had that you believed you were responsible for.

A. I don’t recall what the illness was.

Q. But it was serious enough that you felt like killing yourself?

A. Well, it was probably a bit overdramatic what I had written there, but it was only because I felt so bad about it.

Q. But now you don’t even remember what illness it was?

A. No, I don’t remember what the actual illness was, but I remember that I had caused him some grief.

Q. Did he have an illness that required medical attention?

A. I’m not sure whether it actually required medical attention, but I know that he felt that he was feeling unwell at the time.

Q. Feeling unwell physically or emotionally?

A. I guess probably emotionally. I don’t know. But all I know, that he was feeling unwell. I don’t really know the extent of -- I don’t remember what -- what -- actually how he was feeling, what the actual feeling was, whether it was physical or whether it was emotional. I don’t have any recollection of that.

Q. And was this because of an outburst of some kind that you staged?

A. Pretty much. Well, it was a personal matter between Mr. Jackson and myself.

Q. What did you say to him --

A. Um --

Q. -- that caused you to feel like killing yourself?

A. Well, this is -- the reason why I felt so bad is because it was -- I -- what happened was that during the tour, there was a particular city that we were visiting. There wasn’t quite enough VIP passes for everyone, because they had VIP passes for numerous guests.

Q. What city were you in?

A. I don’t actually recall which city.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. The prosecutor interrupted.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. MESEREAU: May the witness be allowed to complete her answer, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. ZONEN: I'll object to the narrative form of the answer.

THE COURT: Well, you asked the question.

MR. ZONEN: I'll withdraw my objection, Judge. I'm sorry.

THE COURT: Go ahead. Do you want the part that you've already said read back, so you can complete your answer?

THE WITNESS: That's -- please.

THE COURT: All right.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: And I was informed that we -- I wasn't able to go and see the show. And I was upset over that, and that's -- I'm ashamed to be telling this to everyone, but that's pretty much what happened. And I didn't realize that particular outburst was going to make him feel bad. And what happened was that he explained to me that he had several things on his mind and that he wanted to make us happy, and because I was being -- I was unhappy, that was causing him grief. And so I felt pretty much disgusted with myself for having --

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What city were you in?

A. I don't recall which city it was. It was a city before -- possibly before Paris, or -- I'm not really sure.

Q. What country were you in?

A. Again, I don't remember.

Q. You were in Europe?

A. We were in Europe, yes.

Q. So you've done tours with Michael Jackson in Europe, in South America, and in the United States?

A. Well, I didn't actually tour with Mr. Jackson in the United States.

Q. All right. On this particular occasion, the occasion of writing this letter, you were someplace in Europe; is that right?

A. That's correct, yes.

Q. And you had some kind of an outburst that upset him deeply?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. All right.

A. And it was to do with the fact that --

Q. I’m sorry?

A. It was to do with the fact that I didn’t -- I wasn’t able to go to a particular show.

Q. And to whom did you complain about not being able to go to this show?

A. I believe it was with -- possibly with Mr. Bray and with Mr. Jackson.

Q. So Mr. Jackson was there at the time?

A. Yes, he was.

Q. And you had an outburst, complaining about not being able to go --

A. I call it an outburst, but it was the fact that I showed my displeasure, and that -- because I was upset, in a way that upset him, because he wanted us to be -- to be happy and to enjoy the tour, and it seemed like I wasn’t because I wasn’t able to go to one of the shows. And it was very petty and -- on my behalf.

Q. Actually, you didn’t say “outburst,” you said “outbursts,” plural. You had a few of them, didn’t you?

A. No, I didn’t have a few outbursts. But probably -- it could have been because I -- I had expressed my displeasure with Mr. Bray and then with Mr. Jackson. That could have been why it’s in plural.

Q. Now, because you had an outburst over your displeasure at not going to a concert, you felt like killing yourself, and you wrote that in a letter to Mr. Jackson?

A. I did, but that -- again, like I said, it’s probably an overdramatic statement because of the fact that I felt so bad. I wanted to let him know how bad I felt, but I had no intention of killing myself. But it’s just to -- that was just an expression to let him know that I was very, very remorseful and how bad I felt about it because of the fact that I had been selfish.

Q. Did your son actually go to that concert?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Was --

A. No, no, sorry, he didn’t go to the concert, but he was on the tour with us, yes.

Q. He did not go to that concert either?

A. I don’t believe so.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Jackson in this letter that you were prepared to leave?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you tell him, “The only thing that we will not do, we will not leave without Brett, and that could be a bit of a problem”?

A. That’s correct. Yes.

Q. All right. Did you anticipate at that point that Brett would not want to go with you if you left?

A. Yes, because Brett was having such a great time and he would have been very disgruntled about having to leave and probably would have been throwing tantrums, I guess.

Q. You wrote, “If the Paris business bothers you, we would be quite happy to go someplace else to avoid any situation”; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. What’s “the Paris business”?

A. Well, that could have been that -- that occasion that -- the concert, that particular concert I’m talking about.

Q. So you think it might have been in Paris that you had an outburst?

A. Yes. Whether the concert was in Paris or not, I’m not sure. But it was in Paris that actually --

Q. Was your son sleeping with Michael Jackson during the course of that tour in Europe?

A. At some time, yes. At some stage.

Q. Well, how often would he spend nights with Mr. Jackson as opposed to his family?

A. I don’t remember.

Q. Did you have a conversation with an investigator for the defense last night?

A. Not last night, no.

Q. The night before?

A. Not the night before, no.

Q. From yesterday at 2:30, from yesterday at 2:30 in the afternoon --

A. Yes.
Q. -- did you discuss your testimony or anybody else’s testimony with either Mr. Mesereau or any other member of the defense team, lawyer or investigator?
A. No.
Q. You had no discussion with anybody from 2:30 on yesterday, no one at all?
A. No.
Q. Nobody told you what questions you might be asked today based on yesterday’s testimony?
A. No.
MR. ZONEN: Thank you. I have no further questions.

A. Uh-huh.
Q. You’re staying there right now, aren’t you?
A. That’s correct.
Q. Ever been forced to leave Neverland?
A. Never.
Q. Never had to escape from Neverland?
A. Never.
MR. ZONEN: Objection; exceeding the scope of cross-examination.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Ever gotten in a hot air balloon at Neverland?
MR. ZONEN: Objection; irrelevant.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. ZONEN:
Q. With whom did you speak prior to your testimony today, at any time prior to today, about your testimony?
A. Who do you mean? Anyone --
Q. At the time that you arrived in California, did you talk to anybody about your testimony?
A. From the time I arrived in California, I had a meeting with Mr. Mesereau for about five to ten minutes. And with Mr. Scott Ross.

Q. For how long?

A. For about probably --

Q. I’m sorry?

A. Between 15 to 20 minutes.

Q. You’ve had 25 minutes of meeting since you’ve arrived in California for preparation for your testimony today and that’s all?

A. No.

A. Yes.
Q. All right. And in Australia, did Mr. Oxman call you, Brian Oxman?
A. No. He never called me.

Q. All right. So Mr. Oxman had a conversation with your son; is that right?
A. Yes, he did.
Q. And did he ask your son questions about what you would be saying as well?
A. No. That was prior to me making that decision.
Q. So your son had already made the decision to come to Neverland when you then made a decision --
A. That’s correct.
Q. -- at a subsequent time?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. And nobody had spoken with you about your testimony prior to that?
A. No.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Good afternoon, Miss Barnes. Miss Barnes, where is your home?

A. In Melbourne, Australia.

Q. And do you know the gentleman seated at counsel table to my right?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Who is that?

A. That's Michael Jackson.

Q. And is he a friend of yours?

A. Yes, very --

Q. How long --

A. Very good friend.

Q. How long has he been a friend of yours?

A. Well, about almost 18 years. We first started speaking on the telephone, and I've known him in person for about 13 years.

Q. How did you first get in contact with Mr. Jackson?

A. Well, it was pure luck really. When I was about seven years old or so, my brother and I were really, really great big fans of Michael, and my brother wanted to write a letter to him.

So he -- well, with my assistance, we got a letter out to him, and we badly -- really, really badly wanted to go to his concert. That was his "Bad" tour. But my mom wouldn't let us go, because we were too small. We'd get crushed by the crowd. So as a consolation, she let us go see his arrival at the airport.

And at the airport, he had a number of dancers and backup singers and band members there promoting, giving us show bags and things like that. So my mom handed the letter to one of his dancers, who put the letter into a mail bag.

And fortunately, one day Michael decided to pull out a letter and read it, and he put his hand into the fan mail bag and he pulled out my brother's letter, read the letter, and he decided to telephone us to say thank you.

And from there --

Q. And approximately what year was that?

A. It would have been about '87. Or '88.

Q. And did you speak with him on the phone that time?

A. Yes, I answered the telephone.

Q. Okay. And this was in -- this was at your home?

A. Yes. It was at home.

Q. Okay. And how long did you speak to Michael Jackson?

A. Well, when I answered the telephone, I -- you know, I said, “Hello?” And a voice comes back, “Hi. May I please speak to Brett?” And I was like, this isn’t somebody I’ve spoken to before. And I said, “Brett Barnes?” And he’s like, “Yes, please.” And I said, “Okay. I’ll just go get him for you.” I put the phone down. And my mom said, “Who’s on the phone?” And I said, “I don’t know, but it sounds like Michael Jackson.” And so I ran outside, and I’m like, “Brett Brett, Brett, Michael Jackson’s on the phone,” and we’ve gone running back inside. But after that, I was just too shy to speak to him, so it was really only when I answered the telephone that I spoke to him the first time.

Q. Okay. When did you next have communication with Michael Jackson?

A. It was -- it was such a long time, I really don’t remember. But he did call us quite frequently from then on.

Q. And did you used to speak to him from time to time?

A. Yes. Of course, after I lost, you know, my shyness, I definitely loved getting on the telephone to speak.

Q. Did you talk to him a lot?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you become his friend?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Did your family become friends of Michael Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. And you’re still his friend, right?

A. Yes, definitely.

Q. Where are you staying at the moment?

A. I’m staying at his ranch, Neverland Valley.

Q. And had you stayed there before this trip?

A. Yes.

Q. How many times do you think you’ve stayed at Neverland?

A. Oh, many, many times. I wouldn’t know exactly.

Q. Okay. And do you remember the first time you visited Neverland?

A. Yes, that was just after I finished the sixth grade, so that would have been like the -- the Christmas of 1990, like 1991.

Q. And who did you visit Neverland with, if you remember?

A. My mom and my dad and my brother Brett.

Q. How long were you there?

A. Oh, that I really can’t remember.

Q. Okay. What’s your first memory of Neverland when you first saw it?

A. Oh, amazement. I was just so excited and so happy and just so thrilled to be there. And it was just -- it was like going into this -- I don’t know, like this paradise that I’ve never seen before. And it was just, yeah, wonderful.

Q. You still enjoy going there?

A. Every time I come back it feels like I’m coming home.

Q. Okay. Now, the first time you visited Neverland, do you recall where you stayed?

A. Yes. The first time my brother and I stayed in Unit 3.

Q. Okay. And have you ever been in Michael Jackson’s bedroom at Neverland?

A. Yep.

Q. Do you recall the first time you ever were in Michael Jackson’s bedroom?

A. Well, the first time we went to his bedroom was when we first met him, he came -- like our family was invited to meet him in his bedroom.

Q. Have you been in his bedroom many times?

A. Yes.

Q. And describe his bedroom, if you would.

A. Well, it’s like a normal bedroom, really. He’s got a bed, and he’s got some chairs. And he’s got a bathroom.

Q. And it’s two levels, right?

A. Yes, that’s right.

Q. And what else have you seen in his room that you recall?

A. At one stage he had, like, a throne in there, like a big chair. And he had books, and some things that fans have given to him, like a lot of memorabilia.

Q. And have you ever spent the night in Michael Jackson’s room?

A. Yep.

Q. How many times do you think you’ve done that?

A. Well, I don’t remember exactly how many times, but I do recall at least twice.

Q. Have you ever spent the night there with your brother?

A. Yes.

Q. Has Michael Jackson ever made you feel like you weren’t welcome into his room?

A. Never.

Q. Has he ever made you feel that you could go into his room whenever you wanted?

A. Yeah. I mean, basically he’s always said to us that his house is our house, we’re free to go wherever we like whenever we like.

It’s out of personal respect that I, you know, wouldn’t just walk anywhere, just, you know, because everybody deserves a little privacy.

Q. Has Mr. Jackson ever made you feel unwelcome in his home at any time?

A. Never, ever, ever.

Q. Have you ever gone to his room and just knocked on the door?

A. Yes.

Q. And has he been in the room when you knocked on the door?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he let you in?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever been in Mr. Jackson’s room with your mom?

A. Yes.

Q. How many times do you think you’ve been in his room with your mom?

A. Again, I’m not really sure, but it has been on more than one occasion.

Q. Now, do you recall ever being in Mr. Jackson’s room late at night?

A. Yeah, I’ve stayed -- I’ve slept in his bedroom.
Q. And what were you doing in his room at the time?
A. Sleeping.
Q. Well, besides sleeping. What --
A. Oh, well --
Q. Let me rephrase the question. It’s not a good question.
Before you fell asleep in his room, what were you doing?

A. We were all talking.
Q. Okay.
A. And, you know, just having fun.
Q. Uh-huh. What kind of fun?
A. I don’t know. The fun that kids have. Just making fun of each other and telling jokes. And, you know, doing silly dances, and, you know, just things like that.
Q. And would Mr. Jackson do that with you?
A. Yeah, he liked skipping and jumping, like all of us.
Q. Have you done silly dances with Mr. Jackson?
A. Yeah, we always like do, you know, crazy things.
Q. Have you walked around Neverland with Mr. Jackson?
A. Yeah, many times.
Q. And what have you done when you did that?
Excuse me. That’s not a good question.
When you walked around Neverland, what were you guys doing?
A. Well, talking, telling jokes. Same sort of thing. You know, running as fast as we can, challenging each other to races. Stopping to look at the animals. And, you know, things like that.
Q. And Mr. Jackson would do that with you?
A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. Have you been to the theater at Neverland?
A. Yes.
Q. Been in the theater with Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. What have you done in the theater?

A. Watched movies.

Q. Okay. All right. Do you recall a Jacuzzi at Neverland?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you been in that Jacuzzi?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Have you ever seen Mr. Jackson in it?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. How about your mom?

A. Yes.

Q. How about your brother?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever traveled with Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And how many times have you done that?

A. Well, I've been to, like -- well, in my first -- in seventh grade, I spent half of the year over in Europe with him. And in the eighth grade I spent half of the year over in South America. And I've been to Chicago. And we've been to Las Vegas. So I've been, you know, lucky, very fortunate. When he came to Australia for his "History" tour, he took us to South Australia and to Western Australia. So I've been on many, many trips with him.

Q. Have you ever been into the -- in the swimming pool --

A. Yes.

Q. -- at Neverland?

A. Yes.

Q. And has Mr. Jackson been in there with you?

A. Yes, he has.

Q. Ever recall Mr. Jackson being pushed into the pool?

A. Yes.

Q. What happened?

A. The boys -- like, there was myself and my brother and two of Michael's cousins. And we would just -- we'd been playing. We had had an egg hunt, because it was around Eastertime. And then the boys decided that they were going to be, you know, a bit more crazy, and they started throwing eggs at Michael and putting them in his hair, and then, you know, they pushed him into the pool just to taunt him even more.

Q. Has Mr. Jackson ever hugged you?

A. Yes. Many times.

Q. Have you ever been suspicious when he hugged you?

A. Never, ever.

Q. Has Mr. Jackson ever kissed you?

A. On the cheek, yes.

Q. Have you ever been suspicious of his behavior when he did that?

A. No, never.

Q. Have you ever hugged Mr. Jackson?

A. Plenty of times.

Q. Ever kissed Mr. Jackson?

A. Of course. On the cheek.

Q. Have you ever been suspicious of anything he did when you hugged or kissed him?

A. No, never.

Q. Have you seen Mr. Jackson hug your brother?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Have you seen him kiss your brother?

A. Yes. On the cheek, yes.

Q. Were you ever suspicious of the behavior when he did that?

A. No, never, ever.

Q. When you were in Mr. Jackson's room, did you ever see Mr. Jackson do anything inappropriate to your brother?

A. No, never, ever.

Q. Have you ever seen Mr. Jackson touch your brother in a sexual way?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever seen Mr. Jackson molest your brother?

A. Never.

Q. When you were traveling, your family, with Mr. Jackson did you see you brother with Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Have you ever been suspicious of any of Mr.

Jackson’s behavior towards your brother?

A. Never.

MR. MESEREAU: I have no further questions.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Good afternoon, Miss Barnes.

A. Hello.

Q. You are positively thrilled to be a friend of Michael Jackson’s, aren’t you?

A. Absolutely.

Q. You seem almost giddy about it.

A. I love him with all of my heart. I’ve known him since I was about seven or eight years old, so he’s one of my closest fields.

Q. Do you feel giddy when you’re going to see him a little bit, excited?

A. I feel no more excited than I would if I was seeing one of my other close friends that I haven’t seen in a while.

Q. Well, but he’s different, isn’t he?

A. No, he’s not. He’s just a normal human being like anybody else. He’s got the same organs, the same blood, the same emotions, the same feelings as anyone else.

Q. Well, but not everybody has Neverland, true?

A. Well, he’s worked hard to get everything that he wants, so everything that he has he’s worked really, really hard for.

Q. And he shares it with you?

A. Yes.

Q. And you love going to Neverland?

A. Of course I do.

Q. You get thrilled when you get to go there?

A. Of course.

Q. And when you were a child and you got to go to Neverland, it’s kind of like having everything you ever wanted as a kid, isn’t it?

A. It’s like going to a theme park and a zoo all at once, yeah.

Q. But it’s better than that, isn’t it?

A. Well, I guess so, yeah.

Q. Because it’s all yours, it’s all private, right? No other kids, no crowds?

A. There are other kids, though, because, you know, it's even better when there are other people there to, you know, play games with, have fun with and share things with.

Q. Haven't you been there when it was just your family?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And you get to stay up late?

A. Yes.

Q. And you get to have whatever you want to eat whenever you want it, right?

A. Like when I'm on any other vacation or holiday, yes.

Q. And you can play with Michael Jackson, the superstar, right?

A. No, Michael Jackson, the human being.

Q. Well, he is a superstar.

A. Yeah, I recognize that, but he's also a normal human being like anybody else.

Q. But didn't you say that you were a huge fan of Michael Jackson's before you ever met him?

A. Yes. Yes, I was. And I'm still a huge fan of his music today.

Q. Okay. So you greatly admire him for that?

A. I admire him for many things, yes, including his music.

Q. Okay. Now, you testified a little bit about your experiences with Michael Jackson and your brother.

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. And the very first night that you went to Neverland, you spent all night in his bedroom, didn't you?

A. Well, we didn't spend all night in his bedroom, no. We took a tour of the ranch. We went on the train that goes around the ranch. We saw, you know, as much we could of the theme park, the zoo. Because my brother and I were so excited to see a place we'd never been before, we spent the whole night trying to see everything all at once.

Q. Okay. But eventually you went back to Mr.

Jackson's room, correct?

A. We might have. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't you tell an investigator that; that you spent the entire first night at Neverland in Mr. Jackson's room?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. You weren't playing video games in his room?

A. I didn't say that, no.

Q. Did you go into his room that night?

A. I did go into his room that night when we first met him, yes.

Q. Did you stay up all night?

A. Yes, I did stay up all night, as I said before, both of us.

Q. And --

A. And I remember this because we slept the whole day the next day.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It's nonresponsive. I'll object.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Now, Miss Barnes, how many nights have you spent at Neverland?

A. I don't remember. It's been that many that I -- I simply can't recall.

Q. Hundreds, maybe?

A. Well, I wouldn't say hundreds. But definitely more than 10, 20, 30 times, yes.

Q. More than a 100?

A. I don't remember, but maybe.

Q. Okay. And of that 100 or so nights at Neverland, you've spent only two nights in Mr. Jackson's room?

A. That I remember, yes.

Q. Okay. And of those 100 nights that you spent at Neverland, how many nights was Mr. Jackson there?

A. Probably about 80, 90 percent.

Q. Okay. And of that 100 nights, how many nights was your brother there?

A. All the time.

Q. Okay. Every time that you were there?

A. Every time I was there, my brother was there, yes.

Q. And of those hundred or so nights, 80 percent of the time your brother slept -- when Mr. Jackson was there, your brother basically slept in Mr. Jackson’s room virtually every one of those nights, didn’t he?

A. Yes, because he wanted to.

Q. That’s a “yes” or “no” question.

A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell me why you didn’t spend the night in Mr. Jackson’s room as much as your brother?

A. Because I’m a girl, and I prefer to have a little bit of privacy.

Q. Okay. I see. Is it your opinion that -- well, let me back up.

How old was your brother at that time?

A. What, when we first started going to his house?

Q. Uh-huh.

A. He was about -- well, I was about 12, so he was about ten.

Q. Okay. So are you saying that it’s okay for a 35-year-old man who’s unrelated to sleep with a ten-year-old boy, but it’s not okay for a 35-year-old man who’s unrelated to a girl to sleep with her?

A. I’m not saying that at all. I’m saying that from my personal point of view, I was developing into an adult, and I was at the stage where I wanted my own privacy.

Q. Uh-huh.

A. And there were times when I was happy to, you know, hang out with them and sleep in their room, and there were times when I wanted to have my own room.

Q. Only two nights that you felt like sleeping with them?

A. That I remember, yes.

Q. Okay. Did you know that there were other boys that were at Neverland?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see other boys when you were at Neverland?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see them sleep in Mr. Jackson’s room?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Jackson chose your brother to be a very special friend of his, didn’t he?

A. Yes, because the reason why --

Q. That’s a “yes” or “no” question.

A. Yes. Well, yes.

Q. Thank you.

Now, when you went on tour with Mr. Jackson, you spent how many nights on tour?

A. Well, as I said, it was about half the year I was in Europe when I was in the seventh grade, and about half of the year I was in South America in the seventh -- in the eighth grade.

Q. How old was your brother at that time?

A. I was what, 13, 14. So he would have been about 11 or 12.

Q. And virtually every night on that tour, Mr. Jackson slept with your brother Brett?

A. Yes.

Q. How many nights would that have been, approximately?

A. Let’s see, let’s divide 365 days into half.

Q. Okay. Is that about it? About --

A. Well, if I said I spent half the year overseas with him one year and half of the year overseas with him the other year, I think that would total about 365 days altogether.

Q. Okay. So 365 nights he spent the night alone with your brother in his room?

A. Yes.

Q. Did that ever -- did that ever seem odd to you?

A. No.

Q. Didn’t seem odd to you that a 35-year-old man --

A. Not at all.

Q. -- is sleeping with a ten-year-old boy?

A. Not at all.

Q. During this entire period of time that you’ve known Mr. Jackson, has he given you gifts?

A. Yes, he has.
Q. Did he fly you over to the United States?
A. Yes, he has.
Q. Do you fly first class?
A. I have flown first class, and I’ve also flown business class.

Q. Did your mother permit this?
A. Yes. And so did my father.
Q. And do you know if your brother thinks it’s a disgrace to be a victim of a child molestation?
A. Of course he would. I do, too.
Q. So if he had to admit that, it would be disgraceful, wouldn’t it?
A. Well, no, it’s a disgrace that it would happen to a child. Not a disgrace to admit that it happened, but a disgrace that it has happened, if it has happened.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you. No further questions.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. MESEREAU:
Q. The prosecutor for the government asked you about your brother being a special friend of Michael Jackson. Are you a special friend of Michael Jackson?
A. Yes. And my parents are as well.
Q. Why?
A. Well, because we treat him just as we would treat anybody else, as a normal human being. We don’t take advantage of him, we trust him, we love him, and we give him a normal sense of life that so many other people never, ever do.
Q. The prosecutor for the government asked you about your brother sleeping with Michael Jackson, okay?

A. Yes.
Q. And you were traveling when your brother would be in Mr. Jackson’s room, right?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you ever suspect anything improper was going on?

A. Never.

Q. The prosecutor for the government asked you if -- didn’t it seem odd that Michael Jackson was in a room with your brother. Did you think it was odd?

A. No, I didn’t think it was odd.

Q. Why?

A. Because -- well, he’s a family friend. He’s like a brother to us. He’s given us -- not just given us gifts and given us things, but he’s -- you know, he’s given us --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; narrative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may finish.

THE WITNESS: He’s given us friendship and, you know, experiences that we would never get to see, you know, and....

My brother really always wanted to be there. He wanted to spend every minute, and he still wants to spend all of his minute -- all his time with him.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; nonresponsive.

THE COURT: All right.

THE WITNESS: And that’s why it’s not strange, because my brother wanted it.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; it’s nonresponsive.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: The prosecutor for the government asked you about victims of child molestation. Did you ever think your brother was a victim of child molestation?

A. Never.

Q. Did you ever think you were a victim of child molestation --

A. Never.

Q. -- of Michael Jackson?

A. Never.

Q. Now, have you learned about allegations in this courtroom that somehow your brother was improperly touched?

A. I have heard that that has been said by other people.

Q. What do you think of that?

A. I think they’re liars.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:
Q. Miss Barnes, has it ever occurred to you that virtually all families that have victims of child molestation where the molester is a friend and acquaintance, has it ever occurred to you that they are shocked and disbelieving when they learn that fact?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. No foundation; argumentative.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Goes to credibility.
THE COURT: The objection is sustained.
Argumentative.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Nothing further.
There’s no question.
THE COURT: That’s true.
MR. MESEREAU: Oh, okay.
THE COURT: But you could say, “No questions.”
You may step down.
THE WITNESS: Thank you.
THE COURT: (To the jury) I think it’s time for you folks to go home. We’ve got a couple of things to do, and I think we’ll just recess until Monday morning.
Let me tell you another day we’ve just -- I’ve been asked if we could take the 20th of September, which is -- or “September.”
(Laughter.)
THE COURT: I’m going to give you the 20th of September.

The 20th of this month, May, one of the attorneys has asked -- one of the attorneys has a commitment which I’m going to allow him to keep. And I think it’s good, too, that we get a break like that.
So next Tuesday afternoon we’re off, and the 20th of May. And we think we’re on schedule, just so you’re -- if you’re wondering about that information. Everything looks like we’re right on schedule. So see you Monday.

Remember the admonitions.

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: Mr. Sneddon, you had an issue you wanted to take up.

MR. SNEDDON: Yes. Actually, I have two issues, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SNEDDON: The first issue I’d like to address is a discovery issue, which has been an ongoing problem. And I wanted to alert the Court to the details and also make a record in that respect.

We announced last week that we were going to rest, and then again the beginning of this week announced that we figured we’d be finished by Tuesday. We didn’t. We finished on Wednesday.

But when we began to ask for defense witnesses, we were given the name of six witnesses. Five of them were not even on the defense witness list, and the discovery was provided about five o’clock the day before we were to rest. Then we find out yesterday on the witness stand that one of the witnesses had signed a declaration that we hadn’t been provided by the defense.

Last Saturday, I faxed a letter to the defense, after having reviewed the defense witness list and compared that to our discovery, and there are at least 75 to 80 people listed on the defense list where we have no documentation or reason or reports or anything to indicate why those people are going to be called in this case.

Since that time, I’ve further expanded my research on that issue. There are at least four employees from the ranch for which we have no reports on. Today there were three witnesses that they were going to call that we have no reports on, one of whom was not even on their witness list that was read to the jury.

There are 21 celebrities that they mentioned in their witness list. Of those, 15 have no reports indicating what they’re going to testify to.

There are 12 Los Angeles Police Department 9420

officers, only six of which can we identify anything that shows their names in the reports. We have no idea what the others are going to testify to, and I might add that I don’t think they know what they’re going to be asked to testify to.

In sum and substance, Your Honor, it is not my desire to prolong this case. I have every -- as much interest as this Court does in moving it. On the other hand, in being fair to us and the way that the Court required us to provide discovery to the defense, I think we’ve been placed in a very unfair posture at this point in the trial with regard -- for instance, just to use an example and then I’ll just sit down.

For example, two of the witnesses that were going to be called today, Detective Birchim and Jerome -- James --

MR. ZONEN: Jimmy Johnson.

MR. SNEDDON: It’s not Jimmy Johnson. Van Norman. They were witnesses whose depositions were taken in a lawsuit for which we have not been able to gain access because there’s Court orders sealing those records. And the defense knows that they’re going to call these people as witnesses, yet they’ve never provided the transcripts to us, yet we provided all of the transcripts of everything we had during the 1993 investigation.

That’s the kind of disadvantage that we’re 9421 being placed at, and I’m only asking the Court to hold the defense to the same standard that we’re held to and were being held to during the presentation of our case.

Now, I’m not unreasonable. I understand that there are going to be times when there are going to be things that are going to be turned over late. That happened to us. Somebody says something different or adds something to something at the last minute. But to have this kind of problem set forth when we’re talking about literally hundreds of witnesses with no documentation, I think it’s going to be very difficult for us to be prepared to continue and keep this trial moving on track. And I’m asking for the Court to enforce the provisions of the Penal Code that requires the defense to comply with discovery.

Oh, I want to also add, some of the reports that we were provided at five o’clock on Tuesday night were reports that were dated in January. In other words, the defense had had them for four, five months.

Oh, can I -- do you want me to tell you the second thing and I’ll sit down, or do you want to do them separately?

THE COURT: Whatever you like.

MR. SNEDDON: Let me do it separately -- at the same time and get it done.

MR. SANGER: At the same time; separate?

MR. SNEDDON: I indicated to the Court that it is our opinion, and we filed a brief on it this morning, that the defense has opened up the area of character evidence by introducing a lot of opinion evidence through all these witnesses, and we’re asking the Court to hold a hearing as to what we are entitled to ask, in good faith, of have-you-heard questions and to have some of those people re-called as witness or for future witnesses that may stray into that area.

Thank you.

THE COURT: I haven’t seen that material yet.

MR. SNEDDON: Okay.

THE COURT: Usually it’s brought over to me as soon as it’s filed, so are you sure you filed it this morning?

MR. ZONEN: It was this morning.

MR. SNEDDON: I was under the impression it was filed this morning.

THE COURT: Okay. Usually I have it by now.

As to the discovery issue?

MR. SANGER: Yes. Before I address that, can I just -- on the matter of things getting to the Court, we also filed something this morning, and

Your Honor, a little while ago, didn’t have it.

THE COURT: Which was the -- yeah, I don’t have that either.

MR. SANGER: It was the response to --

THE COURT: I know what you’re talking -- to the last item on --

MR. SANGER: I remember sequentially what it was, but the substance is escaping me at the moment. Anyway, we did file it. It was on Mr. Viner’s testimony.

THE COURT: Viner’s testimony. Yes, I -- okay.

MR. SANGER: Well, I suppose all I’m saying is, there may be a glitch somewhere in the conveyor belt from where it started and where it’s coming.

THE COURT: I’ll check.

MR. SANGER: With regard to discovery, first of all, there’s some factual inaccuracies in what Mr. Sneddon just said, one of which is he said that names were not on the witness list that we have included on our list of people that we’re trying to give both the Court and counsel prior to calling them.

And that is not correct. They are -- the ones that are added are at the end, starting on page 28 on the sixth amended witness list. So they were put on the witness list, but they are not alphabetical.

THE COURT: But you gave that list yesterday.

MR. SANGER: No, it was -- this last one was a couple of days ago.

THE COURT: The day before?

MR. SANGER: But we have -- well, there’s two different lists. Let’s just be clear, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I guess the question, though, is, does that really comply if you make a new list and put the name on it the day before you call a witness when you gave the real list several months ago? I mean, I find that to be a little --

MR. SANGER: Let me address that before the Court forms an opinion on this - okay? - if I may.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: I'm sorry, I didn't mean to misread what the Court was saying.

What I -- what has happened is, we have witnesses on this -- on the big list that was provided originally in December. The prosecution filed one in December, and then we all filed amended ones in January, and both sides have tried to keep up, all right?

The defense has had to react to certain things that have occurred. For instance, the prosecution has called some people that they indicated at first they weren't going to call, particularly on the 1108. Mr. Abdool was a late addition. He may have been on their master list, but when it came down to figuring who they were really going to call, they called a small percentage of the people they had on their master list.

THE COURT: I hope you do the same.

MR. SANGER: And we will do the same unless Mr. Sneddon forces us to call every one just to show that we can do it.

What we have done, seriously, is taken the master list, which had, oh, let's see, something like -- by the time we add all these other people, something like 500-and-some people on it.

We've taken that master list -- now, the master list, our understanding of providing it was any name or any possible witness who could be called by either side or whose testimony would figure prominently in the case, or their presence, even if they didn't testify. So we were trying to provide the Court with something that the Court could read and ultimately have counsel read it to the jury so they could see if they knew any of these people. It did not mean that we were going to call everybody. And I think both sides know that, that that's the case.

Now we're coming down to the people we're calling. We tried to give a list, not just for today, but we gave a list for a couple of three days' worth of witnesses.

As I explained to Mr. Sneddon personally, and as they did, we have to shift things around as time goes on. We expected that, for instance, we were going to start earlier, and as a result of that, we had other witnesses who were going to be -- who were ready to be called, and now we've had to reschedule them because they're from out of town, and that's just the way it goes. So that's that.

Now, of the people on the list, on our list that we gave to Your Honor and to the District Attorney, the short list, the -- the ones we're calling right now, there was one witness for which we had a declaration which we....

You have it. Okay. I take it you have Mr. Sneddon's as well.

THE COURT: Now I have each of those documents.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Of the people that Mr. Sneddon just referred to -- he said there were three people. Of those three people, there was one person, Francine Orozco, who we had a declaration from, and we believed that it had been turned over along with a whole series of declarations that had been turned over. They said they didn't get it.

We went back. We can't show that we gave it to them. I gave a copy immediately to Mr. Zonen and agreed that we would not call Francine Orozco until they had a chance to review it. He said Monday would be fine, so I think we worked that out. We're trying to be reasonable on that.

The other two, Russ Birchim is a sheriff's -- I believe he's a commander now, isn't he?

THE COURT: I think so.

MR. SANGER: He's a commander, and the only thing we were going to ask him about is contained in his reports on this case, and we have not interviewed him independently. There was one other small issue we were going to ask about. I won't announce what it was. I've explained this to Mr. Zonen. It was an issue that he testified to in the Abdool trial.

The Abdool court reporter’s notes are, by and large, not available, and what few notes we got were such -- they were so garbled, we couldn’t read it. In fact, the court reporter hired a computer expert to try to straighten it out and couldn’t. We got no notes with regard to this person.

So he testified. I told Mr. Zonen what he testified to, which was basically a one-sentence issue, and I said we weren’t -- we weren’t going to call him for that anyway. So the only issues we’re calling him on would be issues for which he wrote a report in this case.

The last witness they referred to, James Van Norman, we put on the list not to call him today, but to call him next week. We’re just trying to give them a heads-up for a couple, three days, and we have not reinterviewed him.

Now, I was just told today, and I wasn’t aware of this, that the prosecution did not receive copies of the Abdool case. Because they had Mr. Ring on their witness list, my understanding was they had all the depositions and the files. All the public files have been ordered unsealed, with the exception of just a very few, thanks to Mr. Boutrous and his never-ending work over there in Judge Canter’s court. I am now informed, as of today, that they did not have these depositions.

I have not reviewed his deposition, and we have no new report. We expect to talk to him before bringing him up here again. I will get his deposition, to the extent we have it, from our old files. If we have it, we will give it to them. So that was really it.

Now, as far as the rest of the people are concerned, we are -- to the extent we knew we were going to call them and we intended to call them and we interviewed them, we have provided reports. If we have any reports on anybody - in other words, anybody that’s on the master list - that we intend to call, if we had a report, we turned it over, to the best of my knowledge. I don’t know how Orozco slipped through as a declaration, but other than that, we have turned them over.

We understand our obligations. I think we're complying with them. The People, as Mr. Sneddon acknowledged -- you know, there were -- a couple people actually got on the stand, as the Court may recall, and we didn't have a report from them at all. So it happens. The Court dealt with it and said, "Call them tomorrow." I voluntarily said to do that with Miss Orozco. I suspect that we will cooperate in that regard. I don't think we're going to have a problem. We will have a further meeting today to make sure that all these Abdool depositions that pertain to witnesses we intend to call get turned over.

So I think that really answers the question. We haven't been withholding anything. And I'd suggest -- rather than arguing back and forth, unless there's something I said that was factually inaccurate, I'd suggest we try to continue to work this out, because I have talked with Mr. Zonen and I thought we were doing fine.

THE COURT: Is there a way that you could -- here's the problem that I find from both sides, and that is that if there's no report, the party notifying the other side of the witness could make such a notation beside the name, so it's clear on the record to each other -- not for me, but to each other that there is no report, and it gives them a chance -- and if you say there is a report and they don't have it, they could get it to you immediately. There's a problem when you don't know if you're just not giving a report, forgot to give a report, or there's no report.

MR. SANGER: More -- beyond that, I would go beyond that. There will be a report on everybody. I mean, even if the report is, "Their statement is their declaration." We actually have one person at this point, the only statement that we could turn over was a statement that a lawyer -- paraphrase of what a lawyer told us. In other words, we haven't had a chance to interview that witness yet. We may or may not before the witness is called. If we do, we'll give a formal report. But we have provided that to the D.A. We'll let them know.

There is the concept of rebuttal, and Mr. Mesereau is reminding me to just let the Court know. Obviously, a couple of these people, I think I said that at the very beginning --

THE COURT: I understood that.

MR. SANGER: -- Orozco and Jimmy Van Norman are really rebuttal to what came up very recently in the case. It's not we're holding back. It's that we're responding the best we can to that.

And we're starting with the '93 segment of the case, which I think is appropriate from our standpoint, but it also is the part where we have the real rebuttal burden because we didn't know whether it was coming in and what was coming in until late, so it's compounded that problem. But I think we're getting it done.

So if there's any other problem, I would suggest we meet and confer. And -- hold on one second. I'm sorry. Yeah.

(Discussion off the record at counsel table.)

MR. SANGER: And I think the Court understands, for instance, there are experts like the financial expert who just came forward, and we got his PowerPoint I think the very morning he was put on, if I'm not mistaken. So, we -- we have to respond --

THE COURT: I understand there's always problems on both sides.

MR. SANGER: We're doing our best is all I can tell you.

THE COURT: I expect you to comply, as I do both sides.

Is there anything you want to add that?

MR. SNEDDON: Well, I'd like to get out of here early today, Judge, but I just want to say, are we to assume, then, from Mr. Sanger if we don't have a report from anybody, they made the decision not to call them? I mean, there's over 100 people on there, plus, that we --

MR. SANGER: No.

MR. SNEDDON: Well, can we find out?

MR. SANGER: There's 500 people on that original list.

MR. SNEDDON: With no indication why they're coming.

MR. SANGER: Let's just make that clear. One more time, just like the prosecution gave us a giant list with a lot of people, we gave them a giant list with a lot of people. We're not going to call everybody on that list. So the prosecution can't assume anything from that.

When we give them the list, which we typed out and gave the Court a copy and we gave the prosecution the same thing, when we do this, as we do this, we expect that there will be a report that's been disclosed on every single one of the people that we put on the list before we call them. And if we have it, we'll give it to them right now. If we're -- for instance, in the case of the one person who's not on the list yet, the one person who we've only talked to his lawyer, we can't give a further report until we get it. So that's the example.

But as far as other people that are on the master list, nothing should be assumed. I mean, we're going to provide the discovery as soon as we can. And if we interviewed somebody and we intended at the time to call them, we would turn it over, and that's still our position, and that's what we will do. And I think once we get over the 1108, which is a little bit spontaneous because of the way it came up, it should go a little smoother.

MR. SNEDDON: Judge, the difference is very fundamental. We turned -- we had a list of people and we didn't call them all, but we gave discovery on everybody on that list before this trial started, so that if we did call them they could prepare. There were a couple of people -- there were a couple of people who we added to that list during the course of the trial.

And I don't mind a couple of people being added. We're talking about hundreds of people here, without us having an ability to even know why they’re going to be called or what they’re going to say, and they’re going to walk in here, and I guarantee you, they’re going to dump it on us two or three days before they come in here. If we’re lucky.

MR. SANGER: We promise not to dump it on them.

MR. SNEDDON: Well, I don’t want promises. I want compliance. We had compliance dates that you gave us. Why don’t they?

MR. SANGER: Well, I don’t know if this is productive. The fact of the matter is, there were a tremendous number of witnesses for which we had no reports. And we were --

MR. SNEDDON: That’s not true.

MR. SANGER: And we filed something in writing demanding the reports and we were told they didn’t have them. They had several experts in different categories and they gave us no reports. We couldn’t even figure out who they were.

Your Honor may recall we filed a motion because they had names down there that weren’t even real names of people. They had -- I remember one person, they had two people’s names put together, totally different people put together with a hyphen, and we spent forever trying to figure out who that was. So we’re beyond that, and we’re going to do our best and --

THE COURT: What I want you to do is to give them the reports on the witnesses that you have as soon as you possibly can.

MR. SANGER: Yes, sir. That’s what we --

THE COURT: That’s what’s required.

MR. SANGER: That’s what we intend to do. And with the exception of Orozco, for which I apologize - that was an old declaration - I think we’ve been doing the best we can. So we’ll --

THE COURT: And I do remember that I gave you some relief. We continued -- you know, we had to put some witnesses off until the next week, or several days, anyway. So if that is happens, you’re entitled to the same type of relief.

MR. SANGER: Do you want to address the character issue, or not?

THE COURT: Not right now. Now I have them. I haven't read it, so I want time to study what we're dealing with.
Are you going to file a response to that?
MR. SANGER: That's what I was going to say. If the Court would like, or give us permission to do it, we would like to file a response.
THE COURT: I would, if you'll file that Monday.
MR. SANGER: Yes, sir.
THE COURT: Then I think --
MR. SANGER: Eight o'clock or 8:15 or something?
THE COURT: Yeah, that's fine.
Now we have to have an in-camera hearing on the issue that Mr. Mesereau requested, so I'll need an attorney from each side, the court reporter and the clerk.
MR. SNEDDON: I'll go in.
THE COURT: And for those present in the courtroom, there won't be any further open court sessions today, so if you want to leave, you may.
MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, can Mr. Jackson leave?
THE COURT: Yes, Mr. Jackson may leave, too.

THE COURT: Raise your right hand, face the clerk.

FRANCIN CONTRERAS
Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.
THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.
THE WITNESS: Francin Contreras. F-r-a-n-c-i-n; C-o-n-t-r-e-r-a-s.
THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. SANGER:
Q. Good morning. Miss Contreras, were you known by another name at one point?

A. Francin Orozco.
Q. Okay. And Contreras is --
A. My married name.
Q. Your married name. So you were married since then?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. And have you worked at Neverland Valley Ranch?
A. Yes.
Q. When did you first start working there?
A. I believe it was ‘91, ‘92. I’m not sure. ‘91.
Q. In 1991. And how long did you work there?
A. About two years.

Q. How are you presently employed?
A. I’m at Foods Co., Lompoc, California, lead cashier.
Q. All right. Now, in the time period of 1991 and ‘92, did you have occasion to work with Adrian McManus?
A. Yes.
Q. Can you describe your relationship with Ms. McManus?
A. A good friend at that time.
Q. And at that time, did you go to her house, she go to your house?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you know her husband?

A. Yes.
Q. All right. Did you remain friends after you stopped working at Neverland Ranch?
A. For a bit.
Q. Okay. During the time that you knew Ms. McManus, did she ever make any statements to you whatsoever with regard to the molestation charges against or accusations against Mr. Jackson back at that time, in 1993?
A. Never.
Q. What did she tell you, if anything?
You have to sit forward, first of all, a little bit, because that microphone --
A. Oh, sorry.
Q. Everybody has that problem. You just have to talk into the microphone.
A. All right.
Q. Did she say anything one way or the other about the charges, and about Mr. Jackson?
A. Never. She always talked good about him.
Q. All right. Now, at one point, were you aware that she filed a lawsuit against Mr. Jackson?
A. That’s when I didn’t talk to her no more. We didn’t see each other.
Q. All right. What was -- did you talk to her at some point right at the end, right when that breakup occurred? Did she tell you what she was doing with her lawsuit, if anything?

A. She just -- well, meaning -- I really don’t know what you mean.
Q. Okay. Did she talk to you about her lawsuit? You say you stopped seeing her at some point after she filed the lawsuit, right?
A. Right.
Q. Okay. Did she tell you why she was filing a lawsuit?
A. No.
Q. All right. Now, did you visit the house of Mr. and Mrs. McManus?
A. Yes.
Q. Where did they live?
A. In Santa Maria.
Q. And did you visit there while Ms. McManus was working for Mr. Jackson?
A. Yes.
Q. What did you observe at her house?
A. In all her rooms?
Q. Yeah. Let’s talk about -- was there a room that had some --
A. Yes.
Q. -- Michael Jackson items?
Can you tell us about that?
A. She had hats that belonged to Mr. Jackson. Pajamas. Watches, T-shirts. Items that belonged to the ranch.
Q. Okay. Now, did you ever see her take items from the ranch?

A. Yeah.
Q. And how did she do that?
A. In a laundry basket. She used to take home Mr. Jackson’s clothes. She said she was going to iron them. But there was, like, a hat underneath there, and you can’t iron a hat.
Q. Okay. Was there an occasion where you all were asked to wrap Christmas presents for needy children?
A. Yes.
Q. Sit a little closer. I’m sorry.
A. Yes.
Q. Everybody has to do it. It’s not comfortable, sorry.

What can you tell us about that?

A. We were sent home -- because there was, like, lots of toys and gifts for the children. And we really couldn’t do all the wrapping at the ranch, because it was quite a bit, so we were asked to take some of the toys home to wrap, and bring them back, because they didn’t belong to us. And I noticed that Adrian had kept some Super Soakers and other items of toys for her son.

MR. SANGER: All right. Okay. Very well. I have no further questions.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. I’m sorry, is it Miss Contreras or Mrs. Orozco?

A. Contreras.

Q. Miss Contreras, was it more than one occasion that you saw Adrian McManus taking a laundry basket with items home?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that a fairly regular occurrence?

A. Yes.

Q. And would she stop to show you the items that she had in the laundry basket?

A. She didn’t stop.

Q. So she wasn’t showing you what she had and what she was taking home?

A. I seen them. We were walking together out to her car.

Q. All right. And she would have it in a laundry basket covered with items, but you would, nonetheless, see the items because you were looking through them?

A. No.

Q. You understood at the time that she was stealing at that time?

A. No. I thought she was taking them home to iron.

Q. She was taking a hat home to iron?

A. That’s what I said before, how could you iron a hat?

Q. That's my question to you. Did you see on each of the occasions that she took items home to iron, she had items that you believe that she was stealing?

A. No. She was taking them home to iron.

Q. All right. On only one occasion did she take home an item that you believed she was stealing?

A. No, because we were taking toys home, all of us were, to wrap. And they were supposed to be returned.

Q. I'm asking questions specifically about the occasions when you saw her bringing items in a laundry basket covered with laundry.

A. Right.

Q. Now, she did take items home to iron that were Mr. Jackson's items and she would bring them back; is that right?

A. I don't know if she brought them back. I didn't see her bring them back.

Q. Was that part of her job as you understood it?

A. To take them home and iron, yes.

Q. It was part of her job to take items that were, in fact, Mr. Jackson's personal clothing, to iron them for Mr. Jackson, and return them ironed to Mr. Jackson; is that correct?

A. I believe so.

Q. And she did that on a fairly regular basis?

A. Yes.

Q. She would work at home doing ironing for Mr. Jackson?

A. I never seen her ironing them, so I couldn't tell you, sir.

Q. She would -- she would take it -- a laundry basket with his clothing to iron and she would tell you that that's what she was doing?

A. Yes.

Q. You have no reason to believe she wasn't bringing them back; is that right?

A. Right.

Q. On one occasion you saw a felt hat that didn't need ironing?

A. Yes. I don't know what she was doing. She could have took it home to mend. I have no idea, sir.
Q. She could have mended it and brought it back the next day?
A. I suppose so.
Q. Did you ever ask her about that?
A. Nope.
Q. Did you ever ask her about the Super Soakers that were in there?
A. No.

Q. Miss Contreras, did you go to work for Mervyn's after you left Neverland?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Did you get fired from Mervyn's for stealing?
A. No.
Q. Were you prosecuted for stealing from Mervyn's?
A. No, it was trespassing.
Q. Well, you were prosecuted for stealing; is that right?
A. No, sir, it was trespassing.
Q. You were trespassing in the store that you were working in --
A. No, sir. No.
Q. Were you not working in there at the time?
A. Yes, I was.
Q. You were prosecuted for trespassing in a store that you were working in?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did -- were you ordered by the court to make restitution to Mervyn's?
MR. SANGER: I'm going to object, Your Honor, as to relevance.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. ZONEN: I have no further questions.
//

REDIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. SANGER:

Q. At the McManus residence, was there a particular room that was dedicated to the Michael Jackson --
MR. ZONEN: Objection; exceeding the scope of the cross-examination.
THE COURT: That’s true.
Did you want to reopen that?
MR. SANGER: Well, let me ask it a different way. The Court may see where I’m going.
Q. Whether or not you saw things in the laundry basket, did you see things from the ranch in Ms. McManus’s house?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And were they displayed in some fashion?
A. Yes.
MR. SANGER: All right. Okay. No further questions.
MR. ZONEN: No questions.
THE COURT: Thank you. You may step down.
MR. SANGER: Call Gayle Goforth.
THE COURT: Would counsel approach on this?
While she’s coming in, counsel approach. The District Attorney filed an in limine statement.
(Discussion held off the record at sidebar.)
THE COURT: Good morning. I’m going to ask you to face the clerk here, raise your right hand.

Go ahead.

GAYLE GOFORTH
Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.
THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.
THE WITNESS: My name is Gayle Goforth. G-a-y-l-e. Last name, G-o-f-o-r-t-h.
THE CLERK: Thank you.
THE COURT: Miss Goforth, we’re just going to ask you to sit there a minute. I know you don’t know what to expect, but I was just talking to the attorneys here, and I’m going to talk to them for a second before we do anything.
THE WITNESS: Okay.

THE COURT: (To the attorneys) Come forward.

(Discussion held off the record at sidebar.)

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Okay. Good morning.

A. Good morning.

Q. Do you know the gentleman seated right here?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Who is that?

A. Michael Jackson.

Q. All right. And how long have you known Mr. Jackson?

BAILIFF CORTEZ: I need you to speak right into the microphone.

THE WITNESS: Sorry.

I became employed at Neverland Valley Ranch in 1989.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. Now, every single witness, even those with louder voices than yours, has to sit right up to that microphone for some reason it’s a little uncomfortable there. So just try to project. You have a soft voice to start with.

Okay. So you started working in 1989. And what was your job when you started there?

A. I was a housekeeper.

Q. And did you eventually attain a different position?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And what was that?

A. I became supervisor of housekeeping.

Q. All right. And when did you become supervisor of housekeeping?

A. In 1990.

Q. Now, did you know Adrian McManus?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you know Ralph Chacon?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you know Kassim Abdool?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Were they also employees at the ranch?

A. Yes, they were.

Q. Were any of them working under you?

A. Adrian was.

Q. Ms. McManus was on the housekeeping staff; is that correct?

A. Yes, she was.

Q. And you were at that time the head of housekeeping?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. What was her assignment when she first started to work for you?

A. She was a housekeeper.

Q. Did she eventually get a new designation?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. And what was that?

A. She became -- she -- a caretaker of Mr. Jackson’s room.

Q. All right. Now, when you say “Mr. Jackson’s room,” what are you talking about?

A. Primarily -- pardon me, primarily cleaning his room and taking care of his personal items.

Q. All right. Now, first of all, if you’d like some water you can pour yourself some there.

A. Okay. Thank you.

Q. All right. When you say “his room,” we’re talking about the suite that we’ve all heard about that has the two floors and so on?

A. Yes.

Q. And part of her responsibilities were to make sure that the place was clean, I take it.

A. Yes.

Q. And she also was responsible for making sure that his laundry was done; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, did you have facilities at the ranch to do laundry?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. And during that period of time and perhaps today, but during that period of time, was the laundry done at the ranch?

A. Some of it was. A lot of the things were sent to the dry cleaners.

Q. I’m sorry, not dry cleaning, but the actual laundry, if you were going to wash sheets or wash clothing that did not need to be dry cleaned.

A. Yes.

Q. And could it be ironed there?

A. Yes.

Q. You had a room to do that in; is that correct?

A. Yes, we had a laundry room.

Q. All right. Was it part of Ms. McManus's duties to take clothing home, Mr. Jackson's clothing home, to iron it?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. Okay. And during that period of time when -- can you tell us when Ms. McManus was there, to the best of your recollection? Let me withdraw that.

Why don't you just tell us when she was taking care of Mr. Jackson's room.

A. I believe she started cleaning his room in -- around 1990, early 1991.

Q. Okay.

A. Until 1994.

Q. All right. Now, in 1994, did Ms. McManus stop showing up for work?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. Do you recall roughly when that was?

A. I don't remember exactly when.

Q. Sometime in 1994, though?

A. Yes.

Q. And the last time -- when I say "the last time," she stopped showing up for work and then she just never came back; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Before that happened, do you recall her taking any leave or being absent from work?

A. A lot, yes.

Q. And was Ms. McManus -- what was her attitude towards her position; do you recall?

A. Oh, gosh. Well, she changed -- when she was a housekeeper, when she became -- to take care of Mr. Jackson's room, she changed her attitude.

Q. And what did her attitude change to?

MR. ZONEN: I'll object as speculative and irrelevant.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I can answer?

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Yes.

A. Like she was above everybody.

Q. Was she a hard worker?

MR. ZONEN: I'll object as irrelevant.

MR. SANGER: I'll withdraw it.

Q. All right. Now, let me move ahead. When did you stop working at the ranch?

A. In 2002.

Q. All right. Were you at the ranch at the time the Arvizo family came to visit?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And do you remember -- what do you remember about the Arvizo family?

A. They were at the -- their first time that they came, they were very concerned about their son's health.

Q. Okay. And that was Gavin?

A. Yes.

Q. And he was not doing well at that time?

A. No, he wasn't.

Q. How many times did you see the Arvizo family at the ranch before you left your employment there?

A. The first time I saw the whole family was their first arrival. Thereafter, the father and the two boys came back, I would say, maybe four or five times.

Q. Okay. So the first time the whole family was there, that means the mother was there as well, is that what you're saying?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember her name?

A. Janet.

Q. Did you have any interaction with Janet Arvizo?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And what interaction did you have?

A. Shortly after their arrival, she started talking to me about being concerned about her son's health, and that they were having money problems, and that -- she asked me if I would give her a job at the ranch.

Q. And what was your response to that?
A. I told her that she needed to be more concerned about her son and that it was a long ways to --
MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object to the response as hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. ZONEN: And irrelevant. Move to strike.
THE COURT: Stricken.
MR. SANGER: All right. Not for the truth of the matter, Your Honor, but for the purpose of the response, if I may.
THE COURT: The response that Janet makes to her statement?
MR. SANGER: Yes, that’s correct.
THE COURT: All right.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Did you say anything specifically about the distance between her home and the ranch?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. And what did -- what did Janet Arvizo say in response to that?
A. She told me she would move to the valley in order to be closer to the ranch.
Q. When you say “the valley,” you mean the Santa Ynez Valley?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. Now, -- excuse me, I’m sorry. Going back to the entire time that you worked at the ranch, did you have occasion to see Mr. Jackson drink alcohol?
A. A few occasions.
Q. All right. And roughly -- let’s put it this way. When did you see him drink? What occasions would you see him drink alcohol?

A. At mealtime, dinnertime.
Q. Okay. Now, when you -- at some point during this period of time, or from time to time, you actually took care of Mr. Jackson’s room as well; is that correct?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And so you were one of the staff people who was allowed to go into his room to straighten it up or do whatever needed to be done; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And also to supervise people who would be doing that; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Did you ever see any bottles of alcohol or other evidence of alcohol strewn about? Can you explain what you might see?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Okay. So you might see a glass or something but you wouldn't see -- you wouldn't see alcohol just lying around his room?

A. No.

Q. All right. And let me also ask you about Mr. Jackson and his personal behavior. Would you say -- can you describe his behavior as far as being outgoing or shy or --

MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object as irrelevant, Your Honor, and vague.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: On vague?

THE COURT: Both.

MR. SANGER: Both? Okay.

Q. Did you have any occasion to observe whether or not Mr. Jackson would change his clothes in front of anyone? For instance, if you were in the room cleaning, would he be changing his clothes in there?

MR. ZONEN: Judge, that's irrelevant as to whether he would change his clothes in her presence.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: All right.

Q. Were there occasions where you came in and Mr. Jackson might be in the process of changing his clothes, changing a shirt or something?

A. No. He was very private.

MR. SANGER: All right. Okay. I have no further questions.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Miss Goforth, you were recently interviewed by an investigator for the defense; is that correct?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And you were asked questions about that conversation that you had with Janet Arvizo; is that right?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Now, that conversation that you had with Janet Arvizo was approximately August of 2000, was it?

A. I don’t recall exactly. No.

Q. When did you leave Neverland Ranch?

A. I left in 2002.

Q. All right. You only saw Janet Arvizo on one single occasion when she was at Neverland; is that right?

A. One occasion, yes.

Q. And she was there with her husband and her three children; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. They were there for one night, two nights?

A. They were there for a couple of days.

Q. Couple days? Did you interact with her on more than one occasion during that time?

A. Well, yes.

Q. Now, you told the investigator for Mr. Jackson not that she was prepared to move to the valley, but that she was prepared to sleep in her car outside Neverland; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you just change it to say that she was prepared to live in the valley?

MR. SANGER: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

THE WITNESS: No, I wasn’t able to complete my --

THE COURT: Just a moment. Just a moment. I sustained the objection. Next question.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Now, the statement that you gave was that she was prepared to sleep in her car right outside the doors to Neverland; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, did you ask her if she had a car?

A. She stated that she didn’t even have a car and that they were living in separate quarters.

Q. All right. So she told you she didn’t have a car but she would sleep in the car she didn’t have outside the ranch?

MR. SANGER: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Ma’am, what exactly did she tell you? Did she tell you she had a car?

A. No, she didn’t say that she had a car.

Q. She told you she was going to get a car?

A. No, she didn’t say that. She said that -- the conversation was, she asked me if she could have a job at Neverland. I told her that it was a long ways from -- I assumed that they lived in the Los Angeles area. And it was a long ways to come. She said that she would move to the valley in order to be closer to the ranch. And I told her that the rents and that were very expensive in the area. Just trying to dissuade her from this.

And she said, “Well, I’ll come and I’ll sleep in my car if I have to. I just need money. I need to work.”

Q. Go ahead.

A. “I need” -- “I need a job. I need to work. We’re living in separate quarters, and we need the money. Gavin’s very sick,” to that effect.

Q. All right. Did you take a job application to give her?

A. No, I did not.

Q. All right. You decided at that time that she wasn’t qualified to clean rooms at Neverland?

MR. SANGER: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you make a determination as to why she shouldn’t work at Neverland?

A. Well, I just saw her being a guest and everything, that it wasn’t appropriate to -- I had several guests come to the ranch and ask. Everybody thought it was fun to work at the ranch. And --

Q. But she asked specifically for a job as a maid; is that right?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. About that time that job made about what, eight dollars an hour?

A. Yes.

Q. You knew, did you not, that she, in fact, had a job, was working in Los Angeles at the time?

A. No, I did not.

Q. And in fact, she had an apartment at that time?

A. I didn't know. I didn't -- my job was not to stand and carry conversations with the guests and that. I was trying to dissuade her from, and get away -- out of the conversation.

Q. Miss Goforth, your job at Neverland Ranch ended when?

A. In 2002.

Q. And that ended because you were being disciplined for stealing; is that right? Is that right?

MR. SANGER: Objection; lack of foundation.

MR. ZONEN: We're going to get there.

MR. SANGER: And move to strike counsel's remarks.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Were you, in fact, suspended from your job because you were taking things that you weren't entitled to take?

A. I was suspended from my job over the sale of some furniture that I thought was allowed to be done. I was just doing what I was told by another party.

Q. All right. So you took some items from Neverland and they then accused you of taking it without the permission of the owner; is that right?

A. I didn't personally take the items.

Q. Somebody else took them and you sold them?

A. I didn't sell them. It was arrangements that were made through someone else.

Q. And ultimately who made the decision to discipline you for that?

A. I believe Mr. Jackson.

Q. All right. And thereafter, you terminated your position voluntarily; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Because you were offended as to how you were treated?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. In fact, there’s a fair amount of controversy at Neverland about who can take what and when they can take it; is that right?

MR. SANGER: Objection. Vague and argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Please answer the question.

A. Could you repeat the question?

MR. ZONEN: Could the reporter read that back?

THE COURT: I’ll have the reporter read it back.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: I don’t believe so. I believe that no one should take anything at any time without Mr. Jackson’s permission.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: And -- all right. But a lot of people have been accused of taking things from Neverland; is that right?

MR. SANGER: Objection. Vague as to time and --

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: You’ve actually turned in people for taking things at Neverland, haven’t you?

A. No.

Q. You’ve never turned in people for taking things at Neverland?

A. Not personally myself, no.

Q. Didn’t you turn in Ramon Velasco for taking something at Neverland?

A. No, I did not.

Q. And you never went back to work at Neverland after that; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

MR. ZONEN: No further questions.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. All right. With regard to this business about selling items from Neverland, did you ever sell anything from Neverland for your own personal benefit?

A. I did not.

Q. Was there somebody else who was in a position higher than yours who directed that certain items be sold?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. And was -- were they being sold for your benefit?

A. No.

Q. They were being sold for the benefit of the ranch?

A. Yes, they were.

Q. And the problem was that apparently --

MR. ZONEN: Objection; leading.

MR. SANGER: That’s true. Let me withdraw the beginning of that. I didn’t get it out. But it would have been leading, I agree.

Q. What was the problem that gave rise to the people involved in selling these items eventually being disciplined in some way or being reprimanded?

MR. ZONEN: That’s vague and compound.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Apparently Mr. Jackson didn’t want the furniture sold.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. Were the proceeds of the sale intended to go to Mr. Jackson and to the ranch?

A. For the ranch, yes.

Q. Okay. So nobody was stealing anything; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you. I have no further questions.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Can we assume you told Mr. Jackson all the things you just told us about this incident?

A. No, I did not.

Q. You did not? Did you have any conversation with Mr. Jackson thereafter?

A. No, I did not.

Q. How did you find out that it was Mr. Jackson who disciplined you?

A. I assumed that it was. I didn’t know that for a fact.

Q. Did you tell anybody about what had happened?

A. No, I immediately left the ranch.

MR. ZONEN: No further questions.

MR. SANGER: And I have no further questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you. You may step down. Call your next witness.

MR. SANGER: Call Violet Silva.

THE COURT: Please remain standing. Face the clerk here and raise your right hand.

VIOLET GAITAN SILVA

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Violet Gaitan Silva. Violet, V-i-o-l-e-t; Gaitan, G-a-i-t-a-n; Silva, S-i-l-v-a.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. I’ll let you get some water there first. So take your time.

A. Thank you.

Q. All right. Miss Silva, how are you employed?

A. I’m employed by Neverland Ranch as a safety coordinator at this time.

Q. Okay. Now, everybody's having this problem in this courtroom. You have to sit real close.
A. Okay.
Q. It's not -- there we go. That might help. And then when the air conditioner is on it makes it a little harder to hear.

A. All right.
Q. So repeat that again, please.
A. I am employed by Neverland Ranch as a safety coordinator at this time.
Q. And where is your office?
A. My office is located in the administration building.
Q. Where is the administration building with respect to the ranch house, I mean, to the actual house, Mr. Jackson's house?
A. It's southwest approximately less than a quarter mile.
Q. Is it up on a hill?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. And is it outside the manicured grounds of Neverland?
A. I would say the immediate grounds, yes.
Q. Not to say the administration area isn't manicured, but there is a place that's all grass and pastures and so on, right?
A. Yes.
Q. And it's outside of that, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. Can you describe the kind of structure that houses the administrative offices?
A. It's a converted barn. And it has one large office area with a conference area. It has two smaller offices. It also stations a fire engine in the bay and one other small office and two -- three bathrooms, excuse me, and some storage areas.

Q. Okay. So let's start with the fire truck. That's the fire station as it were; is that correct?
A. The fire brush truck is located in the administration building.
Q. All right. So -- and at this time there's one fire truck; is that right?

A. Yes, it's a brush truck.

Q. And on prior occasions, how many fire trucks have been there?

A. We've had as many as two.

Q. All right. Now, when you talk about the brush truck, is it a fully outfitted fire truck?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And do you have trained fire personnel to man the -- or staff, I should say, the fire truck?

A. Yes. We have trained firefighter/EMTs.

Q. You said EMTs?

A. EMTs, yes.

Q. I'm having a little trouble hearing at the end of your sentences.

A. Okay.

Q. All right. Now, the administrative office is -- you talked about a number of offices being in there. You have an actual executive office there right now; is that correct?

A. Yes. I share it with the fire supervisor at this time.

Q. All right. And then there's a staff area where an administrative assistant sits; is that right?

A. Yes, and the ranch manager.

Q. All right. And then there's a separate office for the ranch manager, or the ranch manager is out --

A. No, they have separate offices.

Q. Okay. At the current time, who is the administrative assistant up there?

A. Tracy Chapman.

Q. And does she have a large phone?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, in the years -- did I ask you when you started there --

A. No.

Q. -- I think I did. Okay. When did you start working there?

A. July 1st, 1991.

Q. We'll go back over what you've done there in a minute.

A. Okay.
Q. But in the years you’ve been there, have you had occasion to see the different phones throughout the ranch?

A. Yes.
Q. All right. And are there some regular, smaller handset phones throughout the ranch?
A. Yes.
Q. Is the main phone in the administrative office larger than those phones?
A. Yes. There’s a regular small phone and there’s also a larger console type of phone.
Q. Would that be the main phone for the phone system?
A. No, it’s not.
Q. All right. Where is the main phone?
A. The calls are mostly taken through the security gate, and also at Miss Chapman’s desk, depending on which number the person is calling.
Q. When I said “main phone,” I was asking about the equipment. But you’re saying that calls are answered at some of the smaller handsets; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And one of the places where calls are routinely answered is the front gate?
A. Yes.
Q. And the other would be at Miss Chapman’s desk?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. The ranch manager -- who’s the ranch manager at the present time?

A. Joe Marcus.
Q. And does he have an office there in the same administrative building?
A. Yes.
Q. When did you obtain the position that you have now?
A. November of 2004.
Q. Let’s go back to when you started at the ranch. And actually, before you started at the ranch, did you have any particular training and experience?

A. I had graduated from Allan Hancock Police Academy in 1989, December. And shortly after, well, ‘91, I applied for a position out at the ranch as a security officer, which I started July 1st of ‘91.

Q. All right. So you went to the POST academy?

A. Yes.

Q. Police officer training academy, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you receive the certificate?

A. I graduated but I did not receive the certificate, because I did not work full time as a police officer. So I guess my answer would be no to that, I did not receive the POST certificate.

Q. So you did the education and the training through Allan Hancock, but you didn’t do the inservice training as a police officer; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. And do you consider yourself to be a peace officer or a police officer?

A. No.

Q. All right. And have you ever?

A. No.

Q. All right. So you went to work as a security guard at the ranch --

A. Yes.

Q. -- in 1991, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the ranch have a security staff -- well, let’s start with that. You weren’t the only person?

A. No.

Q. Okay. And was the staff organized according to rank?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was the chief of security at that time; do you recall?

A. Terry Cooney.

Q. And between 1991 and 2004, did you continuously work in the security department?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell us briefly what -- how you progressed through the department?

A. In October of ‘91, I was promoted to a relief supervisor position, which would carry the rank of corporal. And in January of ‘94, I believe, I was promoted to a full-time shift supervisor, which has the rank of sergeant. In May of ‘97, I was promoted to the chief’s position of security. And in June of ‘98, I assumed the fire chief position as well.

Q. All right. And you -- when you were finally moved into this other administrative position, as of that time in 2004, you were the chief of both the security and the fire department; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, you know Mr. Jackson --

A. Yes.

Q. -- correct?
Do you know Mr. Jackson well?

A. I would say so.

Q. All right. Do you spend -- in the course of your employment, do you spend a lot of time talking with Mr. Jackson?

A. No.

Q. All right. And can you explain what the policy is for employees at the ranch as far as having contact with Mr. Jackson?

MR. SNEDDON: Object as immaterial, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I’m sorry, can you repeat the question?

THE COURT: I can have it read back.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: Our contact is limited to him making requests. And other than that, if we have any concerns about the operation of the ranch, we channel those through the ranch manager.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Now, that policy would pertain to security, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. It would pertain to fire; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Did it pertain to the other departments as well?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. So housekeeping?

A. Yes.

Q. The zoo?

A. Yes.

Q. Grounds or maintenance?

A. Yes.

Q. Did I leave any out?

A. There's a few.

Q. Okay. There's some more. But all of the different units out there have their own chain of command, as it were; is that correct?

A. Correct. There's employees, a department head for each department, and each department is directly supervised by the ranch manager.

Q. And who is the ranch manager at the current time? Did I ask you that?

A. Yes. Joe Marcus.

Q. So if somebody in your department -- as the chief of security, if somebody in your department had some question about procedure or how things ought to be done, where would you expect them to go?

A. I expect them to immediately go to their shift supervisor, to whoever the chief is at the time. If I was in charge, then to me. If I couldn't answer the question, then I would go to Mr. Marcus with a question.

Q. All right. Did you ever sit down with Mr. Jackson and ask him how he'd like to have security taken care of at the ranch?

A. No. But if he had a suggestion, he sure would let me know.

Q. Okay. When you had -- when you made policy decisions about security, would you discuss those with Joe Marcus or with somebody else, or how would you do that?

A. I would discuss those with Mr. Marcus.

Q. All right.

A. And my shift supervisors as well.

Q. Now, you said that Mr. Jackson would let you know. Did Mr. Jackson from time to time let people know that he thought something ought to be done at the ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And would the staff attempt to fulfill those requests?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. In all the time that you were there, did Mr. Jackson ever ask you to do anything that you thought was inappropriate?

A. No.

Q. All right. Now, by the way, you’ve come here pursuant to a subpoena; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you also interviewed with law enforcement; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you have told both sides that you were going to tell the truth to both sides no matter what; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that your intention, to tell the truth here on the stand?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Now, in the course of the time that you worked there -- I asked you if Mr. Jackson ever asked you to do anything that was inappropriate. During the course of the time that you worked at the ranch, did you ever observe anything that appeared to you to be illegal or inappropriate?

A. No.

Q. And if you had, what would you have done about it?

A. Well, I would have at the time taken into consideration what the action was and addressed it appropriately.

Q. Now, before you were a chief of security, if you saw anything inappropriate or illegal, would you have reported it to a supervisor? Before you were chief of --

A. Oh, absolutely, yes.

Q. And again, you told us about the chain of command so --

A. Yes.
Q. And as the chief of security, if you saw anything inappropriate or illegal, what would you have done? Who would you have reported it to?
A. I would have followed my chain of command, and notified my supervisor, who was Joe Marcus.
Q. All right. Now, during the course of the time that you worked in security and you’ve been the chief of security -- in fact, I’m really drawing on that experience as your involvement in security there, whatever rank you had during the period of time. What would happen if you -- if anybody in security observed something, let’s say a golf cart accident - we’ve heard about those - what would happen?

A. Well, we would first immediately make sure -- whoever the driver was, make sure they weren’t injured. That would be our first concern. If they were -- then we would attend to that. Afterwards, if there was no injury or we took care of the injury, then we would either make sure that the vehicle, the cart, whatever it was, was still roadworthy. If it was not, we would remove it and take it to the mechanic’s shop and we would make a report as well. And depending on why it happened, if it was deemed necessary, we would take that privilege away from that person if they weren’t handling the cart properly.
Q. All right. Let’s start with the report. Is there a formal reporting system that has been in place at the ranch since you started there as a security officer?
A. Yes.
Q. And can you explain what that is?
A. Well, depending on the incident or the severity of it, if it’s a medical incident, then a report is made, regardless of how minor or insignificant it may seem. If it’s a damage report, we will do the same. If we consider that there may be a hazard involved, then we address the hazard as well. So -- and just write down a line, if there’s a theft, if there’s something missing, if we have a trespasser. It could be anything.

Q. All right. Now, with regard to the different kinds of reports you talked about, there are medical reports. There's actually a form to make a medical report; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And is that filled out every time the EMTs are called to attend to somebody who might be injured?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Now, you said there's EMTs. Firefighters/EMTs. Do you generally have an EMT on the property at all times?
A. We try to make sure that that's covered. It's a priority for us. So we do.
Q. If anybody is injured anywhere on the ranch, whether it's an employee, a guest, Mr. Jackson, you have somebody there who can give first aid?
A. Yes.
Q. Do the -- if somebody is injured, do the EMTs make the final call as to whether or not any further medical assistance is needed?
A. They'll make the assessment, but a patient always has the right to refuse treatment. So if that's what they do, then we can just ask them to, you know, seek further treatment. If not, then that's where it stops. If we feel they absolutely need to go, in the event of a work injury, then they're required to go.

Q. All right. Now, when you say "go," we're talking about going to the local hospital or getting a doctor or --
A. Correct. Or call whatever means is necessary, whether it's ambulance or outside of our department with county fire.
Q. And have you had occasion at times to actually call in ambulances to the ranch?
A. Yes.
Q. Even, I think, a medical helicopter evacuation?
A. Yes.
MR. SNEDDON: I'm going to object as immaterial and irrelevant, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Do you have a --

MR. SANGER: That was actually the last question in that area. But it does tie into some other evidence.

THE COURT: All right. I'll overrule the objection.

MR. SANGER: All right.

Q. Now, you indicated that in addition to the medical reports, that the -- you also have reports with regard to property damage, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you indicated that there are occasions where a guest -- let me withdraw that. What happens if a guest is not being safe with some of the equipment?

A. Well, then we temporarily give them a cooling-off time, or we would remove the equipment from them.

Q. And why would you do that?

A. For their safety.

Q. Now, is one of the concerns in your department safety of the guests?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that pertain to adults or children or both?

A. Both.

Q. And how is that concern for safety implemented in your department?

A. Well, when they're initially given a cart to drive, or a vehicle, or a quad runner, we give them instructions on how to operate the equipment safely. You know, on occasion it does happen where they get a little rambunctious and we feel like maybe they can't control it properly, then we give them a warning, and advise them again of the proper use of the equipment. And if they continue to either cause damage to the cart or other things, then we usually pull the equipment.

Q. Now, do you have to ask Mr. Jackson first before you do that?

A. No.

Q. And if you see kids who are not being supervised by their parents on the ranch, does security try to keep -- let’s put it this way: Is there any additional attention given to those kids by security?

A. Well, I would say that’s just our priority in general. So -- it’s what we’re doing there. So it’s not -- we don’t have heightened awareness. It’s just what we are trained to do and what we’re there for. So that’s a constant regardless of whether their parents are there or not.

Q. So if you see kids -- whether the parents are there or not, if you see kids riding the carts and you think -- in the morning you saw somebody going a little fast, is security going to tend to watch that kid a little more closely?

A. Sure.

Q. All right. Do you sometimes make entries in the gate logs?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, we’ve seen something about gate logs, so we don’t have to absolutely go back to square one, but can you describe the purpose of the gate logs and how they’re kept?

A. The purpose of the gate logs is we have three different sheets, and it’s evolved over time, depending on what our needs are for our department. It’s mainly used to document in-and-out times for our employees, contractors, guests’ arrival.

It also documents our own activity on the ranch as far as our work that we do, so if we have to refer back to a time or a directive that is given to us, we can refer back to it.

Q. How many security officers are on duty generally? Let’s say in recent years, in the 2000s, how many security officers would be on duty at any given time during the day?

A. We try for four. Four is what we -- is a good number for us.

Q. All right. Would that be 24 hours a day?

A. Yes.

Q. And can you describe what the duties of the four different officers would be?

A. Well, they would come in and get whatever equipment they need. They would either report to three different posts that we have, which is at the front gate, the main house, or a mobile patrol.

Their duties vary at each of the stations.

The main gate is -- primarily their function is to ask guests -- authorize guests or contractors.

They also dispatch a request from the owner or another department that needs something. We answer the phones. A lot of phone calls come through there after hours as well, so --

Q. So you have -- you generally have one officer mobile - all right? - one in the gatehouse, and where would the other two be?

A. One would be at the house and hopefully the other one would be a supervisor. So most of the times it would be a supervisor.

Q. You talked about the front gate. There's a gatehouse there; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And can you describe that building, about how big it is?

A. The building is probably about 15 square feet. It has a small eating area, a desk area, a bathroom, has a phone. T.V.

Q. Okay. I am thinking 15 square feet, that's kind of small.

A. It works.

Q. Okay.

A. It's all we need.

Q. All right. So there's a desk in there; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And there's a bathroom; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And there's an area where you can sit and watch a T.V., correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, during the course of the shift or during the course of a day -- let's put it this way: During the day, how many shifts are there for security?

A. We work a 12-hour shift, so we have two shifts, starting from 6 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., from 6 p.m. to 6:30 a.m.

Q. All right. And I take it you have the required breaks, lunch breaks and other breaks, in the middle of that shift?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, in addition to security, do you have fire on duty?

A. Yes.

Q. And how many fire people do you have?

A. How the department is worked is that our firefighters do security work. So most of them, or the majority of our security officers, are firefighter/EMTs.

Q. So they also have the EMT training?

A. Yes.

Q. Did that change? Did you have a separate fire staff at one time?

A. Yes. From the time I was first hired in ‘91, the security department was separate from the fire department. And in ‘98, June ‘98, when I assumed the fire chief duties, our department was combined at that time.

Q. By the way, Brian Barron, do you know that name?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Brian Barron?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And is he a police officer?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall him working at the ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. At the time he worked at the ranch, was it known to everybody in the security department that he was, in fact, a sworn peace officer?

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: Object; calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Now, going back to the front gate issue, where are the gate logs actually kept during the day?

A. During the day, the gate logs are kept there, and they're actually kept there for the entire week. And on Monday morning, they're picked up.

Q. And where do they go after that?

A. They go to the administration office.

Q. And the administration office, again, is the building up on the hill?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, there's been discussion about a security office at the end of the building that has the garage, Mr. Jackson's office, and then it has the video library upstairs.

A. Yes.

Q. Can you describe that security office?

A. The -- it has two separate rooms. The first office is approximately a nine-by-ten room. It has a desk, a computer, a counter space that holds our equipment and other things, like paper towels and napkins.

The back area is with lockers and a table for eating and refrigerator and microwave.

Q. All right. Now, is this a staff area?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And this is part of that structure. Does it have a door that you enter from the outside or do you go inside that structure to enter?

A. No, you enter from the outside.

Q. All right. And the door that you enter is away from the house; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. What is kept generally -- in the 2003 time period, what is kept at that location?

A. At that location -- excuse me, I forgot to mention, we do have a file cabinet there. We have a file cabinet that holds reports, our confidentiality agreements. We also have our gate logs in there for the entire year. They're housed in there. And whatever little bits of equipment that we may have in that storage.

Q. All right. Now, you mentioned a confidentiality agreement. Can you explain what that is?

A. The confidentiality agreement is a four-page contract that all guests or anyone entering Neverland reach -- that read, that read it, and they have to be over the age of 18. The contract, in a nutshell, is that you agree to keep your visit private and confidential.

Q. All right. Is it designed to conceal illegal activity?

A. No.

Q. What’s the purpose of the confidentiality agreement?

A. The purpose of the agreement is to keep you from profiting from your experience there, selling to a magazine or any sort of media.

Q. Okay. Does it also include a provision that people are not supposed to take pictures while they’re there on the ranch?

A. Yes, they agree to not use any sort of recording agreement.

Q. And the purpose of that, not allowing any kind of recording equipment or pictures, is what?

A. Is to prevent probably the profit of sale as well.

Q. So if you didn’t have that as the chief of security, you would expect that pictures and recordings from the ranch would end up in the media, on television and in magazines otherwise; is that true?

A. Yes.

Q. Is any of that designed to conceal any kind of untoward or illegal activity?

A. No.

Q. All right. Now, going back to how the security system is set up -- I’m sorry, the security operation is set up, you mentioned the front gate, and we talked about that. The person -- well, let’s talk a little more. The person down at the front gate, I think you said, answers the phones?

A. Yes.

Q. And that’s on a regular little handset phone; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You just forward the calls from there?

A. Yes.

Q. The person at the front gate also has the responsibility of letting people in and out?

A. Authorized persons only.

Q. All right. Now, you mentioned “mobile.” What does “mobile” mean?

A. Mobile patrol is a truck that patrols the property. We also patrol about three miles of the front perimeter as well. They patrol the property and make sure we don’t have trespassers, that our employees are safe, there are no other hazardous conditions going on.

We also respond to alarm calls on the property. They also have the duties of locking up certain buildings and securing the ranch at a certain hour.

Q. Let’s talk about patrolling the front of the property. Does that mean going out on Figueroa Mountain Road?

A. Yes.

Q. And why do you do that?

A. Well, occasionally we find vehicles that are parked outside of our fence line. And that would be an indication that perhaps we have a person who’s jumped the fence and might be on property.

Q. Now, part of the fence is just a split-rail fence, is that correct, in the front?

A. Yes, approximately a half a mile of it is just your typical split-rail fencing.

Q. So it’s not a wire meshed fence?

A. No.

Q. And is it fairly easy for people to go through that fence?

A. Through or over.

Q. Now, there are parts of this ranch -- how big is the ranch?

A. The ranch is 2700 acres, or approximately five square miles.

Q. All right. And is there any kind of a commercial operation on the ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. What is that?

A. We have cattle on the ranch.

Q. All right. Is that something you -- you have your own cattle, Michael Jackson’s cattle?

A. No, part of the property is --

MR. SNEDDON: I’m going to object as immaterial and irrelevant.

MR. SANGER: That has to do with the fencing.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes, it’s leased by a rancher who has cattle on the property.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. And are there parts of the property that are fenced to keep the cattle in?

A. Correct.

Q. And there are parts of the property that are fenced to keep the cattle out, I take it?

A. Correct.

Q. When you go into Mr. Jackson’s home area, let us say -- do you have a term for that, the --

A. I would say beyond the arched gateway, we call it the main house area.

Q. And the arched gateway, is that the golden gates?

A. The golden gates.

Q. The black gates with gold on them? All right.

Now, is there fencing designed to keep people on the ranch so that they cannot get off?

A. No.

Q. The golden gate that you described, does that automatically open if you approach it?

A. You would have to approach it by a vehicle, with a vehicle.

Q. Okay. If you have a vehicle, it automatically opens?

A. Yes.

Q. There’s no requirement that you ask anybody or push buttons or anything else, right?

A. No. There’s also a way to go around the gate as well, on foot.

Q. Okay. We're going to get to that. But as far as the cars --

A. Okay.

Q. That's all right.

As far as cars are concerned, whether you are coming in or you are going out, if you just pull up, it trips a sensor and the gates automatically open, correct?

A. Right. Depending on the size of the vehicle, it senses the weight or the metal. And a golf cart could open it, could activate it, as well as a quad runner.

Q. And in fact, golf carts and quad runners do go through that gate; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you said you can also walk around the gate; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there any kind of a locked fence that you have to get permission to go through to go past that gate?

A. No.

Q. All right. All right. So you said the mobile -- it's -- right now it's a little pickup truck; is that correct?

A. Yes, a Ford.

Q. I'm sorry?

A. A Ford Ranger.

Q. And over the years it's been a different type of vehicle, I would take it?

A. Mostly that, though.

Q. Mostly a small Ford pickup?

A. We did have a Nissan as well.

Q. Some kind of pickup truck, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Besides patrolling from time to time Figueroa Mountain Road to see if there are vehicles or possible intruders, does the mobile also patrol within the ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. And just tell us generally where the mobile unit would go.

A. Well, the ranch has two main roads that loop throughout the property, and they meet about a quarter mile from the front gate. From there -- from that point to the main residence is another quarter mile. So we would patrol that entire area. So we would do a loop approximately of about five miles starting from the house security office to the furthest part of the ranch, back out to the front road and back.

Q. All right. Now, you say “the furthest part of the ranch.” Do you go up past the theater into the zoo area?

A. Yes, the furthest point would be the train barn or another -- another area where we have a stockpile of manure, compost, gravel and sand.

Q. All right. Now, if you have two other people on duty, you said one might be a supervisor and then you’d have another security officer; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. What would they do? We’ve got the front gate person who stays at the front gate. You’ve got mobile. What would the other two people be doing on a typical shift?

A. We always have someone located at the main house.

Q. “Located at the main house” would be sitting in the security house at the end or walking around or both?

A. Both.

Q. And what does the person do who’s there at the main house? Can you describe what their duties would generally be? And they differ at night and daytime, you can make that distinction.

A. Generally what they do is they secure -- they have the responsibility of securing that area, which means doing a foot patrol around the house, which includes the main residence, the rec room, the guest units, and as far away as maybe another quarter mile walking, if it’s necessary. They also accommodate guests’ requests. If, you know, something’s needed, they assist the house staff as well.

Q. So if somebody calls and says, you know, “I’d like to go into the theater and the theater is locked,” is that something that security might take care of?

A. Yes.

Q. And if a guest calls and requests some sort of refreshments, what would -- just tell me what happens. Somebody says, you know, “We want lunch. It’s lunchtime. Can we please have lunch?” What would you do?

A. We would call the kitchen and let them know the guests are ready for lunch.

Q. Now, you said “call.” Do you have radios?

A. Yes.

Q. And what kind of radios do you have? Not the brand, but, you know, is it a -- does it hit a repeater or what?

A. Yes, it hits a repeater. We also have radio to radio within a mile distance.

Q. All right.

A. We have two channels.

Q. So one channel goes off a repeater somewhere on a hill, and you’re able to make communication that way?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you can do the car to car?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, are the radios used just by security or by other departments?

A. No, most of the staff carries radios.

Q. And they all have the two channels, the same two channels?

A. No, we have two separate channels. We have a channel strictly for security and fire and the remainder of the staff operates off another channel.

Q. So you have two main channels off the repeater and then one car to car, or station to station?

A. Sure.

Q. Okay. Is security often called for the purpose of arranging -- we talked about lunch. Could security get a call about lunch, for instance?

A. Yes.
Q. And then you would then forward that to housekeeping or to the cook?
A. Yes. They would either come into our office and request it, if they wanted it somewhere different than the kitchen, a lot of our guests know that they can call the front gate and make a request from there, and then the front gate would dispatch whoever is appropriate to make -- fulfill that request.
Q. So the guests would call the phone number?
A. Yes.
Q. All right.
THE COURT: All right, Counsel.

MR. SANGER: May I proceed?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. You've described the patrol -- you started to describe the patrol around the house, and I think you said the person who's assigned to the house would be in that security office at the end of the video library building, garage building, and would also walk around the house?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that mean walk inside the house?

A. No.

Q. Did security walk inside the house from time to time?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that part of the regular patrol, to walk inside the house?

A. No.

Q. When you say “walk around the house,” then you literally mean around the outside of the house?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was the purpose of doing that?

A. To make sure we didn’t have any hazards or uninvited guests or trespassers.

Q. Was it important to make sure that the house, in general, was secure?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, during the time that you’ve been there, have there been trespassers located on the ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. And how close to the house did they get?

A. We’ve had one trespasser who did enter the house.

Q. And where was that person ultimately found?

A. In the very top floor of the main house, in the train room.

Q. So right up above where the children’s rooms are, Prince and Paris’s rooms are?

A. Yes.

Q. So that was a very private part of the house?

A. Yes.

Q. And without going into a lot of detail, who was this person? Was this a fan or --

A. We determined she was not from this country. She was a fan. We couldn’t communicate with her very well, because she didn’t speak English, so she was arrested.

Q. You speak Spanish yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. So she didn’t speak English or Spanish, I take it?

A. I believe she spoke German, which I do not speak.

Q. So sort of a -- not a normal person to sneak into somebody’s house, though?

A. No.

Q. And do you know how long that person was there before she was located?

A. I’d estimate she was there approximately ten hours.

Q. Have there ever been any people located on the ranch who had weapons?

A. We recently did arrest someone who had a weapon. It was not loaded with anything. It was a disabled weapon.

Q. A handgun?

A. Handgun, yes. Nine-millimeter.

Q. Now, in your years of working in security, have you ever performed security functions for Mr. Jackson off of the ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. And where would that be?

A. I’ve taken them to the Lompoc fireworks show. I think I’ve maybe done that two or three times.

Q. Okay. If -- have you ever been gone on tour or gone to other cities with them?

A. No.

Q. Does he have security staff who he employs for that purpose?

A. Yes.

Q. And that security staff is not in your -- under your jurisdiction; is that correct?

A. No.

Q. Excuse me. All right. So when this foot patrol -- I’m saying “foot patrol,” but the person around the house, you say foot patrol person around the house, what are some of the things that they check? You said there was some woman that got into the upper house. I assume that's something you try to prevent.

A. Yes. We check the doors. The house is secured at all times. Now the house is secured at all times. So we make sure that the doors and windows are closed. We also make sure that -- you know, if there's anything like a fire happening or some other hazard that's going on.
Q. And that sort of thing has happened in the past, has it not?
A. As far as fires?
Q. Fires.
A. Yes.
Q. So you check the door, like the back door and the front door, correct?
A. We check all the doors.
Q. Are there some doors around Mr. Jackson's private quarters?
A. Yes.
Q. What doors are there?
A. There's a patio door entrance.
Q. All right. So there's a patio right behind Mr. Jackson's private suite, correct?

A. Yes.
Q. And there's a door that locks in the wall around that private patio; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. And why is it important to keep that secured?
A. To make sure -- well, we do open it occasionally for people to go in and clean. If we do find it unsecured, then we go as far as his back door and make sure that it's still secure, and we clear the area, and then close it afterwards, lock it.
Q. If some -- an intruder were to get in and they knew where they were going, and they were able to get through that door, that would be a pretty significant breach of security as far as Mr. Jackson's personal area is concerned; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Now, when we talk about the personal area, are you aware that there are locks on Mr. Jackson's door into his personal bedroom suite?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. There are guests who have -- let me withdraw that. If guests stay at the guest quarters that are just across the front driveway -- is that right? By the lake, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. If guests stay there, where do they take their meals?

A. In the main house.

Q. So they would be expected to have the code to come into the main house, sit down at the breakfast table or the breakfast bar there?

A. Yes.

Q. Or the dining table, I suppose, for dinner, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that fairly routine? In other words, most of the guests that are staying overnight there have access to the main house?

A. Yes.

Q. Do most of the guests who are staying overnight there have access to Mr. Jackson's private quarters?

A. I wouldn't say most guests.

Q. So Mr. Jackson will decide who he's going to allow into his private quarters; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And on a given day, you might have staff people and visitors and a number of other people in that main part of the house; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Does Mr. Jackson want to maintain some privacy from that general group of people that might be there at any given time?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, there's also an arcade -- I'm sorry, no, that's right, an arcade building.

A. Yes.

Q. We talked about the video library, but there's a separate building that's the arcade building, correct?

A. Yes.
Q. All right. And is that usually locked?
A. It’s locked at a certain hour, I would say about 2 a.m. when guests are on property, unless it’s been requested to leave it open all night. Otherwise, it’s open approximately about 8 a.m. in the morning.
Q. All right. And a part of that building are a couple of bathrooms, a men’s room and a ladies’ room; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And where is that in relation to the swimming pool?
A. If you were facing the swimming pool, it would be to the left.
Q. There’s also a tennis court nearby there; is that correct?
A. Yes, it’s further left of that.
Q. So if people are using the tennis court or the swimming pool, is that where they’d be likely to go if they were going to use the rest rooms?

A. Yes.
Q. And are those rest rooms, that rest room area, is that left unlocked during the time people are using the pool?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Now, that leaves the supervisor, I think. What does the supervisor do?
A. The supervisor is there to supervise the officers. Make sure that -- we have daily duties that we do, such as checking our inventory or equipment, making sure that the basic part of our duties are being met. We have something that’s a little more elevated than regular routine business there to manage that problem.
Q. I take it the supervisor also will keep an eye out for security issues throughout the ranch; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. By the way, are any of the security guards armed?
A. No.

Q. Not with anything?

A. We do have pepper spray. But that’s used only under very limited conditions. We’ve never pepper-sprayed anyone.

Q. That’s pretty limited. So you’ve never used it?

A. Never used it.

Q. And it’s there for the case of an intruder, for the most part; would that be correct?

A. Yes.

Q. So you don’t carry firearms, stun guns, anything like that?

A. Not during the time when I was chief.

Q. All right. You mentioned the gate logs. And you’re aware that there was a search on November 18th, 2003; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you -- were you at the ranch when the search occurred?

A. Not initially. But I did arrive afterwards.

Q. Was it your shift to be there?

A. I was not going to start my shift until noon that day.

Q. So somebody called you, and you came more quickly?

A. Routinely I would call in the morning to see what activities happened overnight, if there was anything I needed to be briefed on. So I’d usually call around 8 a.m. to see what was new or what would be expected for that day.

I was actually on the phone with Brian Salce, who’s a firefighter, just going over regular things when he was describing to me what happened.

Q. All right. So what happened, you were hearing that a whole lot of sheriffs deputies and other people all of a sudden arrived at the ranch; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. So you came in?

A. Yes.

Q. At the time of the search, was there any effort made to conceal anything from law enforcement?

A. No.

MR. SNEDDON: Object; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. To your knowledge, were there any efforts made one way or another to prevent law enforcement from finding something?

A. No.

MR. SNEDDON: Same objection, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. In any event, after the officers left, did you stay there till they left?

A. Yes.

Q. About what time of night did they leave?

A. Approximately 11 -- between 10:30 p.m. and 11 p.m.

Q. All right. Excuse me one second. I'll just ask. Can I have the gate logs?

I don't remember the number. It's the book with the gate logs.

THE BAILIFF: Mr. Auchincloss has them.

MR. SANGER: There's a good reason why you can't find it. All right. Thank you.

Q. All right. We're talking about a gate -- or I'm going to talk about gate logs here in a second. So you told us about the gate logs being kept at the ranch, right?

A. Yes.

Q. When are the entries made in the gate logs?

A. The entries are made as people arrive. Their "in" time is documented or logged on the sheet; when they leave.

Q. So in other words, they're logs that are made contemporaneously with the event. Something happens, and it's written down; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. It's not written down at the end of shift or the next day, for the most part?

A. No.

Q. Okay. When the officers search -- the team from the sheriff's department and the District

Attorney's Office searched and they left, did you -- at some point thereafter, did you have occasion to determine whether or not they had located all of the gate logs?

A. I believe they had complete access -- they did have complete access to it. We had two investigators and one deputy in that security office for approximately two hours.

Q. Did they take the gate logs for 2003?

A. No.

Q. Where were they located?

A. They were located in the file cabinet.

Q. Right there in the security office?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Did you later at some point locate those records?

A. I located them that same evening.

Q. Later, in the middle of the night?

A. I was there for another day.

Q. All right. So you didn't go home that night?

A. No.

Q. What did you do with the gate logs?

A. I left them in the file cabinet.

Q. At some point, did you take those gate logs out and give them to somebody?

A. Yes.

Q. Who did you give them to?

A. Mark Geragos.

MR. SANGER: All right. I'm going to refer to Exhibit 334 and 335, and I'd like to approach the witness if I may, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You may.

MR. SANGER: And I would -- there is some Post-its on there. I don't know if they're -- okay. May I inquire of counsel, Your Honor? Did you put the Post-its on there, Mr. Auchincloss?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: One of them, yes.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. All right. Well, just ignore the Post-its, all right?

A. Okay.

Q. And take a look at Exhibit 334 and 335. Just take your time and look through it. So that's the pages from where your hand is all the way to the end of the book, basically, okay. You don't have to look at all the pages.

A. Okay.

Q. Somebody's already made an identification, but I'm just going to ask you if those, in general, appear to be the gate logs that you located in the office after the search?

A. Yes.

Q. And those are the gate logs that you -- that you gave to Mr. Geragos; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. At the time you gave them to Mr. Geragos, you understood that Mr. Geragos was representing Mr. Jackson --

A. Yes.

Q. -- correct? And those gate logs are logs that were kept on a contemporaneous basis? In other words, things were written in them when they happened?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, before we go to some of the details in there, let me ask you a couple more general questions. Do the gate logs sometimes indicate instructions that are to be communicated to all of the security staff?

A. Yes.

Q. And what's the purpose of that?

A. So that we follow that directive for the day. Or if it's a directive that's given to us for a two-week period, then it's noted in the gate log and then carried over until it's no longer in effect.

MR. SANGER: All right. May I approach and retrieve the book?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. All right. Let me go back to a subject that you had discussed earlier with regard to records that were kept. There are medical records; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And the medical records, are they part of the gate logs, or are they just --

A. No, they're separate.

Q. So it's a separate file folder that you keep these --

A. A separate binder.

Q. Or a binder? All right.

You mentioned that there was a -- if somebody was disciplined, for instance, for -- or let me withdraw that.

If somebody was involved in a golf cart accident, as an example, there would probably be a record of that made; is that right?

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: And I'm going to put, if I may, Your Honor, 300 up on the -- on the board. Or on the screen.

THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Now, the trick is to look at the board, and when you're ready to answer, turn around and speak into the microphone.

A. Yes.

Q. So, first of all, just for the record, I'm showing Exhibit 300, and it shows the tab at the bottom there. And this particular document, the testimony was it was seized by the officers. Do you know where that was seized from?

A. It was most likely in a binder that was located at the security office near the house.

Q. Okay. Now, I'll ask you another question in a minute, so we'll leave that up there, with the Court's permission.

Was it the position of the staff, including the security staff, to reprimand guests, whether adults or children?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And when would that occur?

A. Whenever we felt their safety was in jeopardy.

Q. All right. If it's not a safety issue, or an issue of legality, for that matter, you know, something that involves security, was it your position to criticize guests?

A. No.

Q. Okay. What was the policy at Neverland as far as how you treated guests, whether adults or children?

A. We were very accommodating. Our emphasis is on hospitality and making sure that they feel welcome.

Q. Okay. And why was that?

A. That's what Mr. Jackson wanted.

Q. And as far as -- even though there are a lot of people involved, were you trying to make the atmosphere welcome to the guests, as if it was somebody's home?

A. That was our primary duty was to make them feel welcome.

Q. Okay. Now, if somebody was driving the golf cart and there was a safety issue, you now have this up on the board, and it appears that the driver in this case was Gavin Arvizo, is that correct, on Exhibit 300?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And this is something that happened June 21st of '02; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, according to this -- by the way, it says the reporting officer is G. Silva. That's not you?

A. No.

Q. As -- you were the chief at this time, though; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were responsible ultimately for all of the reports and acts by your officers; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, it indicates here, "Gave verbal warning to slow down or golf cart would be taken away." Would that be a policy?

A. Yes.

Q. And so what would you expect your officer to do at a time like that?

A. To take the cart away, if it was necessary.

Q. So if it went on, actually take the cart away and say, “You can’t drive the cart”?

A. Yes.

Q. And did that happen from time to time with guests?

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: All right. Now I’ll take this one down.

And give me just a second, please, Your Honor, because otherwise the book is going to be a mess.

All right. The book is going to be a mess anyway. I have to deal with it in a second.

Q. Okay. Now, did guests -- were guests cleared to do --

We can have the lights, if that’s all right.

I’ll come back to this in just a minute.

Were guests cleared to do certain things?

A. Yes.

Q. Were some guests not cleared to do certain things?

A. Yes.

Q. And there was a list which -- because the book is falling apart, I’m not going to turn to it right now, but there is a list when people are coming on the property that, at various times during the time you were there, guests would be cleared for certain activities and not others; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And one of the activities was using the quadrunners; was that right?

A. Yes.

Q. If a guest was not behaving properly on the quadrunners or didn’t show they were able to handle them, they might be excluded from using the quadrunners the next time?

A. Yes.

Q. That would show up in your records so that you would be able to refer to that; is that right?

A. If we were asked for a particular event, we would be able to.

Q. Now, did you always make things available to guests -- take your time. Have some water.

A. Excuse me.

Q. That’s okay. You also make equipment available to guests?

A. Yes.

Q. If they asked for it?

A. Well, if they were allowed to use it, yes.

Q. Okay. Were there occasions where you would not allow guests to use certain equipment?

A. Yes.

Q. And what technique would you use to advise guests that -- or convince guests that they might not use certain equipment?

A. Well, if they requested it and they were allowed to use it, of course we would make it available to them. If they requested it and they were not allowed to use it, then we would be very diplomatic about our reason for not allowing it to be used at that time.

Q. And how might you do that?

A. We might -- we just would say simply that the quads were not available for this weekend or for this day.

Q. Something like that. All right. So once again, you’re trying to be courteous to the guests, right?

A. Yes.

Q. We’ll come back to the gate logs in a little bit, but let me ask you some general questions. I’m going to take you back to the period from 1991 to 1993 when you worked there.

A. Okay.

Q. Did you have occasion to know the Robson family?

A. Yes.

Q. And can you describe the Robson family?

A. The family that I knew is a mother, daughter and son. Wonderful family. They seemed to be very close-knit. Both Chantal and Wade are bright, very articulate young people. And they’re always very pleasant to be around.

Q. Did you ever see anything inappropriate occur with regard to the Robson family?
A. No.
MR. SNEDDON: Object; vague.
THE COURT: Overruled. The answer is, “No.” Next question.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Did you know the Culkin family?
A. Yes.
Q. Can you describe that family?
A. Mother and father. I don’t quite remember how many kids they had. I think they had a few. Nice family.
Q. Okay. How about the Barnes family?
A. Yes.
Q. Tell us about them.
A. I met the mother, Karlee and Brett as well. I met the father once or twice. Wonderful family as well.
Q. And did they -- did these families spend time at the ranch while you were there?
A. Yes.
Q. Did they spend time as a family?
A. Yes.
Q. Did they engage in activities at the ranch?
A. Yes.
Q. Was Mr. Jackson always there when these families were there?

A. Not always.
Q. Did you see Mr. Jackson interact with the families?
A. Yes.
Q. If Mr. Jackson was on the property, did he spend all of his time with these families when they visited?
A. No.
Q. What would Mr. Jackson do during this period of time besides spend time entertaining the guests?
A. I wouldn’t know. I guess whatever Mr. Jackson does on his own time.

Q. Okay. Does Mr. Jackson have a studio on the ranch?
A. He has a dance studio.
Q. Does he spend time in the dance studio?
A. Yes.
Q. Is that someplace where he goes to work?
A. Yes.
Q. Does he spend sometimes hours in the dance studio?
A. Yes.
Q. Does he work in the dance studio till late night, late at night sometimes?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Now, by the way, do you know the Chandler family?
A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell me about the Chandler family?
A. Mother, young daughter at the time, I believe her name is Lily, and Jordie.
Q. Okay. And did you -- same questions I asked with regard to the other families. Did you see Mr. Jackson spend time with that family?
A. Yes.
Q. And sometimes he'd be on the property and wouldn't be with the family?
A. Yes.
Q. And sometimes he would not be on the property?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, for the most part, when children visited Neverland Ranch, did they visit the ranch with their parents?
A. Most of the time, yes.
Q. Now, we've heard about the large groups of kids that would come from either hospitals, or Make-A-Wish, or disadvantaged circumstances. That's a different situation, I take it; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. And can you describe what would happen when those people would come to the ranch? I say "those people." When those groups would be invited to the ranch.
A. A typical day for them is they would arrive approximately between 10:30 a.m. and 11:00. They would be greeted by Neverland staff. Depending on the size of the group, they'd either be divided into two groups or kept in one group.

What they would see on the property is the zoo area, which they would arrive via small train that we have. They'd spend time there. They would have lunch approximately around noon, and either go to the theater or the amusement park. If we had two groups, one group would go to the arcade and do the same thing, but switch off so they weren't in the same places at the same time.

Eventually both groups would end up at the amusement park at the same time.

Q. Did those groups of kids tend to have a good time there, as far as you could tell?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Okay. Is it part of the job that you enjoyed watching these kids?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Now, those groups of kids would be monitored or - what's the word? - chaperoned or supervised by people that generally came along with the group; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And then staff people at Neverland would also assist?

A. Yes.

Q. With regard to the other children that came to the ranch, did the other children who came to the ranch generally come with their parents?

A. Yes.

Q. In other words, the guests, the ones that might stay overnight, came with their parents generally?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. If parents were there to supervise, would it be appropriate for staff to override a parent's decision on something?

A. Yes.

Q. And would that be appropriate?

A. That would be appropriate, again, if their immediate safety was in jeopardy.

Q. So if kids were getting out of control, would you intercede?

A. I'm sorry, I didn't hear the last --

Q. If kids were getting out of control, would you intercede?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have any knowledge of any child drinking alcohol or appearing to be under the influence at any time when you worked there from 1991 to the present?

A. No personal knowledge, no.

Q. And the alcohol on the ranch was -- where was that kept?

A. We -- I believe there is some alcohol located in the kitchen. Generally it's kept in the wine cellar.

Q. All right. And was the wine cellar generally locked?

A. Yes.

Q. Were children allowed to go into the wine cellar?

A. No.

Q. Where was the key kept for the wine cellar? And I'm going to ask you if it's moved from one time to another. Would you tell us about that?

A. Depending on the activity, there are two keys available. One in the main house and one in the security office.

Q. All right. And do you know where the key in the main house was kept?

A. Mostly behind the door as you enter the house staff's break room.

Q. So in the house, if you go through the back door, there is a little hallway that takes you to the left. That would take you to the kitchen and the family room, dining room, that sort of thing; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And if you went through all of that, you'd keep going, you'd get to the library and to Mr. Jackson's private area; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. If you come in the back door and enter that hallway, just to the right is where the maids' break room is; is that correct?
A. If you go through the back door, it's directly across. You go straight into the --
Q. So instead of going left down the hallway, you just go straight into that room?
A. Straight into it.
Q. All right. And is that a room that has couches and chairs and whatnot?
A. Yes.
Q. Comfortable room?
A. Yes.
Q. And that's used for the staff to take breaks, I take it?
A. Yes.
Q. And as you go across that hallway, just right inside the back door, the rack with the keys on it is just behind the door as you enter the break room; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. And the break room is left unlocked for the most part; is that right?
A. As far as I know it is.
Q. Okay. Now, with regard to children visiting the ranch and activities - and let's talk about the guests who were staying overnight as opposed to the guests from the Make-A-Wish and that sort of thing - 9532 were both boys and girls included in the activities at Neverland?

A. Yes.
Q. Was there any discrimination, to your knowledge?
A. No.
Q. Did girls seem to have a good time?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you remember Marie Nicole?
A. Yes.
Q. And who's Marie Nicole?
A. Marie Nicole is the only daughter in the Cascio family.
Q. Okay. And did she have the same run of the ranch, as it were, as her brothers?

A. Yes.
Q. And you mentioned the families -- the Robson family, the Barnes family. They both had daughters?
A. Yes.
Q. And the Culkin family also had daughters; is that correct?
A. One daughter.
Q. Were those girls entitled to the same privileges that their brothers were?
A. Yes.
Q. Did they engage in Super Soaker games from time to time?
A. Yes.

Q. Water balloon fights?
A. Yes.
Q. Did they go in the Jacuzzi?
A. Yes.
Q. The pool?
A. Yes.
Q. Play in the arcade?
A. Yes.
Q. Go in the house?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Now, at some point, you met a person named Gavin Arvizo; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you recall roughly when the first time was that Gavin Arvizo came to the ranch?
A. August of 2002.
Q. August of 2002?
A. August of 2000, excuse me.
Q. Okay. That’s fine. And the -- did he come there with his family?
A. The first time I met him, I met him with his brother Star and his father David, I believe.
Q. Okay. Did you ever -- the first -- let me withdraw that.
Was Janet Arvizo there the first time you met Gavin?
A. I did not meet Mrs. Arvizo the first time.
Q. What do you recall about the first visit that the Arvizos had to the ranch?

A. Well, Gavin was quite sick at the time. What I most remember is the dad being present and taking care of him with his brother.
Q. Okay. Were there other visits between 2000 and 2003? In other words, before February of 2003, were there other visits that the Arvizo family made to the ranch?
A. Yes.
Q. And during those visits, was Mr. Jackson always present at the ranch?
A. No.
Q. Who did they tend to come with when Mr. Jackson was not present?
A. Chris Tucker.
Q. Was the father always present?
A. No. After they came, I believe, after Gavin was sick, he seemed to recover, and I don't remember the father coming after that.
Q. Okay. So while Gavin was sick, his father was there; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And while the father was there, how did the boys behave?
A. There were very well behaved.
Q. When the father stopped coming, how did the boys behave?
A. They increasingly became a little more rambunctious.

Q. All right. Now, you said that Gavin seemed to be ill and was eventually recovering, and he got to a point where he seemed to have recovered?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. While he was visibly ill, how did Mr. Jackson interact with him?
A. I think he was very gentle with him, very caring, just what I remember at the time.
Q. Did he seem to be concerned about him, his well-being?
A. Yes.
MR. SNEDDON: I'm going to object. Calls for speculation.
THE COURT: It's leading. Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. Now, let's talk about up to the point just before February 2003. Do you recall the last time that this family or any members of this family visited the ranch?

A. I believe it was in the summer of 2002.

Q. And how were the Arvizo boys behaving during that time, in the summer of 2002?

A. They were quite active during that time period.

Q. And when you say "quite active," what did they do?

A. I would say they were enjoying all the privileges of the ranch. I wouldn't say they were nonstop, but they were pretty active.

Q. Okay. And did they have some problems that seemed to need some attention?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you describe what that was?

A. Well, we just had a viewing of a golf cart accident, so that would be one example.

Q. Okay. Do you recall the family coming to the ranch in February of 2003?

A. Yes.

Q. And what happened in February 2003? Let me withdraw that.

Let's start with this: What were the Arvizo children doing in February of 2003?

A. They were there for an extended amount of time. I don't know exactly what they were there for.

Q. Okay. Did they tend to be in the presence of the security people?

A. Yes.

Q. Describe that.

A. Well, they were there for quite a while, off and on, throughout the weeks. We had contact with them because of their behavior, their activity. That's pretty -- it was pretty limited to that.

Q. What did they -- what kind of behavior are you talking about?

A. You know, again, they were active. I guess I'm trying to be polite here. They were very active.

Q. Well, you have to be -- it’s nice that you’re being polite, but we have to ask you to just tell it like it is, whatever it is.

A. They were pretty reckless at the time. They were driving very fast in the golf carts. They were also driving ranch vehicles. They’d get in a ranch vehicle, and take off and drive, and we’d have to stop them. You know, they were young. They couldn’t drive a regular vehicle.

Q. Well, let me stop you at that for a moment. When you say “ranch vehicles,” what kind of vehicles did you have to stop them in?

A. A regular van, like an Astro van. Mr. Jackson’s personal vehicle, a Navigator at the time. Other things, like -- they were pretty destructive, I would say.

Q. So let’s talk about the vehicles first. At the ranch, are the keys usually left in the vehicles during the day?

A. Yes.

Q. Are they left in the vehicles during the night?

A. Yes.

Q. In fact, in the garage -- there are some vehicles that are parked in the garage, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And the keys for those vehicles are sitting right up on the dashboard right there in view?

A. Depending on what is in the garage at the time, I would say yes.

Q. Okay. So when the Arvizo kids got the -- say, the Astro van, an Astro is like a regular mini-van, right?

A. Yes.

Q. When they got in, say, the Astro van and started driving it, to your knowledge, did they ask anybody for permission?

A. No.

Q. And where would they drive it?

A. They would drive it on the property.

Q. Okay. Do you know if they ever drove out through the gates, the golden gates I guess you call them?

A. Well, they did drive it around. How far they went -- they never drove off the property, but they drove on the property.

Q. Okay. Did they drive golf carts through the golden gates?

A. Yes.

Q. So they would be out in that area between the -- I still don’t have the word for it, but whatever it is, the private --

A. Occupied area of the property.

Q. There you go. Occupied area. They’d be out in the area that is more or less ranch land; is that correct?

A. Right.

Q. All right. Were they neat and tidy?

A. Not always.

Q. What would you tell us about that?

MR. SNEDDON: I’m going to object, unless there’s some foundation as to personal knowledge as to this.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: To your knowledge, did you see whether or not they were neat and tidy?

MR. SNEDDON: Same objection.

THE COURT: Sustained. “To your knowledge” still encompasses beyond her personal knowledge.

MR. SANGER: “Did you see” is what I asked. Okay. Let me withdraw the first part.

Q. Did you see any behavior with regard to whether or not they were neat and tidy?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. What did you see?

A. I saw them wearing the same clothes for a few days.

Q. How about taking care of policing their area or picking up after themselves? Did they do that?

A. Well, they littered quite a bit. So -- the personal area I didn’t have access to.

Q. All right. Now, from February to March of 2003, did you see Janet Arvizo from time to time?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see her?

A. Rarely.

Q. Okay. So let's talk about the rare times when you saw her, okay? Can you describe her demeanor during the rare times you saw her from February through March?

A. I would say she was from either excited or not excited. She was never just -- I don't want to say "normal," but she was either very happy or she wasn't speaking.

Q. All right. Was that unusual to you?

A. I don't know. I didn't know Mrs. Arvizo, so I don't know what her demeanor -- her regular demeanor was.

Q. I guess what I'm saying, are you describing somebody that we'd all -- never mind. Let's put it this way: Are you describing what you might call normal behavior or did this seem to be more extreme?

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I'm going to object as lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. So she'd either be happy or she would be very quiet?

A. Very quiet.

MR. SNEDDON: I'm going to object. Asked and answered.

MR. SANGER: It's leading into the next question.

MR. SNEDDON: Well, that doesn't make it --

THE COURT: The answer was, "Very quiet." Next question.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Where would she go when she was on the ranch during that period of time, February and March?

MR. SNEDDON: Object; lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Did you see where she went?

A. I saw that she -- I know she was assigned a guest unit.

Q. And did you see her at -- now, you would not be in the house; is that right?

A. No.

Q. Did you see her around other parts of the property from time to time?

A. Very rarely.

Q. Who was taking care of the boys, Gavin and Star?

MR. SNEDDON: Object. Calls for a conclusion; lack of foundation.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Let me withdraw it, just to make this clear.

Q. I’m going to ask you about what you observed yourself, okay? So the first question is, based on your observations, who was taking care of the boys?

MR. SNEDDON: I still object. There’s been no foundation that she ever saw anything, and it calls for a conclusion.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Did you see the boys, Star and Gavin, during this period of time, February to March of 2003?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Davellin?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have an opportunity to determine who was taking care of the boys?

A. I would say Davellin was taking care of them.

Q. Did you see Janet Arvizo interact with her boys at all during that period of time?

A. No.

Q. What would Davellin do to take care of the boys?

A. If they needed correcting or if they were being -- if they were saying something that was inappropriate, she would ask them to stop talking about that, or she’d remind them to go take a shower, or something like that.

Q. And what was Davellin doing on the ranch during this period of time?

A. She was doing what the boys were doing. Watching movies. Driving around in golf carts.

Q. Did she seem to be having a good time?

A. Yes.

Q. Did any of the Arvizo kids spend time, to your knowledge, to your observation, with the security staff?

A. Yes.

Q. What did they do?

A. They would come and visit us from time to time in the office and sit in our -- sit in our office.

Q. And would they talk to you?

A. Yes.

Q. What would they talk about?

A. Oh, just regular things. You know, what we were doing, and, you know, what was going on, that type of thing.

Q. Did they ever complain to you about anything?

A. No.

Q. Now, you said you saw Janet Arvizo from time to time. Did she ever complain to you about anything?

A. No.

Q. During the February to March 2003 period, did the Arvizos leave the ranch from time to time?

A. Yes.

Q. Who took them off the ranch?

A. I would say it was limited to either Vinnie Amen or Chris Carter. Occasionally Mr. Marcus, Joe Marcus, would take them off property.

Q. Okay. And what were the purposes of going off the property?

A. I'm not sure. I didn't inquire. Once they were there at the gate and they were ready to leave, we would just open the gate and let them leave.

Q. Were there times they went off the property, for instance, during the day, and they came back three or four hours later?

A. Yes.

Q. And when they went through the gate, did they check in and out just like any other guests?

A. Most of the time. I mean, sometimes if we have a guest that's, you know, coming on and off the property, we wave them through, make sure we get a head count to see who's leaving so we can account for them later.

Q. So when people would go off for a trip to town, for instance, you would not necessarily always write that down; is that correct?

A. No, we would write it down. I mean, someone will slip through. You don’t always see someone. Maybe they’re sitting down in the seat. And we try not to hold anyone up at the gate if they’re leaving.

Q. All right. Did you -- do you know Ronald Konitzer and Dieter Weizner?

A. Yes.

Q. And were they at the ranch in February and March of 2003?

A. Yes.

Q. Were they there every single day?

A. No.

Q. Was Ronald Konitzer there with anybody?

A. He was there with his wife and his son.

Q. And did you have an opportunity to observe Mr. Konitzer and his wife and his son?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you describe their demeanor?

MR. SNEDDON: Object as irrelevant, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: They seemed to interact like a regular family.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Were they impolite, or polite, or --

A. No, they were very polite.

Q. Did you see -- when you saw Dieter Weizner there, what did you see him doing?

A. He was there on the property. Exactly what his function was, I don’t know.

Q. All right. Did you see either Ronald Konitzer or Dieter Weizner ever treat any of the Arvizos in an unusual or inappropriate fashion?

A. No.

MR. SNEDDON: Object; lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Did you ever see any of the Arvizos in the presence of Mr. Konitzer and Mr.

Weizner?

A. I can’t recall a specific time, but they were there on the property at the same time.

Q. They were there together with --

MR. SNEDDON: Move to strike as nonresponsive.

THE COURT: I’ll strike the last phrase, they were on the property.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. Well, during February and March 2003, were Konitzer and Weizner on the property at the same time as the Arvizos?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see any interaction between them?

A. No.

Q. By the way, who is Miko Brando?

A. Miko Brando is the son of Marlon Brando.

Q. And was he a guest or an employee, to your knowledge?

A. He’s been both. But on this occasion, again, I don’t know what he was doing. I know that he was there off and on.

Q. Did you ever see Janet Arvizo leave the premises with Katie Bernard?

A. Yes.

Q. Who is Katie Bernard?

A. Katie Bernard was the secretary at the time.

Q. All right. So she’s an employee of the ranch, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And what kind of a vehicle did they leave in; do you know?

A. I don’t recall right at this moment. It probably was a ranch vehicle.

Q. All right. And do you recall roughly when this occurred?

A. It was during the time they were there. I believe during the initial part of their visit.

Q. Okay. Initial part of February? I couldn’t hear you.

A. The initial part of their visit, yes.

Q. Would that be the first part of February?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall Katie Bernard -- let me withdraw that.

Do you recall the purpose of Janet Arvizo leaving with Katie Bernard?

A. I believe she had a salon visit.

Q. Okay. Was there any film crew following them as they left the ranch?

A. No. I -- actually, I don’t know.

Q. Okay.

A. Not that -- I was not told that.

Q. All right. You didn’t see any film crew there to follow them when they left the ranch?

A. No.

Q. All right. Was there anything that would have prevented any guest at the ranch, including Janet Arvizo, from calling 9-1-1 if they had some sort of emergency?

A. No.

Q. And how do you call 9-1-1 from the ranch?

A. From the guest units, you immediately receive an outside line, so you could pick up the phone and dial 9-1-1.

Q. So the guest units, you don’t even have to use the code?

A. No. I haven’t done it for a long time, but from what I believe, you can just pick up the phone and you get an outside line.

Q. On some of the other phones, you have to dial a code to get an outside line?

A. Correct.

Q. And that would be true for any kind of a call; is that correct?

A. Correct. We have a -- an emergency procedure, something that would be similar in a hotel room, that shows you how to get out if there’s an emergency. It’s near the phone. It gives you directions on what to do in the event of an emergency. It would be either to call extension -- the extension at the gate and report whatever the problem was.

Again, I’m not very clear if you can just pick up the phone. I’m almost certain you can; that you can pick up the phone and dial out and get an outside line.

Q. So let’s put it this way: The phones in the guest units may or may not require a code to get an outside line?

A. Correct.

Q. But if you can make a phone call from the guest units one way or the other to Los Angeles, for instance, you can call 9-1-1, correct?

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object to the form of the question in the sense that she says she doesn’t know whether there’s a code to get out or not.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. If there’s no code, you would just dial 9-1-1, and you get emergency dispatch, right?

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: Object. Calls for speculation. She doesn’t know.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: And if the phones in the guest room had the same code as other phones on the ranch, you would dial the outside code and then 9-1-1; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And my question is, whichever way it worked, if you could make calls to Los Angeles, for instance, from the phone in the guest ranch, you would also be able to call 9-1-1, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. So if somebody knows the code to call an ordinary number, that’s the same code you’d use to get an outside line if you needed it, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there an occasion when Janet Arvizo was supposed to leave the ranch and did not want to go or did not show up?

A. I recall a time that the kids left before her, and she left maybe an hour, hour and a half after them. I don’t recall the date, but I remember, leaving, it seemed a little inefficient to me, since they were all leaving, that she wasn’t ready or -- I don’t know the reason for her delay, but she didn’t leave the same time they did.

Q. What kind of vehicle was there waiting for her?

A. I don’t recall the vehicle exactly.

Q. All right. Some sort of vehicle that was being chauffeured by someone?

A. It could have been a ranch vehicle.

Q. But it was being driven by somebody?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. So somebody had the vehicle there and the kids were ready, but Janet wasn’t?

A. Right.

Q. All right. Let me ask you about the kids, that is, the Arvizo children, being allowed to leave the ranch. Were they allowed to leave the ranch anytime they wanted to?

A. They were allowed to leave the ranch, but they were supervised.

Q. All right. Was there a concern about them not being supervised?

A. Well, their mother wasn’t there on some occasions, so I would say yes.

Q. All right. And when their mother wasn’t there, were they allowed to leave the ranch if they didn’t have an adult with them?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Let me ask that again. Maybe you meant to say that. But if they didn’t have an adult --

A. If they didn’t have an adult, they were not allowed to leave.

Q. If there was not an adult?

A. They needed to be supervised.

Q. Do you recall if that was communicated to the security staff at any time?

A. Yes.

Q. And how was it communicated?

A. It was directed to me verbally, and it was also a written directive.

Q. And who told you that?

A. I came in on my shift, and I believe one of my supervisors advised me of the directive and that’s how I was notified.

Q. Did the -- did the children -- you talked to the children from time to time, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Did they ever say they wanted to leave --

MR. SNEDDON: Object. Calls for hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

MR. SANGER: I actually didn’t finish the question, but let’s just leave it at that.

Q. Did they ever -- did the Arvizo children ever say in your presence that they wanted to leave the ranch?

A. No.

Q. To your knowledge, were they ever prevented from leaving the ranch when they requested it?

A. No.

MR. SANGER: Now, Your Honor, what I’d like to do is put up Exhibit 334. And this is the one that has multiple pages, so I’m going to refer to MJ00154 as the particular page from Exhibit 334. May I publish that?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. All right. That’s not focusing really well. Can you read it?

A. It --

Q. I’m going to --

A. The 19th of February?

Q. Yes. February 19. And I’m going to refer to this line right here. Can you read that line? If you can’t, I’ll bring it up to you so you can read it.

A. Yes, I can read it.

Q. What does that line say, first of all?

A. “The kids are not allowed to leave per Joe. ‘Kids’ meaning like Gavin, Star, et cetera.”

Q. Who wrote that there; do you know?

A. I believe that was Officer Elenes.

Q. So there was -- that was an officer who was doing that at whose direction; do you know?

A. Per Joe Marcus.

Q. And there's a number, "1752." So that would be 5:52 in the afternoon?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you know if the kids, in fact, left the ranch that same night?
A. I'm not sure what time they left.
Q. All right. If you look at the gate logs, you could figure that out. We won't have you do it. They've already been introduced.

A. Yes.
Q. So you could tell from the gate logs presumably when they left?
A. Yes. I'm sorry.
MR. SANGER: All right. All right. We can turn the lights back on.
Is that your Post-it?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes.
MR. SANGER: That's yours?
Q. And the contacts that you had with Janet Arvizo, did she ever indicate to you that she wanted to leave?
A. No.
Q. And if she indicated she wanted to leave, would she have been allowed to leave?
A. Yes.
Q. Were you aware as to whether or not transportation was arranged for -- you mentioned one time. Other than that one time, was transportation arranged for her to leave the ranch from time to time?
A. Yes.
MR. SANGER: All right. May I have just one moment, Your Honor?
THE COURT: Yes.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. While the Arvizos were there at the ranch from February to March 2003, did you see them have contact with other guests?

A. Yes.
Q. And in particular, Davellin. Did Davellin have contact with other guests?
A. Yes.
Q. Who do you recall, if anyone in particular?

A. Marie Nicole. Whatever -- whatever other guests were there as well. We had quite a few guests during that time period. I can’t recall exactly who was there, but whoever was there, she was involved with them.

Q. Did she spend a lot of time with Marie Nicole?

A. I believe so. They were two girls, and so they did spend some time together.

Q. And did Davellin also spend time with one of the firefighters, firemen, or whatever you call them there? I’m sorry.

MR. SNEDDON: Object; lack of foundation.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: To your knowledge.

THE COURT: Just a moment.

MR. SANGER: Let me withdraw it. I’ll say some other words and make it better.

THE COURT: Okay.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: You said you saw the kids spending time in the security office from time to time?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there anybody in particular, either security or fire person, who Davellin -- who you saw Davellin spend time with?

A. During that time period, or --

Q. February to March of 2003.

A. Not anyone particular. I mean, she was there, but I can’t remember anyone specifically.

Q. All right. So she spent time with more than one person?

A. Well, we’re a staff, and we’re active just as well. So I’m sure in passing, you know, there was a greeting. “Hello, how are you?” that type of thing, or she would come in and ask for something, so --

Q. All right. Now, what about the boys? Who would they spend time with, Star and Gavin?

A. They would mostly spend time with each other or alone, you know, so -- I believe Mr. Brando’s son was there during that time period. So one of the Cascio -- the younger Cascio boys was there as well.

Q. Did they spend time with the Cascio boys, or one of the boys?

A. Yes.
Q. Did they spend time with one of the Brando kids? This must be a grandchild.
A. Yes.
Q. A grandchild of Marlon Brando?

A. Shane.
Q. Shane. Did they spend time together?
A. Yes.
MR. SANGER: Okay. Very good. I have no further questions.
THE COURT: Cross-examine?

CROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. SNEDDON:
Q. Good morning.
A. Good morning.
Q. During the time that you were at the ranch, you had a progression of responsibilities that got larger and larger, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. So you worked there continuously from ‘91?
A. Yes.
Q. Until current? You’re a current employee?
A. Yes.
Q. And you worked your way up to head of security at one point in time, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And now you’re -- you’ve been -- I don’t want to use the wrong term, but you are no longer head of security?
A. No.
Q. And there’s somebody else who’s head of security out there, correct?

A. Yes.
Q. Now, during this period of time, you met a lot of families that visited the ranch, I would assume, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And you’ve mentioned the Robeson family, the Robson family --
A. Yes.

Q. -- as one of the families.

The Culkin family?

A. Yes.

Q. The Barnes family?

A. Yes.

Q. And the Chandler family?

A. Yes.

Q. The Cascio family?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And the Arvizo family are just a few of the ones that visited the ranch, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. With respect to the Robeson -- or Robson family, I’m sorry, after the first visit of that family to the ranch, the father was never there anymore, was he?

A. I never met the father.

Q. And with regard to the Barnes family, after the Barnes family visited for the very first time, the father was never there at the ranch when they visited, were they -- was he?

A. The father returned and made visits.

Q. How many occasions do you recall Mr. Barnes being on the property?

A. From one visit to another? Do you mean separate incidents --

Q. Yes, ma’am.

A. -- or days?

I would say at least two or three times afterwards.

Q. Now, there were times that Brett Barnes, the young child, that he was at the ranch alone, correct, without any of his parents?

A. There could have been a time, yes.

Q. There could have been more than one time, couldn’t there?

MR. SANGER: Objection; calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Do you recall there was more than one occasion when Brett Barnes was on the ranch without any parents being present?

A. Yes.

Q. In fact, he would stay several days at a time on the ranch, correct?
A. I wouldn’t -- I don’t remember the exact number of days, but I do remember him being there.
Q. And when he stayed at the ranch, he stayed in Mr. Jackson’s bedroom, correct, when his mother was not at the ranch?

A. I don’t know exactly where he stayed. But he would stay in the main house.
Q. So to your knowledge, he was in the main house, but you don’t know where in the main house?
A. Correct.
Q. And when Mr. Robson -- not “Mr.,” the child Robson visited the ranch, he was there on occasion without his mother or his father, correct?
A. I don’t remember exactly that, but there could have been.
Q. When he did, he stayed in the main residence also, correct?
A. Yes.
MR. SANGER: I’m going to object to the question of “When he did” as assuming facts not in evidence.
MR. SNEDDON: Well --
MR. SANGER: Or vague.
THE COURT: Overruled. The answer was, “Yes.”
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: And you say, with regard to both Brett Barnes and to Wade Robson, that you just know they’re in the house, because the staff was not allowed into the house, correct, the security staff, except if there was an emergency or at Mr. Jackson’s request?

A. Yes.
Q. And you recall the Chandler family, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you ever recall meeting Mr. Chandler?
A. No.
Q. Or a Mr. Chandler at all?
A. No.
Q. Or a husband at all?
A. No.

Q. And the child’s name was Jordan Chandler, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You know who I’m talking about when I talk about Jordan Chandler?

A. Yes.

Q. And Jordan Chandler visited the ranch on a number of occasions without his mother, correct?

A. Again, my recollection is he may have. I’m not sure.

Q. And when he did, he stayed in the main house?

A. Yes.

Q. And again, you don’t know where he stayed in the main house?

A. No.

Q. And Macaulay Culkin visited the ranch without his parents, correct?

A. I remember him mostly being with his parents, unless he was an adult. He’s been there recently without his parents.

Q. Well, I don’t mean -- you’re right. I should go back.

Between the period of 1991 and 1993, Macaulay Culkin visited the ranch without his parents being present, is that correct, on occasion?

A. My recollection is that he was there with his parents.

Q. Is it your recollection also that he stayed in the house?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you mentioned one of the families that you saw a good deal of is the Cascio family, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And one of the people who you observed over the years was Frank Cascio, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you know him as Cascio, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And when you first met Mr. Cascio, he was just a young boy, wasn’t he?

A. Yes.

Q. In other words, he was about 11 or 12 years old?
A. I'm not sure of his age.
Q. Would he -- would he be about the same age as the other boys who were visiting around that time, Brett Barnes, Wade, Jordan?

A. Most likely, yes.
Q. And he also would spend time with Mr. Jackson in Mr. Jackson's house, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And the difference is that in this case Frank Cascio used to visit with Mr. Jackson a lot, correct, kept an ongoing relationship with Mr. Jackson?
A. The family kept an ongoing relationship.
Q. Okay. That's fair enough. So it was the whole family, as well as Frank Cascio, that kept a relationship with the defendant?
A. Yes.
Q. And you would describe, would you not, that this family is very close to Mr. Jackson?
A. Yes.
Q. Based on your observations?
A. Yes.
Q. And you would -- I believe you said that in the year 2000, you knew that Mr. -- Frank Cascio went to work for Mr. Jackson, correct?
A. I have not said that here.
Q. No. I'm asking. You said that to an investigator, correct?
A. Yes, possibly.
MR. SANGER: Objection; calls for hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Did you not tell somebody that you believed he went to work for Mr. Jackson in the year 2000?
A. Yes.
MR. SANGER: Objection. Excuse me. Calls for hearsay.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. SANGER: Move to strike.
THE COURT: Stricken.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Where did you get the knowledge that Mr. Cascio went to work for Mr. Jackson in the year 2000?

MR. SANGER: Objection. Calls for -- facts not in evidence. The Court sustained its --

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Were you at any time aware of the fact that Mr. Cascio worked for Mr. Jackson?

A. I was aware that he was working on projects on the property for Mr. Jackson.

Q. During the time frame from 2000 to 2003, would that be the time period that you had reference to?

A. Yes.

Q. And would you describe the relationship between Mr. Jackson and Frank Cascio during this period of time from 2000 to 2003, that it continued to be a very close relationship, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. A trusted friend, correct?

A. I believe so.

Q. Now, with regard to Mr. Frank Cascio, were you aware of the fact that he changed his name or was using another name?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was during the time period of February and March of 2003, correct?

A. I believe so.

Q. And he used the name Frank Tyson, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that the first time you ever heard him use the last name of Tyson during that period, February and March?

A. I don’t know if it was during that time period, but I could safely say probably yes.

Q. It was during the time when the Arvizo family was at the ranch, correct?

A. I believe it was during that time period.

Q. And in fact, during 2002, Mr. Tyson had visited the ranch on a number of occasions, correct?

A. In 2002?

Q. Yes, ma’am.

A. How many times I don’t know, but he -- most likely he did.

Q. When he visited, he would have been noted in the logs, the ranch logs that you referenced?

A. Yes.

Q. And on each occasion he’s referenced as “Cascio,” is he not?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Jackson having meetings with Frank Cascio during February and March of 2003?

A. I’m sure they met. I don’t know what -- if it was an actual meeting or what it consisted of, but they spoke with each other.

Q. They had a lot of conversations between the two of them, did they not, regularly? Or conversed regularly, how about that?

A. Well, they’re friends, so I imagine they would have a lot to talk about.

Q. And Dieter Weizner, did you see him having conversations with the defendant during February of 2003?

A. No.

Q. Never?

A. Never.

Q. You never saw them in Mr. Jackson’s office meeting?

A. I did not see that.

Q. But if they were meeting in the house, you wouldn’t have known that either, would you?

A. No.

Q. With regard to Mr. Konitzer, did you ever see Mr. Jackson meeting with Mr. Konitzer?

A. No.

Q. Now, you mentioned Miko Brando. And he has a son named Shane, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And it’s correct, is it not, that actually during February of 2003, Shane Brando got in an accident with one of the carts and actually injured Gavin, did he not?

A. Yes. They both crashed into each other.

Q. But the log reflects the fact that it was

Shane Brando who was at fault; isn't that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, how old is Shane Brando in 2003? About the same age as Gavin?

A. I'm not sure how old Shane is. He's a big kid, so I don't know exact -- his exact age. Actually, he's -- he's probably about 16 now, so....

Q. So he would have been about 14 or 13 then?

A. Sure.

Q. You've talked a lot about the procedures for the security on the ranch. And I wanted to ask you, first of all, you've said that there is a procedure now where people work 12 -- 12/12, two shifts, right?

A. Yes.

Q. That wasn't always the case, was it?

A. No.

Q. Back in 1991, '92, '93, there was a graveyard shift, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And that shift started at ten o'clock at night and worked through the morning hours, correct?

A. During different times, we would -- when I initially started working, the shift started at midnight till 8:00 in the morning. I don't know what year we changed that where the shift would start at 10 p.m. and work till 6 a.m.

Q. But there was a shift that worked from 10:00?

A. Yes.

Q. Called the graveyard shift, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, just a couple of questions about the logs that you've described. I think you said earlier in your direct examination with Mr. Sanger that the logs, the gate logs, went to the administrative office up on the hill, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And how did they find their way down to the security office?

A. The gate logs are used to verify the payroll. Payroll is done on Monday mornings. So if someone forgets to punch in or punch out, then they refer back to the gate logs to see what time that employee left, if it was needed.

Once they're -- once they're through with them, then they're filed back into the office and they're kept in that file for a year, until the end of the year, when they're filed in another box and stored.

Q. By "the office," do you mean taken physically from the administrative office down to the security office?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you tell me how many drawers are there in the cabinet that you say you retrieved these logs from?

A. There's four.

Q. And which of the drawers was it that you retrieved them from?

A. They were in the second drawer.

Q. Second from the top or the bottom?

A. Second to the top. Second to the top.

Q. Now, the keys to the house, you say they're kept in the break room, correct?

MR. SANGER: Objection. That misstates the evidence, "The keys to the house."

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: The keys to the house?

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Well, keys to the arcade. I'm sorry if I said the wrong building. I'll take that back. The wine cellar. The keys to the wine cellar are kept in the break room?

A. Yes, they are kept in the break room. Yes, they are kept in the break room.

Q. The break room has a safe, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. At any time during the time you worked there, have those keys ever been locked in that safe?

A. Yes.

Q. And during the time that you've worked there, has it been the habit and custom of the people working on the property that the housekeepers, during the daytime, keep the key on their person during the entire day?

A. Yes.

Q. In fact, you had to go retrieve the key from the housekeeper the day of the search warrant to let the officers in, correct?

A. Some of the keys I did not have access to during that time period, so it was not available to me. I would have to ask them for the key.

Q. So the answer is --

A. Yes.

Q. -- on the day of the search warrant, you had to go to one of the housekeepers to get the key to allow the officers to get in the arcade and the wine cellar, correct?

A. For immediacy purposes, yes.

Q. Now, in 2003, I'm assuming that if you were the head of security at that time, if you had any problems, staffing problems, they would have been things that you discussed with Mr. Marcus, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall having a conversation with Mr. Marcus where you discussed the fact that you were very short of staff and it was becoming a security issue on the ranch?

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: Objection; calls for hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: Move to strike.

MR. SNEDDON: All I asked was if she had a conversation. I didn't ask what was said, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You kind of filled that in, though.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Did you have a conversation with Mr. Marcus about security issues of concern to you?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, let me ask a few other questions about procedures at the ranch. For instance, the groundskeepers, they're day staff only?

A. Yes.

Q. So what time would they ordinarily leave?

A. Their working hours are from 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Q. And the maintenance people, same hours, basically?

A. Yes.

Q. So they would go home at 3:30?

A. Yes.

Q. And the zoo people?

A. Same time.

Q. And most of the maid staff would go home at the same time, except those that were kept for the night?

A. Yes.

Q. And those that were kept for the night would come in at a little later time, correct?

A. Yes, I believe so.

Q. So basically, other than a few staff -- well, let me ask you this: The housekeeping staff that was retained at night was smaller in numbers than those that were there during the day, correct?

A. Well, it would depend on the activity. I couldn't say during that time frame -- I wasn't in charge of that department, so I'm sure -- just as I would schedule people for the bulk of the activities, so if they had something going on in the evening, I'm sure they would schedule for more in the evening than they would during the day.

Q. Fair enough. But that would be the exception, not the rule, though, correct?

A. No, that's what we had to work with, so you schedule your people when you need them.

Q. No. I meant, it would be the exception that they would have to be there because you were having an event as opposed to the normal situation. You don't have events every night?

A. No, we don't have events every night. But if we have large groups of guests on property, such as during that time period, then, you know, dinner may be served late. I'm not sure exactly what all their duties are, but....

Q. But that would be an exception where those -- where you would have those kind of events.

Obviously you'd have to have people there to help, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you say that the security staff is not allowed in the building -- I'm sorry, in the main residence unless called by the defendant, Mr. Jackson, or there's an emergency, correct?

A. If it's not necessary for you to be in the house.

MR. SNEDDON: Move to strike as nonresponsive, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Stricken.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: I think you told us that the only two occasion where staff, security staff, were allowed into the house was either because Mr. Jackson summoned one of you or there was an emergency. Now, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You have on occasion been in Mr. Jackson's bedroom, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you know that to get into Mr. Jackson's bedroom, as you approach the door, there's a chime that goes of inside of the room, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you also know that the door is locked from the inside, correct?

A. I believe there may be a deadbolt there.

Q. And that a person cannot -- you cannot enter that room without somebody unlocking the door from the inside, correct?

A. If there's an emergency, I would get through that door.

Q. I'm sure you would. I'm not trying to say you wouldn't do your job and break through it. But short of breaking through the door, you would have to have somebody on the inside open it up, correct? Is that a fair statement?

A. Yes.

Q. And certainly if that was true of you, it would certainly be true of any guest that was staying at the place, correct?

MR. SANGER: Objection; calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: At the time that these young boys that you've talked about were in the main residence with Mr. Jackson, they were there without -- on many occasions without parental supervision, correct?

A. I would say there were some occasions. I don't know if there were many occasions.

Q. I'll settle for "some."

There were some occasions where some of these young boys were in the house with Mr. Jackson with nobody else present; is that a fair statement?

A. I would say that would be fair.

Q. It would also be a fair statement that inside of his room, that nobody would be allowed to go in there and see what was going on; isn't that a fair statement?

MR. SANGER: Objection, Your Honor. Calls for speculation; no foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

THE WITNESS: I would say that would be normal for anyone.

THE COURT: Wait. The question was sustained, the objection.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: So the simple answer would be, you had no idea what was going on inside the house when those boys were there with Mr. Jackson?

MR. SANGER: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SNEDDON: Do you want to take the break, Your Honor?

THE COURT: All right. We'll take our break.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: All right. Go ahead.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Mrs. Silva, are you familiar with a company called Ace Protective Group?

A. Yes.

Q. And do they provide security services for the ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. That's in addition to the regular staff

that’s on the ranch?
A. We used them as contract. The employees were supervised, managed on the ranch, and they officially paid payroll services.
Q. Were they just used for special occasions or were they there all the time?
A. No, they were used from the time period of, I believe, 1997 through 2003, I believe.
Q. So, for instance, somebody who was working as a security officer on the ranch during that time period, they would actually be employed by the Ace Protective Group as opposed to MJJ Productions or the defendant?
A. Yes, some were.

Q. And some were not?
A. Some were not.
Q. But they all worked under your supervision?
A. Yes.
Q. Thank you.
Now, let’s talk a little bit about the ranch. You described some behavior where Gavin Arvizo crashed in a golf cart.
A. Yes.
Q. That happened -- I believe Mr. Sanger showed us it was in, as I recall, June of 2002.
A. Yes.
Q. And there’s no log entry in any of the logs in 2003 that indicate that Gavin ever had his driving privileges taken away on the golf carts, are there?
A. I would have to look at the gate logs to see. I believe what the report said was that a verbal warning was given.
Q. In 2002?
A. Yes.
Q. Yes. We had that report.
A. Yes.
Q. But to your knowledge, you don’t recall any situation where Gavin Arvizo was later, during the time in 2003 while they were on the ranch, deprived of his privileges to drive golf carts, correct?
A. In 2003, he did have a golf cart taken away from him.

Q. Do you recall what date that was?

A. It was written on the same line where I believe there was an accident that happened with -- that involved Mr. Brando’s grandson. As a result of that accident, the golf carts were taken away.

Q. And your recollection is it was taken away from Gavin and from Shane?

A. Yes.

Q. So it would be that accident report?

A. Pardon me?

Q. It would be that accident report, correct?

A. I believe that incident, the golf carts were temporarily taken away from them.

Q. You’ve described a situation where, I believe, in the past that you thought that at one point or another, every one of the young boys that would visit that ranch got carried away, correct?

A. Not all of them. But I would say they had fun.

Q. Do you recall telling -- do you recall a conversation that you had with a sheriff’s department detective?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall him asking you about the conduct of a couple of young boys?

A. Yes.

Q. And you said to him that they all did; “At 9579 one point or another, they would all have to calm down, and we’d all have to take things away from them, all of them”?

A. I would say there was an occasion where all of them needed to be reminded of what the rules were.

Q. So you didn’t tell them that on all occasions, eventually somebody had to have something taken away from them?

A. The way you asked the question, I believe what you’re asking me is every single person has had a golf cart taken away. Is that what you’re asking?

Q. No. Just the young boys.

A. One occasion we would have to remind them, again, to follow the rules.

Q. And you said that -- you thought the reason for that was because the children felt there was so much freedom at Neverland Ranch, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you also said that you never saw Mr. Jackson ever tell the children to calm down or not do anything, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you felt -- you told the officer that you felt that at times you were forced to be the bad guy because Mr. Jackson wouldn't do that when you thought he should; isn't that correct?

A. He's the host, so that's not his job.

MR. SANGER: I'm going to object, Your Honor. It calls for hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: I didn't hear what his reply is.

THE COURT: You should rephrase the question. It was complicated.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: You also told the investigator that you felt it was unfair at times that you and your security officers were placed in a bad position because Mr. Jackson would not discipline people?

MR. SANGER: Objection; calls for hearsay.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: In his presence, correct?

A. In his presence, it wouldn't be appropriate for him, as a host, to discipline. That would be our job. So he was relying on us to do our job.

Q. Did you tell the officer that you felt that Mr. Jackson had placed you in a position of being the bad guys?

A. Sure.

Q. Now, you stated that you had no personal knowledge about reports of children being intoxicated on the ranch, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. As a head of security, do you review the logs all the time?

A. At the end of the week I review them.

Q. And you discuss with your staff any concerns about things that may be going on on the ranch to make sure everything’s okay?

A. On a daily basis.

Q. You did receive some reports, did you not, that there were children intoxicated on the ranch?

A. I did not receive any direct report, someone coming to me and reporting that they found someone intoxicated.

Q. But you had information to that effect, did you not, as the head of security?

A. There is always a concern for it, because there’s alcohol available, so we would make -- take precautions to make sure that that wouldn’t happen.

Q. I think the question was, did you have personal -- I mean, did you have knowledge of the fact from your staff that there were incidents where they encountered children intoxicated?

A. I was not --

MR. SANGER: Excuse me. Calls for hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: I think that’s a “yes” or “no.”

A. No.

Q. Are you familiar with a person by the name of Chris Carter?

A. Yes.

Q. Who is Mr. Carter?

A. Mr. Carter was a personalassistant/traveling security person for Mr. Jackson.

Q. So when Mr. Jackson was around, Mr. Carter was around. He was his security, correct?

A. Yes. No, he was not under my supervision.

Q. No, I know. I mean, the jury may not know, but he worked for -- basically for Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. But when Mr. Jackson was at the ranch, Mr. Carter was at the ranch, right?

A. Most of the time.

Q. And did Miko Brando on occasion also serve as part of the security detail for Mr. Jackson, to your knowledge?

A. I'm not aware of that.
Q. And have you ever seen Mr. Jackson carry a cell phone?
A. No.
Q. Have you ever seen Mr. Jackson use a cell phone?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever see any of these personal bodyguards loan Mr. Jackson a cell phone to be used?
A. No.
Q. Now, at the time that the Arvizos came to visit in early February of 2003, did you know that they had come from Miami?

A. No.
Q. Did you know where they had come from?
A. No.
Q. Did you know how much clothing they had with them or how long they were expected to stay at the ranch?
A. No.
MR. SANGER: Compound, Your Honor. Move to strike the answer.
MR. SNEDDON: I'll break it up.
Q. Did you know --
MR. SANGER: Excuse me. I just need a --
THE COURT: He's going to rephrase.
Stricken.
MR. SANGER: So it's stricken. There was a motion to strike the answer.
THE COURT: Stricken.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Did you know how much clothing they brought with them?
A. No.
Q. Did you know how long they were supposed to stay?
A. No.
Q. Did you know where they had been before they came to Neverland Ranch?
A. No.
Q. Did you know that they came to the ranch with the defendant, Mr. Jackson?

A. I did not see that personally.

Q. But you’re aware of that?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, during the time that the Arvizo children were at the ranch in February of 2003, and in March, you observed Mr. Jackson spend time with the boys, did you not?

A. I recall Mr. Jackson was there, but I don’t recall any specific interaction with them.

Q. You don’t recall Mr. Jackson spending time with Gavin Arvizo?

A. Not specifically.

Q. And during most of this particular point in time, you would be leaving in the early evening hours to go home, correct?

A. My hours were varied at that time, depending on the coverage that we needed.

Q. All right. And so -- but ordinarily, you would leave to go home in the early evening hours, correct?

A. No, sir.

Q. So if we were to look at your time sheets they would reflect the fact that -- are you, by the way, filled out on the logs?

A. Yes.

Q. Your name’s on the logs, so we can look at the logs and we can all find out what time you checked in and what time you checked out for the day?

A. Yes.

Q. That would be an accurate depiction of your work schedule during February and March of 2003?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, did you basically run things from the administration building?

A. Depended on the activity. If the -- if I had enough officers to cover the shift, then I would come down and supervise the shift and then I’d work from my office. If not, I was part of the rotation as well.

Q. So it’s your testimony that you have no recollection of Mr. Jackson being in the presence of Gavin Arvizo, for instance, in the arcade room playing games?

A. I can’t recall specifically.

Q. You have no recollection of Gavin Arvizo being with Mr. Jackson in the movie theater?

A. I’m sure it was possible, but you’re asking me specifically, and I don’t remember an occasion. There was a lot of people there during that time, and people were coming and going, so --

Q. I’m just asking what you recall. Do you recall any situation where you recall Gavin Arvizo being with the defendant down in the amusement park?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall any situation where Gavin Arvizo was with the defendant down at the zoo?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall any incident or occasions of Mr. Jackson being with Gavin Arvizo around the swimming pool?

A. No.

Q. Or out at the teepee?

A. I believe they may have had dinner there once.

Q. It’s true, is it not, that Gavin Arvizo spent some of the nights in Mr. Jackson’s house?

A. Yes.

Q. I’m assuming, as one of your chief responsibilities there as the security officer at this point in time in 2003, that you would try to be very proactive about liability issues on the ranch, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. In other words, sort of like a loss prevention concept; you want to make sure that you run things so that accidents are prevented before they happen, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you put procedures in place to avoid that kind of situation, right?

A. Yes. We have standard operating procedures.

Q. And also as part of those procedures, one of the things to protect yourself from a liability standpoint is, if there’s something that’s significant that happens on the ranch, you want to put it in the logs so later, if it happens, it could be documented, correct, for liability purposes?

A. Personally, I would do that myself. I’m relying on the discretion of the officers.

Q. Well, you would expect, as you, they worked under your supervision, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. They worked under your direction?

A. Right.

Q. And you would expect that if any significant event occurred on the ranch, that would be documented in the reports, correct?

A. Reports or gate logs, yes.

Q. At someplace where --

A. Yes.

Q. -- something would happen that’s out of the ordinary, that that would be something that you’d want to document?

A. Yes.

Q. To show that if an incident occurred, that you took a response to it to prevent it from happening again, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You want to document that event, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And as part of that policy, you had a rule that the golf carts couldn’t go off the ranch, right?

A. They’re not designed to go off the property. They shouldn’t go off, no.

Q. I just asked --

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. And if somebody tried to drive a golf cart off the ranch, they would be stopped by the gate person and turned around and told to head back out, correct, head back to the ranch?

A. That would be our procedure.

Q. That would be a standard procedure?

A. It would be our policy.

Q. Okay. And somebody who let a person off the ranch with the cart would be in a little bit of trouble, wouldn’t they, with you?

MR. SANGER: Objection; calls for speculation.

MR. SNEDDON: Let me rephrase it. I’m sorry, Judge.

Q. It would be a violation of your policies for somebody at the gate to allow somebody off the ranch with a go-cart; is that correct?

MR. SANGER: Well, I’m going to --

Are you talking about a go-cart or a golf cart?

MR. SNEDDON: Golf cart.

THE WITNESS: It would be against our policy to allow someone -- someone underage, without driving privileges, to leave the property.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: So “underage” would be anybody 16 and below?

A. Driving age, yes.

Q. Or below 16.

A. Driving age, yes.

Q. And the same thing was true of the quads?

A. Yes.

Q. In other words, there was a rule at the gate that you just didn’t let somebody off with the quads?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, in 2003, did you know how old Gavin Arvizo was?

A. No.

Q. He was small for his age in 2003, was he not?

A. I don’t know.

MR. SANGER: Objection. Calls for speculation; lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: He was a rather small person, was he not?

A. No.

Q. In 2003?

A. I don’t know how old Gavin was at the time.

Q. What’s your estimate?

A. My estimate would be that he was 15.

Q. 15? And how old do you think Star was?
A. At least 12 or 13 years old.
Q. You told the jury that the reason that there’s a notation in the logs about the boys not leaving the ranch was because they had been driving vehicles around the ranch, correct, the Navigator and the van?
MR. SANGER: Objection, Your Honor. That misstates the testimony.
MR. SNEDDON: Well, I’m -- let me go back. I’ll clarify that. I thought that’s what she said. I’ll withdraw the question, Your Honor.
THE COURT: All right.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Was the reason that the notation that Mr. Sanger showed you up there on the board about the boys not to leave the ranch related to their driving of the Navigator or the van?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. So I was right. You don’t have to answer that.
At any time in any of those logs, did you ever see a notation that documented the fact that those boys were driving those cars?
A. No.

Q. And you say that the policy of the ranch is to lock the key to the cellar in the safe, correct?
A. On certain occasions it is.
Q. But the policy of the ranch was to leave keys in the cars on the ranch? You didn’t secure them somewhere?
A. No.
Q. You don’t think that would be a liability problem if somebody got in one of those cars and drove it off?
MR. SANGER: Objection; argumentative.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Did it ever occur to you as the chief of security during this period of time that there was a liability issue to the ranch by leaving those keys in the cars unattended?
A. No.
Q. Did you change the procedure at any time? Are they still left in the carts?

A. At this time, I believe they are. Some vehicles are locked.
Q. I assume locked, and the keys aren't locked inside of them. So they're placed somewhere else, correct?
A. No. Correct.
Q. And it's also true that at no time during the time that you've been employed by that ranch do you recall there ever being an entry in a log that children were not to leave the ranch, correct?

A. That's correct.
Q. And that, as a matter of fact, on those occasions you told the ladies and gentlemen of the jury that, for instance, Wade Robson was at the ranch without supervision, you don't find any entry saying, "Don't let Wade Robson leave the ranch unsupervised," correct?
MR. SANGER: Objection. Assumes facts; compound.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: Answer?
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Yes. There's nothing in the logs to that effect, right?
A. I'd have to go through all the gate logs.
Q. Do you have any recollection, as the head of security, that there was ever an entry like that with regard to Wade Robson?
A. No.
MR. SANGER: Objection; lack of foundation.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: With regard to Brett Barnes, you've told the jury already that he's been there on occasion without his parents.
Do you ever recall, during the time that he was on that ranch, that there was a notation in the logs that he was not to leave the ranch?

A. I did not see one.
MR. SANGER: I'm sorry. I was trying to object. Objection. One second. Objection; lack of foundation.
THE COURT: They can't hear.

MR. SANGER: Objection. Lack of foundation as to the 1990 gate logs, ‘90 to ‘93.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: During the time that you were employed on the ranch as a security officer between the time period of 1991 and 1993, you’ve told us that Wade Robson visited the ranch, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And at that time, you would have been one of the officers who would review the entries on the log to make sure you do your job, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And you would have done that on a daily basis when you came to work; isn’t that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And do you recall any log entries during that period of time in which somebody wrote a note saying, “Don’t let Wade Robson leave this ranch”?
A. No.
Q. And with regard to Brett Barnes, during the same time period that you were working as a security officer and you were reviewing those logs, did you ever see an entry that said anything about not letting Brett Barnes leave the ranch?

A. No.
Q. Now, if I were to ask you the same question about Jordan Chandler, your answer would be the same, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. In fact, the entry that was made on the logs that you testified to, that Mr. Sanger showed you, was the first and only time you’ve ever seen that kind of entry made on a ranch log, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Are you familiar with some boys from Santa Ynez called the Coultry brothers?
MR. SANGER: Objection; beyond the scope of direct.
THE COURT: Overruled.
MR. SNEDDON: I think I’m entitled to -- I think….
Q. It’s overruled. You can answer. Are you familiar with the Coultry brothers?

A. Yes.
Q. And they were visitors at the ranch quite often, is that correct, during this time period, 2003?
A. I believe after that time period.
Q. You don’t recall them being on the ranch during 2003?
A. Yes, but after the February time.

Q. Yeah. No --
A. Not during the same time.
Q. -- that’s fair.
A. Yes.
Q. During 2003 they were there?
A. Yes.
Q. And by your own statement to investigators, I think you described them as wild, correct?
A. Yes.
MR. SANGER: Objection. Move to strike; calls for hearsay. Also not relevant as to the time period that what we’re talking about.
THE COURT: Overruled. The answer was, “Yes.” Next question.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: In fact, while they were on the ranch one day, they egged your car so bad that you had to get it repainted, correct?
MR. SANGER: Objection, Your Honor. Relevance.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: I don’t know if it was them.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Somebody did, correct?
A. Someone did, yes.
Q. And they were on the ranch at that time?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. During the time that you were employed at the ranch, were you ever aware of who was sent out to buy adult magazines for Mr. Jackson?

A. No.
Q. Did you receive in your office a package of adult magazines that came from Japan?
A. Yes.
Q. And those were -- the contents of the envelope were from Mr. Jackson’s luggage that was mailed back to Neverland after he had gone to Japan, correct?

A. I don’t know if it was from Japan, but they were left in my office.

Q. And they were adult materials, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you described them, I think, as very graphic?

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: No further questions, Your Honor.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Okay. Mr. Sneddon asked you about various guests coming with or without parents, one parent or the other. Do you remember that, at the beginning of your cross-examination?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, the Arvizos -- to your knowledge, the Arvizos came with at least their father the first several times they came; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And he -- did he supervise them?

A. Yes.

Q. And then there was a period of time in 2002 when they came with Chris Tucker; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And that’s Chris Tucker the entertainer, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. -- was Mr. Jackson on the premises or not, or sometimes on and sometimes off?

A. Yes.

Q. The latter?

A. Sometimes yes; sometimes no.

Q. All right. Was Mr. Tucker supervising the Arvizo kids while he was there?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And then after that, the Arvizo kids came with their mother. That was in February of 2003, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And she was on the property most of the time that they were on the property; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. She was not there some of the time, though?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now, you just indicated that -- you were asked about these gate logs going back to ‘91 to ‘93. Do you remember that?

A. Yes.

Q. And from 1991 to 1993, you were not the chief of security; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. So it was not your job to review all of the gate logs; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. It was your job to look at the gate logs when you came on your shift to see if there was any information that you should pick up for use during your shift, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. That would include figuring out who’s on the property, if there are any special instructions and that sort of thing, right?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Did you -- for the purpose of testifying here today, did Mr. Sneddon or anybody on his staff show you the gate logs from 1991 to 1993?

A. No.

Q. Have you had a chance to review those gate logs in recent years?

A. No.

Q. All right. Now, you indicated that the only entry that you recall with regard to children not leaving the ranch was that one entry on February the 19th?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And that entry was only for that particular day; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. It was not carried forward beyond February the 19th?

A. Correct. No.

Q. And the entry -- that was the first entry, so it obviously didn’t precede the 19th, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. You indicated that one of the reasons was -- that that -- let me withdraw that.

You indicated that one of the reasons that the notation was in the log, you believed, was because of the kids driving the adult vehicles, correct, the Navigator and the Astro van and so on?

A. Correct.

Q. Was it also -- were there any other factors related to that entry that you’re aware of?

A. Well, the children were there unsupervised as well, so --

Q. Okay. So there wasn’t a parent there, or somebody like Chris Tucker, to make the call as to whether or not they should leave and who they should leave with; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Do you recall if Hamid Moslehi was on the property at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he?

A. I’m sorry?

Q. Was he?

A. Yes, he was.

Q. All right. And did he leave that day?

A. I believe he did. There was an entry above that that said that he was there.

MR. SNEDDON: Well, I’ll object as lack of foundation. No personal knowledge.

THE COURT: Overruled.

MR. SANGER: I think the answer is in.

THE COURT: The answer is in.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Do you have a personal recollection of him being there around that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Do you know if he left later that day with the children, with the Arvizo children?

A. I don’t know.

Q. All right. But if you wanted to find out, you would probably be able to look in the log and determine whether that’s the case or not; is that correct?

A. Sure.

Q. And generally if somebody leaves the ranch at the exact same minute, if there are a group of people or a number of people who leave at the exact same minute, it generally means they’re in the same vehicle; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, I think you were asked -- and I may be wrong about this. I think you were asked if Wade Robson and Brett Barnes had behavior problems. Let me ask you, did they?

A. No.

Q. Were they polite? Impolite? How would you characterize them as kids?

A. They were very kind and considerate.

Q. Okay. Did they ever, to your knowledge, get into an adult vehicle and start driving around without permission?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Going back towards the beginning of your cross-examination, Mr. Sneddon asked you about Frank Cascio. Do you recall?

A. Yes.

Q. And he asked you if Frank Cascio started using a different name, that is, Tyson, at some point; do you recall?

A. Yes.

Q. Did, in fact, the entire Cascio family start using a different last name?

A. Yes.

Q. Did they all ask to be called “Tyson” instead of “Cascio”?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you honor that request?

A. When I could remember.

Q. Okay. Now, with regard to Frank Cascio/Tyson, you were asked whether or not he was a close, trusted friend of Mr. Jackson, I think, something to that effect. Do you recall that?

A. Yes.
Q. Did Frank Cascio -- did his relationship with Mr. Jackson have difficulties at one point?
MR. SNEDDON: Object; lack of foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. SNEDDON: And vague.
MR. SANGER: Okay.
THE COURT: Sustained as to foundation.
MR. SANGER: All right.
Q. You had indicated that Frank Cascio was a close, trusted friend of Mr. Jackson --
A. Yes.
Q. -- correct?
Was that consistently true, or was there any change in that relationship from time to time?
MR. SNEDDON: Object. Calls for a conclusion; lack of foundation.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: Yes, it did change on occasion.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Was there a time when Mr. Cascio threw a big party?
A. Yes.
Q. And did that result in the depletion of ranch resources?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Did that cause a problem between Mr. Cascio and Mr. Jackson?
A. Yes.
Q. You were asked about the key to the wine cellar, and the part that I’d like to get to is how many keys were there to the wine cellar, to your knowledge?
A. To my knowledge, there were a set of keys in the house for the housekeeping staff, a set of keys in the security office.
Q. Did somebody walk around with those keys, a security officer walk around with the keys, or were they there at the office to be retrieved?
A. They’re on a key ring and they’re kept with the supervisor.
Q. Okay. And when you say “security office,” are we talking about the office that’s adjacent to the garage and the video library?

A. Yes.

Q. So obviously, if somebody had to use it, they’d take the key ring and they go use it, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Are they supposed to put it back?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that always happen?

A. No, not always. It stays on them sometimes.

Q. There was a question -- I think the question was about opening the wine cellar. Maybe I’m wrong about that. But in any event, at the time of the search, did you have the keys for the wine cellar?

A. Not on me.

Q. Okay. And the officers who wanted to search asked to have the key for the wine cellar; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you retrieve the security keys or the housekeeping’s keys?

A. I don’t recall at the time. But I may have -- I was talking with the housekeepers. I was actually in the house at the time. So to quickly retrieve the keys, I may have grabbed the keys from them or asked for them from the housekeeper.

Q. So that -- at that time, to your knowledge, there was a set of keys for the security staff?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And that included the key to the wine cellar; is that correct?

A. Yes, that’s correct.

Q. Now, there was some questions about -- there were questions about the door to Mr. Jackson’s private area, sometimes called his bedroom or bedroom suite, that area, all right? And you said something about them being locked from the inside. Do you recall that?

A. Mr. Sneddon asked a question.

Q. All right. Is it possible to open that door from the outside?

A. With a key, yes, I imagine so.

Q. Okay. Was there a keypad, an electronic keypad there?

A. Yes.

Q. And did certain people have the combination to that keypad other than Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. Who would have had that?

A. Whoever was cleaning his room at the time. Certain guests. And certain house staff.

Q. All right. Did security have the keypad number to his private quarters?

A. No.

Q. Did security have the keypad numbers to other doors in the house?

A. Back door only.

Q. How about the front door?

A. No.

Q. So if security needed to get inside the house, they would have to go through -- without a key, they'd have to go through the back door?

A. Yes.

Q. That's the door most people use anyway to come in and out of that house; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. If you're visiting formally, you're an invited guest, you come through the front door, I take it, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. At least when you arrive, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And thereafter, if you're staying overnight, you probably just go through the back door, right?

A. Correct.

Q. Now, is there also a key, as opposed to a keypad, is there a key to unlock the back door?

A. Yes.

Q. And security had one of those?

A. Yes.

Q. And is it a different key or the same key to unlock the front door?

A. Yes.

Q. Did security have one of those?

A. Yes.

Q. And security did not have, to your knowledge, the keypad number or the key for Mr. Jackson's room?

A. No, we did not.

Q. Now, you had the key to go into the back patio; is that right?

A. It's only locked. There's just a lock, not a keypad.

Q. Okay. But a key?

A. A key, yes.

Q. So did security have a key to go through the patio?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. So you could get in -- if you needed to get in through the patio, you could go in through that way; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have a key to the back door to Mr. Jackson's suite?

A. I don't believe we did.

Q. You never had occasion to try it, in any event; is that correct?

A. No.

Q. Now, you were asked whether or not you were put in the position of being the bad guys sometimes; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Could you explain what you mean by that?

A. Well, our position is to make sure that the guests are being in a safe position, they're not being jeopardized. Mr. Jackson is the host. And it's his position to be gracious and accommodating.

That was our job. "Bad guys" is more of a -- "bad guys." Not that we were bad, but it was part of our job, and we did it, and we did it consistently. And that's what we did.

Q. All right. So, are you complaining about being put in that position?

A. No.

Q. Okay. I kept interrupting. You're getting a drink of water, so I waited there for a moment.

A. Okay.

Q. In other words, that was part of your function was to be the ones that would draw the line on some of the safety issues, particularly with regard to the equipment; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Sometimes people want to ride Mr. Jackson's Harley?

A. Yes.

Q. And are there times when you'd have to be the bad guy with regard to that?

A. Yes.

Q. And you'd do that graciously as well?

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Now, I've noticed Mr. Sneddon is using the exhibit. I don't object to that, but I'm going to use it in just a minute, so -- okay. Thank you.

May I ask leave of the Court to approach the witness with the exhibit, or with the book, and it includes Exhibit 335, if I may?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

There's some water spilled there so -- people do that all the time.

MR. SNEDDON: Counsel, what's the date? Just give me the date.

MR. SANGER: Just one second. I'm going to start with March the 6th.

MR. SNEDDON: Thank you.

MR. SANGER: And page 00194 of Exhibit 335.

Q. And, Miss Silva, you might want to pull that closer to you, whatever is comfortable for you to read, because I'm going to ask you to go through the logs from February the 6th, 2003, through March the 12th, 2003, and tell us, if you would, whether or not you're on the property each day and what your hours were.

A. From February 6th --

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I'm going to object. The document speaks for itself. It's in evidence. Best evidence rule.

MR. SANGER: Well, the best evidence rule -- anyway, I won't argue.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: On this day of March 6th of 2003, I was already on the property. We -- I was carried over from the previous day, and so I got off my shift at 6:30 a.m.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: You know what I really meant to do, now that I’ve said that out loud, is I meant to go back to February.

A. Oh, okay.

Q. That was the problem.

What I’d like to do is just get an idea of what your hours were during that time. You indicated on cross-examination that you could look at the logs and talk about what hours you were there. And I believe you said you thought you were there late from time to time. So if you can give us just a quick idea as you look through the logs -- you can do it day by day for a while, but give us a quick idea of what your general working days were like at that time.

A. On February 7th, 2003, I was carried over from the previous shift and went off duty at 0152 hours.

Q. So that meant you were there the night of February 6th, and you were there past midnight and then you went home; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. All right.

A. February 13th, 2003, I was carried over from the previous shift and was signed out at 7 a.m.

Q. So if you look back to the 12th, give us an idea of when you started.

A. I started at 1500 hours, which is three o’clock in the afternoon.

Q. So you went all night till the next morning?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Go ahead.

A. On the 15th, I was carried over from the previous day and continued to work and carried over again, and I left my shift at 2125, which is 9 p.m.

Q. Okay. Well, just for the fun of it, go back to the day before. Don’t move your hand. Go back to the day before, when you were carried over, and see when you started the day before.

A. I came in at 4 p.m.

Q. So 4 p.m., the whole night, the whole next day, and didn't leave until the day after that; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Now, as Mr. Sneddon said, the records speak for themselves. So if somebody wanted to go through, they could figure out exactly when you were there; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. But it's safe to say that you worked many evenings and many nights; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You were asked if you could remember specific occasions that Mr. Jackson was together with the Arvizo children. Do you recall that?

A. Yes.

Q. And you said you can't recall specifically. I think you recalled one dinner at the teepee; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And was that -- how many people were at that dinner; do you know?

A. There were other people there. Exactly how many and who was there, I can't recall.

Q. Okay. Other than that one dinner with a number of people, and the Arvizos being amongst them, you say you don't have any other specific recollection during that time period in 2003 of what Mr. Jackson was doing, if anything, with the Arvizo kids?

A. I don't recall ever seeing them together during that time frame.

Q. Okay. So if they were together, you just didn't see them; is that safe to say?

A. I didn't see them.

Q. Okay. Were there times during the February or March period where the Arvizo children were staying -- the Arvizo boys were staying in the guest unit?

A. They were assigned a guest unit, yes.

Q. So you didn’t go to check to make sure they were in there?

A. No.

Q. And this incident with the Coultry brothers -- how do you say that?

A. I don’t know.

Q. However you say the brothers’ names, the incident you talked about where somebody egged your car, first of all, you don’t know if they did it, right?

A. I didn’t see them do it.

Q. And secondly, that did not occur at a time when the Arvizos were on the ranch; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

MR. SANGER: Okay. No further questions.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SNEDDON:

Q. Just a couple of questions. It won’t be long.

A. Okay.

Q. Do you recall describing the atmosphere at the ranch with regard to children as being one that you, as a mother, would not allow your children to participate in?

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: Objection; calls for hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SNEDDON: I’m asking about her statement.

THE COURT: That’s sustained.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Based upon what you saw at the ranch and your observations as a security officer during the period of time from 1991 to 2003, did you form an opinion with regard to whether you would ever allow your children to participate in the activities at the ranch as you saw them?

A. As a security officer, no.

Q. As a mother?

A. Yes.

Q. And that opinion is that you would not; isn’t that correct?

A. That’s correct.
Q. Now, you said that the entire Cascio family chose to have themselves referred to as “Tyson”?
A. Yes.
Q. Did I understand you correctly?
A. Yes.
Q. And when the Cascio -- when was that decision made, to your knowledge?
A. I can’t recall at this time.
Q. Was it a decision that was made during February and March of 2003, or after?
A. I believe it was around that time.
Q. Do you -- in reviewing those logs for Mr. Sanger, do you see any occasion in those logs, from February 7th through March the 12th, where any member of the Cascio family is referred to as “Tyson,” other than Frank?

A. I would have to go through each page.
Q. Do you want to do that?
A. Sure.
Q. Go ahead.
A. What were the dates?
Q. From February the 7th until March the 12th.
A. I have one entry here.
Q. What’s the date on that entry?
A. The date of entry is February 28th, 2003.
Q. And the name?
A. There’s an entry in the “Directive” part of our log.
Q. And the name?
A. “Tyson.” “Cascio family will go by Tyson family.”
Q. That’s on the 28th?
A. Yes.
Q. The family wasn’t on the ranch that day, was it?
A. The gate log shows they were on property.
Q. They’re not listed by “Tyson” on the log, are they?
A. No, they’re carried over from the previous day. The gate entry log was at 1700 hours. They left property at 1917.
Q. And the first date where Frank Cascio’s name is transferred to “Tyson” is on March 1st; isn’t that correct?

A. Continue looking?
Q. Go ahead and check it.
A. Thank you.
That’s correct.
Q. Up to that time, it had been “Cascio” all the way?
A. Yes.
Q. Are you familiar with a person by the name of Vinnie Amen?
A. Yes.
Q. And he was at the ranch about the same time as Mr. Tyson during February and March, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And do you have any idea why Mr. Amen’s name was changed from “Vinnie Amen” to “Vinnie Black” on March 1st?
MR. SANGER: Beyond the scope of redirect.
MR. SNEDDON: Counsel opened the logs up.
THE COURT: Objection sustained.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: So your testimony is, then, that with regard to security, and you being the chief of security at the ranch, that you took greater precautions with regard to the key to the wine cellar than you did the keys to the cars?
MR. SANGER: I’m going to object. That’s argumentative.
THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SNEDDON: No further questions.

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:
Q. Don’t book put the book away.
A. Okay.
Q. The book is open.
Let’s just be clear. I think this is clear, but it is -- February 28th, 2003, that is the actual date when the directive came out to refer to the entire Cascio family by the last -- as “Tyson”?
A. Yes.
Q. That wasn’t English. Let me try that again.

It was February 28th, 2003, that the directive came out that the entire Cascio family should be referred to as “Tyson”; is that correct?

A. Yes. February 28th.

Q. And so as far as you’re concerned, when people remembered it, that’s what they were supposed to do; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And if somebody came through the gate and was logged in as a “Cascio” instead of a “Tyson,” would that necessarily mean that someone was disobeying the directive?

A. No.

MR. SNEDDON: Object. Calls for a conclusion; speculation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. Was this a preference that was -- let me withdraw that.

Who informed you that that was supposed to be the case, that as of February 28th, the Cascio family should be referred to as “Tyson”?

A. The gate log shows that it was per Joe Marcus.

Q. So you did not talk to Joe Marcus about that; is that correct?

A. No.

Q. And you saw it in the gate log along with other security staff; is that correct?

A. Right. Or I was briefed by a supervisor about it.

Q. Okay. As far as you know, did the staff make an effort to comply with that request?

MR. SNEDDON: Object. Speculation; conclusion.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: As the head of security, was it brought to your attention that anybody was deliberately disobeying that instruction?

A. No.

Q. And do you know -- beyond it coming from Joe Marcus, do you have any information as to who made the request?

A. No.

Q. All right. You indicated --

Your Honor, this may reopen slightly, but let me ask this question and see how far we get.

As you were going through the gate logs just now, did you come across the entry where the golf carts were taken away from both Shane Brando and Gavin Arvizo?

A. I must -- I don’t recall the date, but I’m sure it’s in here.

Q. Did you see it as you were flipping through this time?

A. No, I don’t believe I saw it in there.

Q. Okay.

A. I didn’t grab the page and see it, but --

Q. You weren’t looking for it. All right. I won’t ask you to go back through it. It’s either in there or it isn’t.

Let me ask you, you indicated that you would have a concern as a mother about having your child stay at the ranch; is that right?

A. Not concern for them saying there, but perhaps some of the activity was beyond my comfort level.

Q. Okay. Now, you’ve -- without going into details about your private life, but you have children, right?

A. Yes, I have two daughters.

Q. Okay. You have grandchildren?

A. Yes, twins.

Q. Would -- did you ever bring your family members to Family Day?

A. Yes.

Q. So your daughters as well?

A. Yes.

Q. So they’ve been there and they’ve played at the ranch and had fun on Family Day, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Your concern was from your own personal standpoint as a mother, that you would not want to bring your children there on a regular basis; is that right?

A. On a regular basis, no.

MR. SANGER: All right. That's fine. Okay. I have no further questions.

MR. SNEDDON: Nothing further.

THE COURT: Thank you. You may step down. Call your next witness.

MR. SANGER: The next witness will be Ramon Velasco. And Mr. Velasco is going to be assisted by the Spanish language interpreter, the court interpreter.

THE COURT: When you get to the witness stand, please raise your right hand and face the clerk.

RAMON VELASCO

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes, I do swear.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Ramon Velasco.

THE INTERPRETER: May I spell, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

THE INTERPRETER: R-a-m-o-n; V-e-l-a-s-c-o.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Okay. Mr. Velasco, you asked to be assisted by a Spanish language interpreter in court; is that correct?

A. Yes, correct.

Q. Thank you. And we respect that choice. You do speak English to a certain extent, is that correct, sir?

A. Yes.

Q. Spanish is your first language?

A. Yes.

Q. And you feel more comfortable speaking in Spanish than in English; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, let me ask you if you know the gentleman seated right here.

A. Yes, I do know him.

Q. Who is that?

A. Mr. Michael Jackson.

Q. Okay. And have you worked for Mr. Jackson at Neverland Ranch?

A. Yes, I did work.

Q. And when did you go to work at Neverland Ranch?

A. I started in the year 1989. And I stopped around 1999.

Q. Did you work continuously during that period of time?

A. Not the whole time.

Q. Did you take any breaks from working there?

A. Well, I injured my back, and I was operated on.

Q. All right.

A. And I was given the opportunity to return again.

Q. All right. So you were off for a period of time with a back injury?

A. Yes, correct.

Q. When was that?

A. 1991.

Q. How long were you off?

A. About eight months.

Q. All right. So other than that eight-month period, you've been a regular employee at the ranch?

A. Yes, of course.

Q. And what was your first job assignment when you went to work at the ranch?

A. Taking care that the game would not eat the flowers.

Q. Okay. Did you win or did the game win?

A. The deer; the deer won.

Q. Okay. So you worked as a gardener for a period of time?

A. Yes, of course.

Q. About how long was that?

A. I cannot recall exactly.

Q. Was it a matter of months or years?

A. Several years.

Q. All right. And then after doing -- or working in -- working as a gardener, did you take on another job?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was that?

A. Assisting the cook to -- by washing dishes.

Q. All right.

A. And other things.

Q. Okay. And how long did you do that?

A. Several years.

Q. And you left employment at the ranch in 1999, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. What was your job at the time you left employment?

A. I worked full time in the kitchen.

Q. All right. And you assisted the cook?

A. No, at that time I was the one in charge.

Q. Oh, you were the cook. I’m sorry.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, when you were -- when you were working as the cook -- first of all, you were working as the assistant to the cook and then as the cook. Did you work in the kitchen in the main house?

A. Yes, the whole house.

Q. And when did you first start working in the house?

A. I cannot recall exactly.

Q. Was it after your -- after you came back from your back injury?

A. Yes, correct.

Q. Okay. Do you recall how long after your back injury?

A. Could you please repeat that question?

Q. That’s fine.

Do you recall how long it was after you returned to work from your back injury that you came to work in the house?

A. Right after my operation, it was almost immediately after. It was part time. Oh, partly outside, partly inside.

Q. So you started working partly inside in 1991, then?

A. Both places.

Q. And then when did you start working full time inside?

A. Really, I cannot recall. I wasn’t in one place or the other.

Q. All right. Now, at the time you left, you were working full time inside; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Now, do you have a nephew?

A. Yes, of course.

Q. And is your nephew also -- did your nephew also work at the ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Is that Carlos?

A. Yes, correct.

Q. Full name is Carlos Velasco?

A. Correct.

Q. First of all, let me ask you about Jason Francia. Do you remember Jason Francia?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did your nephew spend time with Jason Francia?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. Did you see your nephew spend time with Jason Francia?

A. No, I do not recall that.

Q. Okay. Do you know if your nephew went to school in the early ‘90s?

A. I do know that he did at that time, but I don’t know the exact year.

Q. And your nephew Carlos went to school in Santa Maria?

A. Yes, of course.

Q. Do you know if he went to the same school as Jason Francia?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: All right.

Q. Now, did you know Blanca Francia?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And who is Blanca Francia?

A. What is it, the response that you’re seeking? If I know her as a friend or --

Q. Okay. I forgot what I asked, the exact words. But in any event, did Blanca Francia work at the ranch?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. And what was her job when you first met her?

A. She would clean Michael’s room.

Q. All right. When you first met her, did you -- did you get along with her?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevancy.

MR. SANGER: Foundation.

THE COURT: All right. Overruled.

THE WITNESS: What was the question?

Q. BY MR. SANGER: When you first met with her, did you get along with her?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. At some point, did you have occasion to change your opinion of Blanca Francia?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevancy.

MR. SANGER: Let me just withdraw it, then. I’ll make it easier, okay? If I may.

THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: At some point did you notice that Blanca Francia’s behavior with other employees was impolite?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Leading and relevancy.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: On?

THE COURT: Both.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Did you -- well, did you see Blanca Francia have encounters with other employees at the ranch?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Ambiguous and relevancy.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Would you please repeat the question?

MR. SANGER: Could I ask, please?

THE COURT: Yes.

Could it be read back?

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: I did not see it. I heard it.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Did you hear her talk to other employees?

A. Yes.

Q. How did she conduct herself with other employees?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Relevancy; hearsay; calls for a conclusion.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: Dare I ask? All three?

THE COURT: Well, yeah. I'm not sure where you're going, so the foundation and conclusion is a valid objection. But maybe if I understood where you were going. Do you want to approach on this?

MR. SANGER: Could we, please?

(Discussion held off the record at sidebar.)

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. Now, while you were working at the ranch, do you know how long Blanca Francia was also there at the ranch?

A. She was there before me. But I don't know how many years.

Q. And she left -- she left long before you did, right?

A. Yes, correct.

Q. Okay. During the time you were working at the ranch, do you know if there was a wine cellar?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. Was the wine cellar kept locked?

A. Yes, the whole time.

Q. Were children allowed in the wine cellar unaccompanied by Mr. Jackson or an adult or somebody; somebody in a position of authority?

A. Not that I was aware of.

Q. Where was the key to the wine cellar kept during the time you were there?

A. It was behind the door.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm going to object as to relevancy, given his -- the time that he left the ranch.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Did you observe the Robson family at the ranch?

A. I did not personally see them. I was not really interested in who the people were. I was there to help them.

Q. Okay. You -- all right. You saw a number of families visit the ranch; is that right?

A. Yes, of course.

Q. And did you see Mr. Jackson engage in play with family members who visited the ranch?

A. Yes, of course.

Q. Did you see water balloon fights, for instance?

A. Yes. Several times.

Q. And during the time from -- well, let me withdraw that.

During the entire time that you were there -- let me withdraw that.

Did you ever see Mr. Jackson do anything inappropriate with any child?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Never. No, never.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Foundation.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Did you see whether or not Mr. Jackson -- let me withdraw that.

During the time you were working in the kitchen in particular, as an assistant and then as a chef, did Mr. Jackson have high standards for the food that you prepared?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevancy.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Well, how did he want his guests to be treated, as far as you were concerned?

A. The best.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson himself complain about, for instance, food that he was served personally?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevancy.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Did Mr. Jackson ever complain to you that the food that was being served to the children was not -- to the children or the adult guests was not adequate?

A. Yes, sometimes.

Q. Did you feel that he was complaining unreasonably?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevance.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: They were reasonable.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. And now if I may ask that other question. Did Mr. Jackson ever complain about the food that was served to himself?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevance.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: No, never.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Now, yesterday at almost 8:00 at night, were you contacted by someone who indicated that they were a member of the sheriff's department?

A. Yes. There were two persons.

Q. Was this by telephone or in person?

A. By telephone.

Q. What were you doing when you were called?

A. I was working in my home.

Q. Where were you working in your home?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevancy.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: Okay. All right. I have no questions.

THE COURT: We'll take our break.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: Counsel?

MR. SANGER: I have no further questions.

THE COURT: All right.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Good afternoon, Mr. Velasco.

A. Good afternoon.

Q. You mentioned that you saw nothing inappropriate between Mr. Jackson and young boys; is that correct?

A. Correct.
Q. Are you aware that he had unrelated young boys sleep with him alone in his room?
MR. SANGER: Objection. Beyond the scope; calls for speculation, without foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Do you think it is appropriate for young boys to sleep in a man's bed when they are unrelated to him and he is an adult?
MR. SANGER: Objection -- sorry. Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Mr. Velasco, did you ever see -- well, let me back up. Were you permitted to go into Mr. Jackson's room when the door was closed?
A. I don't recall.
Q. Were you permitted to go into Mr. Jackson's room anytime you wished?
A. No.
Q. So can I safely say that you were not aware of what Mr. Jackson did in his room when the door was closed and he was in there with somebody?
A. Yes, of course.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Thank you. No further questions.
MR. SANGER: No further questions.
THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.
Call your next witness.
MR. SANGER: Yes, sir. The defense will call Joe Marcus.
THE COURT: Please remain standing, face the clerk and raise your right hand.

JOSEPH MARCUS
Having been sworn, testified as follows:
//
THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.
THE WITNESS: Joseph Marcus. J-o-s-e-p-h; M-a-r-c-u-s.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Excuse me one second, Your Honor.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Mr. Marcus, how are you?

A. Very well, thank you.

Q. All right. What is your current employment?

A. Currently employed at Neverland Valley Ranch as the property manager.

Q. And when you say “property manager,” what are your duties?

A. My duties range from -- maintaining the property. There are multiple supervisors that I supervise on a daily basis, from the zoo, to the amusement park, to the maintenance of the property, to the irrigation, just the actual properties.

Q. All right. And when you say “property manager,” are you sometimes referred to as the ranch manager?

A. Yes.

Q. So you are the -- at the top of the organizational chart as far as the ranch is concerned; is that correct?

A. Right under the top, yes.

Q. Right under. At the very top would be Mr. Jackson, I take it?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And you know Mr. Jackson?

A. I do.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Jackson?

A. About 18 years.

Q. Okay. Now, the ranch that’s called Neverland Ranch, was it always called Neverland Ranch?

A. No. I believe it was called Sycamore Valley Ranch before.

Q. And who owned the ranch before Mr. Jackson did?

A. A gentleman by the name of Bone. William Bone.

Q. Mr. Bone.

A. Yes.
Q. Did you work for Mr. Bone at Sycamore Valley Ranch before Mr. Jackson owned the property?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Did your father work for Sycamore Valley Ranch before Mr. Jackson owned the property?
A. Yes.
Q. What was your father’s job?
A. I believe he was the property manager at that time.

Q. So the bailiff is getting up to tell you --
A. Talk -- oh. I apologize.
Q. Don’t apologize. Every single witness has had that problem and the lawyers do from time to time. We have to get very close to the microphone to be heard.
Okay. So your father was the ranch manager at Sycamore Valley Ranch, is that correct, or for Mr. Bone?
A. Yes.
Q. And you worked at the ranch for a period of time yourself, Sycamore Valley Ranch, correct?
A. Very briefly, yes.
Q. What did you do while you were there?
A. I worked in maintenance department.
Q. All right. And after Mr. Jackson bought the ranch, did you continue on as an employee?
A. Yes.
Q. And what were your job assignments, or your job position when Mr. Jackson took over the ranch?
A. I actually transferred to security.
Q. Okay. Now, did Mr. Bone have a security department?
A. No.
Q. He was not a celebrity?
A. No.
Q. What did Mr. Bone do?

A. I believe he was in land development.
Q. Okay. Real estate and --
A. Real estate, yes.
Q. -- that sort of thing?
All right. Now, did the main building -- the main buildings, which would be the residence itself, the portion attached to it that now has the garage and Mr. Jackson’s office in it, the guesthouse with the four guest units and the arcade building, were those buildings all there when it was Sycamore Valley Ranch?

A. Yes.
Q. The lake, was the lake there?
A. Yes.
Q. And there were irrigated pastures around the main house?
A. There were.
Q. Since Mr. Jackson purchased the property, have there been improvements to the property?
A. Yes.
Q. Can you tell us what improvements?
A. The number one main improvement would be the trains. There are two trains. There’s a steam train as well as a 24-gauge train. There’s also an amusement park, a zoo, a theater, the train depot. There’s a teepee area that is also a water fort area.
Q. All right. Was the theater in existence?

A. No, Mr. Jackson built that.
Q. All right. So that was another addition?
A. Yes.
Q. And at the time that -- let me withdraw that. Let me ask you about the trains, because we’ve heard testimony about the trains. You said there are two different trains. Let’s take the smaller one. Can you describe that train?
A. It’s a small -- I believe it’s on 24-gauge tracks. It’s three cars that hold approximately 40 to 50 people, and that’s really the description.
Q. All right. Have you ever been to the zoo in the City of Santa Barbara?
A. Yes.
Q. Have you seen the train there?
A. Yes.
Q. Is it similar to the one --
A. It is.
Q. All right. So adults can sit in it, but it's a fairly small train?

A. Exactly.
Q. And when the engineer sits behind the engine, the engineer is -- sits above the engine?
A. Exactly.
Q. All right. That train -- the tracks for that train go from where to where? Can you tell us?
A. From the golden gate --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm going to object. Relevancy.
THE COURT: Overruled.
THE WITNESS: From the golden gate to the zoo area, throughout the property. It stops in front of the theater as well as the amusement park and travels all the way back to the zoo and back to the main house.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: So you can do a round trip from down near the main house and come back?
A. Exactly.
Q. By the way, when you mention the golden gates, let me just ask, is that the gate that's black with gold on top of it?
A. It is, the secondary gate.
Q. The big fancy Neverland gate, right?
A. Exactly.
Q. Is that gate locked?
A. I'm sorry?
Q. Is that gate locked?
A. No.
Q. If -- if you're driving in a vehicle, anywhere from a golf cart, to a car, to an SUV, to a truck, is there an automatic trip to open it?
A. There is.
Q. So it doesn't require anybody to give approval or manually do anything, correct?
A. The only thing that -- bicycles, it doesn't pick up bicycles or motorcycles.

Q. All right. As far as -- and then there is a manual way to open it --
A. There is.
Q. -- for a motorcycle.
And is there a way around the gate if you were on foot?

A. Yes.

Q. Or on a bicycle, for that matter?

A. Yes.

Q. So that gate does not effectively lock anybody in so they can’t get out; is that right?

A. No.

Q. Now, the main gate is about how far from the golden gate?

A. It’s probably a half -- a quarter to a half a mile.

Q. So you go down a road, and you end up down at Figueroa Mountain Road by the main gate, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And that gate is operated by the guard, the security officer who’s posted at the gate; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that’s both for coming in and going out, the guard will open the gates?

A. Yes.

Q. Adjacent to the gate is what kind of fencing?

A. It’s a three-rail split, split three-rail fence.

Q. Split-rail, kind of rough wood fence?

A. Right.

Q. There’s nothing to prevent somebody from going over it or going through the bars?

A. No.

Q. All right. You were talking about the trains. The other train on the property is what kind of train?

A. It’s a refurbished steam train locomotive.

Q. Was it at one time a working train?

A. I believe it was.

Q. Okay. And so that’s on bigger tracks?

A. Yes. 36-gauge.

Q. I’m sorry?

A. 36-gauge.

Q. All right. And those tracks go from where to where?

A. From just adjacent to the main house where the train depot is on the hill, to the -- to the zoo area also, and then there's a turn-around at both ends.

Q. All right. So instead of doing a loop or a round trip, that one you have to do a turn-around?

A. No, it's a loop at both ends.

Q. Oh, it is a loop?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. I'm sorry. So you could do a round trip by sitting on it and doing a loop back?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. You mentioned the train depot being up on the hill, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. If you are facing the house from the parking lot -- or I shouldn't say "parking lot," but from the parking area, the driveway right in front, and you're standing facing the front door, what direction are you facing? North, east, south or west, if you know, or some variation?

A. East.

Q. You're facing east?

A. From the door of the train depot?

Q. No, I'm sorry, the main house. If you're standing in front of the door --

A. Yes.

Q. -- you're about to knock on the door - okay? - what direction are you pointed?

A. North, or northwest is the train depot.

Q. Okay. You're facing the house, you're facing north?

A. North.

Q. Facing north. So the train depot --

A. Is west.

Q. -- is west. That's to your left, okay.

So the train depot -- what's in the train depot?

A. There's artwork, pictures of trains. Small-scale trains. There's some Disney characters. Some of the old -- there's an old violin. There's also just a lot of different neat little artwork for people to look at.

Q. All right. I was going to say this is someplace where visitors are often taken or allowed to go --
A. Yes.
Q. -- to see things?
A. There’s candy and there’s video games, and it’s a working train depot.
Q. All right. So it -- it looks almost like a museum inside, wouldn’t you say?
A. Yes.
Q. You have been there at the ranch when large numbers of children, and adults for that matter, have been invited to come in groups; is that correct?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.
THE COURT: Overruled.
THE WITNESS: That is correct.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: And when that occurs, are the -- are the children, and the adults for that matter, permitted to go to the train station?
A. They are.

Q. Is that an area that gets a lot of attention from the kids?
A. It does. It’s -- yes.
Q. All right. And the kids usually are allowed to ride on the train as well; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. You mentioned that Mr. Jackson also added the amusement park, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And can you describe the amusement park?
A. It’s -- it consists of about 16 rides, from small, young children rides all the way up to amusement-park-sized rides.
Q. All right. So it’s the sort of amusement park you’d see -- it looks like a piece of perhaps Disneyland or something; is that correct?
A. That’s correct.
Q. All right. So you have the smaller rides, you got the rides for the bigger kids and for adults and so on?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. And in addition to that, you said there's a theater. Where's the theater?

A. Just adjacent or west of the amusement park.

Q. And the amusement park and the theater are in what direction from the house?

A. North.

Q. So you go, from the house, north on a little road and it will take you up to the theater/amusement park area; is that correct?

A. Exactly.

Q. Or you can take one of the other trains to get there?

A. The trains, that's correct.

Q. About how far is it from the back of the house to the main residence; in other words, to the theater or the amusement park?

A. Probably a quarter -- quarter of a mile.

Q. All right. So did -- Mr. Jackson also added a zoo. Can you describe the zoo?

A. It consists of -- do you want a rundown of the animals or just --

Q. Sure. A general description of the facility and the animals that are in it.

A. Yes. There's a tiger facility. Also an elephant facility. A reptile department. A small petting zoo for the children, different animals that you can actually get up and be hands-on with. And two orangutangs. Giraffes. And that's --

Q. Mr. Bone didn't have any of those there?

A. No. Just horses. There's also horses.

Q. There are horses?

A. Correct.

Q. Are there people who are hired to be the handlers or the trainers, caretakers of these various animals?

A. Yes.

Q. Are the animals -- in your experience, without going into a lot of detail unless we need to, are the animals well taken care of?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you have people, for instance, who are specifically there to take care of elephants and --

A. Exactly.

Q. And as far as horses, you’ve got people for the horses and so on?

A. That is correct.

Q. All right. You mentioned the teepee area and the water fort. What are those?

A. They’re more of a fun area. The water fort is set up with water cannons and water balloon launchers. That’s mainly for water fights. And just adjacent to that or north of that is -- there’s three teepees with a nice big fire ring for maybe just hanging out at in the evening time.

Q. You said a fire ring. You’re trailing off just a little bit. It’s the end of the day, end of our day, anyway. You said a fire ring?

A. Fire ring. In between the three teepees.

Q. Talking about a place where you can have like a campfire?

A. Exactly.

Q. All right. Are there any clocks at Neverland?

A. Yes.

Q. More than one or two?

A. Yes.

Q. About how many clocks do you think there are at Neverland?

A. Interior or exterior?

Q. Let’s take exterior first.

A. Six. Five or six.

Q. Okay. Let’s start with the clock that’s on the hill just to the west of the guest units.

A. Yes.

Q. And we’ve had a picture of it here in court. It looks like it has flowers around it?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have any idea how big that clock is? Anybody ever measure it?

A. I don’t know that off the top of my head.

Q. In any event, can you see this clock in the front of the house?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you see it from where the guest units are?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And is that clock generally right?
A. Yes.

Q. Okay. It’s maintained by somebody in the clock department, I take it?
A. Yes.
Q. Or somebody in the maintenance department; is that right?
A. That is correct.
Q. Now, right up on top of the hill next to the big flower clock that you can see there is also a big clock on a stand, is there not?
A. Yes.
Q. And if you’re in the area of the train station, can you see that clock?
A. You can.
Q. The -- down by the little train, that was the big train station. Going down to the little train station, which is just across the bridge from the main house, is there also a clock?
A. Yes.
Q. And can you describe that?
A. It’s a two-face -- you can see it from the south as well as the north side. There’s two faces on it. It’s a hanging clock, about two feet in diameter.
Q. All right. So it’s a big clock?
A. Yeah, two to three feet.
Q. Now, let’s just take the year 2003, from February to March. Were both sides of that clock working?

A. Yes.
Q. Subsequent to that time, did one side of that clock stop working?
A. It’s a possibility. I don’t recall.
Q. Are both sides working now?
A. I believe so.
Q. All right. There’s also another clock directly behind the house; is that right?
A. Yes.

Q. It’s on like a lamppost?
A. Right out the back door, yes.
Q. And is that a big clock?
A. It’s fairly big.
Q. All right. When you say right outside the back door, can you explain where it is with relation to the back door of the residence where people might go in and out of the kitchen and eating areas?
A. If you were walking out the back door towards the arcade, you would pass it on your left, as well as if you were coming from the arcade going towards the guest units you would also pass it.
Q. Pretty much if you go out the back door and look over there, you can see it; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Then -- did I cover six clocks? I’m not sure. Is there another clock I missed?
A. There’s another clock on top of the train depot, on the roof.

Q. Okay. Are there any clocks out at the amusement park?
A. There is, a four-face clock at the amusement park.
Q. Okay. Now, other than those outside clocks, are there also clocks inside the house?
A. Yes.
Q. Are there clocks inside the house in the areas where the ranch guests can see them?
A. Yes.
Q. Can you tell us, in the area -- the dining area where there’s a bar, dining bar, and people can sit there right adjacent to the kitchen, are there any clocks that were visible from that vantage point?
A. I believe there’s four that are visible from that -- from the bar area.
Q. Okay. Are there other clocks in the living room and other main parts of the house?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Now, I took you back to -- back to before Mr. Jackson bought the property and just up to the point that you had gone to work there, or switched your employment to Mr. Jackson’s company or his employment.

What jobs did you have over the years from the time that you started to now that you’re ranch manager?

A. I’ve worked in the maintenance department as well as security.

Q. So tell us about maintenance, to start with, briefly. Is that the first job you had was in maintenance?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you do?

A. Maintaining anything from electrical to plumbing, lighting, just the whole gauntlet of maintaining the property.

Q. All right. So as ranch manager now, you’ve got a pretty good idea of what it means if you tell somebody to go do something, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Probably done it yourself?

A. Most likely.

Q. All right. And how long did you do that before you went into security?

A. A couple of years.

Q. So that would have been about when to when?

A. ‘89 to ‘92 or so. ‘91 or ‘92, I believe.

Q. All right. And then you started in security, and what was your position?

A. Officer.

Q. And did you work shifts like everybody else?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. How long were you an officer in security?

A. Five years.

Q. Okay. So somewhere in the mid ‘90s you ceased being an officer?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you do after that?

A. Went back to maintenance. I couldn’t stand the shifts.

Q. I couldn’t hear you.

A. I couldn’t stand the shifts.

Q. Okay. So maintenance was a little more regular?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And how long were you in maintenance?

A. A couple more years.

Q. And then what did you do?

A. Then I’ve been in this position since then.

Q. So you became ranch manager. And when did you become ranch manager?

A. In 2002.

Q. All right. Now, based on your experience at the ranch, are you familiar with the operations of all the different departments?

A. Yes.

Q. Do the department heads for all the different departments report to you?

A. Yes.

Q. Who makes the daily decisions as to -- let me withdraw it and take out the word “daily.” Who makes the decisions in general as to what the policies will be in the various departments?

A. Ultimately it would rest on my shoulders.

Q. All right. You go to Mr. Jackson and ask him to approve the various policies and procedures that you’re putting into place on the ranch?

A. Sometimes. It depends on what it is.

Q. If there’s something that particularly impacts Mr. Jackson personally, you would do that?

A. Yes, definitely.

Q. Otherwise, you have the authority, as ranch manager, to make sure that everybody does their job and to -- your job is to run things; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

MR. SANGER: It was. I’ll withdraw it.

Q. With regard to each one of the departments, what is your function as to the particular departments?

A. Overseeing that the job is completed in a timely fashion on a daily basis.

Q. Do you have meetings?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have meetings with all the department heads sometimes?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you have meetings with individual department heads from time to time?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Do you generally deal with the various employees at the lower levels of the hierarchy? Do you deal with them directly or do you tend to deal through their chain of command?

A. A little bit of both.

Q. All right. So you -- certainly you talk to people, employees?

A. Definitely.

Q. All right. Now, you were aware in 1993 that there had been a search of the ranch by the Los Angeles Police Department; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And there was an investigation by the Los Angeles Police Department at that time; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And at some point Mr. Sneddon’s office and the sheriff’s department got involved in an investigation in the ‘93 time period; is that right?

A. I don’t recall, but I believe so.

Q. Okay. You had contact primarily with Los Angeles police officers at that time?

A. I don’t recall.

Q. You were interviewed by police officers, either of Los Angeles or Santa Barbara; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you cooperate with the officers at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. And at the time, in 1993, that you were interviewed by police officers you were still working as a security officer at that time; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. So you had given us some approximate dates, but does that -- that's within the time period that you had been a police -- a security guard, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And at the time you were contacted by law enforcement, had you seen anything at the ranch that was either inappropriate or illegal?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. During the time that you were a security guard, you had an opportunity to observe activities at the ranch, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you had gate logs back then, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And you had interaction with other security guards, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And you had interaction with your supervisors?

A. Yes.

Q. If you saw anything illegal, it was your job to report it to a supervisor; is that correct?

A. Correct.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

MR. SANGER: The -- the answer was in, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you.

Q. Did you observe, during the time you were a security guard in the '90s, anything that caused you to report an illegal activity?

A. No.

Q. During the time in the '90s up until the time that you were interviewed in 1993 by whatever law enforcement agency it was, did you have occasion to see Mr. Jackson interact with his guests?

A. Yes.

Q. How often would you see that?

A. If he was home, probably daily.

Q. All right.

A. If he was out and about.

Q. Other times when Mr. Jackson would be on tour, and would not be there; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Or he might be staying someplace else for some other reason, correct?
A. That’s true.
Q. During the, let’s say, ‘92, ‘93 period, in that general area, how often was Mr. Jackson at the ranch; do you recall?
A. I don’t recall. I believe he was on tour at that point, but I don’t -- I’m not 100 percent.
Q. Did he come back to the ranch from time to time during the tour?
A. Yes.
Q. And so you had occasion to see him there between ‘92 and ‘93, correct?
A. I believe so.
Q. All right. And you saw him interact with guests; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you ever see him do anything inappropriate with regard to any guests, adults or children?
A. No.
Q. If you had seen anything inappropriate, would you have reported it or taken it up with your supervisor?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Now, after the -- after that period of time, you understood there was an investigation, and after that period of time you continued to work at the ranch, correct?

A. Yes.
Q. And eventually when you became the ranch manager in 2002, it was part of your job to supervise the security and fire department, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. You were aware that you had a security officer by the name of Brian Barron; is that right?
A. That’s correct.
Q. Were you aware that he was a sworn peace officer?
A. Yes.

Q. And Violet Silva was the chief of security at the time you became ranch manager; is that right?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. And had you known Violet Silva the entire time that she had worked there?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you have a good working relationship with Violet Silva?
A. I believe so, yes.
Q. Okay. Did you feel that you had open communications both ways; that she could talk to you, you could talk to her about any concerns?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Now, at some point, the Arvizo family came to stay at Neverland Ranch; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.
Q. And what do you recall about your first contact with the Arvizo family?
A. I believe they were -- my very first contact was when Gavin was ill with cancer.
Q. Okay. And who was there at the ranch with Gavin?
A. I believe his mother and his father and his two siblings.
Q. All right. Do you recall having any particular interaction with Janet Arvizo?
A. No.
Q. Do you recall having any particular interaction with any of the Arvizos --
A. On their first.
Q. -- on the first visit.
A. No. Just seeing them there. That was it.
Q. Were the -- did you see Mr. Jackson with the Arvizos?
A. If they were out and about. Possibly.
Q. All right. Now, after that first visit, did you have occasion to see any of the Arvizos again?
A. Yes.
Q. And what’s your next recollection of the Arvizos?
A. My last recollection?
Q. Your next. In other words, when did you see them? You don’t have to take them one by one. But did you see the Arvizos again?

A. Yes.
Q. And after the first visit, who came with the Arvizo children?
A. I believe it was just the mother. The mother and the children.
Q. Okay. The next time you recall seeing them, the mother was there?
A. They came with Chris Tucker once or twice.
Q. Were any parents with them when they came with Chris Tucker?
A. Not always.
Q. So you recall them being there with Chris Tucker, maybe parents. And then do you recall the mother being there again before or after the Chris Tucker visits?
A. Before and after.
Q. All right. Now, at some point -- well, let’s put it this way. In February and March of 2003, do you recall the Arvizos being there?
A. Yes. Yes.
Q. Okay. And during that time period, do you recall who was with the Arvizo children for the most part?
A. Sometimes they were by themselves. Sometimes they were with their mother.
Q. The father wasn’t around during this period of time?

A. No.
Q. During that period of time, did you see anything that suggested that the -- any of the Arvizos were being held against their will?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object. Foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. During February and March of 2003, did you see the Arvizos there on the property?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you see the Arvizo kids out and about on the property?
A. Yes.

Q. What did you see Gavin and Star, the two boys, doing?
A. Do you mean besides just out having fun, just --
Q. Let’s start with that. Were they out having fun?
A. They appeared to be having fun.
Q. Did you see them doing anything else besides out having fun?
A. They were a little destructive at times.
Q. All right. Did you see at any time during February and March 2003, anything that suggested that the Arvizo children wanted to leave and were not being allowed to leave?
A. No.

Q. Okay. They seemed to be happy to be there?
A. They did.
Q. You said they were a little destructive. Can you give me an example of what you’re talking about?
A. Well, they just -- they didn’t respect property, if you will, from golf carts to -- I know that they defaced a few areas on the property, wrote some graffiti, if you will, and just not very respectful.
Q. Did you see Janet Arvizo on the property in February and March of 2003?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you see her outside of the buildings from time to time?
A. Yes.
Q. And what did you see her doing?
A. She seemed to just be enjoying herself.
Q. Did you see her talking with other people?
A. Other people --
Q. Other -- talking with anybody, I suppose.
A. Yeah.
Q. Do you recall in particular any particular individuals she was talking with?
A. With the housekeeping staff or with the chefs, Dieter Weizner.
Q. When you saw her -- I’ll come back to that in one second. When you saw her talking with the chefs, did you see her inside the house?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you were in and out of the house yourself; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you had the combination to the doors in the house; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. You had the combination to Mr. Jackson's private room?

A. Correct.

Q. If you were going to go into Mr. Jackson's private rooms, I should say plural, go into his suite, as we're calling it, would you knock first?

A. Yes.

Q. And how did you regard that part of the house?

A. How did I regard it? It was his space. His bedroom.

Q. All right. Were people allowed to just -- randomly allowed to go in and out of his space?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, was everybody that could get in the house, were they allowed to go into his space?

A. No, not unless they were invited, but --

Q. So if you had guests who were staying overnight at the ranch, would they be allowed to come into the house?

A. Yes.

Q. And in what part of the house did they come into?

A. Mainly the house was open. It was downstairs. Other than his area.

Q. All right. So they'd be allowed to come in the kitchen area, the --

A. Living room.

Q. The family room?

A. The library.

Q. The dining area?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Okay.

A. There's a crafts room upstairs.

Q. All right. And did people often come in and hang out in that family room/kitchen area?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Now, you said that you saw Janet talking with, I think you said the cooks; is that correct?
A. That’s correct.
Q. Could you see her inside the house?
A. Yes.
Q. And where did you see her?
A. In the dining or kitchen area.
Q. Did you see her having meals or just sitting and talking, or what did you see?
A. Both.

Q. All right. Did you see her sitting at the bar?
A. Yes.
Q. You mentioned that you saw her talking with Dieter Weizner?
A. Yes.
Q. Where were the two of them when they were talking to each other?
A. In the breezeway, in between the main house and the office or arcade area.
Q. Okay. Did you see her talking with Mr. Weizner in the kitchen or family room area at any time?
A. I don’t recall.
Q. May have, but you don’t recall?
A. No.
Q. All right. Did Janet Arvizo ever seem in any way to you, from what you saw, to want to leave the ranch and she was not allowed to do so?
A. No.
Q. Did she ever complain to you about anything?
A. Never.
Q. Now, is the -- let me withdraw that.
Did you ever arrange for transportation for any of the Arvizos to and from any locations outside the ranch?
A. Yes.
Q. What arrangements did you make?

A. If it was a phone call, to call for a car service, or I personally took them on more than one occasion off property.
Q. Where did you personally take them?
A. I -- actually, once, shopping in Solvang.
Q. Okay.
A. And --
Q. Now, when you went shopping in Solvang - let’s take that, first of all - who went with you?
A. Janet Arvizo, and I believe it was just the two boys.
Q. Okay. And do you know where Davellin was?
A. I don’t.
Q. Okay. So Janet Arvizo and the two boys went shopping in Solvang. You drove them; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. And what vehicle did you drive, if you recall? Let’s put it this way, was it a ranch vehicle?
A. Yes, it was one of the cars. I’m not sure exactly which one.
Q. Now, were you to guard them?
A. No.
Q. Did you restrain them in any way?
A. No.
Q. Did you prevent them from using the telephone?
A. No.

Q. Did you prevent them from talking to anybody?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m going to object as to relevancy. It’s irrelevant unless time is established.
MR. SANGER: I don’t know about that. But it’s a good point. I can establish the time.
Q. What time was this?
A. It was in the afternoon. Do you mean the date?
Q. Yeah. Was it in --
A. It was around that -- 2003, in February or March. I’m not exactly sure when.
Q. Somewhere in the February, March time period? Okay. And -- all right. So you took them into Solvang shopping. Did you stand there and watch over them while they were shopping?

A. No, it was mainly just transportation. I was actually at the car while they were out and about.

Q. So you drove them. You stayed at the car and they went shopping?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you in general -- if Janet wanted to go somewhere, Janet Arvizo, would she request someone to drive her?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Yes. She didn't actually come with a vehicle, so --

Q. BY MR. SANGER: So you would then make arrangements for her transportation; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And on this particular occasion, you decided just to do it yourself?

A. Yeah, I believe so.

Q. All right. Now, during this shopping trip, about how long did it last; do you recall?

A. Less than an hour.

Q. Did you tell them, "You've got to go back to the ranch," or were they just through shopping?

A. No, they just came back to the car and were ready to go.

Q. All right. Do you recall what kind of stores they went to, or --

A. I was at the car.

Q. All right. And you drove them back to the ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, was there ever a time when Janet Arvizo was followed by a positive PR film crew of Michael Jackson?

A. I don't know.

Q. On that occasion, nobody followed you to take photographs of Janet Arvizo shopping with her kids, as far as you know, right?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you see anybody meeting any description like that?

A. No.

Q. Didn’t see any film cameras or crews or anything, correct?

A. No.

Q. Now, you said there was a shopping event. Was there another event where you either took them or went to pick them up or had something to do with their transportation?

A. Yes, I met them at a orthodontist, a local orthodontist in Solvang.

Q. All right. Excuse me just one second. Do you remember the name of the orthodontist?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was her name?

A. Jean Seamont.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, may I put -- let me just make sure. This is in evidence. It’s 5020. And may I publish that?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: May I take a look at that?

MR. SANGER: It’s this whole series here. You can take a look at them. There are some that weren’t received.

Q. That’s the sign in front of her office, 9670 right?

A. Yes.

Q. And where is her office located?

A. It’s right off of 246 and First Street possibly.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I’d like to have marked for identification, it’s been premarked as 5030, a map.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: And I’d like to approach the witness, if I may.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: May I just stand here and speak loud for a couple questions?

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. As you look at that, does that appear to be a map of the Solvang area?
A. It does.
Q. Does that appear to have a star on it at or near where Dr. Seamont's office is located?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Does that accurately depict the area?
A. It does.
MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I'd move admittance of 5030.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: No objection.
THE COURT: It's admitted.

MR. SANGER: May I publish it?
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. SANGER: Thank you.
Q. This appears to be a commercially prepared map of some sort; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. But where the little star -- okay, there's a star. It's a little more visible on the document than it is on the overhead here, but the little star that I'm circling, is that the approximate location of Dr. Seamont's office?
A. Yes.
Q. And I think everybody knows, but just in case, 246 goes right through the middle of Solvang; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And Buellton's out thataway?
A. Yes.
Q. And Santa Ynez is out thataway. "Thataway" being to the right of the picture, the second "thataway," all right.

Now, is this doctor's office pretty much right on the corner -- not "right on the corner," but very close to the corner of Fifth Street and 246?
A. I believe there's one building in front of it, but, yes, it's very close to the corner.
Q. And I'd like to go through this series of pictures. There are some that were not admitted and I'm not going to refer to those. We'll start with 5020, which I just had up on the board. All right. I’m going to put up 5021. Does that appear to be the front of Dr. Seamont’s office?

A. Yes.
Q. And the -- 246, the main drag in Solvang, you said there’s like a building in between the two. It would be over this way to the left; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And I’m going to put up now 5022 and ask you, if you’re standing in the front of Dr. Seamont’s office, if that would be the -- what I was calling the main drag, 246, that goes through Solvang?
A. That’s correct.
Q. That’s the street where you go 25 miles an hour?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Did you go inside Dr. Seamont’s office?
A. Yes.
Q. I’m going to put up 5024, and ask you, does that appear to be the reception area?
A. Yes.
Q. And when you said -- I think you said you went to pick them up. So they were already there when you got there?

A. No, I actually met them there.
Q. You met them there?
A. Yes.
Q. Were they with anybody when you -- anybody from the ranch when you --
A. Yes.
Q. Who were they with?
A. Vinnie dropped them off.
Q. Okay. When you say “dropped them off,” what was -- what was the story?
A. He brought them to this location. And I met them there to transport them back to the property.
Q. Okay. Had they just arrived at the doctor’s office?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Did you meet them out in front of the building or --

A. I did.
Q. Where did you meet them?
A. On the street.
Q. The street we just saw?
A. Exactly.
Q. So let’s go back to that really quickly.
If I may, Your Honor, 5022.
So right out there?
A. Right where that red car is.
Q. And did Vinnie have a car there?

A. Yes.
Q. Were they in the car when you got there?
A. Actually, no. I was there first.
Q. Okay. So you were there waiting for them?
A. Yes.
Q. And when they showed up, what happened?
A. He left, and I escorted them into the place of business.
Q. Were you there to guard them?
A. No.
Q. Were you there to keep them from talking to anybody?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Did you have any instructions from anybody to restrict their behavior in any way?
A. No.
Q. Did you -- were there telephones in the office?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you go -- what did you do after you -- you meet them on the street and then what happened? Just tell us what happened.
A. Walked in, introduced them to the doctor. And I waited in the waiting room. And Mrs. Arvizo and the two children were -- went into the -- not operating room, but the --

Q. It seems like an operating room, but --
A. Yes.
Q. If you don’t like dental work.

So you never went back into the back?

A. No.

Q. Did you know Dr. Seamont before that?

A. No.

Q. Were you sitting in the front room to guard the door so they couldn’t leave?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: No.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Do you know if there was a back way out of the office?

A. I’m sure there was. I didn’t actually see it.

Q. Did -- how long did the Arvizo family stay at the dental office?

A. It was probably an hour to -- no more than an hour and 20 minutes.

Q. What did you do during that hour, hour and 20 minutes?

A. Read magazines.

Q. Okay. When they were through at the office, or they were through in the back doing whatever they were doing, did you meet them in the reception room?

A. Yes.

Q. And where did you go from there?

A. Drove them back to the property.

Q. Did they complain about getting in the car?

A. No. It was raining quite heavily, so they were running to get to the car.

Q. Okay. At any time while you were with them during that period of time, this dental visit, did any of them ever cry out for help?

A. No.

Q. Did you see anybody use the phone to call for help?

A. No.

Q. Did you hear anybody ask for help from anyone?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Was there anything about their attitude or demeanor that made you think that any of the Arvizos were unwilling to be there or unwilling to go back to the ranch?

A. No, they were excited to be there.

MR. SANGER: Okay. This might be a good place to take a break, if it's all right, Your Honor.

THE COURT: We'll take our afternoon recess. See you in the morning. Remember it will be a half day tomorrow.

(The proceedings adjourned at 2:30 p.m.)

THE COURT: Good morning, everyone. Counsel?

MR. SANGER: Good morning.

JOSEPH MARCUS

Having been previously sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION (Continued)

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Okay. Mr. Marcus, when we left off yesterday, we were talking about the trip to Dr. Seamont's office. Do you recall that?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. You went and picked the family up and you stayed there while they were in the dental office, right?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now, at that time, was there a film crew following the family into the dental office?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'll object. Asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: Didn't I ask about the shopping trip and not this? Maybe I did. I apologize if I did.

THE COURT: Now you're testing my memory? I'll let you ask the question.

MR. SANGER: Okay. And I apologize, Your Honor. Maybe I did ask it.

Q. But in any event, was there a film crew following anybody into the dentist's office?

A. No.

Q. And was there -- if I didn't ask it, let me ask this, so I cover both of them. Was there any film crew following the shopping trip to Solvang?

A. No.

Q. And those were two separate occasions; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now, you are familiar with the gate logs; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And I believe I asked you about this, but just to be certain as well, when you -- are the gate logs kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes.

Q. That's something that you rely on on a regular basis, you and the security staff and others, on a regular basis to run the business at Neverland Ranch?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. I'm going to ask you to look at a couple of different entries.

Before I do that, let me just ask you if you know off the top of your head what date the trip to Dr. Seamont was.

A. I do not recall.

Q. And do you recall roughly when it was in the -- the year, first of all, I think you said, was 2003, right?

A. It was.

Q. Do you recall roughly when it was in the stay of the Arvizos? Was it towards the beginning? Towards the end?

A. I honestly don't recall.

MR SANGER: All right. Okay. With the Court's permission, I would like to approach the witness with the gate logbook.

THE COURT: You may.

MR. SANGER: I'll tell you what, let's do this, if it's all right with the Court, why don't I just put them up on the screen. That might be easier. If that’s all right.

And I’m going to refer to Exhibit 334. And this is page MJ00171. And I’ll slide it up so we can see the bottom there.
Q. First of all, this is for 2-24-03. Does that appear to be correct?

A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Now, the trick is to look over your shoulder and then turn around and talk in the microphone, just as you did. That was perfect.
All right. Now, you notice that it says at the bottom there, “Joe Marcus,” and it looks like it was “Gray van.”
A. Yes.
Q. What does that represent?
A. It represents that I left the property at 1759 and returned at 2005 in the gray van.
Q. All right. And right above it, it appears that there’s a reference there that I think says, “Vinnie,” comma, “Arvizos, 4, Pontiac.”
A. Correct.
Q. What does that tell us about that particular transaction?
A. That Vinnie departed the property at 1634 and returned at 1855.
Q. Okay.
A. With four passengers.
Q. Thank you.
A. I believe.
Q. So it looks like he left at 1634 and came back -- he left at 1634 with four passengers and he came back at 1855 hours. Looks like you left in a gray van, 1759, came back at 2005, correct?

A. Correct.
Q. And then if we look up here at the Arvizos, there’s a reference to Gavin, Star, Davellin and Janet, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. And it appears that they stayed overnight; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And then it looks like they all left at 1634 hours?

A. Correct.

Q. That would be the same time as Vinnie?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And it looks like one of them, Davellin, came back at 1855?

A. Correct.

Q. Is that the same time as anybody else you see on the list there?

A. I believe they came back with Vinnie.

Q. And then it looks like the others, the two boys and Janet, came back at 2005?

A. Correct.

Q. Now, does that refresh your recollection as to when you took this trip to the dental office?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that appear to be the date that that occurred?

A. That appears to be.

Q. All right. In any event, looking at this, it appears that you, in fact, picked up the mother and the two children somewhere and brought them back to the ranch, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. All right. Now, I’m going to take that off and once again make an effort to keep the book in order. Let me ask you about another entry in the book.

And with the Court’s permission, this is Exhibit 334 and it’s page MJ00154. We’ve had that up before. May I put it up?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. So we’ll just show at the bottom here, for the record, for everybody’s reference, that is the Bates stamp number, and I’m going to put this one up here. And there’s a reference here that says, “1752.” It appears to say, “The kids are not to leave per Joe. ‘Kids’ meaning like Gavin, Star, et cetera.”

Do you see that reference?

A. Yes.

Q. And that’s on 2-19-03; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Now, you’ve been asked about this incident both by the defense and by the prosecution, is that correct, by police officers?

A. I don’t --

Q. Let’s put it this way. Not this particular log entry, but you were asked about whether or not you had ever given instructions that the Arvizo children were not to leave the ranch; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the reason that you recall for the Arvizo children not to be leaving the ranch?

Before you look at that, I’m sorry, I should have started the other way. I don’t want to distract you with that yet. Go ahead.

A. The main reason on this particular situation was that the children had been known to pull up to the gate in vehicles, by themselves without an adult, driving one of Mr. Jackson’s vehicles. So I didn’t want the guards to allow them off property in a vehicle. That was one situation.

There was also a situation where there was a --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m going to object as to foundation. Move to strike.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I’d like to not offer that for the truth of the matter, but offer it for his state of mind as to why he gave this instruction.

THE COURT: You can do that. But that’s not what you did either. So I’ll strike that answer and you can go back and develop that foundation.

MR. SANGER: Let me do that.

Q. Okay. As of February the 19th, 2003, were you aware -- were you aware of any incidents involving the Arvizo children using vehicles in an unauthorized fashion?

A. Yes.

Q. And what were you aware of?

A. That they had used the vehicles of Mr. Jackson's to drive around the property.

Q. All right. Did that cause you any concern as the ranch manager?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was your concern?

A. Number one, their safety. Number two, the safety of the employees and the property. And number three, the vehicle itself.

Q. All right. And what was your frame of mind as far as allowing the Arvizos to leave the property on any vehicles, whether it be automobiles, vans or even ATVs?

A. It was not to happen.

Q. Were the Arvizo children supervised by a parent at all times during February and March of 2003?

A. No.

Q. Were there times when Janet Arvizo was not there?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, was there something else -- you started to respond. Let me go back and ask you, was there something else in your mind around this time with regard to whether or not the Arvizo children should be allowed to leave the ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. What was that?

A. There was a film documentary that was --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm going to object. No foundation.

MR. SANGER: Not offered for the truth.

THE COURT: All right. I'll overrule the objection.

THE WITNESS: There was a film documentary that was going to be happening on or off the property, and I do not believe that that had been decided where exactly it was going to happen.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: And who was involved in that documentary?

A. I believe Hamid Moslehi.

Q. Did you know Mr. Moslehi?

A. Yes.

Q. How did you know him, or how long had you known him?

A. For a few years.

Q. And you knew him to be an employee of -- or a contract employee of Mr. Jackson; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And did you see him on or around February the 19th, 2003?

A. I believe so.

Q. Okay. And what was he doing there?

A. I believe he was coming to do the documentary.

Q. And what was your understanding when he first arrived as to where the documentary would be occurring?

A. I believe it was undecided at that point.

Q. At some point was it determined that the documentary would be done somewhere else?

A. I believe so.

Q. During that period of time, did you discuss with anybody whether or not the children should leave the ranch? During that particular -- on that particular afternoon.
Was there a period of time when you were trying to decide whether or not they should be allowed to leave without their mother?

A. Yes, I needed, obviously, some guidance on that.

Q. All right. At some point, did you receive guidance?

A. I believe so.

Q. And did you authorize the children to leave with Mr. Moslehi?

A. I believe they did leave.

Q. All right. And now when you look at that entry, 00154 of Exhibit 334, does that seem to reflect an instruction that you gave that particular afternoon at about 5:52?

A. That's correct.

Q. Did that -- did you ever give any instruction to anybody to hold any of the Arvizos against their will?

A. Never.

MR. SANGER: I would like to, with the Court's permission, put up two exhibits. I'll ask at once to do both in succession. 308 and 309, if I could. May I?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you. Exhibit 308 has already been received into evidence --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: May I see that?

MR. SANGER: Yes.

Exhibit 308 is a one-page exhibit. I'll put it up so we can see the exhibit number there. And then I'm going to pull it down, and see if we can do a little bit of a wide angle. There we go.

Q. Okay. Up at the top, it says, "Neverland Valley Ranch Security Clearance and Guest Information." Are you familiar with this kind of document?

A. Yes.

Q. And in the course and scope of your duties at the ranch, excuse me, is this the kind of document that is kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Correct.

Q. And what is the purpose of this document?

A. Number one, to authorize access onto the property. And number two, to advise the proper people what the guests have access to.

Q. All right. Now, at this time, this appears to be for an arrival date of 6-21-02; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And the arrival is expected sometime in the afternoon, right?

A. Correct.

Q. Who were the people who were coming in this particular group?

A. I believe Chris Tucker, Gavin, Star Arvizo, Adrian, Kelly, Davellin, and Aubrey, I believe.

Q. Okay. Now, it said “Gavellin” there, but you take that to -- it should have been “Davellin”; is that right?

A. I believe so.

Q. All right. This particular group -- do you recall, in June of 2002, if this is one of the times that the Arvizos did, in fact, come with Chris Tucker?

A. I believe so.

Q. Okay. Now, at the bottom there it says, “Special Instructions” -- or, “Special Instruction,” I guess, “General Comment.” Do you see that section?

A. Yes.

Q. And what does this tell you? What is this supposed to tell the staff that -- both yourself and all the people that work for you there at the ranch, what does this tell you all about --

A. Tells me that the guests have full access to pretty much anything that they would like to enjoy at the property.

Q. Do you know if Mr. Jackson was even on the property at that time?

A. I don’t know.

Q. All right. Now, when it says, “Full Access,” that’s what it says there, and then there’s some boxes checked. They aren’t boxes, and they aren’t checks for that matter. There’s some lines with “Xs” on them, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And that outlines the different kinds of activities, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And I see on there “quadrunners.” And I’m pointing to it. You might take a quick look. Is that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. That means this entire group, including the Arvizo children, were authorized to take out the quadrunners; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Now, does that mean they could do anything they wanted with them?

A. Unfortunately, within reason.

Q. All right. So they could use them, they had full access to them, but they were supposed to use them within reason?

A. Within reason.

Q. Okay. What do you mean by "within reason"?

A. Number one, they should wear helmets, goggles, gloves. That was at times an issue to enforce. Security would try to enforce that, of course.

Q. They were supposed to use them safely?

A. Exactly.

Q. All right. And then I want to make sure I go over the head of the court reporter here, so I don't shine this in her eyes.

There's golf cars, jet skis. All of that's okay; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. So that was on 6-21-02?

A. Correct.

Q. Now I'm going to take down 308, Exhibit 308. Put it back in the book here. Okay. And I'm going to put up 309. And again, I'll just put that up for everybody's reference so we can see at the bottom "309," and show you the top.

This, again, appears to be the same type of document; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And this appears to be for 6-28; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. If you were to look in the logs, could you determine what year that was?

A. If I were to look in the logs, possibly.

Q. So for right now, it says, "6-28." All right. Do you know what year it was without looking at the logs?

A. No.

Q. In any event, if we look farther down here, it appears that -- well, I’m sorry, up at the top it says, “Gavin, brother and sister,” correct?

A. Correct.

Q. You took that to pertain to the Arvizos?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And then if we look down here - I’ll do it this way - it looks like, “Quadrunners and” --

A. “Jet skis.”

Q. “Jet skis,” it says, “No.”

A. Correct.

Q. So apparently the Arvizo children were not authorized to use the quadrunners and the jet skis on that visit, the 6-28 visit; is that correct?

A. Correct.

MR. SANGER: We could have the lights again, if that’s all right, Your Honor.

Thank you.

Q. All right. Now, on February the 11th, early morning of the 12th, do you recall Janet Arvizo leaving the ranch with her children? In the early morning hours of the 12th, actually. Do you recall that?

A. What was the date?

Q. February 12th of 2003.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object. Foundation.

MR. SANGER: I’m asking if he recalls personally right now.

THE COURT: All right. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I do not recall.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. Do you recall an instance where Jesus Salas took the family to Los Angeles in the middle of the night?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object. Foundation.

MR. SANGER: Does he personally know about it.

THE COURT: You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: And were you personally contacted with regard to that trip?
A. Yes.
Q. Who contacted you?
A. I believe it was either --
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'll object as hearsay.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer. The question was, "Who contacted you?"
THE WITNESS: I believe it was Jesus.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. Were you there on the ranch that night, into the next day?
A. No.
MR. SANGER: What I'm going do, with the Court's permission, I'm going to ask to approach the witness to show him some gate logs.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm going to object and move to strike his testimony in this area. He has no personal knowledge.
MR. SANGER: There's no question.
THE COURT: You may approach. The objection is overruled.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. I'm going to ask you to take a moment and take a look at the gate logs. And you're welcome to look at whatever you want in there that might help refresh your recollection of whether you were on the property the night of February 11th, onto the early morning hours of February the 12th.

A. Okay. I believe that's a possibility. But I didn't spend the night there. That's what I thought you were asking.
Q. All right. So as you look -- so as you look at the gate logs, does that help refresh your recollection? Either it does or doesn't. If it doesn't, that's okay.
Does that help you refresh your recollection as to whether or not you were there into the early morning hours of the 12th?
A. Yes, I left at 1:15 a.m.
Q. All right. Now, at the time that you were -- let me withdraw that.

Do you recall where you were when you were contacted by Jesus Salas?

A. I believe I was home.

Q. So you think you were actually home by that time?

And where do you live, generally? You don’t have to give your address, but --

A. I live here in town.

Q. In Santa Maria?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, by reviewing the gate logs, the records of the ranch, can you determine what kind of a vehicle Mr. Salas used to transport this family on that night? You might need to look forward on the -- to the next date.

A. I’m sorry, I don’t see it here.

Q. Okay. Okay. Do you know off the top of your head, or do you --

A. I believe it was a limo.

Q. All right. In any event, whatever kind of a vehicle it was, do you remember -- do you have a Rolls Royce there on the property?

A. Yes. We have a few Rolls Royces.

Q. Okay. Whatever kind of a vehicle it was, was it your understanding that it was a vehicle that belonged to Neverland Ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. And did Mr. Salas take that, with your permission?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And he, I take it, returned with it the next day; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. All right. We’re getting close to the end here, which is a lot of good news for you and everybody else.

Let me ask about some of the employees. You had mentioned that you were the ranch manager and therefore in charge of the various departments through the chain of command through the department heads, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. We have had some testimony from Brian Barron, and you may have mentioned already, you know Brian Barron was a police officer; is that correct?
A. Correct.
Q. Were there other people who were former police officers or -- well, let's start with police officers.
A. Yes.
Q. Can you recall during the time you were there how many people had actual peace officer/law enforcement experience?
A. Probably five to ten.
Q. Can you give us the names and associations of some of them, as best you can remember?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm going to object, relevancy, as to this applicable time frame.
MR. SANGER: I can --
THE COURT: Just a moment.
MR. SANGER: I'm sorry.
THE COURT: Objection is overruled.
MR. SANGER: Very well.
THE WITNESS: Yes. There was Retired Herman Stubblefield, who I believe worked for Santa Barbara County Sheriffs. James Wade, who I believe worked for Santa Barbara County Sheriffs. There was a gentleman from Santa Maria Police Department, Rudy Salinas, I believe. He was also retired Santa Maria P.D. There was a gentleman from Grover -- Kelly Cook from Grover -- Grover Beach, I believe. And that's really all that comes to mind at the moment.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Was there a retired military police officer?
A. We currently still employ a gentleman that was a military police.
Q. Okay. Who is that?
A. Curtis Gordon.
Q. Okay. Where was Mr. Gordon at the time of the search on November 18th, 2003?
A. He was at the front gate.

Q. So he would have been the gentleman wearing a security uniform at the front gate?

A. Correct.

Q. And he would have been the gentleman who was greeted by, or greeted, such as it was, the sheriff’s officers coming through the gate with their search warrants?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, all of these people you mentioned, I don’t want to go through each one unnecessarily, but did they -- did each of the people you mentioned work there over a period of time? I mean, they weren’t there for a day or two.

A. Correct.

Q. How long did -- let’s take the longest one. How long did the longest one work there, the one who worked there the longest?

A. Probably Curtis Gordon. He’s still employed with us.

Q. About how many years has he been there?

A. Eight, ten years. I’m not exactly sure.

Q. Okay. Now, in addition to police officers, did you also have people who worked at the ranch who were fire -- fire personnel from fire departments?

A. Yes.

Q. And can you give us an idea of roughly how many over the period of time you worked there?

A. At least 20.

Q. Okay. Can you give us the names and affiliations, if you can remember some of them?

A. Currently we have two officers that work at Taft City Fire. One that works at Grover Beach. One that’s full time at Lompoc Fire Department. And there was many more that have left the property over the years and moved on to bigger and better things.

Q. All right. So when you say “bigger and better things,” you didn’t really mean that with Mr. Jackson sitting here, did you?

A. No.

Q. Okay. But as far as law enforcement or fire careers, sometimes this is a jumping-off point; is that right?

A. It’s a stepping stone for them, yes.

Q. And sometimes this is a retirement job?

A. Exactly.

Q. All right. Now, with regard to the police officers, other than Brian Barron, were there any others who were moonlighting currently, they were police officers who are currently moonlighting? Let me withdraw that phrase, “currently.”

Were there other people other than Brian Barron who, during this period of time, were concurrently working as peace officers actively and moonlighting at the ranch?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. The others were retired police officers, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And with regard to the fire department people, apparently there were a number of people concurrently working for fire departments and working at the ranch, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Was it your understanding that all of these people understood the need to abide by the law?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. And if they observed anything illegal or improper, was it their duty to report it to the staff, to their supervisors?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Did you have, as the owner -- as the ranch manager, did you have an expectation that former police officers, former and current firefighters would also report any unlawful activities to the civilian authorities?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: The people that you have just mentioned, was there any secret made of their backgrounds?

A. No.

Q. Based on your discussions with Mr. Jackson, was Mr. Jackson aware that some or all of these people were either prior or current employees of police or fire departments?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Was there any effort made to keep any of this secret from Mr. Jackson?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Same objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: All right.

Q. Now, do you recall the Bashir documentary?

A. Yes.

Q. The Bashir television program?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see it when it was aired originally in February of 2003?

A. No.

Q. Did you hear about it --

A. Yes.

Q. -- around that time? Did it create a certain amount of buzz around the ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you’ve been there during this entire period of time. Are there times when there is more media attention to Mr. Jackson at the ranch than other times?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall back in ‘93, was there a lot of media attention?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there vehicles on Figueroa Mountain Road by the gate on a regular basis?

A. Yes.

Q. Did that subside after ‘93 for a while?

A. For a while, yes.

Q. Now, you do tend to have people up at the gate sort of on a regular basis; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. What kind of people tend to congregate up around the gate?

A. All different types of people, from all different walks of life.

Q. People from other countries?

A. Other countries, here in this country.

Q. What’s their interest in Mr. Jackson, would you tell us that? Are they fans? Are they --

A. Some are fans, some just want to come and see where Neverland is.

Q. All right. Now, in early 2003, did there -- was there an increase in the media attention at the ranch?

A. I don’t recall.

Q. Do you recall at some point there were media vans and whatnot coming to the front gate?

A. Yes.

Q. When the Arvizos came to the ranch, was there any particular concern with regard to the Arvizos and the media?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Foundation; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Can you repeat the question?

THE COURT: I’ll have it read back.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: “Concern,” I don’t -- I don’t really understand the question.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. Were you made aware that the media had attempted to have contact with the Arvizos?

A. Not personally.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

MR. SANGER: Not personally --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Leading; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Not personally.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Were you advised that the media was attempting to contact the Arvizos? In general. I’m not talking about at the ranch gate, but just in general.

A. Yes, in general.

Q. What was your understanding of why the media was interested in the Arvizos?

A. Due to the documentary, the Bashir documentary.

Q. Were you aware at some time, and I’m asking now for your state of mind, that there was a discussion regarding the Arvizos taking a trip to Brazil?

A. Yes.

Q. Based on your personal contact with the Arvizos, did the Arvizos ever voice any objection to going to Brazil?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Foundation; sustained.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. Did you have occasion to talk to the Arvizos or be in the Arvizos’ presence when the Brazil issue arose?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the Arvizos at that time voice any objection to going to Brazil?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object. Vague as to which Arvizo. Hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained as to --

MR. SANGER: As to which one?

THE COURT: -- which one.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Let’s take the children. Did you have a discussion with the children, or did they have a discussion, or was this discussed in your presence?

A. There was no objection at that point that I know of.

Q. Okay. What about Janet, did you ever have a discussion or overhear a discussion where Janet was involved in some discussion, to use that word again, about going to Brazil?

A. Only that they needed some assistance in finding a spot to take a passport picture.

Q. Did Janet Arvizo discuss that in your presence?

A. It was in the presence of Vinnie and Janet, yes.

Q. Okay. And did she -- was she objecting to having a passport picture?

A. No.

Q. Was she -- what was she doing? What was she saying?

A. They were asking for instructions on where they could go to get their passport picture taken.

Q. And was Janet asking for those instructions as well?

A. I don’t know if she asked personally, but she was standing right next to Vinnie.

Q. And what was her demeanor at that point?

A. They were getting ready to get in the car to head to Santa Maria to get a picture taken.

Q. All right. All right. And then one last area here, for now.

Are you familiar with the kinds of fan mail that Mr. Jackson gets?

A. Yes.

Q. And where is the fan mail delivered?

A. Some is delivered to the property.

Q. Okay. I’m sorry. Of the fan mail delivered -- I take it you haven’t seen his fan mail that goes elsewhere; is that right?

A. Exactly.

Q. So the fan mail that’s delivered to Neverland Ranch is what I’m talking about --

A. Yes.

Q. -- where is that ultimately delivered?

A. It’s delivered to the Los Olivos post office and then delivered to the property.

Q. When it gets to the property, where does it go?

A. Sometimes it goes to Los Angeles, and sometimes some of the nicer stuff we might keep at the property.

Q. All right. Now, when you say “nicer stuff” -- before we get to the distinction, what volume of fan mail comes to the Los Olivos ranch?

A. Three boxes probably every other week.

Q. All right. And sometimes you’ll get big packages; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. Sometimes people will send artwork?

A. Artwork. Books. Clothing. Ties. Coffee mugs. Gifts. Just lots -- lots of gifts.

Q. How about letters?

A. Letters. Lots of letters.

Q. Cards?

A. Cards, yes.

Q. Whose job is it to go through and screen that, if anybody?

A. We don’t really have somebody doing that at this point.

Q. In the past have you had somebody screen it or does it just all go to Mr. Jackson, and say, “Here. Read your mail”?

A. No.

Q. Does it end up sometimes in the 9711 administration building?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And from there, you said something about “the nicer stuff.” So going back to that answer, how do you make the decision as to what ought to go to Mr. Jackson himself to look at?

A. Memorabilia. Just some of the nicer -- nicer items that I think that he might be interested in seeing what the fans have sent for him.

Q. Okay. And you mentioned there might be paintings?

A. Yes.

Q. Books?

A. Yes.

Q. When you deliver this to Mr. Jackson, does he tend to keep it or throw it away, or what does he do with the stuff?

A. You would have to ask Mr. Jackson.

Q. Okay. Well, looking at his house -- you’ve been inside his house and his room; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you're here under oath and we're not here to, you know, either please or insult Mr. Jackson one way or the other. Just tell it the way it is. Does Mr. Jackson tend to keep a lot of stuff all over the place?

A. Lots of stuff.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Does Mr. Jackson, based on your observation of his premises, does he tend to keep stuff that's sent to him by fans or throw it all away?

A. I believe he keeps everything.

MR. SANGER: All right. I have no further questions at this time.

THE WITNESS: Do you want this back?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Do you have the logbook up there, Mr. Marcus?

If I may approach to retrieve that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You may.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. All right. Good morning, Mr. Marcus.

A. Good morning.

Q. You have worked at Neverland since 1988 --

A. That's correct.

Q. -- correct?

You've worked there the entire time that Mr. Jackson has owned that property, true?

A. Correct.

Q. Is there anybody at Neverland Ranch who has worked there as long as you have?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Who would that be?

A. There's multiple employees that have been there longer.

Q. All right. And you began in the maintenance department?
A. Correct.
Q. You’ve been the property manager three years?
A. That’s correct.
Q. You have been a security officer at Neverland Ranch?
A. That’s correct.
Q. Tell me what period of time that was.
A. I believe it was from ‘92, ‘93, through ‘96, possibly.
Q. Okay.
A. Maybe a little bit -- I might be off on the dates.
Q. When you were a security officer there, were you armed?
A. Yes.
Q. And at present, as a property manager, you supervise everybody at Neverland; is that correct?
A. Correct.
Q. And you supervise the supervisors, true?
A. Yes.
Q. How often do you interact with your boss, Mr. Jackson, when he’s on the property, let’s say?

A. Daily.
Q. Daily? And would you meet with him more than once a day?
A. No. Might speak with him.
Q. Okay. Do you ever have meetings with Mr. Jackson?
A. Once in a while, yes.
Q. Does he ever sit down with you and tell you that he wants something changed at Neverland?
A. Yes.
Q. And if he wants something changed at Neverland, does he typically talk to you or will he talk to other employees, more of a direct route?
A. Sometimes he’ll use the direct route.
Q. Okay. So there’s not always a chain of command at Neverland, is that fair to say, in terms of Mr. Jackson's interaction with his employees?

A. No, he'll sometimes go directly to the source if something needs to be done at that point. Or if I'm not available.

Q. And I believe your testimony is nobody outranks you at Neverland, true?

A. I didn't say that.

Q. I mean other than Mr. Jackson. Is there anybody above you at Neverland, other than your boss, Mr. Jackson?

A. No.

Q. Okay. So you answer only to Mr. Jackson in terms of your job at Neverland Ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. And would it be fair to say that your job is to make sure Mr. Jackson is happy?

A. "Happy"?

Q. Pleased. Pleased with everything at Neverland. Isn't that your job?

MR. SANGER: I'm going to object. That's argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: That's fair to say.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. In fact, that's everybody's job at Neverland, is to make sure Mr. Jackson -- everything that's done at Neverland is exactly the way Mr. Jackson wants it, true?

A. It's mainly for him and his guests, correct.

Q. Yes. But he's the one who decides what guests will be on the property?

MR. SANGER: Objection. That's argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And he decides what people will not be allowed on that property, true?

A. Correct.

Q. Doesn't he sometimes make specific directives to the security staff, “Do not let this person on the property”?

A. Yes.

Q. And when he allows a guest on the property, sometimes he will take privileges away from those guests, true?

A. Yes.

Q. And he personally gets involved in deciding what privileges individual guests will enjoy at Neverland?

MR. SANGER: I’m going to object. That’s vague as to time and subject matter.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You can answer.

A. Repeat the question.

Q. My question was that he gets personally involved in deciding what privileges individuals will have at Neverland.

A. I don’t know that to be true, but --

Q. Didn’t we just look at a log that said that Mr. Jackson allows the Arvizos and Chris Tucker, et cetera, to enjoy all the privileges at Neverland?

A. Yes.

Q. So he does at times get personally involved in deciding whether they get to go horseback riding or not, true?

A. Correct.

Q. Would it be fair to say that you probably know more about Neverland Ranch than anybody who works there, being the manager that you are and having your experience?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, you know about the telephone system there, right?

A. Correct.

Q. And you know that it requires a three-button code to get out, to get an outside line, right?

A. Correct.

Q. And if you don’t know that three-button code, you can’t get an outside line, can you?

A. That’s not correct.

Q. Okay. Explain that to me. Why can’t -- how can you get out -- let's say you're at a phone, and you previously testified that it requires a three-button code to get an outside line, true?

A. Not all phones require a three-button, but some phones do.

Q. Tell me which phones require the three-button code.

A. Mainly the outbuildings, the theater, the zoo area, the employees' areas. A few of the phones in the main house, but not all of them. Some of the phones are direct dial where you would pick them up. And it's any code. There's no set code. It's any three digits. It could be 000. It could be 245.

It's not a set code.

Q. But if you don't know there's a code, you can't get out, true?

MR. SANGER: Objection; vague.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: If you just pick up the phone and dial a number, you won't get out?

A. That is correct.

MR. SANGER: Objection. Vague as to which phones.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Tell me specifically which phones in the house do not require a three-button code, specifically in the main house.

A. In the living room of the main house, as well as -- I believe that -- the library also. I think those are the only two that are direct dial.

Q. Do you know if the library requires a three-button code, or not?

A. I do not recall at the moment. I believe it's just the living room.

Q. What about Mr. Jackson's personal phone in his room?

A. I honestly don't recall if it is -- I believe it's direct dial.

Q. Are you aware that he has a private line in his bathroom?

A. Yes.

Q. And the guest cottages. You neglected to mention the guest cottages. They require a three-button code out, don't they?

MR. SANGER: Objection. That's argumentative.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'll rephrase.

Q. Did you neglect to mention the guesthouses when you were telling us about phones that require a three-button code to get out?

MR. SANGER: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I actually didn't go through the whole list of phones. There's multiple areas with phones, as well as the train depot, the theater, the guest units.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I move to strike the answer as nonresponsive.

THE COURT: Sustained. But I think what he's saying is that he wasn't allowed to finish the question where he was giving the list. And I think that's correct.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

Q. So you would include the guest cottages as being among the phones that require a three-button code to get out, true? Yes?

MR. SANGER: I'm going to object. That's confusing the way it's phrased. It's vague and ambiguous.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I believe it's direct dial. But I could be wrong at this moment. But I believe it's pick up and go.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You believe so?

A. I believe so.

Q. A moment ago did you say that the guesthouses were included in three-button dial-out code?

MR. SANGER: Objection, misstates the evidence and argumentative.

THE COURT: I think I'll allow the question. I think the District Attorney is inquiring if he said that. Go ahead.

THE WITNESS: I believe that they are direct dial.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: They do not require a three-button code to get out, the guest cottages; is that your testimony?

A. At this moment I don't recall.

Q. All right. Now, you testified that Mr. Jackson made a number of improvements to Neverland. He added the amusement park while you were there?

A. Yes.

Q. The water fort? Yes?

A. Yes.

Q. Teepees, the trains? Yes?

A. Correct.

Q. Video arcade?

A. Yes. Actually, the video arcade was already there.

Q. But he put in the video games?

A. There were some video games there before, when he first purchased the property.

Q. But basically the improvements that Mr. Jackson added were all attractions for children, is that correct, in general?

MR. SANGER: Objection. As phrased, it's compound. All, or in general?

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. I'll strike "all" in that question.

Q. In general --

A. Yes.

Q. -- these improvements are for children, designed to attract -- attractions for children, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And you've seen children when they arrive at Neverland?

A. Correct.

Q. They go crazy when they see all this, don’t they?

A. Yes.

Q. I mean, they love it?

A. Yes.

Q. Never seen anything like it, have they?

A. Some children have not.

Q. And there’s quads. Tell us what a quad is.

A. It’s a four-wheel, all-terrain vehicle.

Q. How fast will it go?

A. One or two of them will go in the excess of 70 miles an hour.

Q. They can be pretty dangerous, can’t they?

A. Yes.

Q. So generally, would it be fair to say that quads are not allowed to be sent out with young boys without any supervision? I mean, would you put an 11-year-old boy on a quad and say, “Go have a great time,” that goes 70 miles an hour?

A. I didn’t say all of them go 70 miles an hour. I said two of them do.

Q. Let’s back up. How fast do the slower quads go?

A. We’re talking about a 50cc motor. They’re very small. Not very fast. Maybe 25, 30 miles an hour, tops.

Q. All right. And they can be dangerous?

A. Yes.

Q. An 11-year-old boy could get hurt on such a vehicle, couldn’t he?

A. Yes.

Q. And generally, you would not, for safety reasons, send an 11-year-old boy out to ride one of these quads even if they just go 30 miles an hour without supervision, true?

A. Yes.

Q. Or a 13-year-old, without any adult supervision, wouldn’t be allowed to ride the quads, right?

A. No, that's not true.
Q. Same thing with the jet skis. They can be dangerous, can't they?
A. Yes.
Q. A child could drown using jet skis?
A. Yes.
Q. And typically you require some supervision to send a kid out on the water with the jet skis, true?
A. Yes.
Q. You mentioned a zoo. And I think you talked a little bit about the animals. You mentioned that they're all well cared for.
A. Yes.
Q. Have you ever seen Mr. Jackson throw stones at the lion?
A. No.

Q. Tell me about the lion cage. What's it look like?
A. It's a cage with a few toys in it for the lions. Some logs. I mean, what exactly do you want?
Q. What separates the lion from the people who are looking at the lion?
A. Wires.
Q. Okay. What do they look like?
A. Did you want me to draw you a picture?
Q. No, I'm just curious. If you can describe it.
A. Like a cage. Like --
Q. Is it like a bar? Bar or chicken wire, or what?
A. No, it's not chicken wire. It's -- it's eighth-inch, I believe, wire that you would see at a normal zoo to --
Q. Okay. Is it wire or bars?
A. It's wire.
Q. Okay. And how is the wire configured, in terms of is it configured in squares, in diamonds, in rectangles?
A. Squares.
Q. How big are the squares?

A. I don’t know.
Q. Can you estimate?
A. I believe you probably couldn’t get two fingers through --

Q. All right.
A. -- the cage.
Q. All right. Now, have you ever seen any of the other animals abused in any way?
A. I’ve never seen any of the animals abused.
MR. SANGER: I’ll withdraw my -- the beginning of my objection.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. So when children come to Neverland, within the bounds of safety, they get to do whatever they want; isn’t that fair to say?
A. That is fair to say.
Q. They’re treated like royalty almost?
A. Yes.
Q. And kids being kids, getting into mischief is kind of part of the program, isn’t it?
MR. SANGER: Objection. Vague; calls for speculation.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer. Do you understand the question?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Would you agree with that statement?
THE COURT: Let him answer it.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m sorry.
THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And in your assessment of the Arvizo children, you described them as, quote, “a little destructive”?
A. That’s correct.
Q. Okay. And you’ve seen other children there be a little destructive as well?
A. Yes.
Q. It’s common, isn’t it?
A. I don’t know if it’s common, but it does happen.

Q. Now, during your 17 years at Neverland, you had a firsthand opportunity to see a number of young boys visit Neverland; is that true?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Have you had a chance to see a number of these young boys who spent a lot of time with Mr. Jackson?

A. Repeat the question, please.

Q. Have you had an opportunity to see a number of these young boys that you just mentioned spend a considerable amount of time with Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Jackson tends to form special bonds with these -- some of these young boys, true?

MR. SANGER: I'm going to object. Lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Not just boys, but yes, I have seen him have bonds with children.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. And one of the young boys that Mr. Jackson had a special bond with was Frank Cascio. While you were there, did you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. And Frank is now an adult. He's about -- you said, I think, he's in his twenties now?

A. I believe so.

Q. And when you were there in 2003, working, you mentioned -- I believe you mentioned that Frank was there during that time?

A. I believe he was.

Q. Okay. And in fact, he stayed there for several months in early 2003, didn't he?

A. I don't know if he was there several months. He was in and out, yes.

Q. But he was on the ranch for over a month?

A. That's probably fair to say.

Q. And he was working for Mr. Jackson at that time, doing something for him, wasn't he?

MR. SANGER: Objection. Compound; vague; and no foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained on compound.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: He was working for Mr. Jackson at that time, wasn’t he?
A. I have no knowledge of that.

Q. Well, he had an office at Neverland, didn’t he?
A. He had a space, yes.
Q. He had a desk?
A. I believe he did have a desk.
Q. He was working at that desk?
A. I don’t honestly know what he was doing.
Q. And this was at the same time that the Arvizos were there, true?
A. True.
Q. And what he was doing had something to do with the Arvizos, didn’t it?
MR. SANGER: Objection; foundation.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: Not to my knowledge.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, he had a friend named Vinnie there, didn’t he?
A. I believe so.
Q. Do you know what Vinnie’s last name is?
A. No.
Q. And Vinnie stayed there for about the same amount of time during that period as Frank did, true? Over a month.
A. Not to my recollection.
Q. Okay. What is your recollection about Vinnie, as far as the amount of time he spent at Neverland?

A. I recall him coming and going a lot.
Q. And when Vinnie would come and go, he would come and go with the Arvizos, wouldn’t he?
A. Sometimes. Not always.
Q. But often?
A. Not always.
Q. And you saw Frank with the Arvizos at times, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. You mentioned a time when Vinnie was standing there and you witnessed a conversation with Janet, something to do about getting pictures --

A. That's correct.

Q. -- for the passports?

And it was Vinnie that wanted to -- was concerned about getting these pictures for passports, wasn't it?

A. Vinnie and Janet were standing there asking me for directions to a spot that they could get a picture taken.

Q. Do you know a man named Marc Schaffel?

A. I've met him.

Q. Who is Marc Schaffel?

A. He was a guest on the property.

Q. A guest of Mr. Jackson's?

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: I'm going to object. This is beyond the scope of direct.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Have you seen Mr. Jackson form a special bond or special friendship with Aldo Cascio?

MR. SANGER: Beyond the scope of direct.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: He's asked him about his -- any improprieties.

MR. SANGER: Object to a speaking response.

THE COURT: I've looked to him to speak. I'll overrule the objection. Go ahead.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did you see Mr. Jackson, observe it, form a special bond with Aldo Cascio?

A. They were friends, yes.

Q. What about Brett Barnes?

A. Yes.

Q. Jason Francia, did you ever see him spend time with Jason Francia?

A. No.

Q. What about Wade Robson?

A. Yes.

Q. Jordie Chandler?
A. Yes.
Q. Macaulay Culkin?
A. Yes.
Q. Gavin Arvizo?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you mention a Shane Brando?

A. I didn’t mention him.
Q. What about Shane Brando?
A. Yes.
Q. Little Michael?
MR. SANGER: Objection, Your Honor. Beyond the scope of direct and the Court’s ruling.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Little Michael?
A. Do you have a full name?
Q. Omar Bhatti?
A. Yes.
MR. SANGER: Renew my objection. Motion to strike.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Mr. Jackson is very security conscious, isn’t he?
A. Yes.
Q. Are calls monitored at Neverland?
A. No.
Q. Doesn’t Mr. Jackson have a phone in his private quarters where he can monitor phone calls?
A. Yes.
Q. So you don’t really know if Mr. Jackson monitors phone calls?
A. No.
Q. Mr. Marcus, doesn’t it say in the policy and procedures manual for Neverland Valley Ranch that employees acknowledge that their calls from Neverland Ranch can be monitored?

A. Yes.
Q. And your testimony is that those calls are not monitored?
A. Well, there’s only two phones that you can actually monitor from. One is in my office. And one is at the house. And I don’t monitor them. And to my knowledge, he doesn’t monitor them.

Q. But you don’t know whether Mr. Jackson monitors phone calls, do you?

A. No.

Q. And didn’t that policy go into effect when Violet Silva complained to you about Mr. Jackson listening to her phone calls?

MR. SANGER: Objection; calls for hearsay.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Offered as impeachment.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did anybody at Neverland Ranch complain to you that their calls were being monitored by Mr. Jackson?

MR. SANGER: Objection; calls for hearsay.

THE COURT: You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Nobody told me specifically that Mr. Jackson had been monitoring a call. But it was brought to my attention that somebody had picked up on a line and listened in on a phone call. But it was never said that it was Michael Jackson.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, his is the only phone that can do that other than yours, right?

MR. SANGER: Objection; argumentative.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll strike that.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. So no unauthorized people are allowed on the ranch. You’ve said that, true?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And in order to drive into Neverland Valley Ranch, someone has to open the gate, right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And in order to drive out of Neverland Ranch, a security guard has to manually push something that opens a gate, true?

A. That is true.

Q. And the policy at Neverland is not to let golf carts off the property, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Same thing for quads, true?

A. There was a gray area, because security will sometimes use a quad to go outside the front gate.
Q. Okay.
A. But normally --
Q. Guests are not allowed to take quads out?
A. That is correct.
THE COURT: All right. Let's take our break.
(Recess taken.)

DEFENDANT’S WITNESSES	DIRECT	CROSS	REDIRECT	RECROSS
MARCUS, Joseph	9763-SA	9797-A

THE COURT: Go ahead, Counsel.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. All right. Where we left off, I believe you were telling us that the quads are generally --

THE BAILIFF: Turn your microphone on, please.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: The quads were generally not allowed off the property when guests were driving them; is that correct?

A. True.

Q. Now, you have been -- when you were a security guard for Mr. Jackson, do you know if he considered you one of his best security guards?

MR. SANGER: I would object. That calls for speculation, without foundation.

THE COURT: The answer is obvious. All right. Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did Mr. Jackson place any special trust in you when you were a security guard?

A. Yes.

Q. And one of the things that he did that involved trust was that while he was on tour in ‘93, he had you personally patrol the hallway to his bedroom to make sure no one entered it; isn’t that true?

A. I don’t recall that.

Q. You don’t remember that?

A. Personally patrol inside --

Q. Inside the main house to make sure no one went in his bedroom when he was not there.

A. I don’t recall that.

Q. When the ‘93 case was under investigation, additional security was brought in to Neverland Ranch. Are you aware of that?

A. Yes.

Q. And they were known as “the OSS”; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you the last security guard of the previous staff of security, not including the OSS, that turned his firearm over to -- or actually stopped being armed?

MR. SANGER: I’m going to object to that question as unintelligible.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I can rephrase it.

Q. Were you the last armed security guard on Mr. Jackson’s normal staff of security?

A. I don’t know if I was the last. I don’t know.

Q. Well, didn’t you refuse to turn your gun over at one time when you were asked to turn it over to the head of security?

MR. SANGER: That’s argumentative the way it’s phrased.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It’s offered as impeachment.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Do you know who the head of security was?

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Zimmerman. I believe he was your father.

A. I don’t recall.

Q. All right. Do you consider yourself a loyal employee of Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. And you previously testified that he’s the person who gives you your instructions for your job at Neverland?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you take any orders from Dieter Weizner?

MR. SANGER: I’m going to object to the term “orders” as vague.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll rephrase that.

That’s fair.

Q. In terms of your duties as the ranch manager of Neverland Ranch, do you take orders from Dieter Weizner?

A. I would take requests from Dieter Weizner and address them as needed.

Q. And those requests would be the normal requests of a guest, true?

A. True.

Q. But as far as policies and procedures at Neverland Ranch, Dieter Weizner doesn’t tell you what to do, true?

A. True.

Q. And neither does Marc Schaffel?

A. True.

Q. Neither does Frank Cascio?

A. True.

Q. Or Vinnie Amen?

A. True.

Q. Or Hamid Moslehi?

A. True.

Q. Ronald Konitzer?

A. True.

Q. That’s because Mr. Jackson is the only person who can tell you how to handle policies and procedures at Neverland Ranch, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Have you reviewed any documents in this case in your preparation for your testimony?

A. Yes.

Q. Which documents?

A. My -- the document the investigator let me see before.

Q. I’m sorry?

A. It was a document of what I was to testify to.

Q. You were given a document regarding what you were to testify to?

A. No, what I had testified -- what I had stated in an interview with the investigator.

Q. An investigator who was working for Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. How many documents did you review?

A. It was just my statement. I think it was a page and a half.

Q. Just one statement?

A. Yes.

Q. How many times have you been interviewed in this case by Mr. Jackson’s investigators?

A. That was it.

Q. Just one time?

A. Yes.

Q. And was that in November of -- I’m sorry. Was that in the early part of 2004?

A. No.

Q. Who was the investigator that interviewed you?

A. Jesus Castillo.

Q. Was he the only investigator that has interviewed you in relation to this case?

A. I believe so.

Q. Haven’t you been interviewed by Eric Mason?

A. No.

Q. You’ve never been interviewed in regards to this case by Eric Mason?

A. I’ve spoken with Eric Mason, but I have not officially been interviewed by him.

Q. Didn’t you testify on August 20th, 2004, at a hearing in this case that you were interviewed by Eric Mason?

A. I believe it was off the record, and I was not actually interviewed.

Q. I see. So Eric Mason -- do you know who he is?

A. Yes.

Q. He’s a private investigator who works for Mr. Jackson?

A. That’s correct.

Q. He had a private interview with you that was, quote, “off the record”?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that what he said?

A. That was my understanding of it, yes.

Q. Did Mr. Mason say that, “This interview is off the record”?

A. I don’t recall.

Q. But that was your understanding?

A. I didn’t actually physically sit down with Eric Mason.

Q. And he didn’t take any notes at that meeting, did he?

A. I don’t believe so.

Q. And he didn’t record it, did he?

A. I don’t believe so.

Q. And no one else was present, were they?

A. No.

Q. And you knew at the time Mr. Mason was working for Mr. Jackson, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you aware of the charges against your employer?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were present when a search warrant was executed at Neverland Ranch on November 18th, 2003?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were interviewed by law enforcement in this case?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you tell the truth in that interview?

A. Yes.

Q. You were completely honest with the interviewer?

MR. SANGER: Objection. Argumentative and asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You were aware at the time that this interview was tape-recorded?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you tell the interviewer that Mr. Jackson had no security for his room except for a key?

A. I don’t recall.

Q. Did you tell the interviewer that alcohol has been served only two times in the history of Neverland at events there?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Is that true?

A. I believe that to be true.

Q. It’s only been served two times in the history of Neverland?

A. At events.

MR. SANGER: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I believe “events” was the key word.

MR. SANGER: I’ll withdraw it.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: What qualifies as an “event”?

A. More than five people, ten people.

Q. Okay. So a dinner party; never been served at a dinner party?

A. No, I didn’t say that. I said “event.”

Q. More than five people?

A. A scheduled event.

Q. Okay. A dinner party with more than five people?

A. Yes, alcohol would be served at dinner if somebody wanted some wine, that is correct.

Q. Okay.

A. The children’s parties? No. Those are --

Q. I’m not asking about children’s parties.

A. Okay.

MR. SANGER: Objection. Argumentative. The witness was answering the question.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And do you -- let me strike that.

Do you have any knowledge of Mr. Jackson drinking alcohol himself?

A. Yes.

Q. You’ve seen him drink alcohol?

A. No.

Q. You have never seen Michael Jackson drink alcohol?

A. Personally, no.

Q. You said that when you met -- that you knew of the Arvizo family at that interview, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. But you said -- when questioned about the family, you said, “Honestly, I only met the wife or the mother.” Was that a true statement?

MR. SANGER: Objection.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll back up. I’ll back up. I should have asked a predicate.

Q. Did you say that you had only met the wife or the mother of the Arvizo family?

A. I believe that to be true; that I had not met the father.

Q. Well, you understood the question “family” included the entire family, didn’t you?

MR. SANGER: Objection. Argumentative and calls for hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer. Do you want the question read?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And was it true when you said, “Honestly, I only met the wife or the mother”? Is that a true statement?

A. With regard to the father, that is true. I have not met the father.

Q. But you understood the question included the entire family, correct?

A. We can go back and forth here. I’m telling you what I recall.

Q. Well, do you recall that the question was, “What does” -- “Who’s included in that family? How many kids, parents, names, et cetera?” Do you recall that being the question when you said, “Honestly, I only met the wife or the mother”?

MR. SANGER: I’m going to object. This is hearsay and it’s improper impeachment.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Do you recall that being the question when you gave that answer?

A. I don’t recall that to be the question or the exact question.

Q. Did the kids ever stay at Neverland without their mother?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know that to be true when you gave this interview?

A. Yes.

Q. In the interview, didn’t you specifically state, “The kids never stayed there without their mother”?

A. I don’t recall.

Q. Mr. Marcus, when you gave this interview, weren’t you trying to distance yourself from the facts of this case and protect your employer, Michael Jackson?

MR. SANGER: Objection. Argumentative and compound.

THE COURT: I’ll sustain the objection as argumentative.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You mentioned that you took this family, the mother and the children at least, to the dentist?

A. That’s correct. Actually, the orthodontist.

Q. Orthodontist. And you took them there because --

A. I did not take them there.

Q. I’m sorry?

A. I met them there.

Q. I’m sorry. Did you arrange that meeting with the orthodontist?

A. Yes.

Q. And you arranged that meeting because the two boys were having -- suffering from pain related to their braces, correct?

A. That’s part of the story that I heard, yes.

Q. Isn’t that what you told the interviewer?

A. Yes.

Q. You didn’t tell them anything else other than the fact that the boys were having pain and they needed to go to the orthodontist immediately?

A. Correct.

Q. And you called the orthodontist, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You picked that orthodontist?

A. It was recommended to me.

Q. Okay. You made an appointment?

A. Yes.

Q. And you specifically made an appointment after the orthodontist’s office would be closed for business, true?

A. Correct.

Q. What time did you make that appointment for?

A. 6 or 7 p.m. I don’t know exactly what time.

Q. And then Vinnie took them to the orthodontist, true?

A. Vinnie met me at the orthodontist, correct.

Q. But Vinnie was transporting the Arvizo family, true?

A. Yes, he was.

Q. Did you arrange for that?

A. They were on their way back from Santa Maria, so we met there.

Q. Did you arrange for Vinnie to take the Arvizo family to the orthodontist?

A. Did I personally arrange it? No.

Q. You didn’t talk to Vinnie?

A. Yes.

Q. So did you arrange with Vinnie to meet you at the orthodontist?

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: I’m going to object. That’s argumentative and that’s a different question.

THE COURT: Overruled. The answer was, “Yes.” Next question.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And the Arvizo family, during that meeting, was never outside either your presence or Vinnie’s presence, as far as you know, correct?

A. Not correct.

Q. When were they outside your presence or Vinnie -- well, let me break that up. Were they outside your presence?

A. Yes.

Q. When was that?

A. While they were in the operating room or --

I was in the lobby. They were in the back, the back room.

Q. But they were in the same building, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you sat there for about an hour and a half?

A. Correct.

Q. Can you tell us why you sat there for an hour and a half reading magazines?

A. It was pouring down rain. They needed a ride back. I didn’t know how long the procedure was going to take.

Q. And why did you meet them there at the same time that the appointment was to begin?

A. I arranged the appointment. And I was going to pay for the appointment.

Q. But the payment would be at the end of the appointment?

A. I didn’t know what the -- I don’t believe we had agreed upon a price at that point, possibly.

Q. Was Neverland Valley Ranch on a skeleton crew at this time, in February of 2003?

A. No.

Q. Do you know who International Business Management is?

A. International Business Management. No.

Q. Did you ever contact anyone complaining that Neverland Valley is on a skeleton crew and that you were concerned about safety in the month of February 2003?

MR. SANGER: Objection; beyond the scope of direct.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Who was that International Business Management? What is the name?

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: My question is, did you ever complain to anybody that Neverland Valley Ranch was on a skeleton crew during the month of February 2003, and that you were very concerned about safety?

A. I don’t recall.

Q. That’s possible that you might have done

that?

A. It's possible.

MR. SANGER: Calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Overruled. The answer was, "It's possible." Next question.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: So my question was, was Neverland Valley Ranch on a skeleton crew at that time?

A. Apparently it was possible.

Q. Do you have any knowledge of children sleeping in Mr. Jackson's room?

A. Yes.

Q. On the interview that you had with the investigator at the time of the search warrant, you specifically said you had no knowledge of children sleeping in Mr. Jackson's room, didn't you, Mr. Marcus?

A. That's correct.

Q. That was untrue, wasn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. So you weren't honest in that interview, were you, as you just testified?

MR. SANGER: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'll strike that.

Q. In terms of the question regarding whether or not the Arvizo children were allowed to leave the ranch, you ordered security not to let Gavin and Star and Davellin off of the Neverland Ranch property, didn't you?

A. No, I don't believe that to be true.

Q. You don't believe it to be true?

A. Ordered? You're saying I ordered someone --

Q. Gave a directive to the security staff not to let those children off of the property, correct?

A. I believe -- I believe that we -- yes.

Q. You did do that?

A. Yes.

Q. And that order was placed on a grease board in the security office, wasn't it?

A. I don’t know about that, no. The only order I know of is the one that you’ve -- that we saw today.

Q. Well, you just testified that you ordered security not to let those children off the property. How did you do that?

A. I believe it was in writing on the overhead that we saw earlier.

Q. My question is, how did you do that, Mr. Marcus? How did you make that order? How did you communicate that order to the security staff? That’s my question.

A. The phone.

Q. You called who?

A. Probably the officer that was at the gate.

Q. And at least one time you made that order at 5:52 p.m. on February 19th, ‘03, correct?

MR. SANGER: I’m going object to the question as misstating the evidence, “at least one time.”

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Can you repeat the question?

THE COURT: I’ll have it read back.

THE WITNESS: I just don’t have the date in front of me, so....

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That’s fine.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: If that’s what the document says that’s in your hand, then that is correct.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Could I have the Elmo, please, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Mr. Marcus, I’d like to show you that document again. For the record, it’s Exhibit 334, Bates number MJ00154.

Okay. Can you read that?

A. Yes.

Q. I’d like you to go down to 1740, the notation that, “Hill house garage is going to be left unlocked per Jesus.” Do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. And then under that, it said, “Hamid is going up there.” So does that mean at 5:40 Hamid is going up to the hill house garage?

A. That’s what it appears.

Q. And then under that, approximately 12 minutes later, there’s the notation, “The kids are not to leave per Joe. ‘Kids’ meaning like Gavin, Star, et cetera.”

A. That’s correct.

Q. Is that when you made that directive to security that the kids are not to leave?

A. Did I call them at 1752? I don’t know.

Q. Okay. Would it be the policy of the security guard to make that notation when you made that call?

A. It would be the policy, yes, but it’s not always the case.

Q. Okay. But the reason why they have a number next to that, the 1752, that’s to connote the time that you made that order?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Okay. So 12 minutes after Hamid arrives, you decide that the kids are not to leave the property, true?

A. That is true.

Q. And your testimony is that your reason for that is because you were concerned about the kids at that moment driving off the property driving an automobile? Is that the reason why you made that order?

A. I also stated that there was a documentary going on, and it was undecided where the location was going to be that it was going to take place.

Q. Okay. Who told you about this documentary?

A. Hamid.

Q. Okay. So Hamid arrived and told you that he was going to take the kids off the property?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you told Hamid, “The kids are not allowed to leave the property,” didn’t you?

A. Their mother was not on property and, yes, I did.

Q. Okay. So --

A. I do not believe their mother was on property.

Q. So you were not going to allow those kids off the property, no matter what?

MR. SANGER: Objection. Argumentative and vague.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll strike that.

Q. So now you’re adding another reason: It’s the mother wasn’t on the property. Is that the reason why you wouldn’t allow them off the property at that time?

MR. SANGER: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Mr. Marcus, Gavin Arvizo and Star Arvizo never drove a full-sized automobile on the Neverland Valley Ranch property, did they?

A. No, that is not true.

Q. Did you personally observe them driving an automobile on Neverland?

A. No.

Q. Do you know of anybody, by name, who saw Gavin and Star Arvizo driving on the Neverland Valley property?

A. Yes.

Q. Who?

A. I believe Jesus Salas let me know that they had driven it back from the -- a van, actually, from the theater. And that was obviously a concern.

Q. A van from the dealer?

A. The theater.

Q. Oh, the theater. Okay. And you were concerned that a 13-year-old boy would drive a van or some full-sized vehicle to the gate and that, unless you told the security guards not to let him out, they would just say -- open the gates, “Have a nice drive”? Is that what your concern was?

A. My concern was, it is not uncommon for a vehicle, if it’s one of the primary vehicles that have tinted windows, if somebody were to pull up, some guards would just automatically open the gates. So, yes, I would want them to know who was in the vehicle.

Q. Isn't it a fact that they don't let any of the ranch vehicles out unless they know who's driving them?
A. That is not true.
Q. Aren't there notations in this very log where employees attempted to drive out of Neverland Ranch and they were stopped and detained because they didn't have authorization?

A. They attempt. But it's not always the case. I've driven off property many times with --
Q. Well, 13-year-olds are not allowed to drive on Neverland property, right?
A. They do.
Q. But, I mean, the security guards know this, true?
A. The security guards try to limit them.
Q. When Jesus told you about Gavin driving the van on Neverland property, Jesus told you that Jesus was in the van with Gavin at the time, didn't he? Isn't that true?
A. No, that's not true. I don't recall that to be the case.
Q. Is there any notation anywhere in the Neverland documents, security records, logs, anywhere that indicates Gavin or Star Arvizo drove a Neverland vehicle?
A. I believe you have the documents, so I don't know that to be true or not.
Q. I'm asking you what you know.
A. I don't know.
MR. SANGER: Objection; argumentative.
THE COURT: Overruled. Next question.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And after this driving incident, you continued to keep the keys to these vehicles in the vehicles themselves; is that correct?

A. Yes.
Q. Why?
A. Convenience.
Q. Convenience was more important than safety?
MR. SANGER: Objection; argumentative.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It’s a fair question.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You said that you’ve never seen anything inappropriate at Neverland, is that correct, involving children?
A. Inappropriate, yes.
Q. Now, you have full access to the entire property, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. You have access to Mr. Jackson’s room?
A. With permission, yes.
Q. Yes. You have access to his office?
A. With permission, yes.
Q. You’ve been in his office?
A. Yes.
Q. Children are in his office?
A. That’s correct.
Q. Children are in his room?
A. Correct.
Q. You’ve seen pornography -- or, excuse me, you’ve seen adult erotic materials at Neverland Ranch, correct?
A. Yes.

Q. And have you seen adult erotic materials in Mr. Jackson’s room?
A. No.
Q. Have you seen adult erotic materials in areas where Mr. Jackson allows children to be?
A. No.
Q. Do you know if Mr. Jackson possesses adult erotic materials?
MR. SANGER: Lack of foundation.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You know that he does possess adult erotic materials?

A. Oh, no. I don’t know that he does.
Q. You have no knowledge of that?
A. Have I gone out and bought them for him? No. Do I know that he owns them? I haven’t seen them with him, no.
Q. Well, you’ve been in his office numerous times, true?
A. Yes.
Q. I’m showing you Exhibit 779. Do you consider these adult erotic materials, Mr. Marcus? Yes? Do you?
A. No. I mean, yes, they are. They’re artwork, but --
Q. You keep looking at Mr. Jackson. Why is that?

MR. SANGER: Objection; argumentative.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. So you admit that these are adult erotic materials?
MR. SANGER: Asked and answered.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And you have seen these before, haven’t you?
A. Yes.
Q. And they are on Mr. Jackson’s desk in his office?
A. That is correct.
Q. And they are there when children are allowed to come into his office?
A. That is correct.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Thank you. I have no further questions.
MR. SANGER: I think you’ve left some things up here, and I’ll let you --
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m sorry.
MR. SANGER: May I proceed, Your Honor?
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. SANGER: Thank you.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. SANGER:
Q. Okay. Mr. Marcus, the figurines that you just were shown, how big are those figurines; do you know? Do you remember actually seeing them as opposed to seeing the pictures?

A. Probably ten -- well, I don’t know. 16 inches.
Q. And where are these figurines located?
A. I believe they’re on his desk.
Q. And what else is on his desk?
A. Lots of other stuff.
Q. Again, so is his desk messy?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Let’s go back to a couple things here. First of all, let’s talk about interviews for a second. You were interviewed by the Los Angeles Police Department in 1993; is that correct?
A. I don’t recall that, but if that is --
Q. That’s right. I think I asked you if you were interviewed by law enforcement. You remembered that, but not which department it was; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you remember there being a detective by the name of Rose Ferrufino?
A. No.
Q. Were you interviewed by a woman detective at that time? Do you remember at all?
A. I don’t recall.
Q. In any event, whatever you did, you cooperated at that time with the interview; is that right?

A. I believe so.
Q. Okay. Now, you were also interviewed on November the 18th of 2003; is that right?
A. That’s correct.
Q. Were you there when the officers arrived at the ranch in the morning?
A. No.
Q. All right. Did somebody call you to come in or did you just come at in your regular time?
A. Yeah, I just arrived a little bit after the --

Q. And you were at that time, November 18th, 2003, the ranch manager, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Was this something you expected to happen?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Was it -- did it upset the routine that you had planned for that day?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevance.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes, definitely.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Can you describe the state of things at the ranch? Just sort of describe what was happening.

A. Well, there was 70 officers going in every different direction doing what they wanted at that point in time, and it caused me concern because we had about 60 employees on property. And I wanted to -- number one concern was the employees, to make sure that they were obviously taken care of or if they needed anything. I wasn’t exactly sure what was really going on at that exact moment.

Q. Okay. And when this group of officers arrived, did they -- did they pretty much all arrive at once?

A. I believe so.

Q. Okay.

A. They arrived before I did.

Q. All right. So by the time you got there, was it pretty overwhelming?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, were there also guests on the property?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have concern for the guests?

A. Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled. Next question.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Did you attempt to respond to requests from the various officers?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. Thinking back to that day, what sorts of things were you being asked about or asked to do?

A. Open certain buildings that they needed access to.

Q. All right. And did you attempt to accommodate those requests?

A. If I had the key available, yes.

Q. All right. Were you also -- when you said you were dealing with employees, what sorts of things were you doing with some of the employees?

A. I mainly wanted to know that they were -- I wasn’t sure if the employees were allowed to leave the property at that point or if they had to stay. And I was trying to figure out if that was an option, if some of the employees could leave. Some of them were uncomfortable with being there for whatever reason. It was just a stressful morning, obviously.

Q. And what did the police officers or the sheriff’s officers do, sheriff’s and district attorney’s investigators? What did they do with regard to the employees?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Vague; relevance.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: Which ground?

THE COURT: Relevance.

MR. SANGER: May I, Your Honor --

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: -- in just one word explain? Has to do with his interview.

THE COURT: All right. I’ll allow the question.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. What did they do with the employees in general?

A. They would interview them or speak with them, get their information. Some were in different areas, so there was different officers with different employees.

Q. Okay. And did you make arrangements to send some of the people back to work?
A. Yeah. I thought that if they wanted to stay, then, yes.
Q. And did you try to comply with all the officers’ requests with regards to interviews?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you personally submit to an interview yourself?
A. Yes.
Q. And you were aware it was tape-recorded; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And when you were being interviewed, was that after everybody else left and it was all calm, or how were things going at the time?

A. No, it was about eleven o’clock, I believe, and --
Q. 11 a.m.?
A. Yeah, 11 a.m., so it was only two hours into it. They were there until ten o’clock, I believe, p.m.
Q. Was it calm or chaotic, or what was going on around that time?
A. Yeah, it was still -- it was chaotic. The whole day was obviously chaotic.
Q. And did you have a radio?
A. Yes.
Q. Is that something you carry around in the normal course of your duties at the ranch?
A. Yes.
Q. Why did you carry a radio?
A. To communicate with the employees and to be accessible.
Q. All right. Were people on the radio to you seeking guidance and expressing concerns during this period of time?
A. I believe so, yes.
Q. Okay. In fact, while you were being interviewed, your -- you asked permission to answer the radio several times; is that correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: That is correct.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. And the officers let you -- did the officers let you answer your radio?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, in the middle of this, when you were giving the interview, did you remember all the names of the Arvizo family as you were sitting there?

A. I was extremely overwhelmed at the moment, and no, I did not.

Q. Did the officers eventually tell you the names of the Arvizo family members?

A. I believe it was on the -- the warrant, I guess, if you will. So, yes.

Q. But you went over -- you went over the Arvizo family members with the -- with the officers; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And they asked you about the father. Do you recall that?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember telling them whether or not you had seen the father?

A. I don’t believe I’ve ever met the father. I might have seen him, but I don’t know if I’ve ever met him. If so, it was a long time ago.

Q. Okay. And that’s what you told them, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, as far as the mother was concerned, did you tell them that you had met Janet Arvizo?

A. Yes.

Q. You told them that you had -- did you tell them that you had met the children?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you tell them where the mother usually stayed?

A. I believe so. I don’t know if that came up. I know that she stayed in the guest units.

Q. Okay. Did one of the officers ask you if the children had ever stayed in the arcade, slept in the arcade?

A. Possibly.

Q. Did the children ever sleep in the arcade?

A. There’s no sleeping quarters in the arcade, so I wouldn’t -- I wouldn’t think so.

Q. All right. Now, did you tell the -- you were asked a question by Mr. Auchincloss about whether or not you said that the children, the Arvizo children, had slept in Mr. Jackson’s room. I believe that was the question that was asked. Do you have personal knowledge -- have you seen the children sleeping in Mr. Jackson’s room?

A. I don’t recall that question being asked.

Q. Okay. Well, let me ask you this: Do you recall the Arvizo children actually sleeping in Mr. Jackson’s room? In other words, did you see them sleeping in Mr. Jackson’s room? Forget about what you were asked. Let me start over. I’m asking you right now. Did you ever see the Arvizo children sleeping in Mr. Jackson’s room?

A. I don’t believe so.

Q. All right. Did you -- were you aware, through your duties and in the course of what you were doing, that the Arvizo children were sleeping in the house?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you assume that they were probably sleeping in Mr. Jackson’s quarters?

A. I didn’t assume. But there is an extra room in the suite, so, yes, they could have been.

Q. All right. And about how long was your interview that day with the police, the sheriff’s and D.A.’s investigators at the ranch on November 18th, 2003?

A. About an hour and a half, I think. An hour maybe.

Q. Now, you were also asked about whether or not you were interviewed by various people. Let’s start with Eric Mason. Do you know who Eric Mason actually worked for?
A. Ultimately? I believe Mr. Jackson.
Q. All right. First of all, is Mr. Mason a licensed private investigator?

A. I don’t know.
Q. Okay. Where is he from? Do you have any idea?
A. I believe he lives in the Bay Area.
Q. Okay. Do you know whether or not he has an office up there?
A. I believe so.
Q. Have you ever seen the name of his office or his firm?
A. No.
Q. Okay. Now, do you know if Mr. Mason was working for an attorney or attorneys as an investigator?
A. I believe so.
Q. Okay. When you say ultimately for Mr. Jackson, do you know whether or not he was working for the attorneys or if he was employed directly by Mr. Jackson?
A. I don’t know.
Q. Have you seen Mr. Mason in the company of any attorneys over the years?
A. Yeah.
Q. Okay. Which attorneys?
A. I believe Mark Geragos, yourself. Do you mean there together?
Q. Yeah. Do you know if -- for instance, do you know Steve Cochran?

A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And who does he work for?
A. Are we talking firm, or --
Q. Yes, his firm. Do you know the firm?
A. Rosenman -- I’m just not sure on the rest of it.

Q. Okay. A firm that includes the name Rosenman; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And is that -- where is that firm located?

A. In Los Angeles.

Q. Do you know if Mr. Mason was working for Mr. Cochran and that firm?

A. I think so.

Q. All right. All right. You mentioned you’d seen me over the years; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And during the period of time in recent years that you’ve been the ranch manager, have you been responsible for making arrangements for the attorneys and investigators to come to the ranch for various purposes associated with the case?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you make an effort to avoid being involved in any substantive discussions while attorneys and investigators were there?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Did you -- would you be interviewed whenever attorneys or investigators would come to the ranch?

A. No.

Q. What would happen, generally?

A. Generally we would just go about our business, whatever needed to happen with regard to if it was -- they were there for -- it was more or less I was just there to assist them if they needed something, an area opened or -- just mainly to assist them if they needed something.

Q. So you’ve met Mr. Mesereau before, I take it?

A. Yes.

Q. You met Miss Yu?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, as far as being interviewed about this case, as far as defense investigators, somebody representing Mr. Jackson, you referred to about a page -- and I think you said it was a page or a page-and-a-half interview that you reviewed earlier; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And who was the investigator who actually did the interview of you for that report?

A. Jesus Castillo.

Q. Jesus Castillo. And did -- is Mr. Castillo a licensed private investigator, to your knowledge?

A. I believe so.

Q. Okay. Where is he from?

A. Here in Santa Maria.

Q. All right. He has an office here in Santa Maria?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Castillo tell you what to say?

A. No.

Q. What did he do?

A. He asked me -- number one, he subpoenaed me. Number two, he let me see the report, if you will, and just -- I was at his office for 15 minutes. It was --

Q. Okay. That was recently, to get you here --

A. Yes.

Q. -- right?

Okay. Before that, there's a report that you reviewed that had to do with your testimony, you said.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. So my question is, how did that report come about? Was that as a result of you talking to somebody?

A. With Jesus.

Q. There you go. Okay. Do you remember when that was that you talked with Jesus?

A. Just recently. Two months ago maybe.

Q. And so two months ago was the first time you sat down and were actually interviewed by an investigator about this case?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, back in '93, were you formally interviewed by anybody, that you can remember?

A. I don’t recall.

Q. Did Eric Mason ever make any effort to have some kind of secretive talks with you?

A. No.

Q. All right. So when you talked to any investigators or lawyers, did you speak honestly, whatever the context was, with any of the defense lawyers or investigators?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Let’s go back to other questions that you were asked. You talked about having codes programmed into the phone, right?

A. Yes.

Q. First of all, are guests at the ranch instructed on how to use the phone?

A. Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. To your knowledge -- you’re the ranch manager. Based on your knowledge of ranch operations, is it policy to advise or instruct guests on how to use the phone?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And have you personally either done so yourself or witnessed other employees instruct guests on how to use the phone?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you asked from time to time how to use the phone?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you ever deny guests the information as to how to use the phone?

A. No.

Q. Now, you talked about two different situations, one being the three-digit entry --

A. Yes.

Q. -- and you said it can be any three digits?

A. That’s correct.

Q. So basically you get one of these phones and you have to push a button to get a line. You hit the digits and that gives you an open line. You hit that button and you can call out; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And if anybody ever asked you how to do that, you would tell them, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And you believe that there’s some of the phones -- let me withdraw that.

Do you have any question as to whether or not some of the phones are accessible without the three-digit code?

A. That is true.

Q. So you’re not absolutely certain which phones are which; is that right?

A. Exactly.

Q. And you believe that the phones in the guest quarters do not need the three digits?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Misstates the evidence; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: I believe that to be true.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. Now, let’s put it this way: If somebody were in the guest units, and they were able to call from the guest units to somebody in Los Angeles, they would either have to have a phone without the code or they would have to know the code, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And if they were able to get that outside line and make a call to people in Los Angeles, they could call 9-1-1; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And by calling 9-1-1, they’d actually get the outside 9-1-1 dispatch center; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Is it also possible to call security for an emergency?

A. That is correct.

Q. And how would you do that?

A. You would use the intercom to call the front gate. They’re there 24 hours a day.

Q. All right. So if there’s ever an emergency of any sort, you can call -- you can call for security and they’ll respond; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. You mentioned that there were a number of things set up in the ranch by Mr. Jackson that involved games and entertainment and that sort of thing; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Are they just for children?

A. No.

Q. Do adults also partake of the various video games and rides and other things at the ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. Do adults seem to enjoy it as well?

A. Yes.

Q. By the way, before I turn my page here, I’ll go back to the telephone calls for a second. To your knowledge, as the ranch manager and having reviewed all the records of the ranch, and based on any information you received from department heads or anybody else at the ranch whatsoever, is there any indication whatsoever that Janet Arvizo was in any way restricted from using any telephone at that ranch?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. Now, you were asked by Mr. Auchincloss about special bonds with different people and he asked about young boys, I think, in his own words. Do you recall those questions?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson have any special bonds with young girls?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you recall -- well, I don’t want to go and list the names here unnecessarily, but do you recall any Cascio children?

A. Yes.

Q. Who would that be?

A. Marie Nicole.

Q. Who how about the Culkin family?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Well, you were asked about -- let me see here. You were asked specifically --
May we approach for a moment? I just have a technical issue on this.
THE COURT: All right.
(Discussion held off the record at sidebar.)
MR. SANGER: Okay. May I proceed, Your Honor?
THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.
Q. All right. Were there other girls who were family members -- let me withdraw that.
Were there other girls who visited the ranch?
A. Yes.
Q. And did other girls besides Marie Nicole seem to have a special bond with Mr. Jackson and vice versa?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: And who were they, the best you can recall? Do you recall some names?
A. I don’t recall the names of each individual child, no, but some of the Culkin kids. Karlee Barnes. I don’t recall exact names now.
Q. Okay. But were there girls involved in activities?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, were there also adult women who had a special bond with Mr. Jackson?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection -- well, I’ll withdraw that objection.
THE COURT: Go ahead.
THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. Besides the women to whom he was married, were there other women who seemed to be particularly close friends with Mr. Jackson?

A. It appeared to be, yes.

Q. Okay. Do you recall the names of any of those particular individuals?

A. Besides his wives?

Q. Yeah.

A. He has friends. Elizabeth Taylor. I’m drawing a blank on a few of the names, but --

Q. You need to speak up just a little. It’s -- you’re trailing off there.

You said Elizabeth Taylor. And you drew a blank on the others?

A. Yeah. There’s other women, I just don’t --

Q. All right. Okay. All right. Now, just picking up, again, on questions that you were asked here. You were asked about Frank Cascio having a desk. Was there a desk that he was allowed to use at the ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Do you know if anybody assigned it to him or if he just started using it?

A. He went and bought it.

Q. Oh, he bought it?

A. Okay.

Q. And where did he put this desk?

A. In the video library.

Q. All right. Now, the video library is up above the garage; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Can you describe the video library itself, just briefly? What does it look like?

A. It’s filled with videos and DVDs, laser disks, all different titles.

Q. Are they arranged? Does it look --

A. Yes.

Q. How is it arranged?

A. By category.

Q. All right. Sort of like a Blockbuster? If you walk in there, the same kind of shelves?

A. Yeah, you can go to the comedy section or horror section, cartoon section, yes.

Q. And is there a small living area at the west end of that video library?

A. Yes.

Q. And describe that very briefly.

A. It’s a couch, a massage chair, a bed. Actually, the couch turns into a bed. And a kitchen area and video equipment to watch movies.

Q. All right. And do guests sometimes stay there?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now -- and did Frank Cascio sometimes stay there?

A. Yes.

Q. Did other people sometimes stay there?

A. Yes.

Q. Where was this desk that Frank Cascio bought? Where did he put that desk in this --

A. I believe it was in the -- at the other -- the other end of the building.

Q. So the east end?

A. The east end, yes.

Q. So you got the video library, that is kind of like Blockbuster, in the middle?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And you have the little kitchenette and a convertible sofa on the west end?

A. Exactly.

Q. And on the east end there’s a little cove, and the desk was stuck there; is that right?

A. Yes. Next to the rest room.

Q. And was this a full-fledged office where this desk was placed, or was it -- was it a big office with chairs --

A. No.

Q. -- and all that? Just describe it.

A. One chair. Fax machine. Computer.

Q. All right. Now, you were asked about Vinnie being there as much as Frank. Was Frank sometimes there when Vinnie was not there?

A. Yes.

Q. And we're talking about February and March of 2003, okay?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. How often was Frank there and Vinnie not there?

A. I don't recall.

Q. You recall that it happened, but just not the frequency?

A. Yeah.

Q. And from February the 7th, let's say, to March the 12th, that period of time, was Frank always at the ranch during that period of time?

A. I don't know if he was there every day.

Q. Okay. You can check the logs and that might help you make that determination; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Vinnie ever there during that period of time when Frank wasn't there?

A. I don't recall.

Q. All right. Now, when you were a security guard, there was something asked about your being armed. Did you have a guard card at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. What is a guard card?

A. It authorized you to carry a weapon here in the State of California.

Q. And do you need to have a guard card, to your knowledge, on private property?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. Okay. But you had one anyway?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you have to qualify?

A. Yes.

Q. At the time when you were carrying a weapon -- let me stop that for a second and ask this: At this point in time, nobody carries a weapon out there; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. At the time when you were carrying a weapon in the early ‘90s at the ranch, did you feel that it was an appropriate thing to do?

A. At that point, yes.
Q. And this is a ranch, we’ve heard about. Are there unimproved portions of this ranch?
A. Yes.
Q. Are there areas where you will go up into the hills and into brush and --
A. Yes.
Q. -- tree areas, that sort of thing?
A. Yes.
Q. As part of the security job, would you have to go into those areas from time to time?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, since that time, things have worked out okay without being armed; is that correct?

A. Yes.
Q. And do you have good radio communication now, in the last couple, few years?
A. Yes.
Q. So if you encounter a problem or anybody on the ranch encounters a problem, they can call security to back them up?
A. Yes.
Q. What’s the response time usually, if you’re in the main area of the ranch, if somebody puts out an emergency call for security?
A. Couple of minutes.
Q. There was a question about alcohol being served. Is it true or not that alcohol was only served at two events prior to your interview in 2003?
A. When we say “event,” I’m talking like a large group of children or group of people that come to the property. So, yes. A wedding or something of that nature.
Q. And when you say “event,” at your job, that takes on a particular meaning; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. It’s not just Mr. Jackson having friends over for dinner?
A. No.

Q. Okay. And for events, what do you generally have to do if you're going to have an event there? In other words, do you have to get special equipment, put tents up, do things like that?

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. And so your recollection that there were two events, do you remember what events they were?

A. I believe the Britto party of 2000 -- I think it was 2003. Or '2, actually. And there was probably two weddings that wine was served.

Q. All right. And since you were there when the ranch was purchased by Mr. Jackson, was it purchased furnished?

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. And was part of what was purchased a collection of wine?

A. Yes.

Q. Has that collection of wine been depleted since the purchase of the property?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevancy.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I believe there's still some, but most of it has, yes, been consumed.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: And that -- let me withdraw that.

Okay. Let's talk about the orthodontist. You were asked some questions about that. Is it your understanding that Mr. Jackson ultimately paid for the orthodontic work that was done on the Arvizo children?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how much it was?

A. I believe it was about $700 or $800. 750, possibly.

Q. You were asked about the request that was made by Mrs. Arvizo, Janet Arvizo, for orthodontic care for her children. Can you describe that in more detail? What was requested?

A. I believe the children's --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object. Hearsay.

THE COURT: Foundation.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. You were asked what reason was given for the orthodontic care or the request for the orthodontic care. Do you recall that?

A. Yes.

Q. And you gave an answer, and then Mr. Auchincloss, I think, interrupted you.

Where did you get the information from for that answer? In other words, how did you know that orthodontic care was being requested by Janet Arvizo?

A. I believe I spoke with Janet on that day.

Q. All right. And what did she tell you?

A. That her children’s teeth were hurting extremely badly and needed some care. Didn’t want to go back to the -- the orthodontist in L.A. I believe there was an issue with prior payment. She just wanted to take those braces off and send them back to the orthodontist that originally put them on, I believe.

Q. All right. Did she tell you what she wanted to do with her children’s teeth after the braces were removed and sent back to the orthodontist?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Relevancy; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: All right.

Q. In any event, you made the arrangements for her to go to the orthodontist, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And was there any particular reason why it was set up at the end of the day?

A. I believe it was just for convenience. I don’t believe that they were on property and I think it was just easier for the orthodontist as well as for us.

Q. All right.

A. I believe we did request to do it after hours.

Q. Okay. Is that something that -- is that the only time you’ve ever requested local business people or professionals to see ranch guests after hours?

A. No.

Q. And is there some reason why you do that from time to time?
A. Just for convenience and for -- obviously just to protect the guests, if you will, if it’s somebody that doesn’t want to go into a public place at that point.
Q. All right. Now, on that particular day, you said that Janet Arvizo and all three of her children were in Santa Maria with Vinnie. I believe that was your answer; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. What was your understanding of what they were doing in Santa Maria?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Hearsay; foundation.
THE COURT: Foundation; sustained.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: How did you know they were in Santa Maria?
A. I believe they went to get their passport pictures taken.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Move to strike; nonresponsive.
THE COURT: Sustained. Stricken.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. You answered this question for the District Attorney, so I’m just wondering what is your source of information. Did somebody tell you that they were going to Santa Maria for some purpose?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer that “yes” or “no.”
THE WITNESS: I gave them directions to a place that I thought might be able to help them with their passport picture.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. So did that discussion you already told us about take place before Vinnie and Janet and the children left?

A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And then they left, and then you got a call to come and meet them at the orthodontist?
A. I believe we had arranged it earlier that day, but, yes.
Q. Okay. There was a question about International Business Management, which has the initials IBM, it turns out.
Did you -- it’s not International Business Machines, the famous IBM, I guess.
Were you aware of this company, IBM, or International Business Management?
A. I don’t recall. I believe it possibly could have been a business manager.
Q. Okay. Were there accounting firms from time to time that handled business management for Mr. Jackson?
A. Yes.
Q. Were there accounting firms that did so for a long period of time, to your knowledge?

A. Yes.
Q. All right. More recently, what accounting firm has been handling things over the last couple of years?
A. Bernstein, Fox & Whitman.
Q. And prior to that, do you remember the name of the accounting firm?
A. I think it was one or two that were simultaneous, so I’m not sure on the names.
Q. Okay. Was there one that was there for a fairly short period of time?
A. Yes.
Q. And do you know whether or not that was IBM?
A. I don’t recall.
Q. All right. In any event, you were asked if you recall talking to somebody there in February of 2003. Do you remember the question?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Okay. And you weren’t sure. I think that was the answer.
A. That’s correct.

Q. All right. Before February 7 of 2003, from the beginning of January through February 6th of 2003, was Mr. Jackson on the premises?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I don’t recall. I don’t keep track of every day that he’s on property.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. Thinking back to the beginning -- let me ask you, was there a period of time when Mr. Jackson was in Florida for an extended stay?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall when that was?

A. I believe it was around Christmastime and before.

Q. Okay. Was it before February 2003?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, when Mr. Jackson is not on the premises, is it necessary to have as much staff power as you would have when he’s on the premises?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. Okay. And if he’s on the premises with a number of guests, do you need more staff time than if he’s not there at all and there are no guests there?

A. Yes.

Q. And if he’s on the premises and there are a number of guests and you also have some kind of media flurry that you talked about, where there is more interest from the media, do you need to have more staff people than if he’s not there, there’s no media attention and there are no guests?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, you mentioned something about adult materials, and we talked about those figurines that Mr. Auchincloss wanted to show you. Did you ever see Mr. Jackson personally in possession of adult materials?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see him -- did you ever see adult magazines or books on display in any of the public areas or -- I say “public areas,” any of the areas where guests would be frequenting?
A. Not on display, no.
Q. All right. All right. Now, you asked -- you were asked some questions about -- earlier on about the nature of Neverland and its attraction, and Mr. Auchincloss wanted to ask about young boys. Was -- were the attraction --
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m going to object to the prefatory remarks.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. Were the attractions of Neverland oriented towards families?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you believe it’s an appropriate, a nice place for families to visit?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; calls for a conclusion.
THE COURT: Overruled.
THE WITNESS: Yes.

MR. SANGER: No further questions.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:
Q. Mr. Marcus, in regard to the lack of security at Neverland during February 4th -- February of 2003, the reason for that is because Mr. Jackson wasn’t making his payroll; isn’t that true?
MR. SANGER: Objection. Assumes facts not in evidence and relevance.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Are you, as ranch manager, familiar with the finances, the financial part of operating Neverland?
A. No.
Q. You have no idea what the expense of running Neverland is?
MR. SANGER: First of all, asked and answered; and secondly, no foundation; thirdly, relevance.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You said that Mr. Jackson was not -- you've never seen him in personal possession of adult materials. What would you call those figurines that I showed you?

MR. SANGER: Objection. Argumentative; asked and answered.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'll rephrase.

Q. Wouldn't you call those figurines that I showed you adult materials?

MR. SANGER: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You may answer.

A. They strike me as artwork, yes.

Q. They're just artwork? Or adult materials?

A. It's a type of art.

MR. SANGER: Objection. Excuse me. Object. Argumentative; compound.

THE COURT: Overruled, but I really don't have your question.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes. I'll rephrase that.

Q. My question is, would you consider the adult -- the figurines that I showed you adult materials?

A. I consider them a type of artwork.

Q. Do you consider them to be adult materials? I'm not asking you whether they're artwork or not.

A. I understand your question.

Q. My question is, do you consider them to be adult materials? Yes or no.

A. A type of artwork of adult nature, yes.

Q. You think it's appropriate for children to be exposed to these type of materials?

A. No.

Q. You were asked about Mr. Jackson's relationship with young girls. And over your 17-year period at Neverland, you were able to come up with two names that he had a close relationship with young girls, Karlee Barnes and Marie Nicole Cascio, correct?

MR. SANGER: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

MR. SANGER: And misstates the evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I believe you gave me a list of the boys' names. And I didn't have a list of the females' names, so, no, I don't recall every single person's name, no.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: So my question is, you were able to come up with two names. Any more? Is that it? Just two?

MR. SANGER: Objection. Argumentative; misstates the evidence. He came up with more than two names, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I'm sure there are others. There was Shane Brando's sister. I don't recall her name.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Go ahead.

A. I don't recall her first name off the top of my head.

Q. My question is, can you remember any other names?

A. No.

Q. No. And you were asked about adult women that Mr. Jackson formed a special bond with other than his wives. And you came up with one, Liz Taylor, correct?

A. Do you mean just friends? People that I --

Q. I mean a special bond, close bond, close relationship with.

A. Liza Minnelli has been there, and they seem to be good friends.

Q. How many times has Liza Minnelli been there?

A. I don't recollect.

Q. So we're up to two. Any others?

MR. SANGER: Objection, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: When you were interviewed by the investigator at the time of the service of the warrant, you did acknowledge that you knew each one of the Arvizo -- each member of the Arvizo family, correct?

A. I did acknowledge?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. But in the beginning, you acknowledged that you met only the mother, correct?

MR. SANGER: Objection, Your Honor, this has been asked and answered.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Counsel went into it.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: But in the beginning, you stated that you had only met the mother, correct?

MR. SANGER: Objection. That misstates the evidence and it’s argumentative.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll rephrase.

Q. If the beginning, you said, “Honestly, I only met the wife or the mother,” correct?

A. In the beginning I also asked for an attorney to be present and was denied that by Mr. Tom Sneddon.

Q. Do you have an attorney in this case?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever had an attorney in this case?

A. Yes.

Q. Who paid for that attorney?

MR. SANGER: Objection, Your Honor, relevance.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did that attorney tell you not to talk to law enforcement?

MR. SANGER: Objection, Your Honor, calls for attorney-client privilege. Counsel knows better than that.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: There’s been testimony to this effect, but nevertheless, I’ll move on.

MR. SANGER: Objection, Your Honor. Move to strike counsel's gratuitous remarks.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well --

MR. SANGER: And I'd ask the jury be advised.

THE COURT: I'll strike your remarks, Counsel. That's inappropriate.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

THE COURT: I think we'll --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: End for the day?

THE COURT: We'll take a break.

(To the jury) I'll see you tomorrow. Remember the admonition.

(The proceedings adjourned at 11:30 a.m.)

THE COURT: Good morning, everyone.

THE JURY: (In unison) Good morning.

THE COURT: Counsel? You may proceed.

JOSEPH MARCUS

Having been previously sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

RECROSS-EXAMINATION (Continued)

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Good morning, Mr. Marcus.

A. Good morning.

Q. I just have a few more questions and we'll be done.

A. Okay.

Q. First of all, you mentioned in your testimony yesterday that you were -- I believe you were present when the Britto party was held at Neverland; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And do you recall which month that party occurred?

A. I believe it was September.

Q. September of '03?

A. I believe so.

Q. And do you know who was the organizer of that party?

MR. SANGER: I'm going to object. That's beyond the scope of direct, and relevance.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Mr. Marcus, you mentioned that Mr. Salas called you on the night of the 12th, or the early morning hours of the 12th, when the Arvizos left Neverland; is that correct? The 12th of February?

A. I believe so.

Q. Okay. Are you uncertain of that?

A. I'm uncertain of the date. He called me, yes.

Q. Did Mr. Salas actually talk to you that night?

A. I believe so. I believe he was at the front gate and the officer actually dialed the number and I believe Jesus got on the phone.

Q. So you actually had a phone conversation that night with somebody from Neverland at approximately one o'clock in the morning?

A. I thought it was later than one o'clock, but I could be mistaken.

Q. Sometime in the early morning hours of that morning?

A. I believe so.

Q. Finally, during your interview with the investigator when the warrant was served at Neverland back in November of '03, at some point did you ask the interviewer to turn the tape-recorder off?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was right when you were being questioned about children sleeping in Michael Jackson's room, wasn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And you never answered that question, did you?

A. I believe I did.

Q. Well, wasn't your next statement, "How many more questions do we have?" after you said, "Could you shut that off a minute?"

A. I believe I finished the interview as was directed by the investigator.

Q. Okay. My question is, didn't you say -- after you asked the investigator to shut off the recorder, wasn't your next answer, "Okay. I" -- "How many more questions do we have?" That's the question I'm asking. Did you say that?

A. I believe so.

Q. And then she said, "One," and you said, "Could we just move on to the next question?" Isn't that what you told the interviewer?

A. I believe there was a little bit more to the question, but, yes.

Q. Well, did you say something else? Is that what you’re telling us, or is that an accurate depiction of what was stated?

A. I believe you have it right in front of you, if you would like to read it.

Q. My question is, is that -- is what I’ve just read to you or what I’ve just told you consistent with your recollections of the event?

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: I’m going to object. It’s asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled. The answer is in. Next question.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you. I have no further questions.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

THE COURT: Mr. Sanger?

MR. SANGER: Yes, thank you.

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Just very briefly on that. This interview that you had with the police officers, did you understand that that was voluntary, that you did not have to talk to them if you didn’t want to?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevancy.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: On relevancy? Okay. I’m trying to understand. I apologize, Your Honor. Let me think for a second.

Q. The interview we’re talking about is the police officers at the ranch during the search, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. What was your understanding of whether or not you were required to submit to an interview?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevancy.

THE COURT: I’ll allow the question. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I was trying to cooperate as much as possible with the investigation on that day.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Did you know whether or not you had to talk? Do you know if you had an option not to talk?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Same objection.

THE COURT: I'll allow the question.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: And did you agree to go ahead and talk with them?

A. That is correct.

Q. And when you asked if they could turn off the tape-recorder, did they accommodate you? Did they turn it off?

A. No.

Q. You knew that they were continuing to record you; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you went on from that point. Do you recall how long the interview lasted on tape after that point in the conversation?

A. Probably five -- maybe five, ten more minutes.

Q. And the officers continued to ask you questions; is that right?

A. I believe one or two more questions.

Q. Okay. And you answered them?

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: All right. Okay. I have no further questions.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: No further questions.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

THE COURT: Call your next witness.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, Your Honor, the defense will call Macaulay Culkin.

THE COURT: For counsel's information, there was a motion to limit filed by the defense on this witness, and --

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, we're not going to be asking those questions.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. Come forward, please. When you get to the witness stand, please remain standing. Face the clerk here and raise your right hand.

MACAULAY CULKIN

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Macaulay Culkin. M-a-c-a-u-l-a-y; C-u-l-k-i-n.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Good morning, Mr. Culkin.

A. Good morning.

Q. You are an actor from New York, right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Would you please summarize your career?

A. Summarize my career?

Q. Yes, please.

A. I started working at the age of four doing stage and things like that. And done a number of things; films, things like that. Kind of worked till I was about 14, took a break there for a while, and just started working again recently.

Q. Do you know the fellow seated at counsel table to my right?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Who is that?

A. That’s Michael Jackson.

Q. Is he a friend of yours?

A. Yes, he is.

Q. How long has he been a friend of yours?

A. I first met him when I was nine or ten years old.

Q. And how did you meet him?

A. He kind of called me out of the blue one time, just said, “Hey,” you know, “This is Michael Jackson.” And this is after the “Home Alone” movie had come out. So it’s kind of like -- it was like, “I think I understand kind of what’s happening, and I’d like to get together and talk.”

Q. And he’s still your friend?

A. Yes, he is.

Q. When did you last talk to him?

A. I talked to him about three days ago.

Q. And at some point, did you visit Neverland for the first time?

A. Yeah, it was after he had called that first time. He invited us, me and my family, over there to hang out.

Q. And did you and your family go to Neverland?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. Did you hang out?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. How long did you hang out there with him?

A. I think the first trip we were there for about three or four days. It was me and my younger brother and my mother and my father.

Q. How many times do you think you visited Neverland?

A. More than a dozen times from basically when I was about 10 to when I was about 14 years old. And I kind of took a break there for a while, just didn’t go. I just never found myself on the West Coast, so I never found myself going there. And then went a couple times between when I was 17 and now, just a handful of times.

Q. And when was the last time do you think you visited Neverland?

A. About a year or so ago.

Q. Okay. And you maintained a friendship with Mr. Jackson all those years?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Okay. Do you consider him a close friend of yours?

A. Yes.

Q. Let’s go to your first trip to Neverland, okay? You say you were there with your family?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And who in your family are you referring to?

A. My brother Kieran and my mother and my father.

Q. Okay. And what do you remember about your first visit to Neverland?

A. It was big. It was -- it was -- I had never seen anything like it before. Especially considering it was someone’s house. It was -- you know, it wasn’t exactly what I was expecting. Because you’re nine or ten years old, you don’t really pay attention to what people say or whatever, you know, those kind of things. So -- you know, everything is lit up.

And he was a nice guy. I remember he laughed because I referred to all the Ninja Turtles by their first names, and things like that. And so it was one of those kind of things where it was just very -- it was very casual, really.

Q. Did you and your family have a good time?

A. Yes.

Q. What are some of the things you did at Neverland with your family?

A. Saw a movie in the movie theater. Rode on the amusement park rides, and -- just everything, you know. Just used the facilities, basically.

Q. How many times do you think your family has been to Neverland?

A. About the same amount of times. When I was younger they were there virtually every time I was there.

Q. And you have a sister?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And did she visit?

A. I have two.

Q. Hmm?

A. I have two of them.

Q. Did they visit Neverland as well?

A. Yes, they have.

Q. How many times do you think they’ve been to Neverland?

A. Not as often, just because they were really never on the West Coast as often as I was. But whenever they were in town and I was going, they would love to go as well.

Q. Have you seen Michael Jackson outside of Neverland?

A. Yes.
Q. Where have you seen him?
A. Whenever. I’d be staying at a hotel and he’d come and pick me and my brothers up, and we’d sneak into a movie theater like in the middle of the night -- in the middle of, like, you know, a movie, because that was the only way you could really see an actual movie in an actual movie theater with him. Just a number of occasions.
Q. Have you seen Michael in New York?
A. Yes, I have.

Q. Okay. How many times, do you think?
A. Handful of times. Four times. Five times. Something like that.
Q. How about in Los Angeles?
A. Yeah, in the City of Los Angeles, too.
Q. Other than Neverland, New York and Los Angeles, have you seen Michael Jackson anywhere else?
A. Yeah. He was in London when I was out there doing a play. And he was out there for, I don’t know, maybe a week or so. We hung out two times, three times.
Q. Now, in London, what did you do with Michael Jackson?
A. Hung out with his kids. We had -- we had a dinner with a group of people, most of whom I had not met before, but just -- it was a nice, casual, sit-down dinner. And just saw the kids, things like that. I always liked seeing the kids.
Q. And you’re talking about Michael’s kids?
A. Yes.
Q. And what have you done with Michael Jackson in Los Angeles?
A. Same kind of thing. We used to hang out. He had an apartment there that was actually in the city, so we’d go visit there. Just kind of -- it was a little more convenient, and it was smaller. It wasn’t as, you know, far away. It wasn’t the daunting three-hour drive, you know. When you’re ten years old, that’s an awfully long drive to get out there. So sometimes when he was in the city, we would just hang out at his apartment.

Q. Now, you’ve spoken to him on the phone through the years, correct?

A. Yeah.

Q. How many times do you think you’ve spoken to him on the phone?

A. I couldn’t really count. Couldn’t say. Over 100 times probably.

Q. And have you called Michael Jackson yourself?

A. Yeah.

Q. Has he called you?

A. Yeah.

Q. Has he called your family, to your knowledge?

A. Yeah.

Q. And has your family called him?

A. Yes.

Q. You’re aware of the allegations in this case, correct?

A. Uh-huh. Yes.

Q. You heard about some of the allegations about whether or not Mr. Jackson improperly ever touched you, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson ever molest you?

A. Never.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson ever improperly touch you?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. Has Mr. Jackson ever touched you in any sexual type of way?

A. No.

Q. Has he ever touched you in any offensive way?

A. No.

Q. What do you think of these allegations?

A. I think they’re absolutely ridiculous.

Q. When did you first learn that these prosecutors were claiming that you were improperly touched?

A. When did I first learn that?

Q. Yes.

A. I -- somebody called me up and said, “You should probably check out CNN, because they’re saying something about you.”

Q. And did you check it out?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And what did you learn?

A. I learned that it was a former cook had done something to me, and there was something about a maid or something like that. It was just one of those things where I just couldn’t believe it. I couldn’t believe that, first of all, these people were saying these things or -- let alone that it was out there and people were thinking that kind of thing about me.

And at the same time it was amazing to me that they -- that nobody approached me and even asked me whether or not the allegations were true. They kind of just were -- threw it out there just like -- they didn’t even -- they didn’t even double-check it basically. I mean, even if they assumed that they knew the answer, what got me was that they didn’t even ask.

Q. Now, are you saying these prosecutors never tried to reach you to ask you your position on this?

A. No, they didn’t.

Q. Do you know if any police officer from Santa Barbara has ever tried to call you to see what the truth is?

A. No.

Q. Are you aware that they claim they are going to prove that you were molested by Michael Jackson?

A. Excuse me?

Q. Are you aware that they claim they can prove --

MR. ZONEN: I’ll object as leading, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Have you ever been to Michael Jackson’s bedroom?

A. Yes.

Q. And when did you first see Michael Jackson’s bedroom?

A. I think it was probably the first trip.

Q. And did you go in there with your family?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And what do you recall about Michael Jackson’s room?

A. It was large. It was -- it was a very comfortable place. He had paintings and all those kind of things on the wall. It was -- you know, it had two bedrooms and it was two stories high. It was -- you know, it’s not what you normally associate with a bedroom.

Q. And have you and your family stayed in that room?

A. Yes.

Q. How many times, do you think?

A. Handful of times.

Q. How many times do you think you’ve stayed in Michael’s room?

A. A handful of times.

Q. How about your sister?

A. Not as often.

Q. How about your brother?

A. Whenever I was there, my little brother was kind of always tagging along with me, so he was usually anywhere I was.

Q. Where else at Neverland have you been with Michael Jackson?

A. Everywhere, essentially. We were always hanging out together, just like I said, and using all the facilities; the zoo, the arcade, or the movie theater, wherever.

Q. Have you spent a lot of time at Neverland with Michael Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you played at Neverland with Michael Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. What have you done with him?

A. Like I said, we used everything. We’d play video games. We would fill up a bunch of water balloons and toss them around. Just things like that. It was just good old fun, just like a bunch of, like, kids basically having a good time.

Q. Have you been to the arcade with Michael Jackson?

A. Yeah.

Q. Do you recall playing any games with Michael Jackson in the arcade?

A. Yeah, sure.

Q. And do you recall this going on anytime of day?

A. Playing video games?

Q. Yeah.

A. Yeah. Absolutely.

Q. What time of day would you play video games with Mr. Jackson?

A. Anytime. You know, sometimes -- I mean, sometimes I fell asleep in the arcade and I’d wake up and just start playing, you know. It was one of those kind of things where, you know, you’d be up half the night, you’d be -- you know, you’d be kind of in and out of all these places.

So it was never really any kind of specific time that we spent there, but it was, you know, kind of just -- we were always kind of just either there, or at the theater, or just driving around in the golf carts, or something like that.

Q. Do you recall your family being with you in the arcade?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall them being with you in the zoo?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall your family being with you in the theater?

A. Yeah.

Q. Did you ever have any reason to think your family was being excluded by Mr. Jackson from anything you did at Neverland?

A. Could you repeat that?

Q. Sure. Did you ever get the feeling that your family was being excluded from anything you did at Neverland?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. Did you get the contrary feeling, that they were always invited to be with you any time you were there?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever think Mr. Jackson was somehow trying to exclude your family from his room?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Could you repeat the question?

THE COURT: I'll have it read back.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: Absolutely not. It was a real open-door policy just with the entire ranch.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. That applied to your family as well as you?

A. Yes, everyone.

Q. Okay. Have you ever traveled with Michael Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you travel to?

A. We took a trip, I was going with some family friends. We were going to Bermuda, and I said, "We're going." And he said, "Is it all right if I tag along?" And I said, "Yes." So we did that.

After that, we ended up in -- we decided to fly back to Orlando, because the family friends that I was traveling with, that's where they were from. So we went there, went to Disney World for a day or two, and ended up flying back with my family.

And I've also -- he was doing a charity event a couple years back in Washington D.C., and so I -- I hitched a ride with him on his plane back to New York.

Q. And did Mr. Jackson ever do anything improper to you on any of these trips?

A. No.

Q. Ever see him do anything that you found disturbing on any of these trips?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. Has Mr. Jackson ever hugged you?

A. Sure.
Q. Have you ever hugged him?
A. Absolutely.
Q. Were you ever suspicious of any of these hugs as being something sexual in nature?
A. No, it was always very casual. It was just the way I hug any of my friends.
Q. Did you ever see Mr. Jackson hug your sister?

A. Sure.
Q. Were you ever suspicious of his hugging your sister?
A. No.
Q. Ever see Mr. Jackson hug your brothers?
A. Yeah.
Q. Ever see them hug him?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you ever think anything suspicious was going on when your brothers hugged Mr. Jackson?
A. No, it was always just how you kind of greeted him, greeted almost anyone basically that you were close with.
Q. Do you know someone named Wade Robson?
A. Yeah, I’ve met him.
Q. Where did you meet him?
A. When we were shooting the “Black and White” video. He was one of the dancing kids. So I met him and hung out with him after the shoot.
Q. Did you ever see Mr. Jackson do anything improper with Wade Robson?
A. No.
Q. Have you been in contact with Wade Robson?
A. No, I haven’t.
Q. When’s the last time you think you talked to him?
A. Was back then when we hung out, when I was 10 or 11 years old.

Q. Do you know someone named Brett Barnes?
A. I think so. But I’m not really sure if I do. I mean, I’ve heard the name before, and I’ve -- I think it’s the same Brett that I know, but I couldn’t be 100 percent.

Q. And if the person you think is Brett Barnes, do you recall seeing him at Neverland?

A. If it -- yeah, if it’s the person I’m thinking of, yeah.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Jackson do anything improper with him?

A. No, I’ve never seen him do anything improper with anybody.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. No further questions.

THE COURT: Cross-examine?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Mr. Culkin, good morning.

A. Good morning.

Q. Sir, isn’t it true that both in 1993 and in 2003 law enforcement attempted to gain access to you to have an interview with you and on both occasions your representatives refused to have -- allow you to have an interview with law enforcement? Isn’t that true?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. You’re not aware of any effort by law enforcement either in 1993 or currently within the last couple years to be able to get an interview with you?

A. Not that I know of, no.

Q. Isn’t it true that your attorney just within the last couple weeks issued a notice that you would not be giving any statements to either side prior to your giving an inter -- prior to your testifying in court?

A. Could you repeat that?

Q. Isn’t it true that just within the last couple weeks your attorney notified us that you would not be giving an interview to either side of this case prior to your taking the witness stand and testifying?

A. You’re -- can you repeat that one more time?

Q. Mr. Culkin, did you talk to anybody from the defense prior to coming into court today?

A. Did I talk to anybody from the defense?

Q. That’s right.

A. I talked to Tom Sneddon yesterday.
Q. You talked to Tom Sneddon yesterday?
A. Sorry. Excuse me. Mr. Mesereau.
Q. You talked to Mr. Mesereau yesterday?
A. Yes.
MR. SNEDDON: I’m the one with the short hair.
THE WITNESS: Yes, sorry about that. I went to his office yesterday for about a half an hour to get my -- like, figure out where I was staying and all that kind of stuff.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you give him an interview at that time?
A. No, not really. He kind of walked me through the procedure, what I would have to be going through for the day.
Q. And did you talk to him about anything substantive, any of the issues about your association with Michael Jackson?
A. No, we didn’t.
Q. Were you aware that an attorney of yours had contacted us and told us that you would not be giving a statement to either side? Is that true?
A. I think so, yes.
Q. Was that your decision or your lawyer’s decision?
A. I think I just took what he had to say and agreed with it.
Q. So you decided all along you were not going to talk to either side?
A. Essentially, yeah. I wasn’t really planning on testifying.
Q. But you’re complaining that we didn’t interview you?
A. I’m just saying it was something that -- I said I kind of just -- all of a sudden I turn on the television or look on the Internet and there was those things out there, and it was just surprising to me.

Q. Mr. Culkin, are you completely unaware of the fact that law enforcement has made a number of efforts to gain access to you to talk to you?

A. Like I said, I’m unaware.

Q. No one among your representatives has ever gone to you and said, “Law enforcement would like to speak with you”?

A. Never.

Q. How old were you when you went to Bermuda?

A. I must have been around 11 years old.

Q. How long had you known Michael Jackson at that time?

A. About a year or two.

Q. That trip was with the Goldstein family; is that right?

A. That sounds right.

Q. That sounds right? You don’t recall?

A. It was 15 years ago.

Q. You don’t recall with whom you went to Bermuda?

A. I remember it was my friend Brock and his family.

Q. All right. And Brock’s last name is Goldstein; is that correct?

A. That sounds right. Like I said, it was 15 years ago. And it wasn’t -- I haven’t really talked to them since then almost.

Q. And how is it that Mr. Jackson ended up going to Bermuda with you?

A. I told him I was going, and he seemed excited. And I said, “Would you like to come along?” So he said, “Let’s go to Bermuda.”

Q. You’re an 11-year-old child, but you felt it was okay to invite Mr. Jackson to attend a trip that you were going on with another family?

A. Yeah. I mean, and they were fine with it, from what I remember.

Q. Well, did you consult with them before you invited Mr. Jackson to come along?

A. To be honest, I don’t remember.

Q. All right. The Goldsteins have a child who at that time had appeared in a movie with you; is that right?

A. I don’t remember him being in the film. He lived in the same community as me when I was shooting the film “My Girl.” And it was just kind of a community like -- it was almost -- it wasn't exactly a gated community, but it was off of, like, the Universal lot. And he was just a neighborhood kid that I got friendly with.

Q. You became friendly with Brock during the course of the filming of that film; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And you used to spend time at their home?

A. Yes.

Q. And you would spend the night at their home as well; is that correct?

A. Yeah.

Q. And when they were planning a trip to Bermuda, they invited you to come along?

A. Yeah.

Q. They consulted with your parents in advance and your parents agreed; is that true?

A. Yeah.

Q. All right. You then invited Mr. Jackson to come along as well; is that correct?

A. From what I remember, yes.

Q. All right. You did not tell either Mr. or Mrs. Goldstein that you had done that in advance of that trip?

A. Like I said, I don't remember that.

Q. Now, you invited Mr. Jackson or Mr. Jackson invited himself? Which was it?

A. To be honest, I don't remember. I do -- I think it was something like, "I'm going to Bermuda." You know, "We're going to have a good time." I don't remember how exactly it went over, whether it was, like, "Oh, is it all right if I come?" Or if it was, "Why don't you come along." I honestly don't remember.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson travel with you to Bermuda or did he meet you there?

A. I honestly don't remember.

Q. When he got there, he gave you a watch, did he not?

A. I think that's when he gave me the watch.

Q. It was a Rolex?

A. Yes.

Q. He gave a Rolex to an 11-year-old child?

A. Yeah. But it wasn’t -- it wasn’t anything all that crazy to me. I didn’t see it as anything like that. I was not a person without means, so it wasn’t anything that was all that awe-inspiring. I mean, my father had a Rolex. It was that kind of thing.

Q. Did he give a Rolex to Brock as well?

A. I don’t remember.

Q. Did he give any gift to Brock?

A. I don’t remember.

Q. Isn’t it true that the Goldstein family, the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Goldstein, felt excluded by the presence of Mr. Jackson; that he was attempting to and succeeded in taking you away from the family in terms of the events that were being -- that they were doing?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; calls for speculation.

MR. ZONEN: It’s exactly in response to the question that counsel asked.

THE COURT: You’re asking him for the Goldsteins’ feelings. The objection is sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did they tell you that they felt that they were being excluded from activities with you?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. Did they complain to you at all about the fact that Mr. Jackson was dominating your time?

A. I don’t -- not that I remember.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson suggest that you go with him to different locations in Bermuda separate from the Goldstein family?

A. Excuse me?

Q. Did Mr. Jackson suggest to you that you go with him to locations in Bermuda without the Goldstein family?

A. Not that I remember. Like I said, this whole trip was 15 years ago. And I was nine or ten years old. And if I knew I was going to have to be testifying about it, I’m sure I would have made an effort to remember.

Q. How old are you now?

A. I'm 24.

Q. You're 24. And you're saying it's 15 years ago?

A. 13, 14, 15 years ago. I honestly don't remember exactly how old I was.

Q. You were somewhere between nine and --

A. 11, yes.

Q. And you met him when you were nine?

A. I think that's about right, yeah. So it must have been when I was about 10 or 11.

Q. You had known him for at least a year at the time you went on that trip?

A. Yeah, for at least a year.

Q. All right. And then the question about whether you have a recollection about Mr. Jackson asking you to go with him to locations without the Goldstein family, at this time you do not recall the answer to that question?

A. I don't, no.

Q. Did Mrs. Goldstein at times tell you that it was not okay for you to go away with Mr. Jackson by yourself?

A. Could you repeat that?

Q. Didn't Mrs. Goldstein tell you it was not okay for you to go away with Mr. Jackson by yourself without somebody from the Goldstein family being there? Didn't she tell you that?

A. Gosh, I don't remember those kind of -- those kind of details. I remember -- I could tell you the hotel room, what it looked like. I could tell you, you know, if it was on the beach, and things like that. But I can't tell you -- I don't remember a lot of these specific details, because there just wasn't anything that eventful going on, besides that.

Q. But you don't remember her telling you specifically that she was not going to allow you to go places with Mr. Jackson by yourself unaccompanied by another member of their family?

A. Not that I remember, but I don't know.

Q. How long did you stay in Bermuda?

A. I don't know. It could have been, like, about a week or so.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson stay with you in Bermuda the entire time?

A. From what I remember, he was there the whole time.

Q. Was he there with any other adult companionship?

A. How do you mean?

Q. Did he come with another person, man or woman, a companion?

A. I don’t think so, no. I mean, he might have had some security with him but I’m not sure.

Q. Other than security, did he come with a man or woman with whom he intended to travel purely for companionship?

A. No.

Q. Was it your belief that he was there to visit with you?

A. Yeah, to visit, and spend some time in Bermuda.

Q. All right. And to spend a week or more with a ten-year-old child?

A. To spend a week or more with me, yes.

Q. And had he ever done that prior to that date, gone traveling with you?

A. Not that I remember, no. We never really -- I mean, besides when he was in Los Angeles, and I was, he’d come visit me. But we never really went on, like, trips.

Q. Do you still have that Rolex watch?

A. I think I do have it somewhere, yes.

Q. You don’t wear it any longer?

A. It doesn’t fit.

Q. It’s a woman’s watch; is that correct?

A. Not that I know of. It was small. It was a small watch, and the band is very small on it, so like I said, it doesn’t really fit me anymore.

Q. Did Mr. or Mrs. Goldstein comment to you about anything at the time that watch was given to you?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. In your presence, did they tell Mr. Jackson they thought that was an inappropriate gift?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Hearsay; calls for speculation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Had you taken any trips with Mr. Jackson prior to the Bermuda trip?

A. No, we never really took any, like, trips or vacations, really. Like I said, it was something -- when I was in Los Angeles we would hang out. Or if he was in New York, we'd get together.
Q. Did you travel with Mr. Jackson anywhere prior to the Bermuda trip where you stayed overnight in a hotel with Mr. Jackson?
A. I don't think so, no.
Q. Prior to the Bermuda trip, did you go anywhere outside of California with Mr. Jackson?
A. Did we go anywhere outside of --
Q. I asked you, did you go anywhere --
A. I know --
Q. Did you go anywhere with Mr. Jackson prior to the Bermuda trip?
A. Could you repeat that again?
Q. Prior to the Bermuda trip, did you travel anywhere with Mr. Jackson?
A. Not that I remember. Not like we would be somewhere and then travel somewhere else, besides being in Los Angeles or going to Neverland or when he was in New York, that kind of thing.
Q. In Bermuda, did you change hotels because of Mr. Jackson's arrival?
A. I don't remember, but probably, because we were staying in a larger hotel with -- I think it was just a larger hotel, kind of beyond the means of what we were kind of expecting to stay in.

Q. Prior to staying in Bermuda, had you ever spent the night alone with Mr. Jackson?
A. How do you mean "spend the night"?
Q. Did you ever share a bed with Mr. Jackson prior to going to Bermuda?
A. Yeah, I mean, I'd fallen asleep in the same bed as him.
Q. Did you ever do that, fall asleep in the same bed as Mr. Jackson prior to going to Bermuda where none of your brothers or sisters were present?

A. It’s possible. But like I said, usually my brother was tagging along with me. But I fell asleep basically everywhere in that ranch, or anywhere else when I was hanging out with him. I would just flop down on the floor half the time.
Q. Mr. Culkin, the question was, did you ever share a bed with Mr. Jackson --
A. Yes.
Q. -- the two of you by yourself, prior to going to Bermuda?
A. If I remember correctly, probably, yes.
Q. On approximately how many occasions did you and Mr. Jackson share a bed the entire night prior to going to Bermuda?
A. A handful of times.
Q. Was it your expectation that in Bermuda that you would be sleeping with Mr. Jackson?
A. Excuse me?

Q. Was it your expectation that while in Bermuda you would be sharing a hotel room and a bed with Mr. Jackson?
A. I don’t remember it being like an expectation. It was -- I may have fallen asleep in the same bed with him there, but it was just as likely I’d fall asleep on the couch watching T.V.
Q. You might have fallen asleep in the bed with Mr. Jackson in Bermuda?
A. I might have fallen asleep on his bed, yes.
Q. Now, prior to going to Bermuda, you said it may have been a handful of times. What is a handful of times? About five or six?
A. Yeah, like half dozen times.
Q. Half dozen times?
A. Ten at most.
Q. Ten at most? This is prior to going to Bermuda.
A. Yeah, I’d known him for about a year, and hung out, I’d been to his ranch about four or five times, I think, within that year.
Q. So you think you might have shared his bed with him six to ten times prior to going to Bermuda; is that the case?

A. It’s possible.

Q. All right. On how many of those occasions were you there by yourself without any sibling, alone, without any sibling at all?

A. I don’t really remember. But most every time I was there, I was there with my siblings. And most every time I was with my siblings, they were, like, with me the entire time.

Q. All right. How many times do you think prior to going to Bermuda did you share a bed with Mr. Jackson by yourself?

A. I honestly don’t remember. I couldn’t say.

Q. How about either of your sisters? Did they ever share a bed with Mr. Jackson by themselves?

A. Not that I know of, no.

Q. That never happened, did it?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. In fact, none of your brothers ever shared a bed with Mr. Jackson by themselves either, did they?

A. I’m not sure if that’s true. But I don’t -- I don’t know. Sometimes I would -- I wouldn’t fall asleep. I’d be up for a little bit longer and, you know, my brothers would fall asleep who knows where.

Q. But there were occasions when you went to Neverland without your siblings and without your parents; is that right?

A. I think I took one trip there where I arrived there before my family did, for like a day or two, and then they showed up.

Q. Up until the age of, say, 14, are you telling us every time you went to Neverland you were with your parents and your siblings?

A. In some kind of combination of siblings and parents, yes.

Q. You never once went to Neverland by yourself?

A. Like I said, I think I showed up -- I showed up there once, and it was like a day or two and then my family met me there.

Q. Your home is New York; is that right?

A. Yeah, I’m born and raised in New York.

Q. You never lived in Los Angeles?

A. Not full time, no.

Q. All right. Up until the age of 14, did you ever live in Los Angeles, even part time?

A. I did some work in Los Angeles, but besides that, I'm from New York.

Q. Where else did you go besides New York, London and Neverland with Michael Jackson, and Bermuda? What other places did you and he travel to?

A. We went to Orlando from Bermuda because that's where Brock and his family lived.

Q. Okay. So during that trip, you went to Orlando?

A. Yeah, it was the same trip. We swung by there, and then from there I went home.

Q. How often did you go to Neverland between the ages of 10 and 14?

A. How many times did I go there?

Q. Yes.

A. A dozen times, maybe more.

Q. All those occasions did you sleep in his room?

A. At some point or another I think I probably -- I might have ended up sleeping in his room, but I couldn't really say that I slept there every single time that I was there or anything like that.

Q. Would it be safe to say that 90 percent of the time you stayed there?

A. In his bedroom?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't think it would be 90 percent. It would be --

Q. 80 percent?

A. It would be -- I slept in his room about as often as I fell asleep anywhere. Like, I fell asleep -- I would flop down -- we'd fall asleep in the movie theater. He has beds in the movie theater. I'd flop down and fall asleep there. I've fallen asleep in the video game machines before. I mean, I've -- I would go and play there basically until I'd just run myself out, and I would just flop down wherever I needed to.

Q. And you'd be pretty exhausted and go fast asleep; is that right?

A. Yeah, I mean, that would happen. I'd wear myself out and fall asleep, just like any kid would.

Q. So your question about -- the question that you answered about Mr. Jackson never molesting you, your answer more accurately is he never did while you were awake; is that correct?

A. Could you repeat that?

Q. Well, your answer to Mr. Mesereau's question about he never molested you.

A. Yes.

Q. Your answer more accurately is he never molested you, to your knowledge, while you were awake; is that true?

A. As far as I know, he's never molested me.

Q. While you were asleep as a nine-year-old kid who had run himself ragged, you wouldn't know what happened while you were asleep, right?

A. I find that unlikely.

Q. Well, but you just told us that sometimes you'd be so exhausted after a day of playing you'd fall asleep on a machine.

A. Yeah, but I think I'd realize if something like that was happening to me.

Q. Yes? And on many of those occasions, you would fall asleep in his bed?

A. It would happen.

Q. So you would have no recollection at all, of all of your visits to Neverland, of ever actually making arrangements to simply go to bed like anybody else, putting on pajamas and crawling into bed and turning out the light?

A. I never really wore pajamas. But at the same time, it was something like -- I mean, occasionally, yeah, I'd have to -- like, we'd have to wake up early in the morning because -- for whatever reason, because I'd have to -- because we were going to be leaving in the morning or whatever. I mean, sometimes I was put on a schedule.

Q. Mr. Culkin, as a nine-year-old child, what did you wear to bed?

A. I wore my clothes.

Q. You would just wear whatever you were wearing during the day?

A. Yeah.

Q. Every single night?

A. Up until I was about 17 years old. That’s when I kind of discovered what pajamas were.

Q. And you did that at home as well?

A. Yeah.

Q. Whatever you were wearing?

A. I always fell asleep in jeans and socks and a T-shirt.

Q. All right. So whenever you were at Neverland, you would crawl into bed in jeans and socks and a T-shirt?

A. Yeah.

Q. Did you ever stay at his condo in Los Angeles?

A. Yeah, I think I’ve spent the night there.

Q. With your parents?

A. I’m not sure if they were there. I know they’d been there before, but I’m not sure if they ever spent the night there.

Q. You only spent one night in his condo in Los Angeles? It’s in West L.A.; is that right?

A. I don’t really remember exactly where it was. I was always either -- we’d just kind of go there, and it was very secluded. It was in a garage and things like that. That’s where the entrance was.

Q. All right. There was a hotel across the street; is that correct?

A. I don’t really remember.

Q. Were there ever occasions where your parents stayed in the hotel across the street and you stayed at the condo by yourself with Mr. Jackson?

A. I don’t really remember. I don’t think so.

Q. But that’s possible?

A. I’m not sure if they stayed in the hotel across the street or at another hotel. I don’t know.

Q. What is your date of birth?

A. August 26th, 1980.

Q. And you think when you first started coming to Neverland you were nine years old, that would have been 1989?

A. About nine or ten years old, so it was probably ‘90 or ‘91, like -- just like -- it was after -- it was after the “Home Alone” movie came out.

Q. How old were you when you stopped sleeping in bed with Michael Jackson?

A. Well, like I said, I stopped going there just because I had really -- I had never really found myself going to Los Angeles or anything like that. So I didn’t really come back again until I was about 17.

Q. The question was, when did you stop sleeping --

A. I know. I’m getting there.

And so when I got -- when I started coming back again, I found myself just not sleeping in bed. And I’ve always kind of fell asleep in the guest units ever since then.

Q. Why didn’t you stay with Mr. Jackson in his room?

A. Because I enjoyed my privacy a little bit more.

Q. All right. So is it safe to say that up until and through your 13th year, you stayed with Mr. Jackson in his room?

A. On occasion --

Q. More frequent --

A. On occasion I’d fall asleep there or wherever. It wasn’t really like a thing to, like, “Let’s go to sleep in a particular place.” On occasion I’d end up falling asleep there. I’d fall asleep anywhere.

Q. After you first met Mr. Jackson, did he telephone you a lot?

A. We talked on the phone a good amount.

Q. And sometimes those telephone calls would go two or three hours, wouldn’t they?

A. Sometimes. I guess. Yeah.

Q. Sometimes those telephone calls were in the middle of the night, weren't they?

A. Not really. I was in school. But sometimes it would be in the later side.

Q. Did he express affection toward you during those telephone calls?

A. How do you mean "affection"?

Q. Did he tell you how close he felt to you?

A. Yeah, we had a really close relationship because we had this understanding of one another, because one day I was --

MR. ZONEN: I'll object as exceeding the scope of the question, Your Honor. Nonresponsive.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection, Your Honor, he's cutting off the witness.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled. The question was, "Did he tell you how close he felt to you?"

THE WITNESS: Yeah, and I'm trying to explain --

THE COURT: You don't need to explain.

THE WITNESS: Okay. I understand. Yeah, we were close.

THE COURT: Next question.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did he tell you that he had thought of you like family?

A. Yes. From what I remember.

Q. Did he start telling you about seeing you as family early on in your relationship with him?

A. I don't know how far into the relation -- or friendship it was, that we started talking about how close we felt. But it was definitely something where we understood each other early on.

Q. Even when you were nine years old?

A. Because of circumstances, yes.

Q. Did he give gifts to your parents?

A. I think so. But I honestly don't remember. This is a while ago. But he was -- he was very generous. He always gave gifts to everybody.

Q. Do you remember what gifts he gave to your mother?

A. Not offhand, no.

Q. Do you remember what gifts he gave to your father?

A. Not offhand.

Q. Did you travel with Mr. Jackson to Las Vegas?

A. No.

Q. Did you travel with Mr. Jackson to Europe?

A. No.

Q. Did you travel with Mr. Jackson to South America?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever stay at Neverland while Jordie Chandler was there?

A. I don’t know. I’m not sure if I have. I’m not sure if I know who Jordie Chandler is.

Q. Were you ever introduced to Jordie Chandler?

A. I couldn’t say. I met handfuls of people kind of going in and out. There was always kind of a revolving door of staff and of people kind of coming in. Sometimes there would be guests there that I had never really met before or things like that.

Q. Were you ever in Mr. -- in Mr. Jackson’s bedroom overnight while another boy was present in that room, other than your brothers?

A. On occasion, the other kids there that -- like I said, some of them were introduce -- like, I was introduced to as, like, cousins or family friends and stuff like that. And they’d bring their kids there, and then -- same as me. They would -- they would play with me, and we’d fall asleep anywhere, sometimes his bedroom, sometimes in the theater, sometimes anywhere.

Q. All right. Do you know whether any of those boys who happened to fall asleep with you in his room, if any of those boys, any one of them, was Jordan Chandler?

A. It was 15 years ago. I’m not sure if I remember the names.

Q. Are you aware of the allegations in 1993?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. In 1993, were you aware of the allegations while they were going on?

A. Michael had called me about a month or so, or maybe a couple of weeks before the allegations hit the press. And he let me know that some people were going to be saying something, and they were absolutely untrue, and, “Don’t worry about it. I just need you to be my friend right now.” And I said, “Absolutely.”

Q. At the time that Mr. Jackson placed that phone call, did you know who Jordan Chandler was?

A. I don’t know. I’m not sure exactly who Jordan Chandler is, so I can’t -- I can’t say.

Q. But back in ‘93, there wasn’t a face that went with that name? In other words, when he mentioned the name “Jordan Chandler,” was there a face that automatically came to mind for you?

A. I think I had met the accuser from ‘93 or ‘94, if that’s who you’re talking about. I had met him once or twice. But I don’t remember his name, so --

Q. How about Jason Francia? Did you ever meet Jason Francia?

A. I don’t know. I can’t remember. Like I say, this was -- this was, you know, 13 years ago, you know. 14 years ago. And it wasn’t anything -- it was just sometimes there would be some kids there, you know.

Q. Did you ever spend a night in the same room with Brett Barnes at Neverland?

A. I’m not sure if I remember Brett Barnes.

Q. Did you ever spend a night in the same room with Wade Robson?

A. No.

Q. Wade Robson you remember?

A. I remember him, yes, because he was a very good dancer. And I know him also because of what he’s accomplished in his own career recently.

Q. So he’s -- he has stayed in the United States and you’re familiar with him?

A. I am familiar with him. He had a T.V. show for a while.

Q. You don’t have a recollection of spending a night with Wade Robson in the same room, Michael Jackson’s room; is that correct?

A. Not that I remember, no. I mean, we did hang out, the day, like, after the shoot, and we went to his condo in Los Angeles.

Q. How many nights did you spend with Michael Jackson alone in his room and in his bed between the ages of 9 and 14?

A. How -- could you repeat that?

Q. How many nights do you believe you spent alone in Michael Jackson’s room and in his bed, alone with Michael Jackson, between the ages of 9 and 14?

A. It couldn’t have been more than like -- it was a handful of times. It couldn’t have been more than, like, five times, four times.

Q. Sir, you told us it was a handful of times that did you that before you went to Bermuda and that was at age 10?

A. Altogether -- like I said, I went a lot between the ages of about 10 and -- about 9 and 12, 9 and, like, 11. And then I found -- I never really worked a whole lot in Los Angeles. It was only when I was in town that I would go over there. And I worked -- I worked on two films out here when I was -- one when I was 12, the other one when I was 11 or so, or 10. And those are the times that I would go out there, and occasionally I would fall asleep in his room.

Q. All right. After age 10, from age 11 through 14, how many times do you think you went to Neverland?

A. From 10 to 14? Like, six to eight times.

Q. And of those six to eight times, how many times of those did you spend in his -- let me redo that again.

Six to eight times doesn’t necessarily mean six to eight nights, does it?

A. No, I would -- sometimes I would stay for a weekend, sometimes it would be -- I’d try to get up there -- even if it was for a day, I’d go up there. But sometimes it would be, like, four days, sometimes five days.

Q. What’s the longest you ever stayed at Neverland?

A. When I was -- I think I was 20, I stayed there for about, I don’t know, 10 days, 14 days. And that was the longest trip I’d ever taken there.

Q. At age 20?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Well, can I assume that at age 20 you were not sleeping with Michael Jackson?

A. I don’t think he was there on that trip. I kind of just said, “I need to relax. Is it okay if I use your house?” And he said, “Sure.”

Q. Even if he was there --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. He cut off the witness, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. MESEREAU: May the witness complete his answer?

THE WITNESS: No --

THE COURT: Yes.

THE WITNESS: No, I was just staying there by myself, and I’d just stay in the guest units, and it was just -- it was just that. He wasn’t even there.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Even at age 20, you wouldn’t have been sleeping with him anyway, would you have?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Would you repeat the question?

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: But even at age 20, you would not have been sleeping with him in any event; is that correct?

A. Probably not. Like I said, you know, as you get older, you start enjoying your privacy and you start getting on more of a schedule. And I was falling asleep on -- I had more of a schedule going. I was basically going out there to write and things like that, and to relax.

Q. Probably not -- have you slept with Mr. Jackson since you turned 20?

A. No.

Q. Were there ever any occasions that you spent a night in Mr. Jackson’s room in the presence of another boy, not your brothers?

A. Could you specify? So you’re saying with another boy but not with my brothers or something like that?

Q. With another boy, not your brothers. In other words, did you ever --

A. Like I said, yes.

Q. Did you ever spend a night in Mr. Jackson’s bedroom with another boy, not your brothers?

A. Sometimes. Sometimes, like I said, there would be kids there. They’d be introduced as cousins or something like that. And they would hang with us, just as much as anyone else would.

Q. Do you remember the names of any of them?

A. Not offhand, no.

Q. Can you describe any of them?

A. They were kids. They were -- you know, some of them had dark hair. Darker skin, that kind of thing.

Q. What is the oldest child who ever stayed with you in Michael Jackson’s room for the night?

A. I wouldn’t remember. I mean, they were all about my age, maybe a little bit older.

Q. And you were 10 to 12?

A. It wasn’t -- what was that?

Q. You were 10 to 12 in that period of time, 10 to 13?

A. Right around there, yeah. Whenever I was around, sometimes there would be other kids around. And, you know, it wasn’t like we all, like, “Oh, it’s time to go to bed. Let’s huddle in.” It’s like, you know, you’re chatting in bed, and the next thing you know you’re asleep.

Q. But most of the occasions that you stayed at Michael Jackson’s house was between the ages of 9 and 10; is that right?

A. Most of the times that I went there?

Q. Yes.

A. Yeah, just about. Probably that would be about right. When I first -- when I first went there, it was such an amazing place, that I decided to -- you know, any opportunity I had to go out there, I would go.

Q. And after the Bermuda trip, your visits to Neverland diminished? They were fewer?
A. Not necessarily by choice. I just didn’t really find myself out on the West Coast as often.
Q. Did Mr. Jackson ever take you on shopping sprees?
A. Yeah, we’d go shopping.
Q. Where?
A. We used to do this thing where in the middle of the night -- not necessarily the middle of the night, but around, like, after the stores had closed, he would arrange for us to go to Toys-R-Us. And sometimes he wouldn’t even arrange it. We would go there, and he’d literally knock on the door, and the janitor would drop his mop, and go, “What the heck?” and let us in. And then they’d -- you know, we’d go shopping basically at Toys-R-Us when the store was totally empty, because it’s the only time that he could really go shopping like that.

Q. How many times did he do that with you?
A. Oh, gosh. Like two times, three times --
Q. How old were you?
A. -- something like that.
About -- I think the first time we did it was, like, ten.
Q. Did you ever have a conversation with either of your parents about the propriety of your sharing a bed with Michael Jackson?
A. Did I ever have a conversation with him -- with them about what?
Q. Let me change that question.
Did you ever have a conversation with your parents prior to the age of 13? In other words, 12 or younger. While you were 12 years of age or younger, did you ever have a conversation with either of your parents about whether or not you should be sharing a bed with Michael Jackson?
A. No. They never really saw it as an issue.
Q. Did they know that you were sleeping in his bed?
A. I assume so.

Q. You assume so?

A. I can’t tell you what they -- what they knew or didn’t know or what they thought or didn’t think.

Q. Can we assume from that your parents never came into the room while you were in bed with Michael Jackson?

A. That’s not true, no. Sometimes my father would wake us up, because he liked going horseback riding or something like that and, you know, things that I didn’t necessarily enjoy as much as he did, but he would wake me up early in the morning to go horseback riding.

Q. And you would be in bed alone with Michael Jackson?

A. Not always alone, no. And sometimes I wouldn’t be always there. I would be wherever. But I knew they knew that I was in that room, and they knew I fell asleep there.

Q. Mr. Culkin --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection, he’s cutting off the witness.

MR. ZONEN: The answer is nonresponsive to the question.

THE COURT: It’s overruled. And you are cutting him off.

THE WITNESS: Yeah, he knew that I was --

MR. ZONEN: There’s no question pending.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Mr. Culkin --

THE COURT: Well, just a minute. Let me take a minute here. You are getting kind of rushed here. And you are cutting the witness off. I’ll just go back and take a look at this. Ask a new question, please.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did your father ever come into Michael Jackson’s bedroom while you were in bed with Mr. Jackson alone?

A. From what I remember, yeah.

Q. Did that happen more than once?

A. Yeah. From I remember, it’s -- I don’t really remember all these kind of details, but I knew he knew I was staying there. So -- and occasionally, I would be woken up to do something that he felt like doing.

Q. When was the first time your father walked into the room while you were in bed alone with Michael Jackson?

A. I can’t recall.

Q. How old were you the first time your father walked into the room when you were alone with Michael Jackson?

A. I don’t recall. It was during one of the earlier trips.

Q. So you were about nine years old?

A. Probably a little bit older. Like -- I don’t think I went there -- I think I went there the first time when I was ten. I think I first met Michael when I was nine.

Q. So the first time you would have been alone in bed with him, you were already ten years old?

A. Probably, yes.

Q. All right. Is there -- was there at the time an alarm on his door going into his bedroom?

A. There was like a walkway kind of thing where if somebody was approaching the door, it would kind of like “ding-dong, ding-dong.”

Q. All right. Do you remember hearing any “ding-dongs, ding-dongs” as your father came into the room?

A. When anyone would approach the room, yeah, you’d hear this kind of -- soft kind of alarm, like “ding-dong” kind of thing.

Q. On the occasion that your father came into the room while you were in bed alone with Michael Jackson, did he say anything to you about that?

A. No.

Q. Did he say anything to Michael Jackson in your presence about your sleeping with him?

A. No. He didn’t really seem to have a problem with it, from what I remember.

Q. And I asked you if he said anything. Did he say anything to Michael Jackson in your presence?

A. Well, what do you mean by “anything”?

Q. Did he say anything to Michael Jackson about him sharing a bed with his ten-year-old son? Did he say anything to Michael Jackson about that in your presence at that time?

A. No, it was a very casual thing. So, no, he never really said anything.

Q. The answer is “No”?

A. No, he never said anything.

Q. And afterward, when you were alone with your father, did he ever discuss with you about your sharing a bed with Michael Jackson?

A. No.

Q. When was the next time your father came into the room when you were in bed with Michael Jackson alone?

A. I don’t remember the specifics of anything like this. I don’t remember when he, like, came in or when whatever. If I knew I had to remember, I probably would have.

Q. Did your mother ever come into the room when you were alone with Michael Jackson in bed?

A. It’s a possibility, yeah.

Q. Do you remember the first time that happened?

A. No, not really, not in any specific detail.

Q. Do you know if it happened more than once?

A. Yeah. He had a very open-door policy. His bedroom door at that time was never locked. Anyone could walk in.

Q. The question was, did your mother come into the room while you were in bed alone with Mr. Jackson more than one time?

A. I really couldn’t speak of any specifics like that.

Q. Did you ever have a conversation with your mother about whether or not it’s appropriate for a 10-year-old boy to be sharing a bed with a 35-year-old man on a regular basis?

A. No. We didn’t share a bed on a regular basis.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson ever talk to you about other boys who shared his bed with you?

A. Not really, no. Like I said, it was a casual thing, so it wasn’t necessarily something that was, like, talked about. I’d fall asleep there, I’d fall asleep anywhere. People just kind of fell asleep wherever they wanted to. That was kind of the fun of the place, was that there was no rigid rules about when or where you should fall asleep.

Q. Did you share a bed with any other 35-year-old man other than a relative during your adolescence?

A. Not that I remember, but I wasn’t really friends with a lot of 35-year-olds who actually understood me.

Q. Can I assume the answer, then, is “No”?

A. No.

Q. Are you aware of any of your brothers ever sharing a bed with any other 35-year-old man during their adolescence?

A. I can’t speak of that. You’d have to ask, you know, them.

Q. Have you ever witnessed any of your brothers sharing a bed with any adult men, not their relatives?

A. Not personally, no.

Q. Have you ever had a conversation with your parents about sharing a bed with Michael Jackson?

A. No.

MR. ZONEN: I have no further questions.

THE COURT: Redirect?

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, please, Your Honor.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Mr. Culkin, you’re aware that it is not illegal for someone to allow children to stay in their room?

MR. ZONEN: I’ll object as irrelevant and leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You said that Michael Jackson understood you. What did you mean?

A. Well, because of circumstances, like with my career, I mean, one day I was essentially a normal kid who happened to be an actor, and the next thing I know, I’m just this thing where people are hiding in the bushes and trying to take your picture. And just -- people are kind of out to profit from you, or next thing you know you have a million acquaintances and no more friends anymore. It was like that.

And he understood that. That was one of the first things we talked about, was don't -- “I get it. I understand what you’re going through. I understand the same thing.” You know, “If you want to talk about anything or if you ever want to” -- you know, I could learn from his knowledge, basically, of where he came from.

And you couldn’t really find a whole lot of people, especially when you’re nine years old, put in these circumstances that nobody else -- you can’t really talk to anybody about this kind of stuff.

And he understood it, and it was -- it was a comforting thing.

Q. Do you still talk to Mr. Jackson about the unique way child actors develop and live?

A. On occasion. It’s not like it’s, you know, a child performer self-help group or something like that. But at the same time, it was -- we still talk about it, because we’re a part of a unique group of people. And so we have a unique understanding of one another.

And when it goes to any person who is a child performer, I kind of keep an eye out for them, and I -- because I get it. And it goes the same for anyone who, you know, was or, you know, is a child performer. I think you kind of keep an eye out. You have an understanding of them.

Q. And when you say you get it, now, what are you saying?

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Asked and answered and irrelevant and exceeding the scope of the cross.

MR. MESEREAU: I believe the prosecutor opened this all up, Your Honor.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

THE WITNESS: Would you repeat the question?

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Yes. When you say he gets it, what do you mean, specifically?

A. Well, like I said, like the photographers in the bushes, or just profiteers, people looking to -- out to get you kind of thing. And he -- he lived through that before. And so he understood what -- what it was like to be put in a position that I was in, basically just thrust into that position.

And it’s weird. It wasn’t necessarily anything I chose for myself. It was something that kind of just happened, and now I have to deal with it. And he understood that.

Q. Now, the prosecutor asked you questions about the propriety of a man in his 30s sharing his room with children. Have you ever stayed over at a friend’s house?

A. Yes.

Q. Ever stayed in a friend’s room?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it someone not related to you?

A. Yeah.

Q. Ever thought there was a problem with that?

A. Never.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Jackson as very childlike himself?

A. He was very childlike, yes.

Q. What do you mean?

A. He liked doing the things that we liked to do. He liked playing the arcade games. Though he wasn’t as good as us, usually, but, you know, he still enjoyed doing it, because, you know, it was one of those things. And he enjoyed the same kind of movies. He liked running around. We used to play tag. I mean, it’s that kind of thing. He played with us, you know, the same kind of way I played with any of my friends my age.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson and you ever discuss the problem of sort of missing out on your childhoods because of all the work and pressures of success?

A. It was one of those things that we talked about, yeah. It just -- it kind of just comes with the territory. Like I said, it’s not really, you know, it’s not really a therapy kind of thing. It’s just kind of more like occasionally we would just kind of talk about those kind of things, yes.

Q. And you talked about an open-door policy in his room.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Could you please explain what you mean?

A. Well, no doors were ever really locked in his place. It wasn’t like -- you know, you could always -- you could always come -- he always told me, “You can just come to the ranch whenever you want.” And every door was open, and you can go anywhere you wanted, and that included the bedroom.

Q. And did you feel that adults were free to come in and out as well as children?

A. Absolutely. He had a lot of memorabilia and things like that in his closets, and so people liked to look at that. It was one of those stops on the tour when we first showed up. It’s like, “Come to the bedroom. Come see what’s in the closet,” those kind of things. Like I said, it’s almost a part of the tour.

Q. Now, you talked about shopping sprees Mr. Jackson would take you and other friends on. What -- what other shopping sprees did he take you on, if you remember?

A. I think one time when I was -- I mean, besides the Toys-R-Us kind of things, that we just kind of show up in the middle of the night and scare the janitor, I think when I was about 17 or 18, he was in town with Prince, and we went to -- he closed down FAO Schwartz, like, late at night, and we kind of showed up there and shopped a little there. And anywhere he shops, they kind of have to close it down for him, or we have to go late at night, just because -- it just kind of comes with the territory.

So I think we also went CD or DVD shopping when we were in London. He was just like, “We’re going to go shopping. Do you want to tag along?”

And I went, “Sure.”

But besides that, there wasn’t really anything else. Those are the only times that I remember.

Q. You said “FAO Schwartz.” Do you mean in New York?

A. In New York, yes.

Q. Was that on Fifth Avenue?

A. Yeah, the one on Fifth Avenue.

Q. Near The Plaza Hotel?

A. Right across the street.

Q. Okay. Did you feel as if there was some ulterior motive or purpose behind Mr. Jackson taking you to toy stores to shop?

A. No, it was just to buy toys. Usually to load up on, you know, water guns or something like that. It was just one of those things where -- it was just one of the fun things that you could do while you were hanging out with Michael.

Q. Now, the prosecutor asked you questions about him buying you a watch.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you think anything unusual was --

MR. ZONEN: Objection; exceeds the scope of the cross-examination.

MR. MESEREAU: It does not, Your Honor.

MR. ZONEN: I'll withdraw the objection. I'll withdraw the objection.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: The prosecutor talked about Mr. Jackson buying you a watch. Do you remember anything unusual about his buying you a gift?

A. Not at all. No, it was one of those things where, like, yeah, we'd go shopping or something like that. I thought it was a very nice gift. But at the same time, it was very sweet. And he actually had it engraved for me, it was like, you know, "From Michael Jackson," you know, "1991," or "'92," or something like that. I haven't seen it in a bunch of years, but I know I have it somewhere in a box.

Q. Now, in response to the prosecutor's questions you talked about Michael Jackson being generous. What do you mean?

A. He was just very open and giving with not only his money and what he -- you know, but like even just what he had.

I remember a friend of mine had, like, you know -- no, it was my brother. He liked a box, a certain box. It was this wooden box. “Is it all right if I have it?” And he didn’t give it a second thought. It’s that kind of thing.

He just kind of -- he’ll let me go there, go to Neverland anytime I want. And he will let you use whatever you need to, and go wherever you need to go. And he’s just a very good friend.

Q. Now, the prosecutor asked you questions about maybe being molested when you were asleep and not knowing about it. And you said words to the effect, you would have known about it. What did you mean?

A. I think I would have realized if something like that was happening to me, whether I was asleep or not.

Q. Do you have any reason to suspect that Mr. Jackson at any time improperly touched you?

A. Not at all.

Q. Do you have any reason to suspect that Mr. Jackson at any time had a plan to sort of become your friend so he could molest you?

A. Not at all.

Q. Do you have any reason to suspect that Mr. Jackson at any time was manipulating you with gifts or generosity so he could, at the right moment, strike and touch you sexually?

A. No, never.

Q. Okay. Now, the prosecutor asked you questions about Mr. Jackson referring to you and your family as family. And you said you thought he had done that on occasion, right?

A. Yeah.

Q. And what do you recall about that?

A. Well, we were very close. I know my mother had had contact with my father, had talked to him when I wasn’t talking to him. It was just one of those things where he was a close family friend, like family.

Q. And the prosecutor asked you questions about whether you felt Mr. Jackson was somehow pressuring you somehow to do something improper. Did you ever feel as if Mr. Jackson was pressuring you to do anything?

A. He never pressured me to do anything at all. Just -- he was just my friend. He never really pressured me to do anything. Not even go to sleep at the right time or eat my vegetables, you know.

Q. Did you see Mr. Jackson allow other children and families into his room?

A. Yeah. It was, you know, whenever -- it was -- like I said, it was an open-door policy, not only for me but for whatever other families were there.

Q. Now, the prosecutor asked you questions about the trip to Bermuda. And you recall that trip?

A. Yeah, I mean vaguely. It was like a week-long trip.

Q. Do you recall having a pleasant time on that trip?

A. Yeah, we had a good time.

Q. Do you recall Mr. Jackson somehow trying to pressure you to do anything improper on the trip?

A. Not at all.

Q. Did you feel that when Mr. Jackson gave you this engraved watch as a gift, that he was somehow luring you into something?

A. Not at all. It was just a very nice gift. He had given my father a gold coin before, and things like that. I mean, he gave very nice gifts.

Q. To adults and children, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, you were in Bermuda with someone named Brock; is that correct?

A. Yeah, I was.

Q. Who was Brock?

A. He was a friend of ours. He lives in the neighborhood that I was living in in Orlando. And they had, like, a community center, something like that. This is before the “Home Alone” movie had come out. So it was just kind of like -- it was still easy for me to go to like a community center and play basketball or whatever. And he was just one of those kids I met, and played a lot of video games and hung out, things like that.

Q. Was Brock a close friend of yours at the time?

A. At the time, yeah, we were good friends.

Q. Has he stayed a friend of yours?

A. I haven’t spoken to him for a long time. He lived in Orlando. I’m from New York.

Q. Do you recall Mr. Jackson doing anything that was disrespectful to Brock or his family on the trip?

A. Not that I know of, no.

Q. Did you have a good time with Mr. Jackson on the trip?

A. Yeah, we had a very good time.

Q. Okay. Now, in any of your trips where you visited Mr. Jackson in Los Angeles, did you ever feel as if he was doing anything of a suspicious nature to you?

A. No, not at all.

Q. In response to the prosecutor’s questions, you said that in 1993 Mr. Jackson called you and said these allegations were false, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And had you discussed with Mr. Jackson from time to time those false allegations?

A. Not really. It’s not something we necessarily talk about. It’s -- its -- you know, I think it’s just a painful subject. It was a hard thing for everyone to go through, I mean especially him. It just -- it’s a hard subject.

Q. Did you ever consider making false allegations against Mr. Jackson so you could get money?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. Did you ever even imagine doing such a thing?

A. No.

Q. Ever consider running to a lawyer and coming up with a claim against Mr. Jackson?

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Argumentative and leading and irrelevant.

THE COURT: Sustained; argumentative.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions, Your Honor.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. You’re telling us that Mr. Jackson had no problem with people going through the closets in his bedroom?

A. Yeah, it was one of those things. I mean, I don’t necessarily think it was a good thing to rifle through everything, but it was --

Q. But people did?

A. He had a large closet. Like I said, he had a lot of his old rhinestone jackets and things like that in there.

Q. People did that?

A. People would go in there, yes.

Q. Sometimes people he didn’t even know?

A. Well, I can’t really speak of whether or not they knew him or not. I assumed if they were there, they knew him.

Q. Certainly people who were in his room with his permission had his permission as well to go through the closets and look at the memorabilia in his closets; is that right?

A. Sure. Like I said, it was another stop on the tour. It was another kind of thing.

Q. It would be nothing unusual at all about somebody who was in his room with his permission to go through his closets and his drawers?

A. Well, I wouldn’t necessarily say the drawers. But it was kind of more -- one of the closets was a lot -- definitely a lot more for display than it was for, you know, actual clothing.

Q. You said he was childlike. Are you referring to his behavior back when you were 10 and 11 years old?

A. Yeah. I mean, even now, he’s more of a father now. It’s kind of fun for me to see that. But at the same time, yeah, I mean, he still has kidlike qualities.

Q. Do you believe that his possession of a great deal of sexually explicit material is consistent with him being childlike?

A. How do you mean?

Q. Him possessing a lot of magazines that are very sexually explicit?

A. It depends on what you are talking about.

When I was 12 or 13 years old, I had a couple of Playboys under my bed.

Q. How about magazines that depict men and women engaged in sex acts, magazines with men and men engaged in sex acts?

A. What about them?

Q. Magazines of women inserting things inside of them? Would you believe that possession of those kinds of magazines, and a number of them, would it be consistent with or inconsistent with his being childlike?

A. Well, I think -- I don't think there's anything wrong with having those things, whether you're childlike or not.

I mean, overall, he's still a human being, and it's something that human beings possess. And so I don't really necessarily find that inappropriate. But -- but, yeah, I don't find it inappropriate.

Q. But it's surprising to you that he would be in possession of all of that; is that right?

A. Not necessarily, no.

Q. Did you ever watch him give things away to his employees as well?

A. Not firsthand. But I know it was something that did happen.

Q. Based on your knowledge of his generosity, you wouldn't be surprised?

A. I wouldn't --

Q. Hold on. Hold on. Wait till the question is finished.

A. Sorry.

Q. Based on your knowledge of his generosity, you wouldn't be surprised if he gave things away to his employees, for no more reason than he expressed admiration for them; is that right?

A. I guess so. But I couldn't speak of it.

But he was a very generous person.

MR. ZONEN: Thank you. I have no further questions.

THE COURT: Counsel, it’s time for a break. Are you going to ask questions?

MR. MESEREAU: Yeah, I have a few more, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. We’ll take a break.

(Recess taken.)

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Okay. Mr. Van Norman, the first thing I’m going to ask is try to use that microphone that’s on your right there.

A. Okay.

Q. And you have -- as you just did, you have to kind of sit close to it. It’s a little hard to do in this courtroom. Everybody’s had that problem.

Okay. First of all, do you know the gentleman seated here to my right?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And who is that?

A. Michael Jackson.

Q. All right. When did you first meet Mr. Jackson?

A. The first time I met Michael was -- it was either 1990 or 1991 while I was employed with Madonna.

Q. What were you doing for Madonna at that time?

A. Personal security.

Q. Is that like a bodyguard?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. Now, let me go back to your background and education. Do you have any particular education, formal education, in the area of becoming a bodyguard?

A. I have a Bachelor’s of Arts from Arizona State in criminology. As for being a bodyguard, I just got into it in college and kept working it.

Q. And what did you do immediately after college?

A. I went to work for different organizations in the security field.

Q. All right. Did you do anything -- did you have any other employment other than the security field?

A. No.

Q. All right. And when you went into the security field, eventually you started working for Madonna; is that correct?

A. Eventually, I went to work for Madonna in 1988.

Q. And prior to ‘88, did you have other experience as a bodyguard or personal security person?

A. Yes, I worked for a company out of Dayton, Ohio, called Professional Law Enforcement, a division of Business Risk International. I did a lot of strike work where I worked as a bodyguard for the comptrollers and the CEOs of the companies.

Q. All right. Now, when you went to work for Madonna, can you describe the kind of work that you did for her. You said bodyguard, personal security. What was the level of your involvement?

MR. SNEDDON: I'm going to object as immaterial and irrelevant.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. When you first met with Mr. Jackson and you first went to work for him, what was your assignment?

A. I was working personal security for Mr. Jackson.

Q. All right. And what did that entail? Did that entail going on tour? Or give us an idea.

A. At first it entailed -- I started doing a lot of video shoots, where we'd, you know, be on site working the video shoots. I'd be making sure anybody coming to see Michael had to check in with us, and I'd be with him if we were out of town. If we did a tour, I went on the tour.

Q. All right. Now, there are different -- let me withdraw that.

How many different security people worked for Mr. Jackson around that period of time when you first started working for him?

A. When I first started, there was -- there was an A team, a B team, and then you'd have your ranch security also.

Q. All right. So let's talk about what the A team and the B team did.

A. The A team was his personal security that was with him 24/7 as a bodyguard. The B team usually worked -- they worked some video shoots, but they were usually on tour, and they would do the stadium set-up ahead of time with the local security, and they'd do some advance work.

Q. All right. So were you on the A team or the B team?

A. A team.

Q. So the B team might go -- if there was a venue where Mr. Jackson was going to perform, the B team might go in advance and set up all the security and work with local police, that sort of thing?

A. Yes, they'd be there ahead of time, before us, to make sure we got into the building safely.

Q. All right. And the A team, when the A team traveled, did the A team travel with Mr. Jackson personally?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. So you wouldn’t go ahead and just be there to greet him?

A. No. I’d be with him personally.

Q. And how long did you maintain that position as a member of the A team traveling personally with Mr. Jackson?

A. Probably 1991 until sometime in ‘94.

Q. Okay. Was part of the concern that you had or part of your job to make sure that Mr. Jackson was personally safe, in other words, not assaulted?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that a concern during that period of time, from ‘91 to ‘94?

A. Always.

Q. And was that part of your training through the other company you had worked for, to deal with the potential for assault?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I earlier asked, and I’m going to ask a slightly different question, so see if I -- so don’t answer it until there’s a chance to object.

MR. SNEDDON: Could I ask counsel to stop the gratuitous remarks and get to the question? I object.

MR. SANGER: Well, and I object to that.

THE COURT: Well, I object to both of you.

(Laughter.)

MR. SNEDDON: Well, the same objection was made --

THE COURT: Be quiet, Mr. Sneddon. You raise an objection with one word.

MR. SNEDDON: I object.

THE COURT: (To Mr. Sanger) same with you. Overruled. Next question.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. So this question: Did you learn anything from your work with Madonna as to how to deal with celebrities?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. And what sorts of lessons did you learn from working with Madonna?

A. I'm --

Q. Let's put it this way: Is there a particular issue with regards to fans, in other words, fans who may appear to be adoring fans? Is that always a safe thing to assume?

A. No, it's not.

Q. All right. Now, in your work with Mr. Jackson, you said you traveled from time to time; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you travel to from '91 to '94?

A. All over the world. Everywhere.

Q. Who was the head of the security department, let us say, for Mr. Jackson during that period of time?

A. Bill Bray.

Q. All right. And did Bill Bray have an office?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Where was that?

A. Down in Westwood.

Q. And was that -- was there an office for MJJ Productions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was his office in that corporate office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was MJJ Productions, to your knowledge?

A. Michael J. Jackson Promotions, Productions.

Q. Okay. So it was his company; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what did MJJ Productions do? What did they -- you said promotions. What did they promote?

A. They did everything. I mean, they got involved with the tours. They handled all of Michael's business affairs.

Q. All right. Now, Mr. Bray, who you referred to, was then in charge of a particular part of this. Can you describe what -- first of all, what was the name of his organization, if he had one?

A. It was the Office of Special Services, and they handled all of Michael's personal security needs and all kinds of security needs.

Q. All right. Did he do some things other than strictly security?

A. He probably did, but I don’t recall.

Q. All right. So Mr. Bray was in charge of the A team and the B team; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in charge of Mr. Jackson’s security in general, no matter what, wherever it was?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Bray sometimes travel on tour?

A. All the time.

Q. Now, Mr. Bray was there when you started working for Mr. Jackson, correct?

A. Mr. Bray hired me.

Q. All right. And do you have any idea of how long Mr. Bray had been with Mr. Jackson?

A. 25, 30 years.

Q. Okay. What was Mr. Bray’s background?

A. Law enforcement.

Q. And what particularly in law enforcement?

A. He was with the LAPD.

Q. Was he retired?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He had been in the robbery/homicide squad?

A. I believe so.

Q. All right. Now, did Mr. Bray have a second in command, as it were, of his security operation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was that?

A. Wayen Nagen.

Q. And did Wayen Nagen travel on tour?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he have anybody else in his -- in his direct chain of command?

A. By other --

Q. Well, let me ask you, do you know who Betty Bailey is?

A. Yes.

Q. Who is Betty Bailey?

A. Betty was Bill’s assistant at the time.

Q. So maybe I did the “chain of command” incorrectly there.

Did Betty Bailey also have an office --
A. Yes, sir.
Q. -- in Los Angeles? And what was her background?

A. I'm really not sure. I don't remember.
Q. All right. Was it law enforcement? Or you don't know?
A. It might have been.
Q. In any event, this was the office that you reported to; is that correct?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you coordinated your activities to protect Mr. Jackson?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How many people were on the A team, generally?
A. Six.
Q. Six people? And how many on the B team?
A. Anywhere from six to eight.
Q. Now, on a particular venue, when there was a concert or at a particular venue when there was a concert, would security interact with local police?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And just briefly, describe how that would work.
A. We'd meet with them, or the advance guy would meet with them ahead of time to work out traffic, work out escape routes, different things throughout -- you know, that's going to go on during a concert that we needed to let them be aware of.
Q. Now, when the concert was not going on, I take it that there were times Mr. Jackson would be residing off of his property; he'd be residing at a hotel somewhere in the world?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you provide security in that respect as well?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. All right. And did you work with the hotel security to try to coordinate things?
A. All the time.
Q. When you traveled with Mr. Jackson, where would you personally stay?

A. I was usually in the room right next door to Mr. Jackson.

Q. Would that be in a suite with an adjoining door, or --

A. At times there was adjoining doors. Sometimes it was the small little maid’s quarters. It all depended on where we were. I mean, sometimes I had a suite. Sometimes I had a little room. It didn’t matter.

Q. All right. And how much of the day would you personally spend with Mr. Jackson from ‘91 to ‘94?

A. That would all depend on what was going on. I mean, sometimes he’d stay in his room. Sometimes we’d go out for the whole day. I mean, all depended on the day, what was going on. And if he had a show the night before, he’d stay in most of the next day.

Q. Was it easier to go out with Mr. Jackson in Europe than in the United States?

A. Oh, no. I don’t think so.

Q. Was it harder?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And why was that?

A. They had a large fan base, and you’re in different countries, different customs, different rules and regulations, and, you know, in certain countries they let the fans run wild where there was no, you know, outside security helping us, so it could become quite chaotic.

Q. Was it easy for Mr. Jackson to go out in the United States?

A. No.

Q. During the period of time you were with Mr. Jackson from ‘91 to ‘94, can you describe what it would be like for Mr. Jackson to try to go to, say, a mall to shop?

MR. SNEDDON: I’m going to object as immaterial; irrelevant.

MR. SANGER: It’s going --

THE COURT: What’s the relevancy?

MR. SANGER: Do you want me --

THE COURT: What is the relevancy?

MR. SANGER: Mr. Van Norman took over as ranch manager in ‘94 and took over the security concerns of the ranch itself.

THE COURT: All right. Well, then the objection is sustained on the question that was asked.

MR. SANGER: All right.

Q. As far as going out in public in general, was Mr. Jackson able to simply go out in public without a group of security people?

A. Very rare occasions.

Q. And if he did that, how would he do it?

MR. SANGER: I’ll object. Immaterial and irrelevant.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. A little more direct question, if I may.

Would he have to wear a disguise, for the most part, to go out?

A. Sometimes.

MR. SNEDDON: Object as immaterial and irrelevant.

THE COURT: Overruled. The answer was, “Sometimes.” Next question.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. Now, in 1993, do you recall some particular publicity coming out about Mr. Jackson that caused additional security concerns?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was that?

A. That was the Jordie Chandler case.

Q. Okay. The allegations that were made at that time; yes?

A. Yes.

Q. And those -- those allegations were published in the press widely?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were they published in the mainstream press?

A. Published all over the world.

Q. Did that -- what did that -- what effect did that have on Mr. Jackson’s personal security?

A. It got a lot tougher for us, not only with the fans, but then we had the media that was all over us also.

Q. Okay. And at some point, did you -- or let me withdraw that.

When did you first go to Neverland Ranch?

A. The first time I went to Neverland Ranch was after the “Dangerous” tour in ‘93.

Q. All right. And was that at the time that these allegations had surfaced and the media was publishing all sorts of things?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. So you had not been to the ranch before that had occurred?

A. No.

Q. So you don’t know what the security policies were at the ranch prior to your arriving there; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. When you arrived there at the ranch, was Mr. Jackson with you?

A. No.

Q. And what was your purpose in going to the ranch?

A. To secure it for his arrival. He was coming back from London.

Q. All right. So you were there a matter of days before he got there?

A. About a day or two.

Q. Day or two. All right. And then Mr. Jackson was there at the ranch, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he there continuously at the ranch through the end of your tenure?

A. No, he wasn’t there continuously. He would only come at different times.

Q. He would go different places?

A. Different places, yes.

Q. At what point did you cease being on the A team, as it were, and start working at the ranch?

A. Sometime in ‘94 Michael asked me to look after the ranch for him, so I did.

Q. And were you at some point, in essence, the ranch manager?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you move to this area?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Where did you move to?
A. At first I stayed on the ranch itself. And then I moved into Los Olivos, and eventually I was down in the same area.
Q. Santa Ynez area?
A. Santa Ynez, yes.
Q. And how long did you live there?
A. Upwards till August of ‘98.
Q. Okay. And then in August of 1998, did you -- what did you do?
A. I went to work for the Viejas Indian Tribe down in San Diego.
Q. Is that where you still work?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And your wife was employed; is that correct?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was her employment?
MR. SNEDDON: Object as immaterial and irrelevant, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Did your wife’s employment have anything to do with your moving?
A. No.
Q. All right. So in ‘93, you come to -- I’m sorry, ‘93 you come to the ranch. And was there a security office at the ranch?

A. Yes, there was.
Q. Did they have security guards?
A. Yes, they did.
Q. Who was in charge of that at that time?
A. I believe his name was Bob Wagner.
Q. After Mr. Wagner, who took over?
A. I think there was a brief time where the lieutenant just stepped in, Steve Bailey, and then Kassim Abdool.
Q. And did Mr. Abdool become the chief of security?
A. From what I recall, yes.
Q. Okay. Did you carry a firearm at the ranch in 1993, ‘94?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you carry the firearm at all times?

A. On the ranch, yes.

Q. And you were trained in firearm safety; is that right?

A. Years ago, yes.

Q. Did you ever display your firearm at anybody for any purpose?

A. Never.

Q. Are you aware that Mr. Abdool alleged that you pulled out your firearm and pointed it through the gate at a fan?

A. I’m aware of that, yes.

Q. Did that ever happen?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever display your firearm in any way?

A. No, sir.

Q. In other words, you carried it on your person?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever walk around with a gun just strapped to your hip?

A. No.

Q. All right. All right. Now, at the time you were getting the ranch prepared in ‘93 for that day or two before Mr. Jackson got there, what were your concerns at that time as far as security was concerned?

A. We had a lot of media build-up outside, and then of course we found a few of them sneaking onto the property. So they’d be hiding in bushes. They’d be doing whatever they can to get a picture. So we did have a lot of concern of people getting onto the property and getting close to the house.

Q. Was there a concern about fans as well as media?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the concern about fans?

A. Same thing. They want to get on the property and try to get as close to Michael as they could.

Q. Around that time, was there a lot of activity at the front gate?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you describe what that was like?

A. Lots of media trucks, lots of fans, you know, upwards of 5- or 600 people just standing out there waiting to see who’s coming in and who’s going.

Q. Did you evaluate the security systems at the ranch at that time?

A. I took a look at them, yes.

Q. Okay. Did you do anything to change them?

A. I tried, but they didn’t get changed.

Q. All right. Were the security systems state of the art?

A. No, sir.

Q. Can you describe them?

A. There was some sensors outside that, you know, usually the deer or the raccoons would trigger. The house wasn’t very secure at the time. That’s about it. It wasn’t -- it wasn’t a good security system at the time.

Q. During the time that you were there, did you make some changes with regard to securing the house?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what kinds of changes?

A. We limited the access to the house. At times we posted guards at the house. Key access especially. That, you know, to let the doors be opened by only certain individuals so the house would be locked down so nobody could get in it unless they were, you know, supposed to go into it.

Q. And did this happen immediately or did this take place over time?

A. It took place over time.

Q. Now, you said key access. Were there key pads on the house, or were there keys, or do you remember?

A. There were keys at that time.

Q. All right. And so you limited -- you started, over this period of time, starting to insist that the doors actually be locked?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that certain people would have keys to get in; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were guests given keys?

A. No, sir.

Q. So if somebody wanted to get in, they’d call security?

A. They’d call security, yes.

Q. Did they call housekeeping?

A. They had keys also.

Q. All right. Now, nevertheless, if there were guests staying at the -- staying on the property in the guest units, for instance, would they be allowed to have free access to the house?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. So who were you trying to keep out?

A. Fans and media.

Q. All right. During the period of time you were there, did any fans actually penetrate the property?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how many occasions?

A. There was quite a few that they got on the property. As to actually getting to the house, there was a few occasions that they did actually get to the house, and one occasion where they got in.

Q. Okay. And where did the person get in? Where did the person who got in end up?

A. She ended up in the back door, up the stairs, hiding in a crawlspace for the whole day.

Q. Did that appear to you to be a serious breach of security?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And based on your experience with Madonna and your other experience in the industry, are celebrity stalkers sometimes dangerous?

A. Very.

Q. Most of the time not, I take it.

A. You can’t -- you never know. I mean, they change. They’re very dangerous at times, though.

Q. All right. Now, during the time that you were working for Mr. Jackson, did you have occasion to know the Barnes family?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see them with Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see -- can you tell us about the family that you saw?

A. Very nice family. They did a lot of traveling with us. I liked them.

Q. Okay. And who were the family members that you remember seeing?

A. Brett. Karlee. Mrs. Barnes. And occasionally Mr. Barnes.

Q. So the whole family, two parents and --

A. Yes.

Q. -- and a son and daughter.

Did you have occasion to meet Macaulay Culkin and his family?

A. I met Macaulay, but not his family, and that was at a time in Chicago when I was there doing a video with Michael.

Q. So you didn’t see Macaulay Culkin or his family at the ranch when you were there?

A. No.

Q. All right. Do you know Wade Robson and his family?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell us about that family?

A. I don’t remember if I ever -- I think they were at the ranch a few times, but I met him more at video shoots that we did. And Wade was dancing and things like that. His mother was Joy.

Q. Okay. Did you have occasion to meet Jordie Chandler?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Did you ever meet his mother?

A. No.

Q. Did you know Blanca Francia?

A. No.

Q. She would have been gone before you arrived; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. So therefore you didn’t meet Jason Francia either?
A. No.
Q. With all of those people that you just mentioned, the ones that you met, the Barnes, the Robsons, Culkin, to the extent that you saw him, did you ever see Mr. Jackson ever do anything inappropriate with any of them?
A. No, sir.
Q. Now, you mentioned Bill Bray, who is a retired L.A. Police Department detective. Did he take an active interest in the security at Neverland Ranch?

A. When we first got there, yes.
Q. And did he come up from time to time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you answer to Mr. Bray during the time that you worked there?
A. During the whole time that I worked there?
Q. Well, let’s start with from ‘91 to ‘94.
A. From ‘91 to ‘94 I did, yes.
Q. And then after you became ranch manager, you didn’t report directly to him anymore?
A. No.
Q. You still knew him?
A. Yes.
Q. If you had seen anything inappropriate with these children or any law violations, would you have reported them to Mr. Bray?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. By the way, did Mr. Bray travel on tour from time to time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, how many employees were there at the ranch when you were working as ranch manager?
A. When I started or when I finished?
Q. Give us the range.
A. I think there was about 160 when we first went up there, and about 80 in ‘98 when I left.
Q. Okay. And did the various department heads report to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So at that time, you would have been -- you would have had housekeeping, security, fire, zoo, all the others would have reported to you; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have meetings with them from time to time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the employees that you described, from 160 at the high point down to maybe 80-some at the lower point, were those people who lived in the community here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how many people were there who came up from, as it were, from the corporate headquarters, who worked there?

MR. SNEDDON: I'm going to object as immaterial.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. Did at some point Mr. Abdool, Kassim Abdool, Ralph Chacon and Adrian McManus stopped coming to work?

A. Yeah, they just stopped coming to work.

Q. Did they all stop on the same day?

A. Pretty much.

Q. Okay. Did they at some point sue you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they sued seven other employees; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Sued Bill Bray?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Betty Bailey?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With the exception of -- let me withdraw that. Melanie Bagnall also joined that lawsuit; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And she sued Andrew Merritt; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With the exception of Andrew Merritt, were all the people that were sued people from the corporate headquarters, for lack of a better term?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was the outcome of that lawsuit?

A. We won it hands-down. I think it was 12 “No” verdicts on all but one.

Q. The all but one --

A. Was the Andy Merritt.

Q. Melanie Bagnall’s claims against Andy Merritt?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Andy Merritt was a security guard?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he won that as well?

A. He won that as well, yes.

Q. 10 to 3 or something?

A. Something like that.

MR. SNEDDON: I’m going to object. Asked and answered; move to strike.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. Now, with regard to the ‘93 period of time, do you recall in ‘93 whether or not there were certain people who went to the media to sell their stories?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall who some of those people were?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tell us.

A. Ralph Chacon, Adrian McManus, and Kassim Abdool, Melanie Bagnall, Sandi Domz.

Q. Now, actually, before they went to the media, were there any other employees who had gone to the media?

A. I believe there were, but I don’t remember the names.

Q. Do you remember if Blanca Francia --

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object as leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Do you remember if Blanca Francia was one of them?

A. I remember hearing that, yes, but I didn’t know her.

Q. These were people that were before you got there?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. During the time you were ranch manager -- you said you reported directly to Bill Bray before you were ranch manager?
A. Yes.
Q. After you were ranch manager, who did you report to?
A. Steve Chabrey or Mr. Jackson himself.
Q. Who was Steve Chabrey?
A. He was the CEO at the time of MJJ Productions.
Q. And he had an office down in L.A.?
A. Yes.
Q. And he would have been Mr. Bray’s boss as well, I suppose.
A. I don’t know if they were separate or not, but Mr. Chabrey was overseeing the whole operation at the time.
Q. And you said you also reported to Michael Jackson?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, have you gotten to know Mr. Jackson on a personal basis, personal level?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how did that occur?
A. I think over years of, you know, building up the trust, that, you know, Michael felt comfortable with me, and we talked about different things, and I was able to talk to him about things that were going on.
Q. All right. And that occurred before you became ranch manager?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. While you were ranch manager, did you still have the opportunity to talk with Mr. Jackson when he was on the property?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you talk to him every day?
A. No, sir.
Q. All right. What was your, let’s say, policy or attitude towards talking with Mr. Jackson?

A. I would only talk to him if he would come up to me or if I really needed to ask him something about what was going on. I didn't make it a point to try to, you know, buddy up with him and get to know him, but I had a job to do.

Q. All right. And at the ranch, if there was a policy decision about security, for instance, how would that policy decision generally be made?

A. When I was the ranch manager, I would make the ultimate decision on the policy.

Q. Did you ask Mr. Jackson?

A. No.

Q. All right. And who would you consult with when you were ranch manager?

A. Sometimes I'd run it through Evvy, who was Michael's -- that worked for Michael down in L.A. A lot of times, depending on the policies, you know, I made the decision myself.

Q. And going the other way in the chain of command, who would you consult with?

A. What do you mean, "going the other way"?

Q. In other words, would you talk to the head of security, for instance?

A. I talked to them, yes, about why we're doing this and why it needs to be done.

Q. With regard to other decisions of that sort, was Mr. Jackson hands-on running things at the ranch, telling people what to do?

A. No, sir.

Q. Would Mr. Jackson from time to time ask employees for things, for assistance with something, unlock a door --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As far as making these policy decisions on security and that sort of thing --

A. No, he wasn't involved.

Q. All right. And despite the fact you left employment to go down and work in San Diego, do you still consider Mr. Jackson to be a friend?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you had any contact with him recently?

A. Just said hello yesterday. I haven't seen him since I left, so I did consider him a friend, yes.

MR. SANGER: That’s fair enough. Thank you. I have no further questions.
THE COURT: Cross-examine.

CROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. SNEDDON:
Q. Good morning, Mr. Van Norman.
A. Good morning, Mr. Sneddon.
MR. SNEDDON: Hand me that water, if you would.
Q. When you began work for Mr. Jackson originally, you were strictly involved in either providing security on the videos or on a tour, correct?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you did accompany Mr. Jackson on a European tour at one time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And with regard to that particular tour, your responsibilities were security-related on the A team?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were you carrying a weapon at that time?

A. No, sir.
Q. Did you ever carry a weapon in the protection of Mr. Jackson during any of the tours that you went on with him?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you ever carry a weapon during any of the times that you did any video shoots with Mr. Jackson?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you ever do any -- did you ever carry a weapon at any of the times when you provided security for Mr. Jackson when he was doing concerts?
A. No, sir.
Q. The video shoots that you went on with Mr. Jackson were often done in a public setting, correct?
A. Yes. Yes, sir.
Q. I’m sorry. Go ahead.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The reason that you had to interact with the local law enforcement is sometimes they would be done with a lot of fans standing around watching what was going on, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And oftentimes in the concerts that you were at, there were thousands and thousands of fans in an open venue --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- correct?

Now, during the time that you said you began your employment on the ranch in December of 1993, okay? Is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. And that you, prior to that, had been on tour with Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when the allegations surfaced about the Jordan Chandler situation with Mr. Jackson, the tour was aborted, was it not?

A. “Aborted” meaning over?

Q. Yeah, it was stopped prematurely?

A. No, sir.

Q. You don’t recall Mr. Jackson being in Mexico for a month or a month and a half?

A. Yeah, but when the allegations first came out, we were on tour and we didn’t stop it right then and there. We continued until we got to Mexico City, and then we cancelled a few dates after that.

Q. And then you went to England for a while.

Did you go with Mr. Jackson to England?

A. No, sir.

Q. So there were several months where Mr. Jackson was out of the country in either Mexico or England where you weren’t part of his A team at that time?

A. He left right from Mexico to England, and it was -- I don’t think it was several months. I think it was six weeks.

Q. I won’t quibble with you over a couple weeks, but you weren’t part of the A team providing security at that time?

A. I don’t think he had anybody with him at the time.
Q. Now, when you got to the ranch, you did carry a weapon, correct?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You were armed?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And the other OSS officers were also armed?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And there were four of them?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The names -- Tony Coleman is one I know.
A. Tony Coleman. Marcus Johnson. Jerome Johnson.
Q. Okay. Now, you know what a guard card is, don’t you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What’s a guard card?
A. A guard card is something that a security guard needs to work in the State of California.
Q. And during the time that you were providing security for Mr. Jackson at his ranch from December of ‘93 on, you did not have a guard card, correct?

A. No, sir.
Q. And the weapon that you were carrying on your person during the time you were employed there was a nine-millimeter Glock?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you had another sidearm -- not sidearm, but another weapon, pistol, I guess. It’s a Witness .40 semi-automatic?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you had a stun gun?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, did you carry your -- the one that you carried on your person most of the time was the nine-millimeter Glock, correct?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you carry that on your waist?
A. Usually on my back.
Q. In a -- back here?
A. Back -- uh-huh, yes, sir.

Q. Let’s go back a little bit and talk about some of the tours you were on. You were in Chicago with Mr. Jackson with the Barnes family, correct?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And on all of the tours that you went on, was it your position to be in the room next door to Mr. Jackson’s room?
A. I would say 95 percent of the time that’s where my room was.

Q. Fair enough. And it was your observation, was it not, that during the time that Brett Barnes was in Chicago, that he stayed with Mr. Jackson in Mr. Jackson’s room, correct?
A. I believe so, yes.
Q. And it was your observation that during the time that the Barnes family accompanied Mr. Jackson to South America -- were you on that tour?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. -- (continuing) that Mr. Jackson -- that Brett Barnes spent virtually every night with Mr. Jackson in his bedroom, correct?
A. I believe so, yes.
Q. And there was a South American tour, correct?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And Brett Barnes was on that tour with Mr. Jackson, correct?
A. I believe so.
Q. And spent every night with Mr. Jackson in his room?
A. I believe so.
Q. Were you present at the time that Mr. Jackson was about to get on the plane to leave for that tour to South America? Were you in the limo with Mr. Jackson?
A. I don’t recall exactly where I was, whether I was in the limo, but I was on the tour, so I was either standing outside the limo or sometimes I drove in the limo with him.

Q. Do you recall Brett Barnes being in the limo with Mr. Jackson?
A. I don’t remember back then, that far.

Q. Do you remember them having to take Mr. Barnes away from Mr. Jackson and hide him away from the people to get on the plane in a separate way?
A. No, I don’t.
Q. You don’t recall any of that?
A. No, I don’t.
Q. How old was Brett Barnes about the time that he was traveling with Mr. Jackson, in your opinion?
A. About 13.
Q. Teenager?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You never questioned what a teenager was doing in Mr. Jackson’s bedroom night after night after night?
A. No, sir.
Q. You didn’t think it was inappropriate for a teenager to be sleeping with a 35-year-old man --
A. No, sir.
Q. -- not his relative?
A. No, not at the time.
Q. While you were -- while you were at the ranch, you did purchase some security equipment in an attempt to upgrade the systems there, right?

A. Not really to update the systems. Just to give them a little more security to certain areas, yes.
Q. But you did buy some security equipment?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. And did you ever buy any eavesdropping devices?
A. No, sir.
Q. Anything that you plugged into the wall so you could listen to people?
A. No, sir.
Q. When you purchased the equipment that was to upgrade the security system there, would the invoice that you were given correctly describe the items that you bought?
A. No, sir.
Q. In other words, it was -- it was not correct?
A. It was not correct, yes.
Q. And what was the reason that the invoice did not accurately depict the things that you actually purchased?

A. We didn’t want anybody to know we were purchasing video equipment to go outside of Mr. Jackson’s bedroom so he could have -- he could see who’s coming down the hallway. And we felt it was nobody else’s business what we were doing. So if we depicted it as video equipment and what it was, then it serves no purpose; that people would know that there’s a camera out there.

Q. Well, who would be looking for invoices that you’d buy security equipment from?

A. People that go through the invoices. The accountants. The people at the ranch that were working in administration. It was none of their business.

Q. So you didn’t use that invoice to hide the fact that you bought eavesdropping devices that were inserted into all the walls in the house?

A. I didn’t buy any eavesdropping devices, sir.

Q. Okay. The ranch phone system. I believe you indicated previously that, to your knowledge, there are three places where one can overhear a telephone call, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. One is in the administrative office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. One is at the guard shack?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the other is in Mr. Jackson’s room?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those are the only three places, to your knowledge, when you worked there that that could be done?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall a situation where you were called out to the ranch involving a disagreement between Mr. Coleman and Mr. Chacon over a person who had come onto the ranch?

A. I recall something of that, but I really don’t recall the whole incident.

Q. Do you recall there was a couple of foreigners who had mistakenly strayed onto the ranch and were encountered by guards?

A. Mistakenly?

Q. Yeah.

A. Okay. No. I do recall that incident, yes.

Q. Well, they thought --

A. It’s coming back to me.

Q. Well, they were given permission to go on the neighbor’s ranch, correct?

A. I don’t know the whole story, no. I don’t recall it. I recall bits and pieces, but I don’t know why they were on Michael’s ranch to begin with.

Q. So you didn’t look into it, as the chief of security, to ascertain whether there was a system failure here?

A. I wasn’t the chief of security.

Q. You were one of the security guards?

A. Right, but I wasn’t handling that issue. It was Mr. Coleman.

Q. You actually, as a matter of fact, took reports from the individuals involved, did you not?

A. I don’t --

MR. SANGER: This is beyond the scope of direct; and relevance.

MR. SNEDDON: That has to do with his range of responsibilities, Your Honor. And it also involves Mr. Chacon.

THE COURT: The objection is sustained.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Did you not conduct an investigation?

A. I don’t remember if I did. I did a lot of stuff at the time, and that actual thing I don’t remember.

Q. Do you recall whether the sheriff’s department was called out?

MR. SANGER: Objection. Relevance; beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Again, I don’t remember the whole situation. They may have been.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Do you recall whether or not the people were arrested and prosecuted?

A. No, I don’t.

Q. All right. Just a couple more questions. One of the things that you did when you came onto the ranch in ‘93 - okay? - was that you began to look at some of the personnel files, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you looked at Mr. Chacon’s file twice, correct?

A. I believe so. Back then - it’s a ways back - but I believe that’s what I did state --

Q. Okay.

A. -- on another case.

Q. And you did look at Mr. Abdool’s file, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And one of the other things that you looked at was to compare the gate logs with the time cards to see whether or not any individuals on the ranch were cheating in terms of the number of hours they were working, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

MR. SANGER: I’m going to object, Your Honor. This is beyond the scope of direct, and relevance, and 352.

THE COURT: I’m not sure where you’re going.

MR. SNEDDON: It’s credibility, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SNEDDON: And I think you’ll see when I ask the next question.

THE COURT: All right. Go ahead. Overruled.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: And with regard to Mr. Chacon, you compared your records with the time cards and they were accurate. They didn’t cheat the ranch, did they?

A. No, he didn’t, but other employees did.

MR. SNEDDON: Move to strike as nonresponsive.

THE COURT: The last part is stricken.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: And with regard to Mr. Abdool, you checked his time cards with the gate logs and they were honestly filled out, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And with regard to Adrian McManus, you also checked hers, and they were honestly filled out, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And one of the other responsibilities that you conducted at the ranch was to determine whether or not there were any thefts from the ranch, correct?

A. We looked to see if things were missing and things along those lines, yes.

Q. Correct. And in that connection when you did that, you determined that Adrian McManus, to your knowledge, had never taken anything from the ranch, correct?

A. I don't remember investigating Adrian to see if she took anything from the ranch at that time.

Q. Do you remember your deposition being taken in your lawsuit and being asked that question?

A. No, I don't remember right now. Sorry.

Q. All right. Do you remember the same question being asked as to Mr. Chacon, that you had --

MR. SANGER: Well -- I'm sorry, Your Honor. If he doesn't remember the question, how can he remember the same question? So I object.

MR. SNEDDON: Maybe he just doesn't remember that individual.

THE COURT: Just stop talking to each other. The objection's overruled. You may ask that question. I'm not sure you got it all out.

MR. SNEDDON: I'll start over again, Your Honor.

Q. The question is, with regard to -- I think we're on Mr. Chacon at this point, if I'm not mistaken; that you never saw Mr. Chacon take anything from the ranch, correct?

A. I never saw him take anything, no.

Q. And with regard to Kassim Abdool, you never saw him take anything from the ranch?

A. I never saw him take anything, no.

Q. And with regard to Miss McManus, you never saw her take anything from the ranch?

A. No, I never saw her take anything.

MR. SNEDDON: No further questions. Oh, wait. I’m sorry. I do apologize. One area. This won’t take long.
Q. Also one of your responsibilities was that, after you came there in December of ‘93, the locks on Mr. Jackson’s -- the entrance door to Mr. Jackson’s room were changed, correct?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you were one of the people who was given the directive to take care of that?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And as a matter of fact, it was changed on a couple of occasions due to some communication issues?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And Mr. Jackson was not present on the ranch at that time, correct?
A. No, he was not.
Q. And the orders were given that no one was to go into his room in his absence, correct?
A. I believe so.
Q. And the locks that were changed are locks that lock on the inside of the door, correct?
A. Lock on the inside?
Q. Yeah, that the lock’s on the inside?
A. Deadbolt on the inside?
Q. Right.
A. I believe so, but I don’t remember offhand.
MR. SNEDDON: Okay. All right. Thank you. I’m sorry.
THE COURT: All right. Redirect.
MR. SANGER: Yes. Thank you.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. SANGER:
Q. Let’s go to the question area about carrying weapons.
First of all, did you, in the course of your employment with Mr. Jackson at the ranch, ever carry a concealed weapon off of his private property?
A. No, sir.

Q. So if you went into Los Olivos or someplace else, you would not carry a concealed weapon; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Did you understand that you needed a guard card to carry a concealed weapon on Mr. Jackson’s private property, at his home?

A. I don’t believe that I did need a guard card at the time.

Q. You did have training in firearms, right?

A. Years ago, yes.

Q. Did you have any licenses in any jurisdictions to carry a weapon?

A. No, sir.

Q. So when you were in other jurisdictions, did you ever carry a concealed weapon?

A. No, sir. We usually hired off-duty police officers to work with us.

Q. All right.

MR. SNEDDON: Move to strike the last part as nonresponsive, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Stricken.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. I was going to get back to this. You worked with actual on-duty law enforcement in various venues; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you hire people who were authorized to carry weapons in other jurisdictions?

A. Sometimes, yes.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson like to have people have firearms around him?

A. No, sir.

MR. SNEDDON: I’m going to object. Call for speculation, conclusion, lack of foundation.

MR. SANGER: Let me withdraw it and phrase it in a different way, if I may.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson ever express to you whether or not he wanted people to have people carrying firearms around him?

MR. SNEDDON: Object. Hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I don’t think he liked to have guns around him, no.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. In 1993 when you came to the ranch, and you've already described the situation with the media and fans and all that -- well, let me withdraw it and put it directly this way: Why did you feel it was necessary to carry a concealed firearm while you were on the ranch property?

A. Well, if I can go back to when I worked with Madonna also, they -- these fans can be very dangerous and sometimes they are armed. And there's been occasions where I've had fans that were armed that I've taken a gun away from, or a knife, and it's just for our protection, as well as, you know, I'm not going to go in there blind and get myself hurt.

Q. Now, at the ranch, was there a sheriff's station, you know, within, say, a mile or two of the front gate?

A. No, sir.

Q. And from time to time, did you actually go out and patrol areas away from the house?

A. Do you mean -- oh, yeah, definitely, out in the woods and stuff like that, and we've caught fans out there.

Q. And how would you go out into the wooded area?

A. Usually in a truck. Occasionally on horseback.

Q. All right. Did you ever have to use -- did any of you ever have to use your weapons in any way?

A. No, sir.

Q. All right. There was a question about -- well, let me ask you this: When people travel with Michael Jackson, would it be the responsibility of the personal security staff to also protect those people?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And would fans or other people have interest in people who travel with Michael Jackson simply because they were doing so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So somebody might not be famous, but if they're with Michael Jackson, they're --

A. They're in the line of fire, so to speak. There's instances where we were overtaken sometimes and we would have to get everybody out, so --

Q. You were asked about children being with Mr. Jackson on tour and elsewhere. What was Mr. Jackson's attitude towards the children that you saw him with?

A. His "attitude" meaning --

Q. What's his demeanor? How did he behave with children?

MR. SNEDDON: I'll object to the foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: I'm asking about your personal observation of Mr. Jackson hanging out with children. First of all, did you see Mr. Jackson hanging out with children from time to time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was your observation about his demeanor, his interrelation with these children?

A. He was like one of the kids. I mean, they'd have water balloon fights, pillow fights, food fights. It was a debacle. Just a lot of things that kids do.

Q. All right. And did this occur on tour?

A. Occasionally, yes.

Q. Did it occur at his home at Neverland?

A. Most of the time.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson also -- well, did you see him with adults?

A. Yes sir.

Q. How did he interact with adults?

A. He'd interact. I mean, he was more shy around adults than he was with the kids. That's how I saw him, you know, with the adults. He related more with the children.

Q. Okay. There was a question about whether or not you called the sheriff or somebody called the sheriff with regard to an intruder. Let me ask you about the policy of the security department at the ranch. Was there a policy with regard to security officers arresting people?

A. I don't remember the policy right off the top of my head.

Q. Well, let’s make it simple.

A. They’d handcuff them. You know, they’d handcuff them, and I believe then they would call the sheriffs, and the sheriffs would come and take them away.

Q. Security didn’t put people in their car or truck and drive them down to a sheriff’s station?

A. No, sir.

Q. So it would be routine policy to call the sheriffs if you had an intruder; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were asked about, when you first came to the ranch, checking to see if there were people cheating on the payroll.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And one of the things you did, apparently, was to check their time cards against the gate logs; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, at that time you didn’t find a discrepancy with regard to Mr. Abdool or Mr. Chacon; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And you were asked about initially looking into theft from the ranch; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During your initial investigations into people cheating, were there other people who you investigated besides Abdool and Chacon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who?

A. Pretty much everybody that worked at the ranch.

Q. All right. And did you find some people cheating?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was that part of your job, to try to make sure the ship was being run properly?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. Did you determine if anybody else had stolen from the ranch?

A. Determined by -- I mean, we found out later on that there were things that were taken that were Mr. Jackson’s personal effects.

Q. Okay. Before we get to that, in that initial investigation when you were looking to see if people had stolen --

A. Oh, yes, now I recall. We had people that stold stereos out of golf carts, things like that. We came across that and different things, and we did find that there were other things that were stolen.

Q. Now, were most of the people that worked at the ranch honest, hard-working people?

A. Most of them were, yes.

Q. So you found some that weren’t?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, with regard to Miss McManus and Mr. Chacon, did you later develop evidence that they had stolen from the ranch?

A. Yes, sir.

MR. SNEDDON: I’m going to object. Lack of personal knowledge and foundation and vague as to what time.

THE COURT: Foundation. Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. After Mr. Chacon and Ms. McManus left the ranch, did you determine whether or not they had stolen from the ranch?

A. Yes, sir.

MR. SNEDDON: Same objection, Your Honor. Lack of foundation; personal knowledge.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Were you present every day of the trial where you were being sued by these people?

A. All six months, yes.

Q. And did you see witnesses come and swear under oath that these people had stolen from the ranch?

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object. That’s a highly improper question, and it’s hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: At the time Mr. Sneddon asked you about something that was said in the deposition, do you remember when that deposition was taken?

A. Not exactly, no.

Q. But it was sometime well before the trial; is that correct?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was there other investigation done between the time of your deposition and the trial?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it done by people other than you --
A. Yes, sir.
Q. -- that were licensed private investigators?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Or at least one?
A. Yes.
Q. So at the time of your deposition, you didn't have any personal knowledge of these people stealing from the ranch; is that correct?
A. Correct.
Q. And from your point of view at the time of that deposition, that was your personal frame of mind; is that correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. And that changed?
A. Yes, sir.
MR. SNEDDON: Objection, Your Honor. That calls for hearsay and conclusion; no personal knowledge.
THE COURT: Overruled. The answer was, "Yes, sir."
MR. SANGER: All right.

Okay. I have no further questions.
MR. SNEDDON: No questions.
THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.
THE WITNESS: Thank you.
THE COURT: Call your next witness.
MR. SANGER: Your Honor, it would be our intention to play the tapes in the 5000 series. I forgot the exact number, but I'll get it here in just a moment.
MR. ZONEN: I didn't hear counsel. I'm sorry.

MR. SANGER: Oh, is that on?

THE COURT: He's going to play the outtake tape.

MR. ZONEN: Was the Court anticipating that there would be some discussion as to what outtake tape would be played?

THE COURT: It's easy for you to say.

MR. ZONEN: At one time.

THE COURT: No, I wasn't.

MR. ZONEN: We would object to it being played in its entirety, as the content is not entirely relevant to the proceeding. And I think there should be some hearing on it, because I believe we're talking about hours of tapes.

THE COURT: Two hours.

MR. SANGER: We had a discussion with Mr. Sneddon. I thought it was resolved. I may be wrong, but --

THE COURT: Two hours and -- they can't hear you in the back. Two hours and how long? Tell us.

MR. SANGER: I think it's two hours and 45 minutes, but I'm not positive as I stand here. I can look at my notes.

MR. ZONEN: I would like to be heard as to the content --

THE COURT: All right. I --

MR. ZONEN: -- at this time.

THE COURT: I'll excuse the jury for a couple minutes. We'll call you back in quickly.

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: All right. Counsel, do you want to be heard?

MR. ZONEN: To begin with, of course, the film "Living with Michael Jackson" was introduced for nonhearsay purposes, with the exception of small segments that dealt with actual admissions by the defendant to the extent that he sleeps with children and his relationship with the Arvizo children. The balance of it was for purposes of showing the response, the public response, to the damage to his career and for purposes of explaining the reaction by Mr. Jackson and his employees to that production.

There was some discussion thereafter, but never one that was briefed. We still to this day do not have a written brief from the defense asking the Court's permission to do this and explaining in writing the justification for doing it and giving clarity to the Court as to exactly which sections of the outtakes they want to show and for what purposes.

I viewed the outtakes on a few occasions. There are -- parts of the outtakes show films of Michael Jackson interacting with children on Neverland Ranch. There are films of Michael Jackson in the theater with children. There's a film of Michael Jackson showing a film. The film is on the film, a film that's a promotional film of Michael Jackson being shown to children in the theater. There's films of children walking around Neverland Ranch. None of these, I believe, are relevant to any issue that's properly before the Court.

There are, of course, clips of Debbie Rowe. There are clips of Mr. Jackson's father. There's a dialogue that deals with the question of whether or not Mr. Jackson's father was at any time abusive to the defendant. We don't believe that any of those interviews deal with issues that are properly before the Court at this time.

We believe that to the extent there's been any discussion as to what would be relevant, we think what would be relevant would be any film that corrects the presentation that may have been misleading in Mr. Bashir's interview. In other words, if there are outtakes that show the dialogue was taken out of context and that in fact the outtakes, the Hamid outtakes, would place that dialogue in an entirely different light and would correct it, then we believe that certainly would be appropriate to show to this jury.

We don't believe that there's been any presentation by the defense to that extent. We don't believe that they have come forward and said that anything so far that appears in the Hamid Moslehi outtakes would in fact clarify any statements made by the defendant. And nor has there been anything in writing or any argument that any other aspect of the outtakes, the Moslehi outtakes, would actually clarify any aspect of the "Living with Michael Jackson" documentary.

So our objection would be, first of all, that it be limited only to areas that specifically clarify what is believed to be misleading information in the Martin Bashir documentary, and that that be brought to the Court's attention in advance so that we know exactly which parts are being shown and that we have an opportunity to review it in advance of it being shown as well.

As to the other part, the pictures of children running around, it's collateral. It's immaterial. It's irrelevant to any issue that's currently before the Court.

To the extent that there are statements by the defendant in there, again we believe that statements by the defendant would constitute hearsay, it being introduced for the truth of the matter stated, except to the extent that those statements are part of the interviews that were presented in the Martin Bashir and for which they clarify the actual statements that were made by the defendant. Any other statements that are unrelated to what was shown on Martin Bashir we believe would be hearsay by the defendant.

Submit it.

MR. SANGER: I think Mr. Zonen is wrong. And I usually don't say that about a legal argument, a legal argument Mr. Zonen's making, but I think he's just wrong here factually.

We're talking about the outtakes, the Hamid Moslehi outtakes. We're not talking about the Maury Povich show. The Maury Povich included Debbie Rowe material. The outtakes do not. Unless there's --

THE COURT: I agree with you. I've watched the outtakes.

MR. SANGER: All right. And there was also some other references to content that I think are in the Maury Povich production as opposed to this thing. So that's number one.

Number two, procedurally, I think the Court recalls I raised this with Mr. Sneddon in chambers, and then we came out, and there was a point where I was at the bench with Mr. Auchincloss, and Your Honor indicated that we could play it.

I was prepared to submit a brief. I mean, we actually started doing something on that, and then when Your Honor said we could play it today, I instructed my associate lawyer, Mr. Dunkle, to stop working on that and to do something else. So we could have briefed it. However, we did brief this early on in the case and we filed a brief. I just don't have it with me, because I didn't anticipate this argument.

THE COURT: No, it had been briefed early on.

MR. SANGER: Yes.

THE COURT: And I had ruled that it wasn't admissible in the People's case.

MR. SANGER: Right. I'm sorry.

THE COURT: The problem with the outtakes is that it's so long, because it includes a lot of material that's not outtakes. I mean, I guess however you define "outtakes." But it includes a lot of material that was in the original picture, because he's taking original video. He's taking that as the other person is taking it.

But I am going to allow the playing of the entire tape, except I may have forgotten -- it's some time since I watched it. If some material, such as the district attorney's alluded to, is on this tape that I don't recall, then you can object during the tape and I'll put the "Black Screen" up and we'll deal with it.

I think what it is, though, is just a lot of what we've already seen, plus a little additional material. And it's -- it's all sort of tied in together.

MR. SANGER: And just to -- because the jury's not here, so I can say it in advance in case it comes up that there's a contemporaneous objection, we're submitting this not only as the context under the Evidence Code for the statements that had been offered as admissions, and those statements, while brief, there were a couple, three pages of statements, they're rather comprehensive about Mr. Jackson's attitude and everything else.

So the entire film puts that in context.

In addition to that, the Hamid outtakes are important because the People introduced Bashir to start with, besides for the truth of the matter of some statements, they introduced it to show the state of mind of everybody.

Well, the outtakes, as we already have evidence, were made known and were provided to Maury Povich before the 20th, so the state of mind of everybody was we had some pretty powerful material.

THE COURT: I'm letting that in.

MR. SANGER: Yes.

THE COURT: What I would keep out is -- I have the same recollection you do. I think that the material that he was referring to is on a different tape; it doesn't involve this one. But --

MR. SANGER: That's correct.

THE COURT: -- I'm just telling him it has nothing to do with Mr. Jackson's statements. That's not what I included. It has to do with scenes with children and that sort of thing, an interview with the father, things he's alluded to, the interview with the ex-wife, that thing. I don't think that's on this, but if it is, alert me and I'll stop. But the rest of it, it's going to come in under the authorities that you had previously cited just now.

MR. SANGER: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Let's have the jury come back. We'll get 15 minutes in before our break.

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, will there be an instruction to the jury with regards to the statements of the defendant not being admitted for the truth of the matter stated, except to the extent that they are inconsistent with statements that perhaps came in for the truth of the matter stated in the Povich film -- or, excuse me, the Bashir film?

MR. SANGER: That wouldn't be the law. The entire statement can come in if part of it is admitted.

THE COURT: Yeah, I'm not going to give them any further warning at this time.

MR. SANGER: Before you call -- I just want to make sure this works.

Your Honor, before you call them in - for some reason our side seems to be jinxed - can I just make sure it works?

THE COURT: Yes. That would be a good thing to do.

MR. SANGER: I'm going to push all the buttons here, and I don't want to do anything with that one.

THE BAILIFF: Are you doing it on the DVD?

MR. SANGER: Yes, I certainly hope so.

THE BAILIFF: Could you try "Input 4," Judge?

MR. SANGER: And that just reminds me what I was going to do.

THE BAILIFF: Bring the jury in?

THE COURT: He wants to say something. Just a moment.

MR. SANGER: This is in the reverse order. So what I propose to do there, they're numbered as 5009-A, B and C, which corresponds to the order the sheriff marked them, as 10, 11 and 12. But I believe that 11 and 12 come before 10 chronologically, so I'd just like to play it in that order, if I could. So it would be B, C and then A.

THE COURT: You can play it in whatever order you want to.

All right. Bring in the jury.

MR. SANGER: Could we approach just to be clear on something? Or Mr. Auchincloss come up, too?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yeah.

MR. ZONEN: Me too?

(Discussion held off the record at sidebar.)

(The following proceedings were held in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: (To the jury) Mr. Sanger is going to tell you what the tape is that you are about to watch.

MR. SANGER: Thank you, Your Honor. First of all, the exhibit is No. 5009-A, B and C, and we intend to play it in the order of B, C, A. These are videos that were seized by the sheriff’s department. Mr. Moslehi has testified that he had taken videos while Mr. Bashir was interviewing Mr. Jackson. And these -- it was agreed that we would not have to call him back to authenticate these documents, or these videos.

THE COURT: All right. That’s fine. You may start.

MR. SANGER: Thank you. I’ll put in 5009-B.

(Whereupon, a portion of a DVD, Defendant’s Exhibit 5009-B, was played for the Court and jury.)

THE COURT: Why don’t we stop.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I stopped it at 7:20, in case it gets lost.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: All right. Go ahead.

MR. SANGER: We’ll resume with 5009-B, if we may.

(Whereupon, a portion of a DVD, Defendant’s Exhibit 5009-B, was played for the Court and jury.)

MR. SANGER: That’s the end of that disk. And we’ll put the next one in, with the Court’s permission.

THE COURT: Go right ahead.

MR. SANGER: For the record, this is 5009-C.

(Whereupon, a DVD, Defendant’s Exhibit 5009-C, was played for the Court and jury.)

THE COURT: We’ll go ahead and take the recess now while you set up the next tape.

(Recess taken.)

MR. SANGER: Yes, Your Honor. The clerk reminded me that we had not formally moved 5009-A, B and C into evidence. I think it was implicit in the Court’s ruling, but I want to officially do it on the record, if you may

THE COURT: You may.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

And we now have 5009-A which I will start, and it’s Sheriff’s 913-C.

(Whereupon, a portion of a DVD, Defendant’s Exhibit 5009-A, was played for the Court and jury.)

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I think there’s about four minutes left, but I could be wrong.

THE COURT: There’s no time left.

MR. SANGER: There’s no time left. That’s fine.

THE COURT: See you tomorrow at 8:30.

A JUROR: Thank you.

(The proceedings adjourned at 2:30 p.m.)

DEFENDANT’S WITNESSES	DIRECT	CROSS	REDIRECT	RECROSS
VELASCO, Carlos	9965-SA	9969-A	9971-SA
LEGRAND, David G.	9972-M

Santa Maria, California
Thursday, May 12, 2005
8:30 a.m.

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: Good morning, everyone.

COUNSEL AT COUNSEL TABLE: (In unison) Good morning, Your Honor.

THE COURT: According to the information I have, you intend to call Mr. Velasco next; is that right?

MR. SANGER: Your Honor -- whoa. Let me go to this one, Your Honor. I think I just destroyed government property. I'm sorry.

We have a few minutes left of this tape. I thought it was four or five. The District Attorney thought maybe there was ten left. Whatever it is, there's not much more.

We have the tape, and then Mr. Velasco next, and following that we're seeking to call Mr. LeGrand and Mr. Robinson. That's our proposed procedure.

Now, we received something on Mr. Robinson. Mr. Mesereau would respond to Mr. LeGrand. And if the Court permits, I would respond to what was just filed regarding Mr. Robinson.

THE COURT: Your next witness is Velasco, right?

MR. SANGER: Velasco. There's no issue with Mr. Velasco. It's going to be very brief.

THE COURT: Is that correct, District Attorney?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes, Your Honor.

I believe he will be a very brief witness.

THE COURT: You've worked that out.

MR. SANGER: I don’t think there was ever an issue with regard to Mr. Velasco. You’re thinking of Vivanco.

THE COURT: That’s a different person.

MR. SANGER: That’s a different person. We had agreed with I think the thrust of their motion. We filed a response this morning. Did you receive that, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes, it upsets me greatly.

MR. SANGER: Oh, I’m sorry.

THE COURT: No.

MR. SANGER: I’m kind of surprised. I don’t know why, which probably makes it even worse. I’m sorry. Okay.

THE COURT: You just stop and think about it.

MR. ZONEN: We haven’t received anything this morning.

MR. SANGER: Okay. That it’s this morning? Okay. I’ll have to think about it some more.

THE COURT: Yes, you better.

MR. SANGER: Vivanco is not for this morning. We were possibly, depending on what else happens, going to try to call him as early as this afternoon. But I’ll have to -- I’ll have to look back at the response and see what it is that upset the Court. And I apologize. I honestly don’t know. But Velasco is okay. And we have Robinson and LeGrand. Those are the issues I think we have to address, if that’s all right.

THE COURT: All right. Take up the issue on Robinson.

MR. SANGER: Yes. I think there is a failure to communicate or something. We went back and forth with e-mails. As I pointed out, we had discovered -- I’m talking like Mr. Auchincloss. We had provided in discovery a copy of the report. We have a Bates stamp number. We’ve shown it to counsel. It was, in fact, turned over -- Was it February?

MS. YU: 3rd.

MR. SANGER: 3rd. It was turned over in a timely fashion. He was, in fact, their witness. He was called before the grand jury and they also have tape-recorded statements of him.

Our statement, as I told Mr. Auchincloss, pretty much says that he says the same thing that he said to them and he said under oath. So there's a question of whether it would have to be turned over or not at all, but we did turn it over on February the 3rd. For some reason, they have some handwritten notes that were turned over at the same time, but Mr. Auchincloss said he wasn't able to locate the other. However, it was Bates stamped in the ordinary sequence and it was turned over. So I think we're fine on Robinson.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That is correct, Your Honor. We did have discovery of the Robinson report. Our clerks went through the files, the 40,000 pages that have been provided, and did not locate it. I just pointed out -- it was pointed out to me this morning the exact Bates stamp number. I've reviewed our database, and we do have a report on Christian Robinson, which I've just read.

We also -- I would just mention that the report does have several material facts or additions that were never mentioned in the transcript of the grand jury and the testimony of the grand jury or in the interviews with the police. So there are some new developments there. So I'm trying to get up to speed on Mr. Robinson right now.

If you'd like, I can address Mr. LeGrand's -- the issue concerning Mr. LeGrand. Counsel has just provided me with a LeGrand exhibit book, which I've had no opportunity to look at. I asked Mr. Mesereau if he intended to introduce these exhibits and he said yes, for the most part, he did intend to introduce most of them.

Mr. LeGrand. We've received hundreds and hundreds of pages of legal documents, many of them similar to what appears in this binder, but we have no idea where they came from, whether they represent complete files, partial files. Basic authentication issues. But I don't think those are of any particularly great moment.

We also know that Mr. LeGrand has had communications, or it appears from these very documents that he's had communication with Mr. Cochran and Mr. Geragos, former counsel, and yet there are no reports. So if counsel insists that they have never talked to Mr. LeGrand, we'd at least be entitled to find out how they obtained these documents and the chain of custody of them.

He's going to be a complicated witness. And it will probably take more than a day to cover his testimony. I anticipate that we'll have him on cross for quite some period of time given the defense exhibits. I anticipate the same from the defendant, so we are not prepared to go forward with Mr. LeGrand today.

THE COURT: Mr. Mesereau?

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, thank you, Your Honor.

Your Honor, I produced in December every document involving Mr. LeGrand that was in my possession. We had decided in December to waive the attorney-client privilege. Mr. Auchincloss has had all of these documents, including the ones in the binder, since December. He has known that we are waiving the privilege since December.

My approach, and I think it was the correct one, was that once we waived the privilege, all of Mr. LeGrand's correspondence, drafts, memorandum, documents in his possession that had been cc'd to him were statements, in effect. So I turned them over to the prosecution as what I believe were witness statements.

They have more witness statements from this particular witness than any witness that's going to appear in the case. And my examination of Mr. LeGrand is going to not differ or vary from what is contained in all of those witness statements. So I am rather shocked at the prosecutor's position, because he's had these things since last December, and he got probably ten binders' worth of documents. The issues they cover are very clear.

Everything from the Bashir litigation, to Dieter and Konitzer, to financial issues. In fact, as the Court may recall, when Mr. Auchincloss put an expert on the stand to deal with financial issues, some of the documents Mr. Auchincloss had him review and refer to were David LeGrand documents, so how he can possibly say he's not prepared, I don't understand.

Every document in this binder that he has, he has had since last December. And as I say, I think if you take the position that these are all witness statements, he has more witness statements than any other witness in the case. There's nothing to surprise him about. In fact, my cross-examination of his financial expert had to do with LeGrand documents that Mr. Auchincloss acknowledged he had. So I don't see -- after we decided to waive the privilege, everything was given to him, or given to the prosecution.

THE COURT: Counsel?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Just one remark. We're entitled to more than just exhibits. We're entitled to statements. If they have talked to Mr. LeGrand, we're entitled to discovery of what he said to the defense, and what he provided them, even in the transference of these documents. So to simply state that they can dump this box full of documents in our lap and give us no indication of where they came from or how they were produced or no indication of what they intend to adduce during the testimony of Mr. LeGrand, that we're just supposed to divine what his testimony will be from his complete files, is certainly not in accord with the discovery statutes. Particularly when they've had communications with him. Those communications are statements. They have to be documented, they have to be turned over, and that hasn't happened.

THE COURT: Mr. Mesereau?

MR. MESEREAU: Yes. I have not discussed his testimony with him.

I have had discussions about flight arrangements. And he's prepared to testify to that. Since I decided to waive the privilege, we've given him everything we had. And as I say, he has more witness statements than with anybody. And I don't think we're required to sit down with the prosecutors and fulfill their every desire to go through every document and tell them where they came from. The reality is virtually every document has a law firm name on it or an indication of where it came from, and the date, and the signature. I don't understand the objection.

THE COURT: All right. We'll go forward with the testimony. And based on that representation, if it appears during the course of the testimony that that's not accurate, we'll take it up then again. All right. We'll bring in the jury now.

MR. SANGER: Before you do that, can we just approach on one procedural matter? Do you want -- do you want me to do it? Okay. One procedural matter?

THE COURT: All right. Do you want to ask someone to come up, Mr. Sneddon?

MR. SNEDDON: I'm coming.

(Discussion held off the record at sidebar.)

THE COURT: All right. We'll have the jury come in.

(The following proceedings were held in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: Good morning.

THE JURY: (In unison) Good morning.

THE COURT: I hear you're getting special treats this week.

A JUROR: Yes.

THE COURT: Pretty good. Pretty good. All right. Counsel, you ready to proceed?

MR. SANGER: Yes. I always say that with some trepidation when I'm going to push a button here, but, I believe we left off at Exhibit 5009-C.

And we left off at counter 58:27, so I have it at 58:20. So there will be a repeat of seven seconds, and then we should finish the tape.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: If I may.

(Whereupon, a portion of a DVD, Defendant's Exhibit 5009-C, was played for the Court and jury.)

MR. SANGER: That is the end.

THE COURT: All right. Call your next witness.

MR. SANGER: Yes, Your Honor. We'll call Carlos Velasco, if we may, please.

While he's getting there, I'll give this to the clerk. More precisely is, returning Exhibit 5009 to the clerk.

THE COURT: You may remain standing. Face the clerk. Raise your right hand.

CARLOS VELASCO

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Carlos Velasco. Last name, V-e-l-a-s-c-o.

THE COURT: Can't hear him.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Okay, Mr. Velasco. Oh. It's real important to sit very close to the microphone. It's just the way it is in this courtroom. It's very hard to do. Every witness has a problem doing that.

A. Okay.

Q. Okay. Mr. Velasco, do you know the gentleman seated right there?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Who is that?

A. Michael Jackson.

Q. How do you know Michael Jackson?

A. My father worked for him for a long period of time. Still works for him. And I used to go to Family Day once a year.

Q. Okay.

BAILIFF CORTEZ: I'm sorry, sir. You're going to have --

Q. BY MR. SANGER: You have a soft voice. You have to speak even louder and right in the microphone, okay?

So your father -- you say your father worked for Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have occasion to go to Neverland Ranch yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. And on what occasions did you go to Neverland Ranch?

A. Family Day. I worked there twice. And that's basically it.

Q. Okay. So I heard you say "Family Day," and we've heard about that. That's where the employees can invite family members; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And so you went, spent the day, had a good time?

A. Yes.

Q. About how many times did you do that?

A. Around 20.

Q. Okay. And did I hear you say you were employed there?

A. Yeah.

Q. You just have to really speak up a little more. I know it's hard.

And what did you do while you were employed there?

A. I did groundskeeping.

Q. And roughly when was that that you were employed there?

A. About '97, '98. 1998.

Q. Okay. During the course of the time that you were employed at Neverland Ranch -- let me withdraw that. During the course of the time that you had contact with Neverland Ranch, as a guest, did you have occasion to meet a young man named Jason Francia?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you meet him at the ranch for the first time or did you meet him someplace else?

A. It was at the ranch.

Q. And on how many occasions did you see Jason Francia at the ranch?

A. Quite a few. I mean, especially during Family Day. Probably about four times.

Q. All right. And did you also get to know Jason Francia outside of Neverland?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And how was that?

A. Went to high school together.

Q. What high school was that?

A. Santa Maria High School.

Q. All right. Now, during the time that you spent with Jason Francia at the ranch, did you ever see Mr. Jackson there at the same time that you and Jason were there?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Jackson interact with Jason Francia in any inappropriate way whatsoever?

A. No.

Q. What kind of a relationship did Mr. Francia seem to have -- and at that time I guess he was younger, but we'll call him "Jason."

What kind of relationship did Jason have with Mr. Jackson, as far as you could tell?

A. Just a normal one. I mean --

Q. What kind of relationship did you have with Mr. Jackson?

A. Just a normal one.

Q. So was your relationship any different, as far as you could tell, from that of Mr. Francia?

A. No, it wasn't.

Q. All right. Now, during the time you were with Mr. Francia at the ranch and thereafter throughout high school in Santa Maria, did you ever hear Mr. Francia mention in any way anything inappropriate happening with Mr. Jackson?

A. No.

Q. And during high school, did you -- did you consider yourself friends with Jason?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you hang around with the same circle of friends?

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: Okay. No further questions.

THE COURT: Cross-examine?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Mr. Velasco, have you ever slept with Mr. Jackson?

A. No, I haven’t.

Q. Has that ever occurred to you, to sleep with Mr. Jackson?

A. Never.

Q. Did you ever want to sleep with Mr. Jackson?

A. No.

Q. Do you believe child molest victims normally broadcast the fact that they’re victims to their high school peers?

MR. SANGER: Objection. Beyond the scope of direct and no foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your testimony is that you never heard that Jason Francia -- or Jason Francia never told you that he was molested by Mr. Jackson?

A. Correct.

Q. You have seen Mr. Jackson interact with Jason Francia, true?

A. Well, he talked to all of us. It wasn’t just specifically him.

Q. Okay. My question was, have you seen Jason Francia interact with Michael Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. Jason Francia was friend of Mr. Jackson’s, true?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you have any idea whatsoever whether Jason Francia was molested by Michael Jackson?

MR. SANGER: Objection. Calls for an opinion without foundation; beyond the scope of direct.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: No.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You have no idea?

A. (Shakes head from side to side.)

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you. No further questions.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. All right. Did you see or hear anything that suggested to you in any way that Jason Francia was molested by Michael Jackson?

A. Never.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you. No further questions.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: No questions.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.

Call your next witness.

MR. MESEREAU: The defense is going to call David LeGrand, Your Honor.

While we’re getting ready, I have an exhibit book for the Court as well as the witness. If I may approach.

THE COURT: You may.

Are these marked?

MR. MESEREAU: They are not.

THE COURT: How are you going to proceed?

MR. MESEREAU: I was going to take the witness through the exhibits and then mark them appropriately as the Court would like to do.

THE COURT: You’ll need to mark them when you show him the exhibits so that the record accurately reflects what you're showing.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

THE COURT: Come forward, sir.

MR. MESEREAU: Pardon me.

THE COURT: When you get to the witness stand, please remain standing.

Face the clerk here and raise your right hand.

DAVID G. LEGRAND

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: My name is David G. LeGrand. It's L-e, capital G-r-a-n-d.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Good morning, Mr. LeGrand.

A. Good morning.

Q. You are an attorney, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you practice in Las Vegas, Nevada, right?

A. Yes.

Q. At one point you were an attorney for Michael Jackson, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And for the record, Mr. Jackson is the fellow sitting at counsel table, right?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you begin representing Mr. Jackson?

A. I think it was late January 2002, I believe.

Q. And approximately when did you cease representing Mr. Jackson, just approximately?

A. Well, my services were terminated on about March 28th of that year. I think it's '02. I've lost track of time. It may have been ‘03. I think it was ‘03, actually. And then I was re-engaged for one specific case that I continued to manage on his behalf until around September of ‘04.

Q. And you still are a practicing attorney, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you please give a summary of your educational background?

A. I’m a -- I have a bachelor of arts degree from Duke University and a JD from the Ohio State University College of Law.

Q. Would you please just summarize your career as an attorney?

A. Following graduation from law school, I was employed at the Ohio Division of Securities as an enforcement attorney for the State of Ohio Department of Commerce, Division of Securities, for about two years. And then for about a year I was counsel to the commissioner of the Ohio Division of Securities. I subsequently entered private practice in 1982.

Q. Now, you said you were an enforcement attorney. Would you please explain what that means?

A. I was responsible for investigating complaints with regards to violations of state securities law and preparing appropriate recommendations to the Attorney General for civil and/or criminal action. Criminal action would be through a state prosecutor.

Q. Now, were you in effect a prosecutor yourself?

A. Actually, I -- for a time I was sworn as an assistant county prosecutor in Franklin County, Ohio, working with the white-collar crime division.

Q. What kind of cases were you prosecuting in -- when you had that job?

A. Securities fraud.

Q. Okay. And what is securities fraud?

A. Securities fraud is -- a typical example would be where money is raised by promoters for investments where the disclosures by the promoters are less than accurate. You know, deceptive, fraudulent misrepresentations for the purpose of obtaining money from others.

Q. You're talking about prosecuting primarily financial-related crimes, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you indicated you did some investigating work in one of the prosecuting offices; is that true?

A. Well, my role as an enforcement attorney was to do investigatory work. And then typically we would hand the case over to the Attorney General's Office for civil action or a county prosecutor for criminal action. And then being sworn as an assistant county prosecutor, I was able to assist the prosecutor's office in making the grand jury presentations.

Q. What -- could you give some examples of some of the cases you were involved in prosecuting?

A. The most significant case I was involved in involved oil and gas promotion, and we obtained a plea on six felony counts of misrepresentations in connection with the sale of securities.

I was also involved in a case involving some art tax shelters. And I worked with a federal task force on a coal mine fraud out of West Virginia, where there were victims in Ohio.

Q. And how long were you a prosecuting attorney?

A. Well, I was sworn as an assistant county prosecutor in Franklin County I believe for about a year. It might have been a year and a half. I'm really not sure today. It's been, you know, more than 20 years ago.

Q. And how long were you associated with any prosecuting office?

A. It would have been the same time period.

Q. After you were a prosecutor prosecuting financial-related crimes, what did you do next?

A. I entered private practice in 1982.

Q. And have you been in private practice ever since?

A. Yes.

Q. When you were representing Michael Jackson, were you associated with any law firm?

A. Yes. I was with the firm of Hale Lane Peek Dennison and Howard in Las Vegas, Nevada.

Q. And did you have a specialty?

A. We don’t use the term “specialty.” The Nevada Supreme Court frowns upon that type of terminology. My practice emphasizes corporate and transactional work. But I don’t claim to be a specialist.

Q. All right. And when you were representing Mr. Jackson, was the work you did primarily corporate and transactional work?

A. Yes.

Q. How did you begin to represent Mr. Jackson?

A. I was introduced to Mr. Jackson through a gentleman named Ronald Konitzer.

Q. Had you known Mr. Konitzer for some time?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you meet Mr. Konitzer, approximately?

A. I’m not sure. It was sometime in the early to mid-1990s.

Q. And had you done any legal work for him?

A. Yes. I represented a company he was associated with.

Q. And which company was that?

A. Hi-Tec America, I think was the name.

Q. And how long did you represent Hi-Tec America?

A. You know, it was a couple of years off and on. And then the -- I really hadn’t heard from Ronald for a couple of years. We might have exchanged Christmas cards, but I wasn’t actively providing legal service to him in -- you know, when he contacted me, I think it was in 2002.

Q. Now, did you represent Mr. Jackson personally?

A. Eventually, yes.

Q. And what do you mean by that?

A. Well, the engagement with Mr. Jackson was for -- with him, yes, in January, I think it was January ‘03.

Q. And did you represent any companies associated with Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. Which companies were they?

A. Well, there was MJJ Productions. I believe there’s a company associated with the ranch. There’s another company that I can’t remember the name that has to do with some of his creative work. I really don’t remember the names of all the companies, but there were two -- you know, three or four.

Q. And at the time you were representing Mr. Jackson and companies associated with Mr. Jackson, did you consider yourself his primary transactional attorney?

A. Yes.

Q. Why is that?

A. At the time I was engaged, part of the conversation and plan was to basically bring in a new team to represent Mr. Jackson. Part of that process involved terminating some of the representation of people that had been providing legal service to him and bringing, you know, fresh blood to the representation.

Q. And you mentioned January of 2003. Was that the approximate time this activity was going on?

A. Well, that’s when it began. I mean, it -- this process took time.

Q. So approximately January of 2003 efforts were made to bring in a new team to represent Mr. Jackson; is that what you’re saying?

A. Yes. A new set of lawyers, accountants and professionals.

Q. Now, was this your idea?

A. No.

Q. Whose idea was it?

A. It was communicated to me by --
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Hearsay; foundation.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: It was communicated to me by both Mr. Konitzer and by Mr. Jackson.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And when you began to bring in a new team to represent Mr. Jackson, what is the first thing you did?
A. The initial focus was to assemble a group of lawyers to respond to the pending presentation of the Martin Bashir video in the UK. I spoke to a number of different lawyers, including partners in my firm, and within, oh, a day or two, we -- I had Mr. Jackson on a teleconference with lawyers in the United Kingdom, as well as the United States, to discuss the possibilities of responding to the pending production in the UK by Martin Bashir and Granada.

Q. What was the concern about the Bashir documentary, as far as you were concerned?
A. That no one, from Mr. Jackson’s perspective, had been given the opportunity to review the final edited production work. That was a concern. We had no idea what was going to be presented in the UK. There were clips that were being broadcast as promotion, but the substance of the program was an unknown.
Q. Now, how did you become aware of these clips that were being used to promote the documentary?
A. I’m not sure today. There were people -- friends of Michael in the UK, I’m sure, who saw them. I really don’t know.
Q. Well, are you saying that there was a concern about what was going to be in the Bashir documentary before it actually aired?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay.
A. And there was news -- I remember there was news press in the United States about these clips and there was a lot of buzz being generated nationally and internationally about this.

Q. This is still in January of 2003; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And what did you see your job as being when it came to responding to these promotional clips? What exactly were you trying to do?

A. Well, my -- first, you know, as an attorney seeking to represent my client, I engaged professionals with knowledge of, you know, copyright law, contract law, to analyze the agreements and to try to put together a plan of action and alternatives, try to identify the costs associated with taking action, trying to figure out who would be appropriate to contact at Granada to discuss the concerns, and try to take positive action on behalf of Mr. Jackson and his family.

Q. And was there a concern that the promotional clips indicated that there was going to be a documentary before Mr. Jackson or anyone associated with Mr. Jackson had a chance to look at it?

A. Yes. That was clearly a concern.

Q. Okay. What did you do in response?

A. Well, I worked with the Paul Hastings law firm out of Los Angeles, and their firm in the UK. We engaged a barrister, a noted barrister in the UK, Sir Andrew Hochhousler I believe is his name. We engaged a solicitor in the UK. We had several attorneys here in the U.S., Mr. Genga from the Paul Hastings firm, Mr. Joss from the Paul Hastings firm. We reviewed what documents -- the few -- very few documents that existed with respect to Mr. Jackson and Mr. Bashir. We discussed the events that led to the filming with Mr. Jackson.

We ultimately decided upon a course of action that resulted in a lawsuit being filed in the UK against Granada and Mr. Bashir on behalf of Mr. Jackson. And in connection with that lawsuit, Granada entered into a court order agreeing to a number of terms that we had sought that -- you know, that group of lawyers had sought, including that there would be no DVDs produced of the televisual production. There would be no VHS. That they would not use the outtakes to create a second program. I mean, these sorts of things were negotiated over a period of weeks and ultimately agreed to and put into the form of a court order in the United Kingdom.

Q. Now, you mentioned someone named Granada. Who is that?

A. The only person that I recall associated with Granada was Martin Bashir, and I’m not sure if he was an employee or independent contractor at that time.

Q. Maybe my question was poor. What is Granada?

A. Oh. My understanding, Granada is a very large broadcasting company. It’s like an ABC or CBS, in the UK. They own and generate television productions in both UK and I believe in, you know, Europe.

Q. Now, the lawsuit was filed in England; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was filed on behalf of Mr. Jackson, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And you mentioned that there were very few documents involving the Bashir documentary. What do you mean?

A. The only -- there were only two pieces of paper that Mr. Jackson provided to the lawyers with respect to the Martin Bashir broadcast. They were basically two separate pieces of paper signed at two different times, consisting of a little over a paragraph on each piece of paper, and that apparently represented the total contractual arrangement with respect to the production of the Bashir/Granada video.

Q. Did it appear that Mr. Jackson had gotten any legal advice before he entered into this project with Bashir?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Speculation; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Was it your understanding that Mr. Jackson had had any legal representation when he entered into any arrangement with Mr. Bashir?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Same objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you know whether or not, before Mr. Jackson did the Bashir documentary, any lawyer had represented him?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Same -- same objection.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer that “yes” or “no.” If you can’t answer that “yes” or “no,” tell me.

THE WITNESS: It’s difficult to answer “yes” or “no,” Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Then I’ll sustain the objection to the question.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Had you yourself documented any transactions involving television documentaries in your career before representing Mr. Jackson?

A. No.

Q. Did you have any understanding of what kind of documents one would typically execute and sign before doing a T.V. documentary at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was your understanding about the typical types of documents one executes before doing a television documentary?

A. There are typically fairly extensive agreements that would document ownership of copyright, licensing, you know, national, international royalties, you know, method -- there’s just a host of issues that would typically be addressed with a persona of the magnitude of Mr.

Jackson and a production of this type.

Q. And when you began to represent Mr. Jackson and when you started looking into the circumstances surrounding the Bashir documentary, did you see any of those documents you just described?

A. No.

Q. Did you form an opinion about the kinds of documents Mr. Jackson had signed before he did the Bashir documentary?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; calls for a conclusion.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: The two documents reflecting Mr. Jackson’s agreement with Granada were terrible contracts. They were vague. They lacked, you know, precision, detail. There were numerous provisions that simply were not addressed. They were very simple, you know, one-paragraph documents.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever determine who had drafted those documents?

A. I believe Martin Bashir drafted them.

Q. Was it your understanding that Mr. Bashir --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object and move to strike. Lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: No personal knowledge.

THE COURT: Sustained. Stricken.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever learn who had drafted those documents?

A. I honestly don’t recall today.

Q. Okay.

A. I’m sorry.

Q. You reviewed -- was it two documents?

A. Yes.

Q. And what were those two documents?

A. They were one-page -- they each consisted of one piece of paper, one page each, and they, you know, to my recollection, were one, maybe two paragraphs. They were very short. And they basically granted the rights to Granada to make a televisual production based on the life of Mr.

Jackson as he knew it.

Q. Did it appear to you that Mr. Jackson had been taken advantage of by Mr. Bashir?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Improper opinion; calls for a conclusion.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When you looked at these documents and you learned about the circumstances surrounding the development of the Bashir documentary, did you form any conclusion about whether or not Mr. Jackson understood what he was doing?

A. I found it hard to believe that this -- that these two pieces --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object to the answer being more than “yes” or “no.”

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You spoke to Mr. Jackson at one point about the making of the Bashir documentary, right?

A. Yes.

Q. You spoke to lawyers in England about the legality surrounding that documentary, true?

A. Yes.

Q. You hired lawyers in America to explore what had happened in the making of that documentary, correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Is that true?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it one of the most poorly documented television transactions you’d ever seen?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Leading; calls for a conclusion.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I really had no background, you know, adequate to assess that. However, Mr. Genga from the Paul Hastings firm and -- was, I would say, shocked by the --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m going to object. Move to strike; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained. Stricken.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: What was your legal position in the lawsuit that was filed in England on behalf of Mr. Jackson?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; vague.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I was primarily responsible for managing, coordinating and facilitating the trial lawyers, the solicitors, the U.S. and UK components of the -- of the lawyers. We also had a firm in the UK called Bell Yard that was a public relations firm that was hired through, I believe, one of the UK solicitors.

And my primary role was to assist in formulating a plan, tactics, coordinating the delivery of the legal services by the different components. We needed witness statements. We needed, you know, background material. We needed research. I would -- my primary role was really a facilitator or manager of the other lawyers.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And what was Mr. Jackson’s legal position, as you understood it, in the lawsuit filed in England?

A. Well, this has been a few years. The claims were that Mr. Bashir, and through Mr. Bashir Granada, misrepresented to Mr. Jackson what they were going to accomplish in this production.

Mr. Jackson had told me that Mr. Bashir had promised him the right to screen and edit the final production before it went on to -- you know, on the air.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m going to object and move to strike that last sentence as hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained. It’s nonresponsive.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: I’m just asking you to testify, as best you can recall, the legal position lawyers took on behalf of Mr. Jackson in that suit in England against Bashir.

A. Well, we took the position that Granada did not own the copyright. We asserted that they had a license, rather than ownership. We were seeking custody and ownership of all the video. We were seeking to limit the after-market production, you know, VHS or DVDs. And seek damages from Granada for breach of their agreement with Mr. Jackson.

Q. And was most of the agreement you were claiming was breached oral understandings, as opposed to written?

A. Well, certainly some.

Q. When you looked at what you described as a few documents that Mr. Jackson had signed involving the Bashir documentary, do you recall seeing anything about compensation?

A. I'm not sure if it was in the document or not. Mr. Jackson did not seek compensation for the production. But he did expect a significant donation to a charity.

Q. So basically Mr. Jackson worked with Mr. Bashir for free, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Bashir and his company were standing to make millions on this show, true?

A. To the best of my knowledge, yes.

Q. To your knowledge, was this documentary distributed around the world?

A. Yes.

Q. To your knowledge, did Mr. Jackson get anything financially from this distribution around the world?

A. No.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled. The answer is in. Next question.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You said you were monitoring the lawyers who litigated the case in England, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And in the course of monitoring those lawyers, what were you doing?

A. I was reviewing draft documents, pleadings, serving as, you know, a facilitator of the conference calls that we were having on a fairly frequent basis, especially in about the first four to six weeks of dealing with Granada. These were extensive conferences where we would discuss the legal position. There was kind of a letter campaign going on back and forth between the UK lawyers and the lawyers for Granada, and we would review, as a group, those letters and assess responses, circulate responses, collaboratively edit and ultimately issue responsive documents.

Q. Was there a lot of media attention devoted to this lawsuit in England?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there media attention in the United States devoted to Mr. Jackson’s lawsuit against Bashir?

A. Yes, though I would say not quite as much as in the UK. But, yes.

Q. And how long did this litigation last, if you remember?

A. It is still going on today. It is on hold. But it is still a record case in England, as far as I know.

Q. And are you still involved in that case in any way?

A. No.

Q. Okay. So you’re the one who hired the lawyers who represented Mr. Jackson in that suit, correct?

A. I would say Mr. Jackson hired the lawyers. I was the facilitator in suggesting that these particular lawyers be engaged for this purpose.

Q. And who contacted the lawyers for possible engagement?

A. I did. Well, I did. I had an acquaintance over a number of years with Mr. Eric Joss from the Paul Hastings law firm here -- well, in Los Angeles. And so I asked Eric Joss if his firm would be able to provide representation. He then also spoke to lawyers. I mean, it wasn't -- this wasn't all me. This was a number of lawyers on two continents. And so I relied upon, you know -- we all relied upon each other as counsel to Mr. Jackson to collaboratively assess and assemble a group of lawyers that had, you know, the skill and background to be appropriate for this type of litigation.

Q. Do you recall what Bashir's position was in that lawsuit? What was he claiming?

A. Well, I don't know about Bashir. I know that Granada claimed that they owned the copyright. They ultimately did agree not to use the outtakes for a second production. They agreed to veil the faces of the children, to do some blurring in the airing of the video to protect Mr. Jackson's family. So there were concessions made by Granada. Their basic position was they owned the copyright and they had the unequivocal right to produce the production without any input or editing from Mr. Jackson.

Q. And without paying Mr. Jackson a penny, right?

A. Correct.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You mentioned a concern about his children's -- excuse me. Let me rephrase that.

You mentioned a concern about Michael Jackson's children's faces being on the show. What are you referring to?

A. Part of the film that Mr. Bashir had included filming of Mr. Jackson's children. That's what I meant.

Q. Was Mr. Jackson upset about that?

A. He was concerned about their visual image being shown worldwide without, you know, blurring or some other technique to obscure their faces.

Q. Do you know why?

A. Well, he's concerned about their safety and security.

Q. And was blurring their faces one of the issues that was heavily litigated in England in that suit?

A. I’m not sure I would use the term “heavily litigated.” But it was a significant point in the discussions with Granada and ultimately one of the terms that Granada agreed to.

Q. Was it Mr. Jackson’s position in that lawsuit that Bashir had agreed to not display Mr. Jackson’s children’s faces before it aired, to your knowledge?

A. I remember statements to that effect. I’m not sure exactly when or where in the context.

Q. The overall thrust of the case was that Bashir had completely hoodwinked Mr. Jackson, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Leading.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Was the thrust of the lawsuit that Mr. Bashir had made numerous misrepresentations to Mr. Jackson about the show?

A. Yes.

Q. What else did you do personally in that litigation, other than what you’ve described?

A. I’m not sure, Mr. Mesereau, what you mean by that.

Q. Do you recall who the parties were in the case?

A. I know we had Mr. Jackson. Simultaneous to the lawsuit there was -- there were complaints filed. The same UK lawyers also indicated there was the potential to file complaints with I believe it’s the British Broadcasting Board. There’s a board that oversees televisual broadcasts in the UK. And the recommendation was, and ultimately there were filed, several complaints with the broadcasting board. Those complaints were filed on behalf of Mr. Jackson and also on behalf of, I believe it was, the Arvizo children, and I’m not sure if Mrs. Arvizo was included or not. But there were -- there was a complaint filed on behalf of them. There was also discussion at least of filing a complaint on behalf of Mr. Moslehi, Hamid, because I believe he appeared without consent as well. There was issues over consent to the appearance of various people and so there were complaints filed with the Broadcasting Standards Board.

Q. When you say “Broadcasting Standards Board” in England, are you referring to an administrative agency that regulates television production?

A. Yes.

Q. And is that an agency that monitors to see whether or not ethical standards are met in television production in England?

A. That was my understanding, yes, sir.

Q. And when you say complaints were filed with that agency, about what Bashir had done?

A. Yes.

Q. And they were filed on behalf of the Arvizo family as well as Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. There was considerable publicity surrounding those complaints, wasn’t there?

A. Yes, I believe so.

Q. And there were media reports on the Arvizos when those complaints were made, correct?

A. I’m sure there were.

Q. This is in January of 2003?

A. Well, we’re probably well into February now.

Q. Okay. Certainly it was a media event that Mr. Jackson and the Arvizos had sued Granada and Bashir and filed complaints against Granada and Bashir, correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Yes. The media seems to be fascinated with Mr. Jackson and those complaints were the subject of some media attention.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Do you recall yourself being contacted by representatives of the media in this litigation?

A. I was contacted by members of the media on a repeated basis with respect to Mr. Jackson, whether it was as to the litigation or otherwise. There was seemingly significant interest by the media in seeking statements from me or anyone associated with me.

Q. Was this media attention that you experienced -- this happened throughout your representation of Mr. Jackson?

A. It tailed off. It was especially acute during the -- I’d say the, I don’t know, three, four weeks of February when we were moving forward with the Granada action, and negotiating with FOX over the “Take 2” type of video.

Q. So would it be correct to state that in February of 2003, because of the litigation you were involved in and the complaints that had been filed against Bashir, there was tremendous media attention on Mr. Jackson?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object. Leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Were you involved in efforts to respond to this media attention on behalf of Mr. Jackson?

A. As I indicated, I worked with, you know, Mr. Jackson to engage a number of lawyers and professionals to respond to the Granada broadcast, to respond to the media attention. There was a PR firm in the UK, Bell Yard, that was hired to work on, you know, media pieces. So, yeah, I was involved, but that was not my -- you know, I’m a lawyer. My primary focus was not dealing with the media.

Q. Did you hire Bell Yard?

A. Well, I didn’t. But they were hired through the solicitors in the UK.

Q. And what is a solicitor?

A. As I understand it, in the United Kingdom, there are two types of lawyers. Barristers who go to trial and solicitors who do documents and transactions and business-type dealings. So it takes -- you kind of need both in anything complex that involves the potential of trial. Barristers actually appear in court.

THE COURT: All right. Let’s take our break.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: Go ahead, Counsel.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. Mr. LeGrand, you mentioned that a new management team was being formed to manage Mr. Jackson's affairs around the time you began to represent Mr. Jackson, right?

A. Part of my direction from Mr. Jackson and Mr. Konitzer was to assist them in developing a new team for cash management, accounting, bookkeeping, and new lawyers with respect to creative elements.

Q. Did you have a lot of contact with Mr. Jackson?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object as vague.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: At different times during the three or four months that I was most active in representation, it would vary. I mean, when we were focused on the Granada pieces, you know, we had some telephone conferences. The first conference was a couple of hours. At other times my communication with Mr. Jackson was much more brief.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And who was ultimately part of the new management team?

A. Well, the cash management -- initially a company - and I don’t remember the name, but the principals were Ed Grossman and Michael Stern - were selected to cake over cash management from Barry Siegel. That ultimately was changed in a few weeks.

And the firm of -- it’s -- well, it’s Allan Whitman. I’m not sure of the firm name. It’s Fox, Marty Fox, Whitman, and another couple partners.

Q. And were you communicating with Mr. Konitzer in this regard?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Were you communicating with Mr. Weizner in this regard?

A. Less so, but yes.

Q. And was it your impression that Mr. Konitzer and Mr. Weizner were trying to take over the management of Mr. Jackson’s business?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it your impression that they wanted Mr. Jackson kept out of a lot of the day-to-day discussions?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you consider Mr.

Jackson to be very sophisticated in financial or legal matters?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you have daily discussions with Konitzer?
A. During the time period from the end of January until, I would say, mid-March there were probably a few days that I did not have a conversation with Mr. Konitzer.

Q. And do you recall Mr. Konitzer communicating that no one was to contact Mr. Jackson directly but him?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.
THE COURT: Overruled.
THE WITNESS: No. I was never instructed by Mr. Konitzer that I could not contact Mr. Jackson.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you recall Mr. Konitzer sending memos around basically saying Mr. Jackson is to be kept out of the daily detail?
A. Not specifically. I just remember that Mr. Konitzer wanted to be --
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; not responsive.
MR. MESEREAU: I think it is responsive.
THE COURT: Sustained. I'll strike after, "Not specifically."
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: What were Mr. Konitzer's directives to you with respect to whether or not Mr. Jackson was to be involved in the detail of management?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.
THE COURT: Overruled.
THE WITNESS: Mr. Konitzer wanted to serve Mr. Jackson as the overall manager of business affairs for Mr. Jackson, and that Mr. Jackson would have ultimate authority and decision-making, but that Mr. Konitzer would serve as, you know, the day-to-day manager, and that was my understanding.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And did you discuss legal matters involving Mr. Jackson with Mr. Konitzer?

A. Yes.
Q. And how often during that period of time do you think you did that?
A. There were legal matters discussed. There were financial matters discussed. There were business considerations discussed. Sometimes, you know, that would be two or three times a day. Sometimes we would have meetings. And, you know, there were a few days where I did not speak to Mr. Konitzer during this couple of months of somewhat frenzied activity.
Q. Now, at some point in time did you become suspicious of Mr. Konitzer and Mr. Weizner?
A. Yes.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Well, move to strike. Leading.
THE COURT: Overruled.
MR. MESEREAU: I can’t recall if there was an answer, Your Honor. I apologize. Could I --
THE COURT: The answer was, “Yes.”
MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.
Q. Why did you become suspicious of Konitzer and Weizner?
A. I became concerned that they were in a position to divert funds. I was concerned about the -- having appropriate documentation for tax purposes for Mr. Jackson and his companies. And in general, I -- I began to disagree with some of Mr. Konitzer’s decisions on matters and felt that he was making bad decisions, I guess is the way to say it. So I -- I became suspicious of his motives and actions.

Q. Could you please explain what you were suspicious of?
A. I was --
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You mentioned you were suspicious of financial matters involving Konitzer, right?
A. Yes.

Q. Please explain.

A. Well, ultimately there was another attorney involved who was serving as the escrow agent for some funds, and I asked him for an accounting in order to get Allan Whitman up to speed on some disbursements, payments, payables, et cetera. And that accounting came from this attorney, and it indicated that there had been about $900,000 -- I don't remember the exact number, but it was many hundreds of thousands of dollars that had been disbursed to Ronald Konitzer or Dieter Weizner. I mean, the combination was in hundreds of thousands of dollars.

And I then -- I spoke to a couple of the lawyers that, you know, were providing representation, and I ultimately wrote a letter within, you know, a couple of days of learning of this. I wrote a letter to Mr. Konitzer asking him to account for this money.

Q. Was the amount you were concerned about approximately $965,000?

A. Yeah, without seeing it today. But that sounds like approximately the right number, yes.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I show you your letter?

A. Yes, it would.

MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: May I see what you've got there, Counsel?

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Mr. LeGrand, have you had a chance to review that document?

A. Yes.

Q. Does it refresh your recollection about your concerns involving Mr. Konitzer?

A. Yes, the amount -- the aggregate amount of disbursements that I set forth in that letter was $965,000.

Q. And where did that amount come from, if you remember?

A. I believe the source of that funds was the FOX -- some of the FOX payments with regard to the “Take 2” video production.

Q. Did you ever get a response to your expression of concern?

A. Yes.

Q. What was it?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Hearsay; foundation.

THE COURT: I think the question is vague. I can’t rule on the objection.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

Q. You mentioned the rebuttal show, correct?

A. “Take 2,” yes.

Q. Please explain what “Take 2” was.

A. “Take 2” was a video production produced in collaboration with FOX. Brad Lachman Productions produced -- was primary -- they were FOX’s primary representatives for the production. Maury Povich was the narrator.

It largely consisted of video of Debbie Rowe from her interview with, I think it was Ian Drew at The Globe, and video of -- shot by Hamid Moslehi. I’m not sure how to pronounce his name. But it was video shot by Hamid that was outtakes, so to speak, or video shot of Bashir with Michael. Some of it was video of Martin Bashir filming Michael Jackson, or filming at Neverland, or, you know, but that was -- two primary components was those two sets of video.

Q. And were you involved in the production of that product?

A. Well, you know, I’m a lawyer. I’m not a videographer, editor or a graphic artist. We -- I facilitated -- again, I brought in -- I hired a law firm to do copyright work with respect to that video. One of my associates in the firm, a lady named Ann-Marie Levy, was coordinating most of the copyright work between this other firm and Brad Lachman’s in-house lawyer on copyrights and the FOX people.

I ultimately negotiated the contract with

FOX. I believe it was -- Marisa Fermin was the vice-president of FOX that I worked with to get a contract for that production.

Q. And was it your understanding that Konitzer and Weizner had a role in that production?

A. They were involved in the discussions as to the contract, the terms of the contract. At least Ronald Konitzer reviewed the draft agreements, and I discussed them with him. I'm not sure -- well, I don't know what all his involvement was. I mean, Mr. Konitzer had things he did that didn't directly involve me, so --

Q. Why did you think Konitzer and Weizner had stolen $965,000 from Mr. Jackson?

A. Well, because --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'll object as misstates the evidence in terms of the word "stolen."

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Why did you think Konitzer and Weizner had diverted $965,000 from Mr. Jackson?

A. Because the report I got from this other lawyer showed those disbursements.

Q. And when you saw the record of those disbursements, what did you do?

A. I spoke to several of the other lawyers that were representing Mr. Jackson, and agreed that I should write a letter to Mr. Konitzer asking him to account.

Q. Did you ever find out what he had done with the money?

A. No, I was terminated by Mr. Jackson as counsel within, I don't know, two weeks, maybe, of that letter to Mr. Konitzer.

Q. Did you ever have Konitzer, Weizner -- excuse me. Let me start with something else.
Do you know who someone named Marc Schaffel is?

A. Yes.

Q. And who is Marc Schaffel, to your knowledge?

A. Marc Schaffel is an independent producer. He had worked on one of Mr. Jackson's albums at one point. He was involved in working with Brad Lachman Productions to create the “Take 2” video.

Q. At some point, did you have Schaffel, Konitzer and Weizner investigated?

A. I -- again, on behalf of Mr. Jackson, I engaged an independent private investigative company, and asked them to investigate the backgrounds of Mr. Konitzer and Mr. Weizner and Mr. Schaffel.

Q. Why?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; improper opinion.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Because I was suspicious of their motives, and some of their statements didn’t quite seem to add up.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you think they were stealing from Mr. Jackson?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Improper opinion; no foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: What did you do to have Schaffel, Konitzer and Weizner investigated?

A. Working with one of my partners at Hale Lane who had the -- he’s a former U.S. Assistant Prosecutor and had good relationships with a couple of private investigating firms, we selected a firm, got them a retainer and asked them to do background checks and let us know what they found.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Now, you say your partner was an assistant prosecutor. What do you mean?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevancy.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You hired an investigative firm, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. To start investigating these people, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And others involving Mr. Jackson, right?

A. Yes.

Q. You were doing it on behalf of Mr. Jackson,

correct?

A. Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled. The answer is in. Next question.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Were you doing this to protect Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you the one who arranged for the investigative firm to do this investigation?

A. My partner Mr. Gibson and I did, yes.

Q. Okay.

A. He actually had the primary contact with the investigative firm.

Q. Did you know whether or not Konitzer or

Weizner had managed to sign documents for Mr. Jackson?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; vague.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you know what a power of attorney is?

A. Yes.

Q. What is a power of attorney?

A. A power of attorney is a legal document authorizing one person to act in the place and stead of another.

Q. And does a power of attorney allow one to sign on behalf of someone else?

A. It can.

Q. Did you ever learn whether or not Mr. Jackson had given a power of attorney to either of these two people?

A. Yes, I believe he did.

Q. Did that concern you?

A. Yes.

Q. Why?

A. I was concerned that they could abuse that power or exceed the authority of the power.

Q. Did you do anything about that?

A. Yes. I spoke to some of the other lawyers that were representing Mr. Jackson, and we agreed that we would ask Mr. Jackson to revoke the power of attorney.

Q. Was that done?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, at some point, you learned that Konitzer had arranged to have you terminated, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Hearsay; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Was the investigation going on when your duties were terminated?

A. I'm not sure of the exact timing. I'm just not sure today. It's been a couple years.

Q. Okay. Now, your former partner and you were both former prosecutors, correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Was the investigation into Konitzer, Weizner and Schaffel conducted by you and your partner?

A. Mr. Gibson, my partner, and I discussed the need for some investigative background material. We agreed it was appropriate, and we engaged the investigative firm on behalf of Mr. Jackson.

Q. And when your services were terminated, do you know if that investigation was still going on?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Who chose the investigative firm?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Where was the investigative firm located?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevancy.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Again, recollection, I believe they were based in New York.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever meet Janet Arvizo?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know approximately when that was?

A. I was at Neverland in early February of 2003, the day the 60 Minutes film crew was there. And I met Janet Arvizo during that day. I was there for most of a Saturday at the ranch.

Q. Did you have much contact with her that day?

A. Not much. I mean, we spoke. You know, introduced ourselves. There were a lot of people in and out of the ranch that day. We had an entire film crew. There was -- Mr. Geragos was there with one of his associate lawyers. Mr. Konitzer was there. Mr. Weizner was -- I think Mr. Weizner was there. I’m not sure anymore. It was quite a zoo, so to speak.

Q. And what were your impressions of Ms. Arvizo on that particular day?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you see Mrs. Arvizo at Neverland on that particular day?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you speak to her?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you speak to her at length?

A. I don’t think so.

Q. Did you see her throughout the day?

A. Saw her off and on.

Q. Okay. Did she appear upset to you?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you observe her demeanor on that particular day?

A. Yes.

Q. What were your observations?

A. She seemed satisfied with being there. She expressed support for Mr. Jackson. That was pretty much what I recall.

Q. Did you see any other members of her family at Neverland on that particular day?

A. I saw Gavin Arvizo and a young lady, I think her name is Star. And then there was I believe Gavin's brother, but I don't recall his name. They were just kind of running around. I mean, literally. They'd be boisterous kids running through the house, and then burst out a door and go somewhere.

Gavin indicated he had been riding bumper cars and having a pretty good time that morning.

Q. Do you recall whether or not you discussed the lawsuit in England with Mrs. Arvizo?

A. I really don't recall that. I'm just not sure where we were in the lawsuit time frame. There was so much going on.

Q. Were there any representatives of the media at Neverland on that particular day?

A. Oh, just Ed Bradley and the entire film crew for 60 Minutes.

Q. And did Mrs. Arvizo appear to be in the proximity of Ed Bradley and the 60 Minutes crew?

A. Oh, yes. I mean, I remember at one point we were kind of seated near the kitchen. There's a video screen/T.V. on the wall. Nickelodeon was playing. And Mrs. Arvizo was sitting on the couch, and I think it was Michael -- I think it was Michael Rodesky. I'm not sure of the exact name, but he was like a real production-type guy, and his assistant, a woman, they were sitting on the couch.

And I was kind of -- I was there for just a few minutes, and then I left the room. But I know -- I saw them later. They were all still sitting there, so --

Q. Did you have any communication with Ms. Arvizo after that date?

A. I'm not sure. There was some phone calls later, a few weeks later. There was some phone calls about the execution of some releases that I had drafted, and I'm not sure if I spoke to Mrs. Arvizo or not.

Q. Do you recall --

A. It was like, you know, ten or eleven o’clock at night, I believe. 10:00 at night. And I’d had, you know -- I was living at that point on about four or five hours of sleep for about six weeks and I’m just not sure.

Q. You say you drafted some releases. What are you referring to?

A. Video consents. We were trying to -- again, this is all relating to the “Take 2” video. My assistant, Ann-Marie Levy, had drafted a form of video consent/release/authorization for a person’s image to be used in a televisual broadcast. It’s a pretty standard Hollywood-type form, and we were seeking those from anybody who might appear in “Take 2.”

Q. Now, was it your understanding that the Arvizo family was going to be involved in “Take 2”?

A. The answer is, I’m not sure whether they were or weren’t going to be. The idea was to shoot footage and then work with FOX, Brad Lachman Productions, and edit that footage to create a decent program. It wasn’t my decision what footage would get used, but -- but there was a desire to include them, to get some footage of them. Whether or not it would get used, I don’t know.

Q. And you say you drafted these releases, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And then what did you do with them?

A. Gosh, we distributed releases to -- I’m pretty sure we gave them to Brad Lachman Productions. You know, my assistant, Ann-Marie Levy, was really the primary person handling that. I know she had communications with the Brad Lachman folks. I’m fairly sure she would have sent them to Marc Schaffel, because he had some people who were involved. He was helping coordinate Hamid Moslehi, who was actually doing some of the video. Ann-Marie, under my direction, had been coordinating the documents with Attorney Iris Finsilver on behalf of Debbie Rowe for her appearance. So a number of people would have gotten those forms.

Q. Do you recall your being in contact with various companies involving the production of “Take 2”?

A. I’m not sure what you mean by “various companies.” I worked with, you know, Marisa Fermin at FOX. We had a lot of dialogue with Brad Lachman. We hired, you know, a law firm in Las Vegas to assist with copyrights. We had discussions with Schaffel. I’m not sure who else. I don’t know if I talked -- I’m pretty sure I talked to Hamid at one point in that whole process.

Q. Who is Brad Lachman?

A. Brad is the -- I think he’s -- well, Brad Lachman Productions is an independent film company that was hired -- was selected by FOX to produce the “Take 2” video.

Q. And were you communicating with lawyers on behalf of Brad Lachman Productions?

A. Yes.

Q. Why?

A. We needed to have releases from anybody who would appear -- whose image would appear in the video. There was music being selected. A lot of Mr. Jackson’s music was to accompany the video. We had to get the appropriate copyright releases executed, and there’s money involved in making payments for a number of these sorts of things. And my role again, as an attorney, I was, you know, trying to facilitate that process and make sure that we had appropriate lawyers carrying out those processes, and from time to time make sure -- I would have direct conversation to make sure there weren’t glitches, to understand where any hold-ups were, and try to motivate everyone to be effective and get the job done.

Q. And I believe you said you were in contact with people associated with FOX, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And what were you doing with them?

A. Primarily negotiating the contract for payment for the production.

Q. Did you have a lot of contact with representatives of FOX in that regard?

A. I had a lot of contact with Marisa Fermin during that period. She was really the representative of FOX I dealt with.

Q. Now, you said you were getting four or five hours of sleep a night during this period, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why was that?

A. The combination of tasks that I was propelled into was pretty overwhelming. We would typically start the day with a teleconference with the United Kingdom, because of the time difference, and then by the end of -- so the middle of my day, late day, would be U.S. work. And then fairly often I would be back on the phone with the United Kingdom at night, you know, sometimes 11:00, 12:00, one o'clock, because that's morning in the UK. It's the next day already. So sleeping became problematic.

Plus, quite honestly, my mind was just full. There was so much content coming to me on a daily basis, it just -- I couldn't sleep. I'd just lay there and have things going through my head and make little to-do lists in my mind.

Q. Now, you talked about the concept of copyright. What do you mean?

A. Well, copyright is a statutory right in the United States. There is -- I believe there's some common law associated with copyright. But copyright -- there's a federal copyright act, and copyright provides protection for creations, artwork, books, media. It's not like patents. You can't copyright a concept. You can copyright a creative work.

Q. And what were you doing for Mr. Jackson in the area of copyrighting?

A. I'm not a copyright lawyer by trade, but I understand enough to know that copyright is very important with respect to televisual production. And so, you know, I engaged appropriate lawyers having expertise, you know, patent/trademark lawyers who work regularly in the copyright field, to help make sure that copyright was preserved for Mr. Jackson, or where other persons' copyright -- copyrighted work would be used, that we had the appropriate release and authority, because copyright can carry -- copyright infringement can carry pretty significant penalties under the statutes.

Q. Were you involved at all in issues involving licensing?

A. Yes.

Q. What were you doing?

A. I -- I interviewed and ultimately recommended that Michael Jackson, MJJ Productions, et cetera, hire Haber International, I think is the name of the company, to do international distribution of the "Take 2" video under license. The contract with FOX specifically provided that basically Michael Jackson preserved the right to distribute internationally.

Q. Mr. LeGrand, there was no secret around the world that the "Take 2" show was being developed, right?

A. It certainly -- I'm not aware of it being a secret, no.

Q. I mean, it was well publicized that a "Take 2" production was being developed, right?

A. I don't know if it was well publicized or not, but there certainly was some publicity.

Q. And lawyers for various entities were working around the clock to help get the "Take 2" production completed, right?

A. Well, I would say a number of people were working very, very hard, including lawyers, to get that production done quickly. And the pressure was FOX wanted the production for sweeps week.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. In the television world, there's what -- as I understand it, sweeps week is when the rating companies analyze the viewers for -- and this is real important for pricing of commercials, and it really determines a value of T.V. shows and such.

So sweeps week is ratings week, and it's something that's very important to the various networks to have high ratings during sweeps week.

Q. And how did you learn that FOX was concerned about that time pressure?

A. Well, Marisa Fermin told me they wanted the show for that purpose.

Q. During this period of time when you were getting four to five hours of sleep a night, how much of your day was devoted to the development of the "Take 2" project?

A. It would vary day-to-day. That was not my primary focus in representing Mr. Jackson and trying to coordinate all the lawyers. We had -- during that same time frame, we had -- the decision had been made to replace Barry Siegel as money manager with Ed Grossman and Michael Stern's company.

That -- ultimately, Ed Grossman and Michael Stern decided they really could not handle the business, and then we transitioned to Mr. Whitman. That was extremely time-consuming. Took a significant part of my time and effort.

There were other matters that came up. I'm not sure exactly when. There was -- there was -- I had to communicate with, I think it's Brian Wolf at the Lavely Singer firm about some litigation, minor -- you know, fairly minor litigation cases that were going on at the time. I had the entire UK -- you know, U.S./UK litigation in pretty much full gear.

There were just a host of issues that needed attention.

Q. Were you dealing with other countries besides England when it came to licensing any footage involving the "Take 2" show?

A. Yes. Haber International was doing the primary negotiation, but Fred would -- Fred and/or his associate, George Scanlon, would contact me with respect to approvals of -- or seeking approvals for various licensing deals. At some point, we had some, you know, fairly significant discussions. I remember in particular Sky Broadcasting. We had several conference calls and some extensive correspondence with Sky Broadcasting over the licensing for “Take 2.” They’re overseas. I’m not even sure where. I don’t know whether it was UK. I think it was the UK itself. I’m not sure.

Q. Do you recall whether or not you were involved in any contacts with the media at this period of time involving the development of the “Take 2” show?

A. I had e-mails, phone calls, personal visits from various networks and shows expressing interest in “Take 2” before we ended up contracting with FOX. There was -- and I won’t call it a bidding war, but there was certainly interest by several parties, and proposals were being submitted to me.

Q. To your knowledge, was the development of the “Take 2” program part of a conspiracy to kidnap the Arvizo family?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Argumentative; calls for a conclusion.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Was the work you were doing, as far as you’re concerned, part of any conspiracy to violate the rights of the Arvizos?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Same objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever conspire to violate the rights of the Arvizo family in the development of the “Take 2” show?

A. No.

Q. Were you aware of any efforts during the production of this show to falsely imprison the Arvizo family at Neverland?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. No foundation. Also calls for a legal conclusion.

THE COURT: I think the problem is with the word “falsely imprison.” I’ll sustain the objection.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: While you were doing all of the work that you described around the world, various law firms, with the distribution company, with FOX, with Haber, was it ever your understanding that, as part of that project, the Arvizos were to be held against their will?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Same objection as to calls for a conclusion and no foundation. Also hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: No, I have no knowledge that the Arvizos were to be held or being held against their will.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: During this frantic time period that you have described, did you have any knowledge of whether or not the media was focusing their attention on Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes. There was significant media attention throughout the world following the initial broadcast of the Bashir video in the UK.

Q. And would that media attention have gone on through January, February and March of 2003, to your knowledge?

A. I’m not sure about -- well, it was -- I’m not sure of the exact dates. It was very late January that -- or first of February that the broadcast was in the UK. It was that -- right at that time frame was the first broadcast. So the media started, you know, when the clips were being produced and the Granada broadcast was being publicized in the UK.

The broadcast in the UK kind of started a significant amount of publicity. And then within a few days, the program was broadcast in the U.S., so the -- how long that continued -- I mean, was it still at that level of media in March? I think it was tailing off some compared to what it was in those first couple weeks of February.

Q. Now, you’ve indicated that you had some involvement in Mr. Jackson’s financial affairs, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And please describe what your involvement was.

A. Mr. Konitzer, Mr. Jackson asked me to assist in replacing Barry Siegel as the cash manager for Mr. Jackson. We also looked at the possibility of replacing his tax team. The accountants had actually prepared tax returns. Mr. Siegel did not prepare tax returns. Ultimately that decision was made not to change that accounting firm.

As part of that process, initially Mr. Grossman/Mr. Stern’s company was hired, and I would communicate with them on, you know, often a daily or, you know, sometimes hourly, certainly quite often with regard to financial matters.

Also, during the same time, I would have -- people like Evvy Tavasci would call and say that Michael needed money for something and would ask me to facilitate that.

So I also was in the process of reviewing the various loan documents. I was trying to get a firm grasp of Mr. Jackson’s financial affairs, try to understand, ascertain his assets, his liabilities, and that was all wrapped up in this transitioning of trying to put a new team into place.

Q. Do you recall doing any work involving the Sony/ATV music catalog?

A. Well, I looked -- I got a copy of the Sony/ATV documents.

I had one of my commercial associates analyze those documents and generate a report summarizing the content. These are very voluminous, detailed, complex documents, and I had an associate review them and analyze them and I believe produce a report to me.

Q. And what was -- or, excuse me. What is the Sony/ATV music catalog?

A. Well, Sony/ATV is a joint venture where Mr. Jackson and Sony own -- have ownership in the company that owns a variety of copyrights and rights to music, and basically is, as I recall, the -- Mr. Jackson contributed his ownership of The Beatles catalog and other music that he had acquired rights to. He contributed that into the joint venture. Sony put some of its music licensing rights into the joint venture. And then Sony continued to, as a manager of the joint venture, acquire additional rights to music.

Q. And why were you concerned about the Sony/ATV music catalog?

A. Well, the Sony/ATV joint venture represented a significant portion of Mr. Jackson’s assets. His ownership interest in that entity was a very considerable portion. And I was somewhat surprised to find that Mr. Jackson really did not have a diversified portfolio of investments that, you know, I’m somewhat used to in the more nonHollywood commercial world that I’ve worked in.

Q. Did you feel he had been poorly advised in the past?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Foundation; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Once you analyzed what the Sony/ATV music catalog was, what did you do?

A. Well, at this time -- by the time I had that analysis -- well, a couple things happened. One, I spoke to Mr. Konitzer and expressed to him that this was a much more complex set of documents than Mr. Konitzer had earlier indicated to me. He really did not understand the depth and complexity, the rights Mr. Jackson had and the limitations on Mr. Jackson’s ability to, you know, sell any interest in that particular asset.

I found out, you know, that there were loans -- Bank of America, in particular, had a loan portfolio that was involved in this whole Sony/ATV joint venture, as Mr. Jackson’s interest was collateral, and his financial affairs were, you know, fairly complex, and there wasn’t a lot of liquidity there.

Q. Now, at some point, you made some suggestions to Mr. Jackson about how to restructure his financial affairs, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And why did you do that?

A. Within the first, I'd say, maybe three weeks or so, four weeks of representing Mr. Jackson, I learned that his current payables mid-February were in the range of $10 million. There was insufficient cash available to pay those payables on a current, timely basis.

I came to understand that essentially most of his income primarily went to pay down a credit line and then he was allowed to draw, I think it was $2 million a month on the credit line. But there were significant constraints on his ability to draw against those credit funds, and his -- the bulk of his assets were pledged for these credit lines. There was -- actually, I think there's two different loans. But anyway, he was highly illiquid.

Q. At one point, you suggested he consider selling his interest in the catalog, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was your belief that if he did that, he could end up with $200 million after taxes, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And that would be exclusive of royalty income, right?

A. Yes. I want to -- can I redress that?

I wasn't sure about the tax consequences. At that point I really was not -- I can't say I was up to speed on the tax history of his portfolio, his interest in the joint venture. There's -- that's all fairly complex.

So my analysis was based on some assumptions, and qualified, to a degree. So the $200 million number, you know, this -- this was not meant to be precise. I was not in a position to give precision at that point in that analysis.

Q. Did you talk to any financial experts before you gave that advice?

A. Well, I spoke to Allan Whitman, the CPA who was managing -- I think by that time was managing Mr. Jackson's money.

I spoke with another lawyer who was working with Mr. Jackson, a Mr. Malnik in Florida. I'm not sure -- I'm fairly sure I -- he's not a financial expert. I'm pretty sure I talked to Eric Joss at Paul Hastings about my analysis.

Q. And you had suggested that Mr. Jackson restructure his financial affairs, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you made suggestions as to how he could do that and avoid bankruptcy, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And your conclusion was that there was a way to end up worth $200 million after taxes and excluding music royalties, correct?

A. That was my analysis, yes.

Q. Okay. Now, during the time that you represented Mr. Jackson, were you involved in any business opportunities involving Mr. Jackson?

A. Well, the FOX negotiations were a business opportunity. I know there were subsequent discussions with FOX for additional programs. There were -- I had discussions with Jack Sussman, I think he's at CBS, with regards to possible programs.

We -- I -- Mr. Jackson indicated a desire to maybe do some film work. And I brought -- I arranged an introduction to a law firm in Hollywood that really practices representing talent in the film and music arena. A young man named Howard Fishman, an attorney, was brought in.

There were discussions with the movie director Bob Evans about producing a biography of Mr. Jackson's life. There were -- you know, those are the ones I remember. I'm sure there were more, but those were the primary discussions I recall.

Q. And do you recall any discussions about marketing any products involving Mr. Jackson?

A. Oh, yeah. I'm sorry. One of the things that -- one of the items that came to my attention during this couple of months was there had been a contract entered into sometime before - I’m not sure whether it was a year or two years - that allowed Mr. Jackson to buy out a company that had acquired the rights to merchandise a variety of goods under his name, I guess is the best way to say it. They had the right to produce, you know, Jackson perfume, for example, or various goods with the “Jackson” name associated with it. And that contract needed to be paid off. There was a balance due to -- on an installment payment arrangement. There was a balance due for him to reacquire those rights. We actually -- I did facilitate the payment being made so that those rights came back to Mr. Jackson.

And there were a couple of negotiations, one I think was a perfume. I know there was something else, but I can’t remember what it was. It wasn’t big money. It was like $20- or $40,000. But there were other instances of opportunities for revenue for Mr. Jackson.

Q. Do you recall, in February of 2003, Sony/ATV offering to pay $10 million to purchase a Christmas song from Mr. Jackson?

A. You know, that sounds familiar. But I really don’t have a specific recollection of that. It -- it rings a bell with me, but....

Q. Might it refresh your recollection if I show you a letter in that regard?

A. Sure.

MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Have you had a chance to look at that document?

A. Yes.

Q. Does it refresh your recollection about that issue?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you recall about that?

A. I recall receiving the letter, a copy of the letter from Mr. Branca. And I remember I spoke to Mr. Konitzer. And I’m not sure what the ultimate outcome was. I believe Mr. Branca was told to pursue the discussions.

Q. Do you remember any projects involving games relating to Mr. Jackson, video games, anything of that sort?

A. There were several discussions about the possibility of seeking license money, royalty money, for gaming machines in Nevada in particular. There were some suggestions that one or more of the major manufacturers might be interested in a Michael Jackson slot machine of some sort.

Q. Now, you mentioned your discussions with a producer about a movie about Mr. Jackson’s life?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you please explain what you’re talking about?

A. Well, Mr. Fishman and I attended a dinner one night at the residence of movie director Bob Evans, I think is his name. Robert Evans. And Mr. Evans was very enthusiastic about the possibility of producing a movie based on the life of Michael Jackson. And he wanted to negotiate for those rights.

Q. Would it be accurate to say that while you were representing Michael Jackson in January, February, March of 2003, there was a constant swarm of business proposals from various parts of the world involving Mr. Jackson?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Leading and vague --

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: -- as to “swarm of business proposals.”

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Was it part of your responsibilities to involve yourself in potential business opportunities involving Mr. Jackson?

A. Well, for that short time, I really was one of the primary facilitators for business transactions for Mr. Jackson, and several people brought proposals to me or informed me that there were proposals of various kinds.

I’m not sure how much was my responsibility. As a lawyer, when clients ask for assistance, I give them assistance. Sometimes I was in the position where, you know, somebody would say to me, “Gee, do you think this would be of interest?” Or another lawyer, you know, would send me the contract, a proposal. I think the perfume contract actually came from Brian Wolf’s law firm. So, a lot of this came to me, but I’m not sure how much of it was my responsibility.

Q. Now, you’re not a specialist in music law, right?

A. No.

Q. During the time you were doing all of this work for Mr. Jackson, he also had a law firm doing his music legal work, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. So all of the business opportunities or projects you’re talking about are really separate and apart from the music business, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And was it your understanding that business opportunities in the music area were going to another law firm at this point in time?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: To your knowledge, while you were representing Mr. Jackson, how many law firms were involved in his affairs?

A. Well, the Katten Muchin firm was providing representation in a couple pieces of litigation. The Ziffren firm, John Branca in particular, was the primary music counsel. Lavely Singer was providing representation on a variety of matters, mostly litigation-related. There was my firm. There was Paul Hastings law firm. There was Mark Geragos. There was the solicitors in the United Kingdom, the barrister in the United Kingdom.

I know I’m missing somebody.

Oh, and I had another law firm in Las Vegas that was assisting on copyright work as well. So I don’t know how many that is, but it’s quite a few lawyers.

Q. Do you remember, in March of 2003, discussions about a proposed television special involving Michael Jackson and Marlon Brando?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you remember about that?

A. You know, not much. There was discussion about that possibility, of combining those two into a production. I never had direct contact with Marlon -- or maybe I did. Well, I ultimately did speak to Marlon Brando and his counsel about putting together some sort of program. But it never got off the ground, as far as I know.

Q. You were doing work for Mr. Jackson in the area of international trademarks, correct?

A. Some of the trademark paperwork came to me and I tried to route it to someone appropriate. I am not an expert in trademark work.

Q. But what were you doing in that area for Mr. Jackson during January, February and March of 2003?

A. Well, I was really just trying to coordinate and make sure that -- if something came to me, I tried to make sure that it went to a lawyer that could appropriately handle it.

Q. And to your knowledge, what was going on in that area, as far as lawyers are concerned?

A. Yeah, I really don’t remember. That was a very minor part of the overall scope of what I was dealing with.

Q. Were you referring trademark issues for Mr. Jackson to other law firms?

A. I think so, yes.

Q. And was it your understanding that trademark issues were constantly coming up around the world involving Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes. There were -- there was some things on the Internet that involved his likeness that were being offered for sale, I think. There were some -- there was a couple different -- I’m not sure what to call them. I don’t know that they were games or not, but they were interactive elements on the Internet that used his image and likeness.

I actually -- the day I was fired, the -- in March, I was having lunch with Allan Whitman and Brian Wolf from the Lavely Singer firm to talk about what kind of actions could be taken and what kind of costs would be associated with taking action to protect Mr. Jackson’s image and likeness.

Q. And was that a concern involving only the United States, or elsewhere?

A. Oh, no. It was worldwide in scope. The Net knows no boundaries.

Q. To handle those issues worldwide, what did you have to do?

A. Well, I’m not sure. I mean, my approach was to find a qualified law firm like Lavely Singer, Brian Wolf and Marty Singer, and, you know, have them engauge the appropriate talent, as needed, around the world.

Q. And to your knowledge, was that done?

A. I don’t know.

Q. Do you recall a project proposal involving Apple computer during this period of time?

A. I remember some discussion about Apple computer, and that Steve Jobs and Michael had a personal relationship, and that there might be some commercial opportunity with Apple, but I don’t recall the details of any proposal.

Q. Okay. And to your knowledge to date, Mr. Jackson has never gone bankrupt, has he?

A. I’m not aware of Mr. Jackson filing a petition in a federal bankruptcy court for relief, no.

Q. Do you remember your firm issuing a letter to the team suggesting that no business proposals were to go directly to Mr. Jackson?

A. I don’t specifically recall that letter, no.

Q. Do you recall a draft letter to come from your firm to someone named Meskin?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall the letter said no proposals are to go directly to Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. And why was that?

A. Mr. Meskin was one of the people present at the dinner party at Director Robert Evans' house, and I was not impressed with his approach. I did not think the terms he was suggesting to Howard Fishman and I were anything that Mr. Jackson should consider.

And I was concerned, because during that dinner party, Mr. Meskin and Mr. Evans managed to take Mr. Jackson off, away from Mr. Fishman and I, for a short period, 20 minutes, half an hour. And I found out later that they tried to get him to sign --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you find out in that regard that efforts were made to get Mr. Jackson to sign documents?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Hearsay; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember, when you were brought in to represent Mr. Jackson, Konitzer and Weizner telling you they intended to gain control of Mr. Jackson's financial affairs?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember at that time Konitzer and Weizner telling you they wanted to gain control of Mr. Jackson's records, documents, and agreements?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember, when you were brought on board, Konitzer and Weizner telling you they wanted to gain control of anything belonging to Mr. Jackson?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'll make the same objection. And leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: In general, Mr. Konitzer and Mr. Weizner wanted to take over management, overall management, of Michael Jackson’s business affairs, financial affairs, and implement a new business plan for Mr. Jackson.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And they essentially told you in writing they wanted to control everything Mr. Jackson owned, right?

A. For the benefit of Mr. Jackson, yes.

Q. Well, you then concluded they were doing it for their own benefit, didn’t you?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Argumentative; leading; misstates the evidence.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You were retained in approximately January of 2003, right?

A. End of January, yes.

Q. And how long did it take you to grow suspicious of what Konitzer and Weizner were doing to Mr. Jackson?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Argumentative; leading; and asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Weeks. I mean, whether it was four weeks or six weeks, I’m not sure. But certainly by the end of February, early March period, I was very suspicious, and I’m not sure of the time frame. The first investigative report that I got just increased my degree of suspicion.

But at the same time that some of this was going on with respect to my concerns about Mr. Konitzer and Mr. Weizner, Mr. Malnik had entered the scene and was asserting --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; narrative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Who is Mr. Malnik?

A. He’s a -- well, he’s an individual who lives in Florida.

Q. And were you suspicious of anything he was doing involving Mr. Jackson?

A. Because I did not know Mr. Malnik, I was suspicious of him. I mean, I --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm going to object to an improper opinion; no foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: I became -- you know, I became suspicious of everybody. It seems that everybody wanted to try to benefit from Mr. Jackson one way or another. But I did eventually cause the investigative service to give us some background on Mr. Malnik. But he is -- the report indicated he's a very wealthy man.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You grew suspicious of what Marc Schaffel was doing to Mr. Jackson at some point, correct?

A. I grew suspicious that Mr. Schaffel was seeking to benefit from Mr. Jackson or being -- in relationship to Mr. Jackson. My suspicion of Mr. Schaffel was different than my suspicion of Mr. Konitzer or Mr. Weizner.

Q. Did you have much involvement with Mr. Schaffel in your work?

A. I had a fair amount of involvement with Mr. Schaffel at the very beginning of the development of the "Take 2" production. And I was constantly trying to get Marc Schaffel out of the loop. I was trying to avoid his involvement or minimize his involvement in Mr. Jackson's affairs, and it was a struggle.

Q. But did you ever meet Schaffel?

A. Yeah.

Q. Where did you meet him?

A. I think I met him at his house the Friday night before the 60 Minutes Saturday at Neverland.

Q. And why were you at Schaffel's home?

A. To -- because he had had conversations with Jack Sussman about CBS purchasing some of the rights to the footage. At that time, there wasn’t a “Take 2,” but we had footage. And so I met with Marc for that purpose, to discuss the -- and also, I think I looked at some of the footage at that time. I actually -- they had some of it on a screen, and I was able to watch some of the footage of Martin Bashir and Michael.

Q. And approximately when was this, do you think?

A. I think it was the first weeked in February of 2003. I’m not sure whether that’s the 7th, 8th or 9th, but it was around that first full weekend in February.

Q. And was it your understanding that Schaffel was involved in the production of the “Take 2” program?

A. Yes.

Q. And how did you learn that?

A. I guess one answer is to say Marc Schaffel told me, but he’s the one who had -- well, I believe he’s the one that worked to arrange the Ian Drew interview with Debbie Rowe and coordinate Hamid from I Films to film that interview.

Q. And were you involved in anything involving the Debbie Rowe interview?

A. Well, yes. We were involved with the preparation and exchange of documents to allow Debbie Rowe to engage in the interview and allow her image to be broadcast.

Q. And did you draft those documents?

A. Well, I participated in them. Actually, my assistant, my associate, Ann-Marie Levy, really did most of the work on that with Iris Finsilver. I did speak to Iris Finsilver, you know, a couple times, I think. She was the counsel for Debbie Rowe.

Q. And were your relations with her very professional?

A. Well, I think so.

Q. Did there seem to be any objection on this lawyer’s part to Debbie Rowe being interviewed?

A. She didn’t express any objection to me.

Q. Were you there when Debbie Rowe was interviewed?

A. No.

Q. Did you learn about it at some point?

A. Yes.

Q. How did you learn about it?

A. I’m not sure today who told me. It was probably Schaffel. Might have been Konitzer.

Q. Were you involved in any of the filming of the Arvizo family for purposes of “Take 2”?

A. No. I was never present during any filming of anybody for “Take 2.”

Q. Do you recall talking to anyone who spoke on behalf of the Arvizos when it came to their being filmed as part of the “Take 2” project?

A. I don’t recall.

Q. Is your meeting -- excuse me. Is the time I described, where you saw Janet at Neverland, the only time you recall ever physically seeing her?

A. I think that’s right. I might have seen her again somewhere else, but I really don’t have a specific recollection.

Q. Do you remember ever talking to Janet Arvizo on the phone?

A. As I indicated earlier, I’m not sure if I actually spoke with her or if I was speaking to one of the people working with Schaffel. There were a couple people that were working on various pieces of that filming. And I just -- I’m sorry, I don’t remember specifically whether I spoke with Mrs. Arvizo or not.

Q. Do you recall, in your discussions with representatives of FOX television regarding the “Take 2” project, whether or not the name “Arvizo” ever came up?

A. Yeah, I’m pretty sure it did. Because we needed -- again, anybody who’s going to be in, you know, a televisual production needs to sign a consent, a release for the use of their image. And if -- if the Arvizos were going to have any footage included, there had to be a release.

Q. Do you recall, in your discussions with the distribution company, Lachman Productions, the name “Arvizo” ever coming up?

A. Well, I think it did, again in the context of we needed appearance consents and releases from everybody, because we had footage that had a lot of people in it. We were concerned -- there was one set of footage that had a bunch of kids at Neverland, and we were concerned about those appearance consents.

Q. You mentioned an individual named Haber, correct?

A. Yep. Fred Haber.

Q. Do you remember ever discussing the Arvizos with Mr. Haber?

A. I’m just not sure.

Q. As far as you’re concerned, given all of the communications you had with all of these parties about the “Take 2” project, was it any secret that the Arvizos were going to possibly participate?

A. I’m not aware of any secret about it, no.

Q. In fact, the possibility of the Arvizos participating in the “Take 2” project was something that was discussed constantly, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: To your knowledge, was anyone that you spoke with trying to keep the fact that the Arvizos might participate in the “Take 2” project a secret?

A. No.

Q. Approximately when do you think you first learned that there might be a possibility of the Arvizos participating in this television documentary involving Maury Povich?

A. Oh, I’m not sure. I mean, early February. Mid-February. Some -- sometime in that time frame. This all went very quickly. I think the production aired by the end of February, so this was a very short time frame.

Q. But certainly your discussions with representatives of FOX television indicated that people at FOX thought the Arvizos might participate, right?

A. I don’t know about FOX. I think Brad Lachman Productions, but I don’t remember talking about it with Marisa Fermin.

Q. Did you learn at some point that the Arvizo family had participated in an interview for purposes of the “Take 2” project?

A. I believe some footage did get shot, yes.

Q. Did you ever see it?

A. I never saw that footage, no.

Q. Okay. Do you remember learning from someone that they had participated in an interview?

A. Yes. I’m just not sure when.

Q. Do you know if you were at Schaffel’s home before or after you learned the Arvizos had been interviewed?

A. Oh, I’m pretty sure it was before, because -- yeah, I’m pretty sure it was before.

Q. Now, at the period of time you’re talking about, when this “Take 2” project is being produced, to your knowledge, are the Arvizos still parties to the lawsuit in England?

A. No, they’re not. No, they’re not. And I believe the complaint with the Standards Board on their behalf was also withdrawn, but I’m not sure about that.

Q. At some point, did you learn the Arvizos had hired a lawyer in Los Angeles?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know approximately when you learned the Arvizos had gone to a lawyer in Los Angeles?

A. I think it was the spring of 2004 that I was contacted by a lawyer who stated he represented the Arvizos. I’m not sure, you know, whether that was February, March, April, but I think it was the spring of ‘04.

Q. Do you remember ever hearing from a lawyer named Dickerman?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And did you learn at some point that a lawyer named Dickerman in Los Angeles was representing the Arvizos?

A. Yeah, Mr. Dickerman contacted me in that -- I think it was spring of ‘04.

Q. And did you ever learn that at some point in time after they hired Attorney Dickerman, they hired Attorney Larry Feldman?

A. I never had any contact with Mr. Feldman. I think if I know that, it’s only from the press.

Q. Did you ever speak to Dickerman directly --

A. Yes.

Q. -- involving the Arvizos? How many times do you think you did that?

A. Two, maybe three times did I speak with him. We exchanged some letters.

Q. And at some point, he made a request that the Arvizos no longer participate in the British litigation, true?

A. Yes. Well, you have to excuse me. There’s the litigation and there’s the Broadcasting Standards Board complaints, and I’d really want to review the document. When I say “yes,” it’s -- I know he wanted them -- he wanted the Broadcasting Standards Board complaint process terminated with respect to the Arvizos. I’m just not sure that they were parties to the litigation against Granada. I just -- it’s been a long time.

THE COURT: All right. Let’s take our break.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: Counsel?

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. Mr. LeGrand, you have an exhibit book in front of you. Would you please turn to Tab 36. Your Honor, I believe the next exhibit, defense exhibit, would be No. 5037, which would be this document.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Mr. LeGrand, please take a look at that document, if you would.

A. Yes.

Q. Have you seen that document before?

A. Yes.

Q. And please describe that document.

A. It's charts and diagrams and text outlining kind of a business structure for Michael Jackson.

Q. And it appears that you faxed that document to various individuals on March 14th, 2003, correct?

A. Yeah. Well, it appears that it was faxed to Mr. Al Malnik.

Q. But you appear to be the -- it appears to have been faxed from your office, right?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. All right. Now, when did you first see that document?

A. I'm not sure. I think I saw an iteration of this document in late 2002. This was a business plan outline that Mr. Konitzer had been working on for some time.

Q. And was it your understanding that Konitzer put this document together?

A. Yes.

Q. And what is your understanding based on?

A. He sent this to me. Mr. Konitzer gave this to me.

Q. And approximately when do you think he did that?

A. Well, again, this iteration I'm going to say happened in probably February, but this is -- again, this was a document that got edited over time. But I think this generation, because of some references in it, time references, I think show late February, maybe early March.

Q. Did Mr. Konitzer tell you he was developing this document?

A. Yes.

Q. Approximately when was that?

A. I'm guessing. You know, sometime February, early March of '03.

Q. And correct me if I'm wrong, the document appears to be a business plan for Mr. Jackson, right?

A. Yes.
Q. And if you look through the document, it appears to have what is referred to as a diagram of a business structure, right?
A. Yes.
Q. It talks about Mr. Jackson and his family, correct?
A. Yes.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object as leading. And hearsay as far as the document is concerned.
THE COURT: Sustained.
THE BAILIFF: You need to turn your microphone on as well.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yeah.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Mr. LeGrand, please look at what appears to be the third page of that document, okay? The Bates stamp number appears to be MJ020806. Do you see that?
A. Yes.
Q. And it says, “How to protect MJ from business infection.” Do you see that?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Hearsay and leading.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you recall reading this document when you received it?

A. Yes.
Q. And why did you read it?
A. Because it was given to me for my review, and it affected my client, Michael Jackson.
Q. And this is the -- a copy of the actual document that Konitzer sent you, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And after you read it, did you discuss it with Mr. Konitzer?
A. I don’t recall a specific conversation about this document, no.
Q. Do you recall that one of the plans Mr. Konitzer had for Mr. Jackson was to isolate him from involvement?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Hearsay and leading.

THE COURT: The hearsay is sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Please turn to page -- Bates stamp MJ020810, if you would.

A. Yes.

Q. And it's entitled, "Michael's involvement," correct?

A. Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Hearsay; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember having any discussions with Mr. Konitzer about Michael Jackson's involvement in the new business plan?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there any discussions about whether or not Michael Jackson should be involved in briefings, formalities, procedures, et cetera?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Hearsay; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you know whether or not you had any discussions with Mr. Konitzer about whether Michael Jackson needed to be involved in daily briefings?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Same objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You've seen that document before, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall any discussions with Mr. Konitzer about how involved Mr. Jackson should be in the new business?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Same objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever say anything to Mr. Konitzer about to what extent Mr. Jackson should be involved in the new business plan?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you say?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did Mr. Konitzer’s plan, to the best of your knowledge, involve any considerations about how much Mr. Jackson should be involved in his own business dealings?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Same objection.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Mr. LeGrand, Konitzer didn’t want Michael Jackson involved at all in the details of his business, did he?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Same objection. Ask counsel to move off this subject. Ask the Court to admonish counsel.
BAILIFF CORTEZ: Your microphone’s off, sir.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m sorry. Same objection and ask the Court to admonish counsel to move off of this subject.
THE COURT: I think that question was asked and answered earlier this morning, so I’ll sustain it on that ground.
MR. MESEREAU: Okay.
Q. Is the document in front of you that’s been identified as Exhibit 5037 prepared in the normal course of business, to your knowledge?
A. As normal as business was, yes.
Q. And you faxed it off to Mr. Malnik, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And why did you do that?

A. Because I thought Mr. Malnik at that point was advising Mr. Jackson on business matters. And I thought it very much appropriate for Mr. Malnik to see this document.
Q. Is Exhibit 5037 the actual document you faxed to Mr. Malnik on March 14th, 2003?
A. To the best of my recollection, yes.
Q. Did you discuss the document with Mr. Malnik at any point?
A. Yes.
Q. Approximately when was that, do you think?

A. I would guess within a day or two of this fax. Maybe that day, but I don’t know for sure.

Q. Do you recall discussing Exhibit 5037 with anyone besides Mr. Malnik and Mr. Konitzer?

A. Oh, I’m -- I believe I discussed this with my partner, Pete Gibson.

Q. And why did you do that?

A. I found this document to be somewhat disturbing. It seems amateurish. You know, I already had misgivings about Mr. Konitzer’s sophistication and capabilities, and this document simply reinforced those concerns.

Q. After you read the document, what were you concerned about?

A. Well --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m going to object that this is going to be a commentary of what’s enclosed within the document.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions at this time, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Good afternoon, Mr. LeGrand.

A. Good afternoon. We made it to the afternoon.

Q. Just barely.

So tell me, how is it that you became employed by Michael Jackson?

A. Mr. Konitzer had talked to me about whether I would be interested in assisting with the implementation of this new business plan for Mr. Jackson, and then Mr. Konitzer called me and asked me to come to Florida and meet Mr. Jackson to discuss representation.

Q. And you knew Mr. Konitzer through a company named Hi-Tec?

A. Hi-Tec America.

Q. And what is Hi-Tec America?

A. I don’t know what it is. A few years ago it was a company Mr. Konitzer had that was involved in developing a manufactured building process.

Q. And is that company based in Canada?

A. Yeah, Mr. Konitzer lives in Canada, and the manufacturing company was in Canada, but Mr. Konitzer was interested in developing business in the United States when I first met him.

Q. And how is it that he came to employ your services for Hi-Tec America?

A. He was introduced to me by another person that I knew in Florida. And we discussed, you know, what his needs were, and I -- at the time I was with a law firm and we agreed to represent him.

Q. What were you doing in Florida at the time?

A. I really wasn't in Florida. I had done a transaction with some people in Florida, and one of those people subsequently introduced Mr. Konitzer to me.

Q. And at some point Mr. Konitzer called you and informed you that he'd like you to work on behalf of Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. And did he introduce you to Michael Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did that introduction take place?

A. At the -- I think it's the Turnberry Hotel project in Florida.

Q. And did that introduction take place in February of 2003?

A. Yes. No, I think it was January.

Q. January of 2003?

A. Yeah. I don't think it was quite February. I think it was the last weekend in January.

Q. And when Mr. Konitzer contacted you with regard to your services, exactly what did he inform you of in terms of what the expectation would be of your duties, what duties you'd perform for Mr. Jackson?

A. The phone call that precipitated my going to meet Mr. Jackson at the Turnberry was focused on the Bashir broadcast. And what Mr. Konitzer said to me was that Michael’s lawyers had told him there was nothing they could do to help him deal with Granada or Martin Bashir, and he asked me to come and meet Michael and see if there was anything that I could do or suggest to assist Mr. Jackson.

Q. So in January. Do you have any recollection of the exact date we’re talking about?

A. I just know that I flew to Florida just before the last weekend in January. I’m not sure if that’s the 27th or the 29th. But it was the last week of January.

Q. So it would have been immediately before. Do you mean like a Friday, a Thursday? Do you have an idea?

A. Yeah, I think I arrived there either Wednesday night or Thursday. I’m not sure exactly.

Q. Okay. And you met Mr. Jackson. Where did that meeting take place?

A. At the Turnberry. He had a suite at the Turnberry.

Q. In his suite?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Mr. Konitzer there?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Mr. Weizner at that meeting?

A. I believe he was there for the initial meeting, yes.

Q. What do you mean by that? Did he leave at some point?

A. That first day, I think I had two meetings with Mr. Jackson. And I’m not sure that Mr. Weizner was present at both. I think there were two meetings.

Q. How many days did you stay at the Turnberry?

A. I didn’t stay at the Turnberry.

Q. How many days did you stay in Florida?

A. It was four or five. I returned to Las Vegas that Sunday, the last Sunday in January of ‘03.

Q. And in those four or five days, how many meetings did you have with Mr. Jackson?

A. Hmm.

Q. You mentioned two so far, I guess, the first day.

A. Three or four. I’m really not exactly sure. One of them was the lengthy telephone conference day.

Q. Tell me about that. What day did the telephone conference take place?

A. I’m not sure if it was Friday or Saturday, with the solicitor and the barristers in the UK.

Q. Do you know -- do you know if Hamid Moslehi was in Florida at the time you were there?

A. I don’t know.

Q. Do you know if the Arvizo family was in Florida at the time you were there?

A. I don’t know. I don’t believe so, but I don’t know.

Q. Did you ever meet Ian Drew?

A. I think I eventually met Ian Drew, but I’m not sure when. I don’t believe I met him in Florida, though.

Q. Okay. So tell me about this conference call day. You said it involved the professionals in England?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you in a room where a conference call -- the conference call phone was?

A. Yes.

Q. Who else was present in that room?

A. Mr. Jackson. Mr. Konitzer. I just don’t remember if Mr. Weizner was present or not.

Q. Anybody else?

A. There were other people who came in and out. I mean, there was a bodyguard. Mike -- I just knew him as Mike. I really wasn’t focused on anybody else. We had a table with a phone, and we spent close to two hours going over the Granada documents and the issues associated with going after Granada.

Q. Did you discuss the public relations aspect of the Bashir documentary on Mr. Jackson?

A. There was some discussion that there was, you know, likely to be, you know, increased PR, and the solicitor/barrister team in the UK wanted to engage a PR firm.

Q. So was Bell Yard employed at that time?

A. I don’t think so. I think this was preliminary discussion. The UK folks weren’t even 100 percent sure that they would follow through with taking any action. They really -- this was -- it was a very significant conversation, but it was also exploratory on their part.

Q. And was Mr. Jackson concerned about the fallout in a public relations sense from the Martin Bashir film?

A. I don’t recall Mr. Jackson making a specific statement about being concerned about the fallout from the Bashir film. He seemed very concerned about the -- blurring the images of his children, of wanting to enforce his agreement with Mr. Bashir to edit -- to screen the video and edit the video before it was aired.

Q. Let’s talk about the agreements that you reviewed concerning the Bashir film. You expressed some concern after reviewing those agreements, true?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you discuss those concerns with Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you were employed as Mr. Jackson’s attorney, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Your fiduciary responsibility was to him?

A. Yes.

Q. To him alone?

A. To him and his affiliated companies, yes.

Q. Okay. So you owed no responsibility to Mr. Konitzer or Mr. Weizner?

A. As part of our representation of Mr. Jackson, we specifically disclosed to Mr. Konitzer that we would no longer, you know, provide any representation to him, and we just had a conflict disclosure document.

Q. To avoid a conflict of interest?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you have any sense of why Mr. Konitzer chose you to become a part of this team?

A. He stated to me that he appreciated that I had a perspective more of a businessman than a lawyer in some of our discussions, and that he wanted the kind of breadth of experience that I brought. That was what he expressed to me.

Q. Did you have a sense that he liked you?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you like Mr. Konitzer at the time?

A. Yes. I found Ronald to be pleasant and engaging.

Q. Now, did you ever have a discussion with Mr. -- I'll back up.

I think you did mention that you had a discussion with Mr. Jackson about entering into the agreement to do the Bashir interview.

A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson tell you that Martin Bashir was responsible for the Princess Diana documentary?

A. I don't think Mr. Jackson told me that, but somebody else did. I'm not sure who, but I did know that.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson inform you that doing an interview with Mr. Bashir could be something that could reignite or renew his career?

MR. MESEREAU: Calls for speculation.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm asking if Mr. Jackson informed him of that.

THE WITNESS: No, Mr. Jackson never made such a statement.

THE COURT: I'm sorry, there's an objection pending. You need to rephrase the question, please.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: My question is, did Mr. Jackson ever inform you that he did the Martin Bashir interview because he perceived it to be a positive public relations opportunity to help renew his career?

A. No.
Q. Did Mr. Jackson ever indicate that Martin Bashir was unwilling to do the interview in a fashion in which Mr. Jackson would be paid?
A. I don’t believe Mr. Jackson ever made that statement to me. He did confirm to me that he did not expect money from -- you know, payment for the production; that he had agreed to do that without a fee. He --
Q. Okay. And you mentioned you had some experience in business aspects of preparation of legal documents and such for these types of documentaries?
A. No. I indicated that I really had not had substantive experience in entertainment law.
Q. Well, then, how is it that you were able to form an opinion that these documents were inadequate?
A. Because, from my experience in general commercial business, a vague, one-paragraph agreement is simply inadequate under any circumstance for just about any transaction, let alone something of this type.

Secondly, I very quickly consulted with the Paul Hastings firm and had Mr. John Genga review the documents and discussed with him the agreements.
Q. Now, are you aware that Mr. Jackson has engaged in numerous enterprises similar to this one that he engaged in with Mr. Bashir?
A. I’m really not aware of the scope of Mr. Jackson’s enterprises.
Q. You’re aware he’s an entertainer, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And that he engages in numerous contracts and business negotiations involving entertainment?
A. Yes.
Q. And you realize that this particular documentary was a form of entertainment intended to be broadcast internationally on televisions, correct?
A. Yeah. I’m not sure about “entertainment,” but, yes, I agree it was a production for broadcast.

Q. Okay. And are you aware of the -- any policy or custom among journalists not to pay for interviews of this type?

A. Yes. I am aware that journalists generally -- that's why I questioned the word "entertainment," because my experience and understanding is that entertainment, they do pay. When it's news, documentary, interview, there is not payment customarily.

Q. All right. Fair enough.

Now, during the discussions with Mr. Jackson -- I want to get back to this perception. Did Mr. Jackson in any way perceive this documentary to present him in a positive light?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; calls for speculation.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'll rephrase that. That's fair.

Q. Did he ever indicate that to you, that he perceived that this production was going to portray him in a positive light?

A. Mr. Jackson expressed to me the language in the one -- in these agreements that Mr. Bashir was to -- and I'm paraphrasing. Mr. Bashir was to produce a documentary reflective of Mr. Jackson's life as Mr. Jackson knew it.

Mr. Jackson's statement to me was that he felt very comfortable with Martin Bashir during the production of the -- you know, the various filmings, and that he expected Mr. Bashir to honor Mr. Bashir's agreement to allow Mr. Jackson to review the final footage and have some input to the final footage.

We, the various lawyers, asked Mr. Jackson several times to explain what he meant by, you know, "faithful to his life as he knew it," and Mr. Jackson didn't use the word "positive." He expected accuracy, sincerity in this documentary.

Q. Okay. But is it safe to say that he saw this as a public relations opportunity?

A. I don’t know what he saw it as.

Q. Has Mr. Jackson ever expressed to you the public relations maxim that there is no such thing as bad publicity?

A. Mr. Jackson never made such a statement to me.

Q. And in terms of the interview with Mr. Jackson, did you, as the lawyer, as Mr. Jackson’s lawyer -- you said you saw this particular production, correct?

A. I did eventually see it later. I think it was like, you know, the week later, but yes.

Q. And you certainly had a front row seat for the repercussions that ensued; fair to say?

A. Yes.

Q. And would you agree that this production was a public relations disaster for Mr. Jackson?

A. I don’t have a lot to judge by on the scale of PR events, but clearly this had a lot of negative aspects from the press. The initial press in the UK was very negative about Mr. Jackson. The initial press in the United States was, you know, very negative. There were, you know, what I would call talking heads, various people clamoring for an investigation of Mr. Jackson. There were people saying his children should be removed from his custody. I mean, so it was very negative. I mean, you know --

Q. Does that fit your definition of a disaster?

A. It comes pretty darned close.

Q. You yourself used the word “a media frenzy.” Is that what you described it as?

A. Yeah.

Q. And that everything was frantic?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was all negative, true?

A. Yeah. There were certainly some people who were standing up for Mr. Jackson, and there were certainly people who were highly negative of Martin Bashir’s voiceovers, the editing. There was -- largely negative. But there were certainly some people saying, “Hey, wait a minute. This was a hatchet job.”

Q. Let me just rephrase it.

I’m not talking about the people who were reacting to -- maybe reacting negatively towards Mr. Bashir. I’m talking about the people’s reaction to this film. The people who saw this film or reacting to this film had a negative impression of Mr. Jackson?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; asked and answered.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll strike that.

Q. Now, you just said it was a hatchet job.

Was it a hatchet job -- let’s back up a moment.

Isn’t it a fact that the media frenzy, the bulk of this negative public relations disaster or whatever comes close to a disaster, dealt with Mr. Jackson’s admission to the world that he liked to sleep with little boys? That was one of the major outcries; isn’t that fair to say?

A. I think that’s fair to say.

Q. And Martin Bashir did not misrepresent that, did he? Michael Jackson actually said that, and he repeated it, didn’t he?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: There’s no confusion over what Michael Jackson likes to do with young boys, and that’s what upset the world; fair to say?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Argumentative; misstates the evidence.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll strike it.

Q. And there was also a tremendous amount of negative public attention towards the fact that Mr. Jackson hung his child out over the balcony; isn’t that true?

A. That’s true.

Q. Mr. Jackson actually did that, didn't he?

A. As far as I know.

Q. I mean, Martin Bashir didn't make that happen, did he?

A. I wasn't there, I didn't see it, but certainly that's what I've seen on the video.

Q. So there's nothing unfair about Martin Bashir's commentary regarding that?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Calls for -- excuse me. Argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: There was also a tremendous amount of negative attention given to Mr. Jackson's remarks about surgeries that he's had, and just people not believing he was being honest about that, isn't that true, one of the things that people were concerned about?

A. You know, I find it difficult to answer about -- questions about what people thought. I mean, what I know is what I saw reported in the press.

Q. And that's where --

A. It's hard for me to say what's in people's minds. But I did see printed articles questioning the veracity of Mr. Jackson with respect to the number of surgeries.

Q. And there was concern about the issues dealing with his children and keeping them from their mother, or not having a mother for his children, whether that was a good thing?

A. There were certainly some commentators who wrote about that issue.

Q. And there was concern about the issue dealing with the kids at the zoo, the threat to the safety of his children when they went to the zoo and there was somewhat of a media frenzy at that location?

A. Yeah, I remember some commentators questioning the propriety of that zoo trip.

Q. And weren't these the very things that the media was most focused on in terms of this media frenzy? I mean, this list that I've given you?

There are probably others, but --

A. If you’re asking me for my assessment of the media, I’d say you fairly well categorized the bulk of what was the uproar at that time, yes.

Q. Okay. Now, do you know how long Mr. Jackson’s relationship with Dieter Weizner, how far it preexisted your involvement with Michael Jackson?

A. No, I don’t. I mean, I don’t know when that relationship began.

Q. What about Mr. Konitzer?

A. Mr. Konitzer told me that he met Mr. Jackson through Mr. Weizner, and I believe that was in early 2002. But it could have been late ‘01, but it was that time frame. It was not, you know, back in the 1990s.

Q. Do you know why there was a decision to clean house at this particular juncture in Mr. Jackson’s -- Mr. Jackson’s business?

A. Well, I know what Mr. Jackson told me. And I know what Mr. Konitzer told me.

Q. All right. Why don’t you just tell me what Mr. Jackson told you.

A. Mr. Jackson told me that he no longer had confidence in John Branca. He was not pleased with Barry Siegel’s handling of funds. And he was very interested and enthusiastic about the Konitzer ten-year MJ universe business plan.

Q. The MJ business plan was largely a plan to try and reinvent Mr. Jackson as a superstar, wasn’t it?

A. To a degree, yes. I mean, originally the plan was premised upon acquiring a controlling interest in Marvel.

Q. I’m sorry? Marvel?

A. Marvel. Spiderman.

Q. Okay.

A. Fantastic Four, et cetera.

Q. And there was -- part of this was to market Michael Jackson’s name and image in various other products? Was that part of the MJ universe scheme of things?

A. Yes, that was part of it.
Q. And Dieter Weizner had been involved in marketing Michael Jackson products for a long period of time; isn't that true?
A. Yeah. I don't know for how long, but, yes, he was certainly involved, especially in Germany, in distribution of products.
Q. And Michael Jackson had a long business relationship with Mr. Weizner, didn't he?
A. Yeah. Again, I don't know how long, but it -- from the paperwork I saw later, it was certainly a couple of years.
Q. And based upon what you saw, you understood that Michael Jackson trusted Mr. Weizner based upon a long-standing business relationship, correct?
A. Again, I don't know how long-standing. Certainly Mr. Jackson seemed to have a good relationship with Mr. Weizner.
Q. All right. And Mr. Konitzer certainly had a longer relationship with Mr. Jackson than you did; fair to say?
A. Yes. Yes.
Q. And in part of this cleaning of house, Mr. Jackson decided to personally fire his attorney who he had been with for more than a decade?
A. Yes.
Q. And he wrote a letter dismissing that attorney, didn't he?

A. Yes.
Q. He decided to personally fire his business manager at the time?
A. Yes.
Q. And he personally took care of that as well?
A. He executed documents that I delivered on his behalf, yes.
Q. And you did that because that's what he told you he wanted to do?
A. Yes.
Q. He personally fired his entertainment manager?
A. Yes.

Q. Again, part of the cleaning house; part of what he wanted you to do?

A. Yes.

Q. And then a month after hiring you, he personally fired you?

A. Yes. Well, two months, three months. But yes, two months.

Q. Okay. And in -- sometime in January, or before that time, he decided -- Mr. Jackson decided that he wanted to put Ronald Konitzer and Dieter Weizner in charge of his enterprises?

A. Yes. That’s what he told me.

Q. Yes. That was his decision, correct?

A. As far as I know.

Q. I mean, that’s what Mr. Jackson told you,

right?

A. Yes.

Q. And as his attorney, you mentioned that you had a fiduciary duty to him, and part of that fiduciary duty is to keep him informed of everything, correct?

A. I’m not sure what “everything” is.

Q. Everything that is material, everything that is important, everything that is necessary for him to make informed decisions, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. So the month of February comes, and the Michael Jackson/Martin Bashir documentary airs. You said that things became frantic. Is that when things started to get frantic?

A. The pace picked up immediately when I returned to Las Vegas from Florida and we began interviewing for the replacement of the money manager.

Q. And ultimately you settled on Ed Gross?

A. I think it’s Ed Grossman.

Q. Ed Grossman? Was that Michael Jackson’s decision, based upon your advice, to choose Ed Grossman?

A. It was Ronald Konitzer. We discussed it. I know we had a phone call with Mr. Jackson; asked him if he wanted us to go ahead with that recommendation.

Q. Did you inform him of all the particulars regarding that decision in hiring Ed Grossman?

A. Well, he had already told me, when I was in Florida, that he wanted to --

Q. I'm sorry. Who --

A. Mr. Jackson had told me, when he was in Florida, that he wanted Barry Siegel to go and someone else to be engaged.

Q. So did he --

A. And he told us to find somebody, you know, appropriate.

Q. Okay. And did he ultimately okay or make the decision to go with Ed Grossman?

A. I don't remember a specific, "Yes, go with Ed Grossman" conversation. I know that Ed Grossman met with Barry Siegel. Barry Siegel requested authority from Mr. Jackson for transferring, and we provided that authority in the form of a document signed by Mr. Jackson to Mr. Siegel instructing him to transfer.

Q. Okay. So Mr. Jackson signed a document basically instructing that the transfer of his business management interests were going to Ed Grossman?

A. Well, the cash management.

Q. Yeah. The cash management. Ed Grossman is International Business Management, correct?

A. I think so, yes.

Q. IBM, right? So that transaction can't occur without Mr. Jackson's permission, correct?

A. Well, Mr. Konitzer and Dieter Weizner had a limited power of attorney. I'm not sure, as I sit here, whether that was within the scope of power or not, whether they could have done that. But my belief is, my recollection is that Mr. Jackson authorized the transfer to Ed Grossman, International Business Management.

Q. Did you prepare that limited power of attorney?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And you have no recollection of whether it gives him -- gives Ronald Konitzer the authority to make that transfer on his own?

A. I know there were some limitations on what the authority was, but I don’t remember the specifics. I haven’t looked at that document now for a very long time.

Q. And do you recall who directed you as to what limitations were to be placed on Mr. Konitzer regarding that power of attorney?

A. Actually, I was the one who created limitations, and I specifically consulted with Mr. Jackson about that.

Q. Do you consider Mr. Jackson to be intelligent, an intelligent person?

A. Yes.

Q. When he had business discussions with you, would he ask intelligent questions?

A. Some times more than others. But, yes.

Q. So we go into the month of February. Did this public relations frenzy get better, or worse, or stay the same? You tell me.

A. I’m not sure that I can characterize it. It was certainly bad. And as the program aired in the U.S., you know, there was continued press. I’m not sure how long that press, that -- you know, that continued.

Q. At some point you brought Ann Gabriel on?

A. Yes.

Q. That was your decision?

A. Not mine alone. I --

Q. Who else participated in that?

A. Mr. Konitzer.

Q. Did you recommend Ann Gabriel?

A. Yes.

Q. And she was to help out with the U.S. public relations end of things; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And we’re talking about crisis management here, aren’t we, in terms of public relations? Public relations crisis management?

A. Yes.

Q. And eventually -- was Bell Yard hired before Ann Gabriel came on?

A. Yes.

Q. And Bell Yard is a crisis management public relations outfit, correct?

A. It’s certainly among their qualifications. They do a variety of PR work.

Q. Have you ever seen their letterhead?

A. Yes.

Q. And their letterhead says “Crisis Management” --

A. Yes.

Q. -- doesn’t it?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. So this was a public relations crisis, true?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Jackson was certainly aware of that?

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. Okay. So at some point Ann Gabriel felt that the public relations end of things was being mishandled in the United States; isn’t that true?

A. Yes.

Q. She told you or basically she informed you about the idea that Mr. Jackson should be more proactive?

A. Yes. That was her position.

Q. And there was a sentiment among Mr. Jackson’s people that this should be -- that they should not be proactive and that they should hunker down and weather this storm out?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That’s probably true. I’m not specific enough.

Q. Was there a consensus among anybody in Michael Jackson’s inner circle that this storm should be weathered by hunkering down and avoiding the spotlight?

A. I’m not sure there was consensus. There was certainly voices, you know, on all sides of how to address the PR aspects.

Q. But hunkering down was viewed as a legitimate PR strategy; is that true?

A. Yeah --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.

THE WITNESS: Oh, sorry.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes. I mean, subsequently Mr. Dezenhall was engaged, and his advice consistently was to, as you say, hunker down.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And he was the man who replaced Ann Gabriel, correct?

A. I’m not sure I would use the word “replaced.” But Eric was certainly engaged to shoulder a significant portion of the PR strategy responsibility.

Q. Now, as the month of February went on, were there other public relations issues that added to the media frenzy?

A. I don’t recall. Do you have an example?

Q. Well, let’s talk about the 60 Minutes interview, the planned 60 Minutes interview at Neverland. Do you remember about the date that that was to take place?

A. I think it was the first full weekend in February.

Q. And would you agree that it’s a bad idea from a public relations standpoint to agree to have 60 Minutes interview you, have them come out, set up, bring their whole staff out to the West Coast, Ed Bradley, and then not show up for the interview?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. I’ll back up a little bit.

Q. Mr. Jackson didn’t show up to the 60 Minutes interview, did he?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You were there when 60 Minutes was preparing to shoot an interview with Michael Jackson, correct?

A. I was at Neverland at that time, yes.
Q. Okay. Did 60 Minutes ever shoot that interview featuring Ed Bradley and Michael Jackson?
A. No.
Q. And the reason for that is because Michael Jackson didn’t show up for the interview, correct?
A. You can’t shoot an interview if the interviewee is not cooperative.
Q. Yes. And he decided to change his mind and not do that interview?
A. That’s my understanding, yes.
Q. And one of the reasons for that was because the Complaint regarding the Jordie Chandler case had just come out on The Smoking Gun; isn’t that true?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. MESEREAU: Move to strike.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That’s fair.
Q. Do you know -- well, let me start over again.
The Jordie Chandler Complaint had just been published on The Smoking Gun, the Internet source for various documents; isn’t that true?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Are you aware if there was a publication of Mr. Jackson’s -- or I should say Jordie Chandler’s Complaint against Michael Jackson on The Smoking Gun at that time?

A. I remember that there was some publication on The Smoking Gun of some Chandler-related materials, but I’m not sure that I knew of that when I was at Neverland on that Saturday or not. I’m not sure when I learned of that in relation to that day. I may have known it. I just don’t remember.

Q. Were there also prominent articles regarding Mr. Jackson’s distressed financial condition during the month of February 2003 that contributed to this media frenzy?

A. I’m not sure whether “contributed” is the right word. I think they were part of the media attention to Mr. Jackson and his affairs, and yes, I remember some -- some postings and articles about his financial affairs.

Q. Let’s talk a little bit about Mr. Jackson’s financial affairs.

You said you’d done quite a bit of research into this area?

A. I’m not sure I said “research.” But I certainly exerted -- a considerable amount of my effort and attention went to getting a grasp of Mr. Jackson’s financial situation and financial affairs.

Q. Okay. So what would you call that?

A. Well, I mean, “research” to me is -- you know, as a lawyer, “research” is kind of technical. You go to LexisNexis and such. But, you know, clearly I was trying to get up to speed and obtain knowledge in order to properly advise Mr. Jackson.

Q. And you became aware that Mr. Jackson had a $200 million loan with the Bank of America that encumbered or was pledged against his ATV catalog with Sony?

A. Yeah. I think it’s the other way around, though.

Q. The catalog --

A. Mr. Jackson had pledged his ownership interest in the Sony/ATV joint venture. That’s the pledge of the collateral to Bank of America.

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. He had a $70 million loan for which he had pledged his interest in the MIJAC catalog with the Bank of America?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were aware that Mr. Jackson had accrued this enormous debt to finance -- help finance his very expensive lifestyle?

A. I’m not sure what I knew about how the debt accrued. And that’s the only piece. I knew he accrued the debt and I knew he didn’t have a lot of assets to show for the money that had been spent from those loans.
Q. Well, didn’t you write a letter to Mr. Jackson telling him that he’s spending approximately $20,000 more every year than he makes, or I should say $20 million more every year than he makes?

A. Yes.
Q. I have a hard time saying that.
A. Yeah, I did write a letter. My analysis was more current. I just mean I didn’t review his expenses going back for, you know, how the entire 200 million of debt came into existence. That’s all I meant.
Q. All right.
A. Clearly I was concerned about his current rate of expenditure versus the money he had available to cover those expenses.
Q. And you mentioned in that letter that you perceived Mr. Jackson to be on the verge of bankruptcy unless some action was taken, true?
A. Yes, that’s true.
Q. You also talk a little bit about the fact that he has $10 million in unpaid vendors, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Some of those bills go back years; is that fair to say?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; Court order.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And as far as your testimony about the value of this ATV catalog, you said that you are not an expert in this area; isn’t that accurate?

A. Correct.
Q. You really have no idea about what Mr. Jackson’s interest is in the ATV catalog, correct?
A. I certainly have an idea. I can’t say I’m a qualified business appraiser capable of fully evaluating that asset, no.

Q. Well, are you aware that Bank of America at the time had a right of first refusal on that asset?

A. I did find that out. I’m not sure exactly when. You know, these were a lot of documents that we had to digest, so this took a few weeks. But eventually I did come to learn that. But I’m not sure -- actually, I’m not so sure that the bank --

Q. I’m sorry. I’m sorry, I misspoke.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. He’s cutting off the witness.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You can finish your answer.

A. I don’t think the bank had the right. I think Sony actually -- whether it was Sony or Sony/ATV itself had a first right on Mr. Jackson’s interests.

Q. You’re correct. I think I misspoke. I meant to say Sony.

So Sony had a right of first refusal on that catalog?

A. Yes.

Q. So he didn’t have the right to sell it without Sony’s permission, correct, or without giving Sony the right to buy it first?

A. Yes, that’s correct.

Q. Okay. And as far as your general knowledge of this -- I’m just looking back at some of the words you said. You said you’re not up to speed on his interest in this catalog so you don’t really know what it’s worth.

A. I looked at some of the public, you know, materials available about Sony and Sony/ATV. I did talk to a couple of people in the industry, just in general, about, you know, what do these catalogs sell for, what kind of value.

At the time, this was during -- you know, I was very concerned about the value, though, because at the time we had the rise of the Internet and, you know, pirating of material, and so there was concern over the future of revenue streams to be derived from some of these large catalogs because of the piracy that was rampant.

Q. And that concerned these catalogs?

A. So that affects catalog values. The right to first refusal affect catalog values. I mean, because it’s not just the underlying asset. It wasn’t that simple. You know, as most dealings involving hundreds of millions dollars are not simple. And so to say to someone, “Oh, you can write a check and buy this for X dollars,” it just wasn’t that easy.

Q. And those concerns that you had were concerns that the catalog really wasn’t worth what it had been previously appraised at, true?

A. Well, I didn’t know that. Let me put it this way: I believe that a best -- you know, a good, strong scenario existed to get to the numbers that I posited, that 200 million. But those were not meant to be precise. They were meant to be an illustration of what could be achieved.

Sony had bought additional assets into that catalog. I had no way of knowing exactly at that moment in time what Sony had paid, what debts the catalog had to repay Sony for any of that investment. Sony was funding the enhancement of the catalog. They continued to put money in and purchase more assets. I have to believe that Sony were good businesspeople and that they were buying assets that had good value and would continue to have value.

So -- but ultimately to work with the financial elements of something like this, you would have to have, you know, a Goldman Sachs or some sort of investment banking firm come in and do analysis, review.

And it’s been widely reported in the press that that happened in the last few months, six months or whatever.

Q. So you didn’t consider the fact that -- or you didn’t factor in, in your analysis, the fact that Sony had been depositing copyrights into this catalog over a period of years, Mr. Jackson had deposited no additional copyrights into this catalog, thereby decreasing Mr. Jackson’s relative interest in the ATV catalog? You didn’t factor that into your analysis, did you? “Yes” or “no.”

A. I’m not sure that’s a correct statement.

Q. Well, didn’t you factor in that Mr. Jackson just had a half interest in whatever the catalog was worth? Isn’t that what your simple dynamic was?

A. My dynamic view rested on that. I did not take into account whether or not there was a right on Sony’s part to get paid back for invested dollars first. I did not consider that possibility at that time.

Q. And you didn’t consider it to be a possibility that Sony was going to gift Mr. Jackson interest in those copyrights that they were depositing over those years, did you?

A. I don’t expect Sony to gift much of anything to anybody. But it wasn’t about gifting the copyrights. Mr. Jackson owned half of the entity that owned the copyrights.

Q. Right. But owning half of the entity doesn’t mean his financial interest is 50/50, does it?

A. No. From a legal perspective, those two are readily separable.

Q. Okay. And I want to talk about his financial interest in that catalog, so I want to focus on your knowledge about those facts.
Were you aware that Mr. Jackson had been receiving guaranteed payments on the royalties from that catalog that in effect reduced his financial interest in the ATV catalog substantially over a number of years? Were you aware of that?

A. At the time I wrote that letter, no. I actually became aware of that later in a conversation with Mr. Malnik.

Q. So you know now that his interest in that catalog is not worth half of whatever its market value is?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And if a financial expert who had considered all these dynamics came into court and testified that Mr. Jackson’s interest in that catalog is, at most, $200 million total, you would have no reason to quibble with that, would you?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; improper question.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, let me just summarize that you really didn’t consider all the factors to ascertain exactly what Mr. Jackson’s financial interest is in the ATV catalog, correct?

A. I did not consider all of the possible factors, correct.

Q. So you cannot tell us -- you really don’t have an idea of how much Mr. Jackson’s financial interest is worth in the ATV catalog, true?

A. I never pretended to really know, as a qualified business appraiser, what the value of Mr. Jackson’s interest in that catalog was.

Q. Okay.

A. I was merely trying to suggest a course of action that could determine that value and hopefully produce a positive economic outcome for Mr. Jackson.

Q. Who is Fire Mountain?

A. Fire Mountain is a limited liability company that was formed in Nevada, and it is a hundred-percent-owned subsidiary, I believe, of MJJ Productions.

Q. Are you aware of covenants and conditions in the Bank of America loans that prevent Mr. Jackson from encumbering the ATV catalog or the MIJAC catalog in any way additionally, additionally encumbering those assets?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And are you aware that the covenants and conditions of the Bank of America loan have some very rigorous guidelines about income for Mr.

Jackson?

A. I eventually obtained those loan documents and became better acquainted with the provisions in those documents.

Q. And one of the reasons for those covenants and conditions is because if Mr. Jackson was to come into any additional wealth, Bank of America was to be informed of it so that they could get in line to help pay for interest, pay for -- pay down those loans; isn’t that true?

A. I’m not sure I -- I’d like to defer to the language of the document.

There is no question that Bank of America replenished the credit line note through, I believe it’s the MIJAC catalog. Revenues would be deposited to replenish that credit line.

Q. Do you know if the formation -- let me back up a moment.

What was the purpose of Fire Mountain LLC?

A. It was to isolate liability, any liabilities associated with the production of the “Take 2” video.

Q. Was it also designed to be used to isolate liabilities in association with other FOX releases, like the home movies, anything of that nature?

A. Not initially.

Q. But it developed into that?

A. There was -- I believe that eventually did result. But that wasn’t the initial -- that concept didn’t exist at the time of the formation of Fire Mountain.

Q. Did Ann Gabriel express a concern about making the “Take 2” documentary a money-making enterprise?

A. Yes.

Q. She perceived that to be negative in terms of public relations; that this should be done without any profit motive or any profit on behalf of Mr. Jackson, didn’t she?

A. Yes.

Q. And that advice was not heeded, was it?

A. No.

Q. And the reason for that is because Mr. Jackson was in severe financial distress, true?

A. He had payables of about ten million, and cash in the tens of thousands.

Q. About 30,000 in cash?

A. Whether it was 30 or 40 I don’t recall, but it was not near enough to pay for his payables.

Q. In addition, it was not nearly enough to pay for Mr. Jackson’s current lifestyle. I mean, he didn’t have the funds to pay for his current lifestyle, assuming a spending rate that he had exhibited in the past?

A. Clearly the payables accumulated to the ten-million-dollar level because the bills had not been paid previously.

Q. Okay. When you say that the LLC, limited liability corporation, Fire Mountain, was designed to limit or isolate liability, what do you mean by that?

A. Generally, it’s my understanding that the members of a limited liability company are not directly liable for the obligations of the company. So it has the kind of limited liability that a corporation would have.

Q. And you set that up?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was authorized to sign on behalf of Fire Mountain LLC?

A. For a while I was.

Q. Was Mr. Jackson also -- is he also somebody who could sign on behalf of Fire Mountain?

A. We ultimately delivered documents that MJJ Productions was the member and had the authorization to sign. And I believe Mr. Jackson was the principal officer of MJJ Productions.

Q. And the proceeds from the “Take 2” production, or the rebuttal film, all of the proceeds for that video or film went into Fire Mountain; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And there was a trust account established for Fire Mountain; isn’t that true?

A. Yes.

Q. And didn’t you set up that trust account?

A. I set up a trust account for a while. And ultimately that trust account was transferred to another attorney.

Q. Okay. But during the month of February 2003, you were in control of that trust account, weren’t you?

A. My firm had that trust account, yes.

Q. Okay. And $3 million came in from FOX for the “Take 2” production, correct?

A. I think that’s right, in the aggregate. It didn’t all come in at one time.

Q. But it came in in installments during the month of February 2003?

A. I’m not sure of the timing. But certainly some of it was in February. It might have been all in February. I’m really not sure.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. If I could just have a moment.

Come on. I’m about to give up on this backing.

Q. I’m going to show you a document which I intend to mark as People’s Exhibit 898, and I’m doing so at this time. It appears to be a five-page document with a Hale Lane fax as the first page. Would you identify that for me, sir?

A. This looks like the trust listings from Hale Lane.

Q. And did you send that document to Michael Jackson at Neverland Ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. On what date?

A. April 1st, 2003.

Q. And did you do that as part of your duties as his attorney to keep him aware of financial matters regarding Fire Mountain LLC?

A. I did this as part of the wrapping-up process of my responsibility for matters for Mr. Jackson other than the Granada litigation.

Q. Yes. But my question is, was that communication made to inform Mr. Jackson of financial matters regarding the Fire Mountain LLC?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. It’s an accounting, isn’t it?

A. Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’d ask to move People’s Exhibit 898 into evidence at this time.

MR. MESEREAU: No objection.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And if we could have the Elmo.

Q. Mr. LeGrand, in terms of the proceeds from the FOX production -- sorry -- the “Take 2” production, you were essentially -- let me just -- sorry about that.

You were in charge of disbursement of funds, correct?

A. Well, in my view, the funds belonged to Mr. Jackson, and Mr. Konitzer and Mr. Weizner had authority --

BAILIFF CORTEZ: I’m sorry, sir. You need to talk into the --

THE WITNESS: Oh, I’m sorry.

The funds belonged to -- ultimately to Mr. Jackson through his company. And Mr. Konitzer and Mr. Weizner had the power to direct expenditures. So I didn’t.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Mr. Weizner had the power to direct expenditures?

A. Mr. Konitzer and Mr. Weizner had authority from Mr. Jackson, pursuant to the power of attorney, to direct expenditures.

Q. Did Mr. Weizner and Mr. Konitzer have powers of attorney?

A. There was one power that was joint.

Q. Okay. And Mr. Jackson signs many powers of attorneys, doesn’t he?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You have prepared more than one power of attorney for Mr. Jackson, have you not?

A. I don’t recall more than the one power getting executed. There may have been more than one draft of a power, but I don’t remember more than one power actually getting executed.

Q. You have seen a number of powers of attorneys that have been executed by Michael Jackson, have you not?

A. I’m not sure.

Q. All right. I’ll come back to that.

Let’s go down this list.

The very first entry that we have here shows an incoming wire from FOX Broadcasting Company of $750,000.

Was that part payment for the “Take 2” production?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. There is a disbursement to Stuart Backerman, right here on the second line, 2-13-2003, $6,000.

Who’s Stuart Backerman?

A. Mr. Backerman was a PR person.

Q. Okay. And he was part of this -- maybe on the outer fringes of this team --

A. Um --

Q. -- addressing the media crisis?

A. He was engaged in providing media services for Mr. Jackson, yes.

Q. So there’s -- on 2-13, there’s a disbursement of, I believe that’s $50,000 -- I’m sorry, so you can see that, I believe that’s $80,000 to Hale Lane.

Is that $80,000 to pay for your legal fees?

A. That was to the firm to pay for legal services, yes.

Q. So that paid for your services.

And then there’s an $11,000 cash disbursement. Do you know where that went, on 2-13?

A. It went in a wire, that’s reflective of the wire to Katrin Konitzer, I believe.

Q. Now, there’s funds sent Western Union, $2,000 to Katrin Konitzer.

Are you saying this $11,000 figure is related to Katrin Konitzer?

A. I’m not sure. The 11,000 -- there’s the next entry of distribution of 11,000 cash to purchase.

Q. Okay.

A. And I think that the 11,000 is composed of the 2,000 to Kathryn, the 4500 to Sandra, and the 4500 -- anyway, the 4500, 4500 and 2,000 equal the 11.

Q. Do you know who Sandra Hawk is?

A. I believe she’s an assistant to Mr. Konitzer. That’s what I was told.

Q. Somebody who worked for Mr. Konitzer?

A. Yes.

Q. And what about Canon Kasikci?

A. I believe that -- I was told that was a consultant working with Mr. Konitzer.

Q. Okay. On Mr. Jackson’s behalf?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what type of consultant?

A. No.

Q. Next we have, on the same date, $150,000 going out to Neverland Valley Entertainment.

A. Yes.

Q. You sent that?

A. My firm wired that money, yes.

Q. Did you have anything to do with it?

A. I’m sure I did.

Q. Okay. That’s my question.

So you were involved in sending out $150,000 to Neverland Valley Entertainment; is that fair to say?

A. Yes.

Q. I take it that went to your client, Mr. Jackson?

A. It went to Neverland Valley Entertainment.

Q. I’m sorry, I’m misspeaking. Neverland Valley Entertainment is not Mr. Jackson, is it?

A. I believe that’s a corporation that is -- I believe that's not owned by Mr. Jackson.

Q. Okay. It's not owned by Mr. Jackson? Only tell me if you know.

A. There were some confusing names. I'm not sure -- I'm really not sure today. I'm sorry.
Q. Under whose direction did you send that $150,000 out to Neverland Valley Entertainment?
A. Mr. Konitzer and Mr. Weizner.
Q. Okay. Next you sent out a wire for Mr. Konitzer, $90,000, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Mr. Konitzer's direction. $10,000 for Gabriel Media. That would be Ann Gabriel?
A. Yes.
Q. Whose direction was that?
A. Ronald Konitzer's.
Q. Okay. Dieter Weizner got 110,000. I'm assuming that was Mr. Konitzer and Mr. Weizner's directive?
A. Yes.
Q. Joseph Marcus, $35,000. Who told you to send Joseph Marcus $35,000?
A. Mr. Konitzer and Mr. Weizner.
Q. Okay. Do you know who Joseph Marcus is?
A. I believe he's the -- I'm not sure what his title is. He helps run Neverland for Mr. Jackson.
Q. All right.
THE COURT: Let's take our break.
(Recess taken.)
THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you, Your Honor. Could we have the -- yeah, thank you.
Q. All right. Mr. LeGrand, where we left off, we were talking about Joe Marcus. Now, I'm not going to go through all of these, but did you ever talk to Mr. Jackson about this trust account?
A. I don't recall a specific conversation with Mr. Jackson about this trust account. I do recall telling Mr. Jackson about what we were doing; that is, what I and the other lawyers were doing, and how we were using proceeds from the FOX video to help pay for the various legal and other services.

Q. So Mr. Jackson was being kept apprised about these expenditures?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; misstates the evidence.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: Not in detail, line by line.
This was a conversation that, “We are utilizing these proceeds in this fashion.”
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: So certainly, when you made a major expenditure, you got some clearance from Mr. Jackson; is that fair to say?
A. I don’t recall getting a specific authority from Mr. Jackson for any particular expenditure.
Q. Okay.

A. He indicated to me he was satisfied with the way things were being handled, that he had confidence in Mr. Konitzer, Mr. Weizner, and the lawyers, and the people that were working at this time, and he wanted us to continue working.
Q. All right. Moving down the list just a little bit, I’ll point out the -- let’s see. There appears to be another $750,000. Maybe that’s the first -- let me pull this down a little bit.
Okay. So we’ve got an incoming wire from FOX for 750,000. We had another incoming wire from FOX for $750,000.
Was that also on the “Michael Jackson “Take 2”” video?
A. Yes.
Q. And then, finally, we had another incoming wire for one-million-five on 2-22-03.
Was that also from the “Take 2” video?
A. Yes.
Q. So this trust account essentially controlled the income and cash outflows for the FOX video, the “Michael Jackson 2”; is that fair to say?

I mean, this trust account reflects income and expenses for the FOX video that's known as "Michael Jackson "Take 2""?

A. It reflects the money coming in from FOX. It reflects expenditures going out, some of which were expenses relating to ""Take 2"," some of which were expenses relating to, you know, the Granada litigation, the engagement of Mr. Geragos, et cetera. So it's not all expenses relating to ""Take 2"."

Q. Okay. Moving down a little bit, we see, let's see here, an outgoing wire to Ken H. Finkelstein, $560,000.

What was that for?

A. That was at the instruction of Mr. Konitzer and Mr. Weizner.

Q. What was it for?

A. Mr. Finkelstein, as an attorney, was going to assume the primary responsibility for the rest of these proceeds.

Q. Okay. And did you talk to Mr. Finkelstein?

A. I believe the answer is yes. I don't remember the specific conversation, but I know I did have a conversation or two with Mr. Finkelstein.

Q. Okay. Did you ever meet Mr. Finkelstein?

A. No.

Q. There's another outgoing wire here, 3-25, 1,400,000 for Mr. Finkelstein.

Do you know what that was for?

A. Same as the 560.

Q. So it was the understanding that Mr. Finkelstein was going to undertake the management of this $560,000 disbursement and $1,400,000 disbursement on behalf of your client, correct?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Misstates the evidence; foundation.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm asking if that's the case.

THE WITNESS: That's the way I understood it from Mr. Konitzer.

THE COURT: The objection's overruled.

THE WITNESS: Sorry.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And we have -- moving down, we also have, just as an example, another sizeable incoming wire, 566,000, from Alfred Haber. Mr. Haber is the foreign rights distributor for the "Take 2" video; isn't that true?

A. Yes.

Q. So there was $3 million from FOX, plus additional hundreds of thousands of dollars that came in from foreign sources, correct?

A. Ultimately, yes. It came from Haber.

Q. Marketing the video overseas?

A. Yes.

Q. And everything's accountable. In other words, I should say everything is accounted for - is that fair to say - in your basic accounting here, in terms of dollars and cents.

A. I think the numbers add up, yes.

Q. And you sent this to Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: We no longer need the Elmo, Your Honor. Thank you.

Q. Mr. LeGrand, are you aware of whether or not the covenants and conditions of the Bank of America loan allow Mr. Jackson to funnel moneys such as these that were held in the Fire Mountain account in the manner in which they were disbursed?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; relevance.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: He said he reviewed these documents.

THE COURT: Foundation; sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did you review the covenants and conditions of the Bank of America loans?

A. Eventually, yes.

Q. And those loans prevent Mr. Jackson from having a company like Fire Mountain, LLC, which would effectively conceal funds coming into his possession, profits. Those covenants and conditions are in violation of that loan, aren't they?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; relevance; Court order.

THE COURT: Foundation; sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Do you know if the covenants and conditions of the Bank of America loan has a proscription, a rule against Mr. Jackson engaging in a company, starting an LCC like Fire Mountain as a profit enterprise? Do you know of that?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; relevance.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I don’t know today. I would have to look at the loan covenants. They were pretty detailed.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You have no recollection of whether there’s a loan covenant that prevents that?

A. The company in question was a subsidiary of MJJ Productions. It was not a new company started by Michael Jackson.

It’s really a complex question, sir, and I would need -- to give you a proper answer, I would need to review the document.

Q. Did you form Fire Mountain, LLC, to hide funds from the Bank of America?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; relevance.

THE COURT: Foundation; sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Tell me, who is Royalty Advance Funding?

A. I’m not sure who Royalty Advance Funding is.

But I met a person who I believe was associated with Royalty Advance Funding and discussed a proposal for a pledge of royalties, just as the name suggests, a pledge of royalties in exchange for a loan.

Q. And that individual’s name was Parviz?

A. Yes.

Q. All right.

A. That's right.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: If I may approach, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. Mr. LeGrand, I show you People's Exhibit No. 422 in a notebook. It appears to have multiple pages.

Have you ever seen the letterhead that is depicted on the first page of that group of documents?

A. I have no specific recollection of this letterhead. It's possible I've seen it, but I don't --

Q. Okay. I'm showing you page two of that document. There appears to be a signature in the lower right-hand corner. Do you recognize that signature?

A. Looks like Michael Jackson's signature.

Q. Are you familiar with Michael Jackson's signature?

A. Not extensively. But I've seen him sign documents, yes.

Q. On numerous occasions?

A. Reasonably often.

Q. Looking at the third page, there appears to be a signature at the bottom of the page. Does that appear to be Michael Jackson's signature?

MR. MESEREAU: No foundation, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Do you feel that you can recognize Michael Jackson's signature when you see it? I'm not asking you as an expert. I'm just asking you for a personal opinion.

A. I think so.

Q. How many times have you seen Mr. Jackson sign documents?

A. Half dozen to a dozen maybe.

Q. How many documents have you seen with Michael Jackson's signature on them?

A. More than a dozen.

Q. A hundred?

A. I would say shy of 100, sir.

Q. Something close to 100; would that be fair?

A. It could be. We had many, many documents that I looked at over a period of time.

Q. All right. I'll resubmit the same question to you. On page three, the lower right-hand corner, does that appear to be Michael Joe Jackson's signature?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: It appears to be his signature.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. The next page, also Mr. Jackson's signature?

A. Yes.

Q. There are initials on the following page. Have you ever seen Mr. Jackson's initials?

A. Yes.

Q. Do those appear to be his initials?

A. Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Same objection. Foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: The following page, another signature.

Does that appear to be Michael Jackson's signature?

A. Yes.

Q. I'm skipping ahead one page.

Does that appear to be Michael Jackson's signature on that page?

A. It certainly could be. It's somewhat different than the others, though.

Q. Does he often sign his name a little differently?

A. I've seen documents that vary somewhat in the size of the signature. I've seen it, you know, take up a third of a page, and the loops are sometimes a little different. I'm not an expert in handwriting, sir.

Q. In reviewing Mr. Jackson's financial condition, did it come to your attention that he ever possessed or loaned -- was loaned money by Royalty Advance Funding?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Beyond the scope; relevance; Court order.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You said that you were thinking about obtaining a loan or there was some discussion with Mr. Parviz about obtaining a loan on Mr. Jackson’s behalf from Royalty Advance Funding?

MR. MESEREAU: Same objection. Relevance; Court order.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: If Mr. Jackson had obtained a loan -- I’ll move on. I’ll move on.

All right. Let’s talk about some of the parties.

Did you meet -- I’m sorry, I believe you mentioned that you met Marc Schaffel?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where was -- where did you first meet Marc Schaffel?

A. At his residence in Calabasas.

Q. Okay. Did you ever have a discussion with Marc Schaffel about releases?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever have a discussion with Marc Schaffel about a script of questions that was to be asked the Arvizo family, or the Arvizos?

A. I don’t remember a script discussion.

Q. Did you ever discuss with Mr. Schaffel matters over the phone?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever have a phone conversation with Mr. Schaffel where you discussed questions which might be propounded to the Arvizo family during their filming for the “Take 2” video?

A. I don’t remember a conversation with Marc Schaffel where I enumerated a list of questions or we discussed specific questions that should or shouldn’t be asked of the Arvizos.

I -- we had -- Mr. Jackson -- we had engaged Mark Geragos to deal with anything that had relevance to potential criminal inquiries or inquiries with regards to, you know, custody of children, because in that original spout of publicity there were people saying, you know, his children should be removed from his custody, et cetera.

And, you know, I'm a corporate lawyer. So my primary mission was to engage Mr. Geragos -- or a part of the mission was to engage someone like Mr. Geragos to provide advice and assistance with respect to those types of matters. And to me, largely, the matters relating to what the -- whether the Arvizos should be in a video or anything of that sort was more Mr. Geragos's venue than mine.

Q. Okay. My question is, did you ever -- well, maybe we should start it this way: Did you ever have a discussion with Marc Schaffel about the Arvizos?

A. Yes.

Q. How many times did you discuss the Arvizos with Marc Schaffel?

A. I don't know. I mean, several.

Q. More than five?

A. Hmm. I'm not sure.

Q. You previously testified that the concern from the media about Michael Jackson sleeping with young boys was one of the major concerns; is that a fair paraphrasing of your testimony?

A. I don't know. It was certainly significant.

Q. And was it also a subject of great interest with the media, the subject of Gavin Arvizo in particular?

A. I'm not sure that I can summarize what the media's -- you know, where their attention was or wasn't focused at that time.

Q. You never had a discussion with any member of the PR team that said, "Gavin Arvizo is somebody everybody wants to know about," something along those lines?

A. It's possible, but I don't recall that specific conversation.

Q. Well, you saw the “Take 2” video, right?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Was it obvious to you that the world would want to know who this young boy is?

A. In the “Take 2” video?

Q. I’m sorry. I’m misspeaking. In the Martin Bashir video. Was it obvious to you that the young boy in that video, Gavin Arvizo, was going to be the subject of inquiry by the media? Was that obvious to you?

A. Yes.

Q. And you said you had these discussions with Mr. Schaffel, several, regarding the Arvizos. What did you talk to Mr. Schaffel about the Arvizos?

A. I expressed to Mr. Schaffel my concern that we needed, on Mr. Jackson’s behalf, to find a way to wean the Arvizos away from Mr. Jackson.

Q. Did you ever have any discussion with Mr. Schaffel about the Arvizos appearing in the “Take 2” video?

A. I know I spoke to Mr. Schaffel about doing some videotaping, but as to whether or not that would ultimately be included in the “”Take 2”,” no, I was not part of the editing. I played no role in the editing of the film for the “Take 2” video.

Q. But you did talk to Mr. Schaffel about it, correct?

A. In general terms, yes.

Q. Did you ever talk to Mark Geragos about it?

A. I know I had conversations with Mark Geragos about the “Take 2” video, the rebuttal footage that was being included.

I don’t know that I specifically had a conversation with Marc about the Arvizos being included or not in that video.

Q. Did you ever talk to Mr. Jackson about the “Take 2” video?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever talk to him about the Arvizos being included in it?

A. No.

Q. You were aware that the Arvizos were perceived as key players in the rehabilitation of Michael Jackson in the “Take 2” video, weren’t you?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Misstates the evidence; no foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Weren’t you aware that the Arvizos could play a critical role in the “Take 2”? video?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; misstates the evidence.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It’s a question. I’m not --

MR. MESEREAU: They weren’t in it, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Do you understand the question? Do you want it read back?

THE WITNESS: Please.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: I don’t remember that we -- that I or other members of the legal team and the PR team -- I don’t remember a discussion where it was said, “These are critical people and we have to have them included in the video.”

Our focus -- my focus in terms of the “Take 2” was the Bashir outtakes that Hamid had, because I believe, as presented in “”Take 2”,” that those revealed Martin Bashir to have been deceptive and perhaps at least less than forthcoming in his characterization in the Granada piece. That, to me, was really the critical element of “”Take 2”.”

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: But that isn’t what the media was upset about, was it? They were upset about Gavin Arvizo and sleeping with children, true?

A. It’s hard for me to answer questions about what the media was upset about, I’m sorry.

Q. Didn’t you read the newspapers at that time?

A. Sure, I read some newspapers at that time.

Q. Did you follow the Internet at that time?

A. When I had time, I tried to follow what was being put out by the media.

Q. Okay. And one of the things that the media was clamoring about is Gavin Arvizo, and Michael Jackson sleeping with boys, true?

A. I don’t -- I don’t remember how much of it was about Gavin Arvizo. There was certainly a lot of fuss about the sleeping with boys.

Q. You’re aware that there was a press release which indicated Janet Arvizo was going to be in the “Take 2” video, weren’t you?

A. I might have been. I don’t recall that press release today.

Q. Well, you’re aware that Brad Lachman Productions expected Janet Arvizo to be in that video, aren’t you?

A. I don’t know what Brad Lachman Productions expected or did not expect.

Q. Did you provide your file on Michael Jackson to anybody involved in this case?

A. Yes.

Q. Who?

A. I delivered my files to the then defense attorneys back in -- last year, to the Katten Muchin law firm in particular.

Q. Okay. Did you meet with Steve Cochran?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have a conversation with him?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you converse about the facts as far as your involvement in this part of Michael Jackson’s life, your capacity as an attorney?

A. Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, there was a period of privilege and then it was waived.

THE COURT: I’m sorry, I don’t understand what you’re saying.

MR. MESEREAU: Yeah, okay. There was a period where his communications were privileged and then we waived it.

THE COURT: I understand.

MR. MESEREAU: So I can’t speak for Mr.

Cochran, but I can speak for myself.

THE COURT: Maybe I'm not getting the significance. Do you want to approach and --

MR. MESEREAU: Sure.

THE COURT: I hear what you're saying, but I'm not understanding it.

(Discussion held off the record at sidebar.)

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you.

Q. How many meetings did you have with Mr. Cochran?

A. I think it was two. It might have been three. But I think it was two.

Q. And did you turn over your complete files?

A. Best of my knowledge, yes.

Q. Did you remove any documents from those files?

A. I don't recall removing any documents, no, sir.

Q. Is it possible you removed some files, some of those documents?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; calls for speculation.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'll strike that.

Q. Did the documents that you turned over to Mr. Cochran include billing statements?

A. I don't know.

Q. Did it include your personal notes?

A. I don't know. I mean, I turned over, I think it was, five boxes. It was multiple boxes of documents.

Q. Well, is it fair -- go ahead and finish.

A. Yeah, I'm not sure what all was in there.

Q. Is it fair to say those documents in their complete form would contain a number of pages of personal notes that you took during your representation of Mr. Jackson?

A. I don't know. I'd have to look through the boxes and see what's in there. We had files in numerous places. I had lawyers -- sometimes we had six different lawyers in my firm working on Michael-Jackson-related matters.

Q. I’m asking about your personal notes. You do write personal notes when you’re representing a client, correct?

A. Often.

Q. And you also have phone logs, true?

A. I’m not sure what you mean by a phone log, sir.

Q. Well, don’t you charge by the hour?

A. Yes.

Q. So you have billable hours, right?

A. Yeah. I keep time sheets, yes, sir.

Q. When you’re on the phone dealing with the client’s matters you’re billing for it, correct?

A. Generally, yes.

Q. So you keep notes of that?

A. Yeah. I keep time sheets, yes.

Q. So otherwise, you can’t bill for it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your complete files should include all those time sheets, correct?

A. I don’t remember whether the time sheets were included or not. My time sheets generally are converted into an electronic billing statement. And so I don’t generally keep the -- my handwritten -- I don’t even know where they go sometimes. I give them to a secretary.

Q. When you talk to your client over the phone, isn’t it part of an attorney’s duties to keep detailed notes of what his client is informing him to do so he can go back and refer to those notes in case there is some kind of conflict?

A. Yeah. No, it’s prudent practice to keep notes, and I do keep notes. I just don’t know whether the notes were -- ended up in what was delivered to Mr. Cochran’s law firm or not.

Q. Okay. I guess my next question is, where are your notes?

A. I don’t know. I moved from Hale Lane, and I -- I -- I honestly don’t know where those notes are. I’d have to go to Las Vegas and look.

Q. You have no idea where your notes are concerning personal conversations that you had with Michael Jackson when you represented him?
A. No, I’m really not. I think -- I know I have -- some of my notes are in a couple of boxes that I have because files moved with me to my new law firm.
Q. So are you saying that the files that you provided to Steve Cochran are incomplete and that you withheld some of the documents, including personal notes?
A. They -- I don’t know whether they include my personal notes or not. I would be pleased to look through what Mr. Cochran has and make that assessment. I don’t know today. That was close to, you know, nine months ago.
Q. Did you just testify that you have in your possession some personal notes in your new office?

A. Yes, I have some of my notes.
Q. From the Michael Jackson case?
A. Oh, I don’t know whether they’re from the Michael Jackson case or not.
Q. Did you ever perceive the Arvizo family as a liability to Michael Jackson?
A. I perceived the Arvizo family as a potential liability to Mr. Jackson.
Q. And Mr. Jackson engaged in a lawsuit against Granada, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And you desired to have the Arvizos join in that matter; isn’t that true?
A. It was not my personal decision and desire that they be included. I had, you know, engaged some very prominent, reputable barristers, solicitors, lawyers, to evaluate the best approach to suing Granada, and there was certainly consideration that the claims against Granada could be enhanced if the Arvizos were included as complainants.
Q. No release was ever obtained for Gavin Arvizo in the Martin Bashir film, was there?
A. I don’t believe so. I agree with you, and that's my belief. There was never a release to Granada.

Q. And are you aware that Michael Jackson arranged to have Gavin, Star, and his sister come to Neverland Ranch without their mother to film that segment of the Martin Bashir video?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Are you aware that Gavin was filmed as part of the Martin Bashir video?

A. Yes. I've seen the Martin Bashir video and Gavin was in it.

Q. And Martin Bashir filmed Gavin talking about his cancer, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And as far as you know, his mother never authorized Mr. -- or Gavin Arvizo to appear in that video?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Isn't that what you litigated with Granada, the fact that -- one of the facts that you were litigating involved Gavin's -- or the failure to obtain a release from Gavin or his mother? Isn't that one of the issues that you sought to bring to bear on Granada concerning this lawsuit?

A. Again, I have trouble with the lawsuit and the complaints before the Standards Board, the Broadcasting Board. I know for certain that was a concern and a claim made in the complaint to the Broadcasting Standards Board. I just don't remember whether that was also in the litigation. It's --

Q. Did Michael Jackson express any concern about having Gavin's face blanked out before the airing of the Martin Bashir video?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Beyond the scope; relevance.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Michael generally was concerned about the images of the children, not just his children, but the children.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m asking you if he ever expressed specifically a concern about having Michael -- about having Gavin Arvizo’s face blanked out in that film.

A. I don’t recall that -- Mr. Jackson making such a specific statement to me.

Q. Was it something you attempted to negotiate with Granada?

A. I don’t know.

Q. Did it occur to you when you saw that video that Gavin’s appearance in that video could be quite traumatic to a 13-year-old boy?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did you have any concern about Gavin Arvizo in terms of having his face blotted out on the Martin Bashir video?

A. I think the subject -- and I’m not certain. I think the subject came up in one of the teleconferences with the UK team. We were on a very short timeline to present a demand to Granada. The film was supposed to air on Monday, and we were trying to organize ourselves as the legal representatives over that weekend --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m going to object to the narrative.

THE WITNESS: Sorry

THE COURT: All right. Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: At some time in your attempts to keep the Arvizo family on board with this lawsuit, did you offer Janet Arvizo money?

A. I don’t know. I don’t -- I don’t -- I don’t remember offering her money. I only spoke with her once or twice. But I remember there were discussions about providing money for the Arvizos. And it wasn’t just, you know, for the video. It was goodwill and --

Q. Janet Arvizo was never paid a dime for the video; isn’t that true?

A. What video?

Q. The video that she made, that was taken of her by Hamid and Schaffel.

A. I don't know.

Q. Okay. You know --

A. I'm not aware of anything.

Q. Okay. There was never any intention to give her money, as far as you know, for her appearance in that video; is that fair to say?

A. There was -- I had a conversation with Mark Geragos at one point about doing something economically to help the Arvizos. Whether it was getting them an apartment with, you know, prepaid rent, some sort of economic accommodation to them.

Q. I'm talking about the video.

A. I do not recall any specific conversation of a payment for the appearance in the video.

Q. And did you not offer Janet Arvizo, through her attorney, Mr. Dickerman, $25,000 to stay on as plaintiffs in the Granada lawsuit?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. You do recall that now?

A. I do recall that, yeah.

Q. You also offered to take care of all the attorney's fees in terms of litigating that lawsuit, in addition to giving her $25,000; isn't that true?

A. Yeah. I'm not sure it was the lawsuit. I think that was the Broadcasting Standards Board complaint.

Q. Okay.

A. Okay.

Q. These were both litigations over some kind of money damages; is that fair to say?

A. No, it's not fair to say. The Broadcasting Standards Board complaint process is not an economic reward process. That is, if you are successful in the complaint, there is no damage award.

Q. What's the outcome?

A. Granada gets a -- if a complaint is upheld, the broadcaster is censured, or I believe there's a potential for fines, but it’s very rare.

Q. Okay. So you offered Janet Arvizo money because you wanted Granada censured; is that true?

A. We wanted to -- as a strategic matter, we wanted to maintain both complaints before the Broadcasting Standards Board, because we viewed that as positive leverage in the lawsuit.

Q. Okay. And all positive leverage aside, Janet Arvizo did not want Michael Jackson’s money, did she?

A. I don’t know what Janet Arvizo did or didn’t want.

Q. It was turned down. Your offer was turned down; isn’t that true?

A. Well, that’s true.

Q. Okay. Would it be positive leverage to keep Gavin, I guess, and Janet, the Arvizo family, in that lawsuit because they were perceived as people who were wronged in the filming of that video? Isn’t that fair to say?

A. It was leverage because it was a good, strong, colorable claim in front of the Broadcasting Standards Board.

Q. Do you disagree with what I said, that they were perceived to be people who were wronged by that action?

A. I don’t know how they were perceived. I know we crafted a complaint and filed a complaint that made allegations to that effect. I just -- I can’t answer about perceptions. I’m sorry.

Q. Well, you perceived it to be a situation where the Arvizos had leverage, additional leverage in this lawsuit because they suffered from it; isn’t that true? Or do you disagree with that?

A. It was -- again, I don’t -- I don’t recall their participation in the lawsuit. This was a complaint before the Broadcasting Standards Board. And there were two complaints filed. Originally there was one complaint filed, and the Broadcasting Standards Board said, “No, this is wrongly pled, and the Arvizos’ complaint has to be a separate and distinct complaint from Mr. Jackson’s complaint.”

So we filed a complaint -- the UK lawyers filed a complaint on behalf of the Arvizos before the Broadcasting Standards Board.

Parallel, there is a lawsuit going on in a court in England.

Q. I'm going to object to the narrative.

I would just ask you -- I don't want to quibble about lawsuits versus complaints, okay? It's the semantics. I want to know --

MR. MESEREAU: Move to strike counsel's comments.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Just trying to express my question.

THE COURT: It's stricken.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. I just want to know that when an individual files a complaint with the Broadcasting Standards Commission -- is that the name?

A. I think it's a board.

Q. Okay. They don't have a complaint unless they've been wronged in some fashion; am I right in that or am I wrong?

A. The complaint alleged that Granada acted wrongly towards the Arvizos.

Q. Thank you.

A. Okay.

Q. Okay. Now, as far as Mr. Konitzer and Mr. Weizner's involvement with Mr. Jackson, you were concerned about 960,000, you said, that was --

A. I think it's --

Q. -- that was disbursed to these two gentlemen, correct?

A. Yes. I think it was 965, yes.

Q. Okay. 965. And you informed Mr. Jackson of that, true?

A. Yes.

Q. And after you informed him of that, Mr. Jackson fired you; is that true?

A. Yes.

Q. And one of the things that you did on your own was to get -- was to investigate all of the people in Mr. Jackson’s inner circle?

A. Yeah, I don’t know about “all,” but --
Q. Some of the people?
A. Quite a few people, yes.
Q. Okay. And you informed Mr. Jackson of that conduct, that you did that on your own, didn’t you?
A. Yes.
Q. Yes.
A. Well, actually, I think we -- my partner, Mr. Gibson and I, I think we informed Mr. Jackson that we wanted to conduct background investigations on various people. I’m not sure we gave him an entire list, but we got general approval to engage an investigative team and conduct some background investigations.
Q. Okay. And he didn’t fire any of the people that you did the background checks on, did he?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Do you know if he fired any of the people that he did the background checks on? That you did the background checks on, excuse me.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague as to time.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Do you know if he fired any of the people that you did the background checks on within, say, a couple of months after you did the background checks, or after you delivered that information to Mr. Jackson?
A. I’m not aware that anyone was fired as a result of the investigative reports.
Q. Okay. And --
THE COURT: Counsel, I’m -- we have an issue we have to take up. I’m just wondering how much longer you have with this witness.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I don’t think I’m going to finish this afternoon. I don’t have a lot left, but it’s -- it’s more than eight minutes.
THE COURT: All right. Then we’ll stop now.
So we’ll take up the other issue.

You may step down.

And the jury, I'll excuse you until tomorrow morning. I'll see you at 8:30. Remember the admonition.

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: All right. Counsel, I've been told there's an issue you wish to take up.

MR. SANGER: There is. Could we ask -- Mr. Kopp is a lawyer who's waiting outside. Could we ask that he be --

THE BAILIFF: What's his name?

MR. SANGER: Kopp. Shep Kopp.

With the Court's permission, I'll wait until he gets in here so he can hear everything.

Your Honor, Mr. Kopp is with Mr. Geragos's law firm and he is here representing Mr. Geragos, my understanding.

I have given to the bailiff an original subpoena and return thereon, showing that Mr. Geragos was subpoenaed to appear tomorrow. And I would point out to the Court that we had earlier subpoenaed him and had hoped to call him today. "Today" being Thursday.

It turns out that he is in a jury trial. The jury trial goes Monday through Thursday. He indicated that the judge was not willing to let him off for the purpose of being here today, and so therefore we resubpoenaed him for tomorrow. That's the subpoena that the Court will have momentarily. I think your clerk or your secretary is being kind enough to make an extra copy for us.

Mr. Geragos has been struggling with the duty to appear because, being in trial, he scheduled a number of things, including a preliminary hearing tomorrow in another court. I had asked him to please clear that and indicated that we would inform this Court of his need to be here in case the judges wanted to call Your Honor, or vice versa, in order to clear that.

Thank you.

And I’ll just file the original, if we could, please, with the clerk.

Thank you.

And a copy to counsel. And another copy for Mr. Kopp.

To cut through all the nonsense and get right down to the bottom line, we really need him tomorrow at 8:30 or we need him Monday at 8:30. We really cannot put it off any longer.

Mr. Kopp has indicated that -- and, in fact, Mr. Geragos told me on the phone this morning that he would rather come on the 26th, or June something-or-other. It does not work. And we’ve tried to accommodate him, and I understand his situation, but we just need to do something.

I believe that if this Court specifically orders him to be here absolutely on Monday, that that may help him clear his calendar. Or you could order him tomorrow. But we are asking to enforce the subpoena for either tomorrow or Monday. And I gather what Mr. Kopp will tell you is that probably Monday is better than tomorrow, but we’re -- we’ll live with that. But we do need to enforce it somehow or another.

I thought we should bring it to your attention. We do not want to be here having to have a body attachment issued and go through all that unnecessarily. And if this Court’s order are specific instructions to Mr. Kopp or a call to a judge or willingness to receive a call to clear this up, we would appreciate it.

Thank you.

THE COURT: Do you want to say anything, Mr. Kopp?

MR. KOPP: I suppose I should, Your Honor.

I thought maybe we could resolve this maybe through a phone call from Your Honor to the trial court in Orange County.

THE COURT: They can’t hear you. You have to speak into a microphone.

MR. KOPP: I’m sorry.

Good afternoon, Your Honor.

I thought maybe this could be resolved by way of a phone call from Your Honor to the trial court in Orange County, and I have those phone numbers, and maybe this can all be worked out.

We’re doing our best to accommodate the Court. The subpoena was just served yesterday. Obviously there are many other matters scheduled, so we’re trying to comply.

THE COURT: Let me see the subpoena.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I’d point out this is our second subpoena.

THE COURT: As I understand, the subpoena is for tomorrow. So I’ll order him to appear here at 8:30 a.m. tomorrow morning in accordance with the subpoena.

MR. KOPP: Well, may I -- if that is what the Court is going to do, I mean, I guess I would like to be heard on that and just make it known that Mr. Geragos did have -- there was two matters scheduled in Van Nuys, one of which is a custody matter. Those matters have been put over numerous times. And there’s a preliminary hearing scheduled --

THE COURT: Now you know how citizens feel in this community and every community in the state when they’re called away from their employment by attorneys in courts.

MR. KOPP: I --

THE COURT: Now we have a lawyer who wants special accommodation. The answer is no. He’s been subpoenaed. There’s no motion to quash. I expect him here at 8:30 tomorrow morning.

MR. KOPP: Your Honor --

THE COURT: That will give me time to get the warrant out when he doesn’t appear so he’ll be here Monday for sure. Because I expect him to be here tomorrow morning.

MR. KOPP: Well, I -- I don’t mean to ask for special treatment, Your Honor, but what I do want to ask for is professional courtesy. And I think subpoenaing somebody two days before they’re scheduled to appear is not sufficient notice, particularly given the fact that everyone in this courtroom, I believe, is aware of the fact that Mr. Geragos has been in this trial and has numerous matters scheduled. So I’m not -- I don’t mean --

THE COURT: We’re aware, you know, that he’s a very busy attorney. It’s the same with any citizen who’s subpoenaed. It’s the same with the jurors that are called to testify.

Now, the question is, does the present employment of the person overcome the immediacy of the subpoena? And it’s always the immediacy of the subpoena that overcomes. It doesn’t -- it’s no different than if we subpoenaed a deputy sheriff or a mechanic, or a child victim. You know, this is a subpoena he has to obey.

And, you know, I’m sure you’d be delighted if you were the attorney asking your subpoena to be enforced. So....

MR. KOPP: Well, if I was the attorney, I would have served it more than two days before the court date, but I’m not the attorney.

But that being said, I will convey the Court’s order to Mr. Geragos.

THE COURT: Thank you.

All right. I do want to see two of the attorneys in chambers for a moment, that would be Mr. Mesereau and Mr. Sneddon, with the court reporter.

THE BAILIFF: Judge, do you plan to come back out?

THE COURT: No, I’m not going to come back out.

THE BAILIFF: Thank you.

THE COURT: This will just take a minute.

(The proceedings adjourned at 2:30 p.m.)

DAVID G. LEGRAND
Having been previously sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

CROSS-EXAMINATION (Continued)
BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:
Q. Good morning, Mr. LeGrand.
A. Good morning.
Q. Yesterday we talked about the LLC Fire Mountain, and you indicated that that LLC, that limited liability corporation, was formed to act as the corporation under which the proceeds from the FOX special, "The Footage You Were Never Meant To See" or what we've been calling the "Take 2" video, to basically funnel those assets or those -- the cash that was produced from that program and then disburse to various parties. Is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And I asked you -- I'm not sure if we ever got the answer, but I asked you, and I'm asking you now, was that corporation formed to conceal assets from Mr. Jackson's creditors?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; relevance.
THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: In any way.

A. There were multiple concerns with regard to the “Take 2” video at the inception of the process. There was a letter from Granada basically demanding that no footage of Martin Bashir be utilized without Granada’s permission, so we had significant concerns about potential liabilities associated with Fire Mountain.

There were also concerns, not so much about trade creditors in general, but, rather, that the mounting financial demands of the lawyers, the accountants, the production people be met, and we had not yet -- there was -- we had not yet accomplished a complete transition of money management affairs and open --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m going to object at this time as nonresponsive.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled. I’ll allow him to complete his answer.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

THE WITNESS: I opened a dialogue with Bank of America and discussed with the bank representatives the relationship of Fire Mountain with FOX, and to my knowledge, there was never a demand of default made by Bank of America with respect to any of their credit protection provisions.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: My question was, was that Fire Mountain, Limited Liability Corporation, formed in any way to conceal assets from Mr. Jackson’s creditors? And my question goes beyond the Bank of America.

MR. MESEREAU: Same objection.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And do you understand the question?

A. Yeah. It was not my intent to conceal. It was my intent to protect the cash flows being received in order to address the financial needs of my client, Mr. Jackson.

Q. All right. Well, you testified that Mr.

Jackson had creditors with outstanding bills in excess of ten million dollars, true? Yes?

A. Yes.

Q. And some of those creditors had initiated lawsuits; isn’t that true?

A. I don’t know that creditors had initiated lawsuits. The two primary lawsuits that were pending that I had knowledge of early on were the Avram case and the Myung Ho Lee case.

Q. All right.

A. I don’t know that those gentlemen were creditors at that time, because I don’t remember seeing them listed in the payables listings. There was a subsequent lawsuit -- I mean, there was a lawsuit filed somewhere, hmm, I’m not sure if it was late February or early March, filed by an auction house in New York with respect to a painting.

Q. Would that be Sotheby’s?

A. Yes. Yes, that was Sotheby’s.

Q. And that dealt with a painting Mr. Jackson purchased but never paid for; is that correct?

A. Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; relevance.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. But in effect, the Fire Mountain corporation would prevent any of these creditors from getting their hands on the money, the proceedings from the FOX production; true? I’d like a “yes” or “no” question -- answer to that question.

A. I don’t know --

Q. If you know.

A. I don’t know how it would prevent creditors from getting to it. I mean, if a creditor took a judgment debtor exam of someone and found that this subsidiary of MJJ had these funds, the question is creditor of whom, I guess? I mean, the goal of Fire Mountain was to serve as a subsidiary to MJJ Productions.

Q. Who is Marcel Avram? You just mentioned that. Who is that?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; relevance.

THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: What I've read is that he was a promoter who had entered into some agreements with -- and I'm not sure who with, but with Mr. Jackson or entities affiliated with Mr. Jackson. I'm not even sure who the parties were in that litigation.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And that was a multimillion-dollar lawsuit?
A. Yes.
Q. And that was here in Santa Maria?
A. I don't know where it was.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; relevance.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: My question -- I'm sorry.
THE COURT: Next question. Overruled.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And that lawsuit was going on during February of 2003?
A. I think so, yes.
Q. And --
A. Yes.
Q. If that lawsuit went bad, wasn't it your opinion that bankruptcy was assured for Mr. Jackson?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; misstates the evidence.
THE COURT: Foundation sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did you ever send an e-mail to the effect that bankruptcy was assured if the Marcel Avram lawsuit went bad for Mr. Jackson?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; leading; relevance.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: I don't recall such a specific e-mail. It's possible. But I don't recall.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: If I could have a moment, Your Honor.
THE COURT: You may.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Let me just ask a follow-up question. Was that your opinion?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll come back to that.
Q. Mr. LeGrand, did you talk to anybody after you left the stand here today (sic) about your testimony in this case?
A. I did not speak about my testimony in this case. I did speak to several people last night.
Q. Who did you talk to?
A. Talked to my wife.
Q. Did you talk to anybody that was involved in this case in any fashion?
A. I don’t know whether “involved” or not. I did call Al Malnik.
Q. Why did you call Mr. Malnik?

A. He’s -- his wife is expecting a child. It’s been any day for the last couple of weeks. And I called to inquire as to his wife’s health and the prospect of delivery.
Q. Do you work for Mr. Malnik?
A. No.
Q. Have you been employed with Mr. -- by Mr. Malnik in the past?
A. No.
Q. Mr. Malnik has never paid you for any services --
A. No.
Q. -- is that your testimony?
A. That’s my testimony.
Q. Have you ever taken any directives from Mr. Malnik concerning legal matters regarding Mr. Jackson?
A. Yes.
Q. Why did you take directives from Mr. Malnik concerning Mr. Jackson’s affairs?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; relevance.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: I was instructed by Mr. Jackson to do so.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And did Mr. Malnik work for Mr. Jackson, as far as you knew?
A. As far as I knew.

Q. What was his relationship with Mr. Jackson?

A. I believe he was a friend and I believe he was an attorney.

Q. Do you know if Mr. Malnik was retained by Mr. Jackson as an attorney?

A. I did not see an engagement letter. I was instructed by Mr. Jackson to submit all documents that were to be signed by Mr. Jackson, they were to be reviewed by Mr. Malnik before presentation to Mr. Jackson. That instruction was given to Ronald Konitzer and Dieter Weizner as well.

Q. Have you attended meetings with Mr. Malnik and Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. On how many occasions?

A. Once for sure. There may have been a second meeting during that same weekend, but I'm not sure. But I know of one in particular. It was mid to late March. Mr. Fishman and I flew to Florida. I think that's when. I'm not sure of the dates, though.

Q. And did Mr. Konitzer attend that meeting?

A. There were several meetings and Mr. -- there were several meetings with myself and Mr. Malnik and Mr. Konitzer attended one of those meetings.

Q. Was Mr. Jackson present?

A. I think so.

Q. Was Mr. Weizner present?

A. You know, I think Dieter was there, but I'm honestly not sure today.

Q. Do you know what time in March that was?

A. Well, it was before the 28th. I think it was a week to ten days before the 28th of March, but I'm not sure exactly.

Q. Was it before your services were terminated as Mr. Jackson's attorney?

A. Yes. That's why I know it's before the 28th.

Q. And the purpose of that meeting was what?

A. To discuss the overall positions, to discuss the -- to discuss how or whether we would continue the various relationships, because Ronald was upset with me for having pointed the finger at him with respect to the $965,000.

We were attempting in that meeting to construct a framework under which we would -- you know, Ronald and Dieter would remain involved in -- as, you know, consultants, advisors to Mr. Jackson. But Mr. Malnik essentially emerged, in my opinion, as the primary person with Michael Jackson's trust and confidence for business decisions.

Q. Mr. Malnik was one of the people you had investigated?

A. Yes, he is.

Q. So you were suspicious of him, too?

A. Yes.

Q. And you voiced those suspicions to Mr. Jackson, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. You voiced those suspicions to Mr. Jackson about Mr. Konitzer?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Weizner?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were suspicious about Mr. Jackson's personal assistant, Evvy?

A. Yes. Primarily because Mr. Konitzer --

Q. There's no question pending.

A. Oh. Sorry.

Q. And you were suspicious about Mr. Geragos?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And you were suspicious about Mr. Jackson's attorney, Mr. Cochran's associate, Zia Modabber?

A. Less so, but yes.

Q. Well, you had him investigated?

A. Less so, but yes.

Q. And you were suspicious about Mr. Gross, who worked for Fred Haber, the foreign rights people, Edgar Gross? Maybe I'm misstating that. Did you have Edgar Gross investigated?

A. I don't remember that name. Was it -- do you mean -- I'm sorry, I don't recall.

Q. You were suspicious about a Dr. Armen Kazanchian?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. You were suspicious about Mr. Jackson's long-standing business manager, Trudi Green?

A. Yes.

Q. These people had really very little connection with one another, did they? I mean, you tell me. Did they have connection with one another?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: In effect, you had investigated everybody who was within Michael Jackson’s inner circle; isn’t that true?

A. I don’t know, because I don’t know your definition of “inner circle.” I investigated people that I viewed as being close to Michael or having the potential to do harm to Michael as I saw it at the time.

Q. And you were suspicious of them all, correct?

A. Um, I was -- I was cautious. I was becoming more cautious as time went on.

Q. Well, didn’t you testify that you had everybody investigated that you found suspicious?

A. I’m not sure those were my exact words, sir.

Q. Well, was that true or not?

A. No. I did not have everybody investigated whom I found suspicious. There were certainly people who I had concerns about, but who did not have a position such that I was overly -- sufficiently concerned to spend money.

Q. But you had concerns about all these people. Will you go that far?

A. Concerns about a lot of people.

Q. Okay. And as far as this $900,000, you don’t know what that money was for, do you?

A. No.

Q. You don’t know if that money was owed to Dieter and Ronald, do you?

A. No, I don’t. I never saw -- I never saw evidence it was.

Q. Right. But you never saw any evidence whatsoever about what that $900,000 was for, did you?

A. No, I never saw evidence of it.

Q. You don’t know if Mr. Jackson knew about that at the time or didn’t know about it at the time, do you, at the time it was disbursed?

A. No, I didn’t.
Q. So you just pointed the finger with virtually no evidence against these people because of your suspicions; isn’t that fair to say?
A. I discussed the matter with Mr. Malnik, and at his direction prepared the letter. He reviewed the letter. So this was not my independent action.
Q. Well, if this was an embezzlement, wouldn’t it be an incredibly lame attempt to embezzle money from a trust account of an attorney with a paper trail one inch long leading directly to the embezzlers?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; argumentative.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Would you agree with me that it would be a very poor plan to embezzle money?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Would you agree with me that there was never any attempt to conceal that that money went from the trust account to Mr. Weizner and Mr. Konitzer?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Misstates the evidence and foundation.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer. Do you want that question read back?
THE WITNESS: I believe that --
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m going to --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. He’s cutting off the witness, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Sustained. Let the witness answer the question.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.
THE WITNESS: I believe that Mr. Konitzer was unhappy that Mr. Finkelstein gave me that accounting.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Would you agree that there was never any attempt to conceal that those moneys went from that trust account to Mr. Weizner and Mr. Konitzer; yes or no?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation and misstates the evidence.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I do not know -- I do not have actual knowledge of an attempt to conceal those disbursements.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Michael Jackson Universe, MJ Universe, that was the plan that Ronald and Dieter were working on with Mr. Jackson to remake his image and career, correct?

A. I'm -- I'm not sure I agree with the characterization, "remake his image and career." It was the business plan that Ronald and Dieter had put forth.

Q. It was a promotional plan for Michael Jackson, correct?

A. It involved elements of using Michael Jackson's trademarks, image and likeness to gain revenue.

Q. Wouldn't that be a promotional plan?

A. I'm not trying to be difficult. I just don't know what you mean by "a promotional plan." I mean, that's all.

Q. What I mean by "promotional plan" is a plan that promotes Mr. Jackson. Was it designed to promote Mr. Jackson's image and likeness, his name, to sell products to make profit?

A. I certainly agree it was part of the plan to use his image and likeness to sell products and make profit.

Q. Was it also the idea of this plan, this new enterprise, MJ Universe, to save Mr. Jackson from impending financial ruin? Yes or no.

A. When the plan was first -- the first development of the plan, none of us had knowledge of Mr. Jackson's financial affairs. So the plan was developed in a context where we, that is, Mr. Konitzer, and he expressed to me his belief that Mr. Jackson had significant financial resources to call upon. So the original plan was not about financial ruin. It was developed before any of us knew of the financial circumstances that ultimately were disclosed to me in February of 2003.

Q. Is it true that the plan was designed to make everyone, including Michael Jackson and yourself, a lot of money?

A. The intent of the plan was to make money, yes.

Q. One of the mechanisms for this plan was to use the Internet as a platform; is that true?

A. Yes. There was a portion of the plan devoted to Internet.

Q. You testified yesterday that it seemed like everybody around Michael Jackson was interested in profiting; is that accurate? That was your opinion?

A. Many people, yes.

Q. Did you see something wrong with that, with people profiting who worked for Michael Jackson?

A. I see nothing wrong with people earning appropriate income from providing services.

Q. And Michael Jackson Universe --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. I don't think the witness has completed his response, Your Honor.

THE WITNESS: I got concerned about where it appeared people wanted to have excessive amounts of money in relation to their contribution.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. And this is where some of your suspicions took off?

A. That's where they were derived, yes.

Q. But as it turned out, you really didn't know where those funds were going, you've testified, correct?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation and misstates the evidence.

THE COURT: Vague; sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: As far as this plan, the idea or hope was to make hundreds of millions of dollars, true?

A. That was the hope.

Q. And that was a hope that Mr. Jackson had, or shared with Mr. Konitzer, true?

A. Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE WITNESS: Whoops.

THE COURT: Overruled. The answer was, “Yes.”

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE COURT: Next question.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And Mr. Konitzer, from your point of view, had a genuine interest in the success of Michael Jackson, both for his own benefit and for the benefit of Mr. Jackson; isn’t that fair to say?

A. Yes. That’s -- I mean, that’s true. Mr. Konitzer, I believe, was quite sincere in many respects and there was no question that he saw the opportunity for significant financial gain and that that gain would -- the largest gain would come if Mr. Jackson also realized a significant financial benefit.

Q. If this plan took off, Mr. Konitzer had a very legitimate hope of earning millions and millions of dollars, true?

A. Yes. But I’ll also tell you that both Mr. Malnik and I were very skeptical about Mr. Konitzer’s plan.

Q. I understand that, but that’s not a question I asked you.

But that was the hope. That was the idea between you, Mr. Jackson, Mr. Konitzer, that was the reason for Michael Jackson Universe, correct?

A. The reason was to create profit, yes.

Q. So would you agree it doesn’t make much sense for Mr. Konitzer to attempt to steal a few hundred thousand dollars at the very beginning of his relationship with Mr. Jackson?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Argumentative; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

Q. Your investigation of these various people was designed to clean house again, wasn’t it? Do you understand that question? Maybe I should start over again.

You’re aware that Mr. Jackson had just cleaned house, he just fired all the people he had been working with for years, including some he hadn't worked with for very long?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation and misstates the evidence.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'll simplify the question.

THE COURT: Okay.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You're aware Mr. Jackson had just cleaned house by firing a number of his associates and close employees, correct, you've testified to that?

A. No, I don't think I did. What employees were terminated?

Q. Well, people that worked for Mr. Jackson. I don't mean to quibble about semantics. Mr. Branca was fired, correct?

A. I'm not aware he was ever an employee of Mr. Jackson. I believe he's an attorney who was providing services to Mr. Jackson. Yes, his services were terminated during this process.

Q. Are you saying that Mr. Branca was never employed by Mr. Jackson in any fashion?

A. No, I'm saying he was not a W-2 statutory employee, which is the sense in which I'm used to using the term. I don't mean to be difficult, but, you know, this is -- my background is corporate law, and "employee" means something very specific to me.

Q. Okay. When I'm asking questions, just so you know, I'll be asking them in the common lay term, not in any technical sense. When I say "employee," I mean he worked for him, he was paid by him.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Argumentative and vague. Object to the colloquy.

THE COURT: Counsel, I don't think you can ask this person to accept your definitions. You need to know how he defines various corporate terms.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And I appreciate that. I'm just trying to clarify it.

THE COURT: And that be helpful to the jury, I'm sure, if they knew that too. But you -- just as an instruction from me --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Sure.

THE COURT: -- you need to find out how he defines them, not tell him how to define them.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.

Q. All right. So you would agree with me that Mr. Branca worked for Mr. Jackson, was paid for by Mr. Jackson, correct? He received money from Mr. Jackson for services, true?

A. I believe the Ziffren law firm received compensation from Mr. Jackson for legal services, yes.

Q. Do you think Mr. Branca ever received any of those moneys for work that he performed?

A. I believe Mr. Branca was paid by his firm, yes.

Q. All right. And Mr. Jackson (sic) was one of the people he fired when he was cleaning house, true?

A. Yes.

Q. As was Trudi Green?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. So we went through the list. I don't need to go through it again.

But wasn't it your desire, in preparing this investigative report or ordering this investigative report on Mr. Jackson's inner circle, to become a trusted associate of Mr. Jackson to the exclusion of the people that you were having investigated?

A. I don't believe that was my intent. It was my intent to gain knowledge about the people who were involved. For example, with respect to Mr. Malnik, I had no intent to eliminate him from Mr. Jackson's circle.

I had much greater concerns about Mr. Konitzer and Mr. Weizner than, say, for example, Mr. Malnik. But at the same time, I felt it appropriate, granted the history, to have greater knowledge about these people. You know, there's an aphorism, knowledge is power. And I felt it appropriate, and my colleagues, Mr. Joss, my partner, Mr. Gibson, concurred in those iterations.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; nonresponsive.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. He cut off the witness.

THE COURT: Sustained. I'll allow him to complete the answer.

Do you want part of your answer read back, so you know where you were, or --

THE WITNESS: Well, I'd just like to say that I and my partner called for those investigations. It was not simply my intent that was ruling. I was consistently, daily communicating with a number of lawyers who, as a group, were providing services to Mr. Jackson. And the decision to have those investigations done was not my unilateral decision.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You said, "knowledge is power." Wasn't this an effort to obtain more power?

A. Absolutely, for Mr. Jackson to be empowered.

Q. Okay. Let's -- let me ask you a couple of questions, a couple of background questions. I don't think I finished inquiring about people you may have talked to last night.

Did you talk to Mr. Mesereau at all between the time that you took the stand today and the time that you left the stand yesterday?

A. I'm not sure if -- he might have come in the room and left, you know, 30 seconds. I'm -- I'm sorry, I was upstairs in the room for a little bit. I don't remember. I don't have -- I didn't have any substantive conversations if I did see him at that time.

Q. Have you met Mr. Mesereau before?

A. Yes.

Q. On how many occasions?

A. Three, I think. Maybe four.

Q. Did you talk to him about your testimony in this case?

A. We did not discuss my testimony in this case.

Q. Did you talk to him about the facts of this case?

A. I met with Mr. Mesereau, Mr. Cochran, a number of lawyers when I was delivering files and reviewed with them some of the contents of the boxes of files.

Q. When did you deliver those files?

A. I'm sorry, I don't know.

Q. Can you tell me --

A. It was 2004.

Q. Okay. 2004. Can you tell me if it was in the beginning or towards the end of 2004?

A. It was by -- I know it was by mid-September, by Labor Day weekend, that I had delivered the bulk of the files. There's been some bits and pieces that have just -- you know, either were delivered to me or were found, you know, in another file, because I had people in Reno working that were delivered later. But I'm pretty sure 90 percent of it was delivered by Labor Day of 2004.

Q. Did you go through these files with Mr. Mesereau and Mr. Cochran in any fashion?

A. Yes.

Q. Was an investigator present?

A. I think so.

Q. Do you know Scott Ross?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he present?

A. I don't think so. But I'm really not sure. There was an investigator, but I thought it was somebody different. I don't know that I met Scott before arriving here.

Q. Mr. Mason, perhaps?

A. Mason. That name's familiar. I honestly didn't pay a lot of attention to the investigator.

Q. Okay. But there was an investigator there?

A. Yeah.

Q. And have you talked to any investigators between the time you left the stand and the time you took the stand this morning?

A. Yeah. Scott Ross took me back to my hotel last night, and then took me to drop me off at the mall so I could go get something to eat.

Q. And did you talk to Mr. Ross about anything to do with this case?

A. We really didn't discuss the case. We were quite conscious that we -- or I was conscious that I didn't feel that was really appropriate.

Q. Okay. So that's a "no," you did not talk to

Scott Ross about anything about this case?
A. We didn’t talk about this case.
Q. All right. How about Mr. Castillo, did you talk to him about this case at all?
A. Who?
Q. Jesus Castillo?
A. I don’t know who that is.

Q. Well, all right. Now, you mentioned yesterday that you were aware of the “Home Movies” production, the “Michael Jackson Home Movies” production. True?
A. Is that the program that involved Chris Tucker that was produced with FOX?
Q. I can’t answer questions.
A. I’m sorry, I’m not sure what --
Q. Weren’t there -- I’m sorry, go ahead.
A. I’m not sure what you mean by “Home Videos” productions.
Q. Well, weren’t there documents in your files regarding the “Home Movies” production involving Michael Jackson?
A. I think so, yes. We had started -- we had started a negotiation with FOX for some additional production.
Q. And that production was also going to be run through Fire Mountain; that was the plan, correct?
A. Yes, I think so.
Q. And was Mr. Schaffel going to work on that one as well; do you know?
A. It was my goal to minimize the involvement of Mr. Schaffel as much as possible. And I do not know what I was -- I was terminated before that really got rolling. That’s my recollection.
Q. Was your concern about Mr. Schaffel related to his connections in the adult sex videos industry?

A. That was certainly part of the concern, yes.
Q. Did you ever express a concern to Mr. Jackson about Mr. Schaffel being associated with the rebuttal video or the “Take 2” video because of his background?
A. I’m not sure that I had a direct conversation with Mr. Jackson about that or not. I don’t know.

Q. And he was also one of the people that you had investigated, true?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, as far as money goes, profiting involving Mr. Jackson, isn’t it fair to say that that was one of your goals here too, to make money by being associated with Mr. Jackson?

A. My goal was to get paid for providing legal services.

Q. Weren’t you very excited about becoming Michael Jackson’s attorney?

A. It was exciting.

Q. You perceived it to be a means to make a great deal of money, didn’t you, Mr. LeGrand?

A. Actually, I really didn’t know what it was going to involve.

Q. But you had hopes that it would result in something very good for David LeGrand, true?

A. I saw it as an opportunity to work in a unique and different environment that was interesting, that had great potential. It was -- it was exciting.

Q. Potential for wealth, true?

A. I don’t know about wealth. But certainly gain.

Q. You won’t admit that it’s -- that there was financial gain, that was one of your motives in becoming Michael Jackson’s attorney? You disagree with that?

A. All I wanted was to be paid for my hourly work.

Q. And you wanted to do a lot of hourly work for Michael Jackson, didn’t you?

A. As it turned out, I didn’t have much choice. At least for a while.

Q. Would you answer my last question?

A. The hours ended up being considerable.

Q. And you wanted to do a lot of hourly business with Michael Jackson, true? Can you answer that “yes” or “no” for me, sir?

A. It’s very hard to answer “yes” or “no,” because it really wasn’t formulated in my mind that way.

Q. Mr. LeGrand, didn’t you communicate to Mr. Konitzer that you were worried about getting paid for your services and being first in line for money?

A. I was concerned about that, yes.

Q. And as early as February 11th, you had expressed that concern to Mr. Konitzer that you wanted to be paid?

A. Yes. And when we say “I,” my firm.

Q. Your firm.

A. Yes.

Q. That’s fair. And Mr. Konitzer asked you to calm down about that, didn’t he?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And he said, “Don’t worry, you’ll be first in line,” true?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And he did that through e-mail, correct?

A. He also said it to me.

Q. And you did a considerable amount of communication with Mr. Konitzer through e-mail, e-mails, true?

A. Yes.

Q. And if your file is complete, then all of those e-mails should be in it, shouldn’t they?

A. If you mean that a file comprising the totality of my work involving Mr. Jackson would include the e-mails to Ronald Konitzer, the answer is yes.

Q. And my last question was, if your file that you turned over did not include e-mails such as that, it would not be complete, true?

A. I -- I think that follows logically.

Q. All right. Did you remove any e-mails from your file prior to turning it over to Mr. Mesereau and Mr. Cochran?

A. I don’t remember removing any e-mails. I don’t remember removing any documents from the files.

Q. You can conceive of it, though?

A. No, I really didn’t even personally prepare the files. Staff did. I -- I really wasn’t directly involved in the file production process.

Q. Is (702) 222-2520 the direct line to your office at Hale Lane?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Did you have a cell phone at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was that number?

A. (702) 218-6736.

Q. At some point in time, Mr. Geragos came into the picture. Do you remember when that was?

A. First week of February 2003.

Q. Is that when you first met Mark Geragos?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Geragos is a criminal attorney?

A. Yes.

Q. And who introduced you to Mr. Geragos?

A. I believe it was Ronald Konitzer who selected Mr. Geragos to be interviewed.

Q. Was there an interviewing process going on to find a criminal attorney at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. And can you explain why -- well, let me back up.

Was it perceived that some criminal conduct might be alleged against Michael Jackson at that time, and therefore a criminal attorney should be retained?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; relevance.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: I’m sorry, what was the question?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll ask to have it read back.

THE COURT: I’ll have the court reporter read it.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: The press outcry was such that -- and the calls for investigation, calls for removal of his children were such that I and the other lawyers agreed it was appropriate to have a criminal attorney in California to address any possibilities of that kind.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. So the answer to that question would be “yes”?

A. I think I’ve answered it.

Q. My question is, so the answer to that question would be “yes”?

A. Yes, we were concerned about possible criminal investigation resulting from the video, the Bashir video. There were people, you know, calling for investigation.

Q. Who -- well, let me phrase that differently. Who was in charge in terms of the legal advice provided to Mr. Jackson at that time? We’re talking about the beginning of February. You? Mr. Geragos? Who was running the show there?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.

Q. What exactly was Mr. Geragos -- do you know what Mr. Geragos was tasked with at the time he was retained, what he was asked to do?

A. I know that we asked him to attempt to ascertain if any criminal investigation had been commenced, and if there was any child custody removal efforts being commenced.

Q. That would be a family law matter, wouldn’t it?

A. I guess it’s more family than criminal, yes.

Q. Do you know who Brad Miller is?

A. I believe he’s an investigator that works or worked -- was engaged by Mr. Geragos’s firm.

Q. Did you ever meet Brad Miller?

A. You know, I don’t know. I might have.

Q. Where might you have met Brad Miller?

A. Mr. Geragos’s office.

Q. Did you meet with Mr. Geragos in his office?

A. Yes.

Q. More than once?

A. I think so, yes.

Q. How many times did you meet with Mr. Geragos, either in his office or elsewhere?

A. Maybe four or five times.

Q. Four or five times?

A. I think so.
Q. Did you ever communicate with Mr. Geragos by e-mail?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you know where those e-mails are?
A. Not specifically, no.
Q. Did you give those e-mails to Mr. Mesereau and Mr. Cochran?
A. I think so.
Q. Did you ever talk to Brad Miller on the phone?
A. I don't know. It's possible.
Q. Do you know what Brad Miller was retained by Mr. Geragos to do?
A. Not really. I know that it had to do with the Arvizos, but I really don't know in detail what Brad Miller was asked to do.
Q. Do you know who Asaf Vilchic is?
A. Who?

Q. Asaf Vilchic?
A. I don't think I've heard that name before.
Q. I'm going to have trouble with this next one. Can you tell me if you've heard of the name Johnny Majetich, something of that nature?
A. That name does not ring any bells, sir.
Q. Have you ever heard of a private investigator referred to as "Johnny in the Sky"?
A. No, sir. I don't think so. It's the sort of thing one might remember, but I don't have a recollection of that one.
Q. Okay. Now, I want to come back to this rebuttal film or the "Take 2" video.
You participated in getting or I should say preparing releases for the entire Arvizo family, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And who asked you to do that? Maybe I'm making an assumption there. Did you do that on your own or did somebody else ask you to do it?
A. I don't really know. I know it needed to be done, but I'm not sure whether it was, you know, Lachman Productions, Marc Schaffel, or who it was.
The consents and releases started with Debbie Rowe, and then we just started thinking, “Oh, well, we need releases for everybody that might be in this video.” I prepared a release for Hamid as well.

Q. All right. The one for Hamid, was that under a Brad Lachman letterhead; do you know?

A. I don’t know.
Q. Okay. But you knew that the plan was to have the Arvizo family filmed for the “Take 2” video, correct?
A. I knew there was a desire to have some footage of the Arvizo family for possible inclusion in the “Take 2” video, yes.
Q. And that was the reason why these consent forms were prepared?
A. Yes.
Q. And you sent those consent forms to Ann Gabriel, true?
A. I don’t know. I might have.
Q. Did you send a consent form to Ann Gabriel and ask her to put “Gabriel Media” on the top of it?
A. I don’t -- I don’t remember. It’s possible, but I don’t remember that.
Q. If it’s possible, can you tell me why that would have happened?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; unintelligible.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, you admit it’s possible.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; calls for speculation.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes?

A. I really can’t say. I don’t know.
Q. Okay. Can you tell me if you can envision a reason why you would send a consent form to Ann Gabriel and ask her to put “Gabriel Media” on the top of it?
A. I really don’t know today. We were moving quick on a lot of things, and it, you know, if it happened, may have seemed like a good idea at the time, but I really don’t know why in retrospect. It could have been that I was trying to give Ann, you know, a bit of a role. It --

Q. Did you send consent forms to Neverland Valley Ranch by way of fax for the Arvizo family?
A. I think so, yes.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: If I may approach, Your Honor.
Q. Mr. LeGrand, I show you People's Exhibit No. 263. It appears to be one, two, three -- five, six, seven, eight -- nine separate pages. Would you look at that for me, please, and identify it if you can.
A. This appears to be a fax from Hale Lane to Joe Marcus at Neverland Valley Ranch containing appearance consents and releases for various members of the Arvizo family.
Q. Did you prepare those consent and release forms?
A. I think my associate, Ann-Marie Levy, did.
Q. At your direction?

A. Yes.
Q. Is that the consent and release form that you wrote or prepared?
A. Well, I directed the preparation. It appears -- the language looks familiar.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, at this time I'd move into evidence People's Exhibit 263. I'll show it to counsel.
MR. MESEREAU: No objection.
THE COURT: It's admitted.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Mr. LeGrand, at the top of those consent and release forms is the logo for MJJ Productions, correct?
A. On some of them, yes.
Q. Did you place that logo there? Did you direct, I should say, the placement of that logo at the top of those appearance consent and release forms?
A. I don't believe I did. I have no recollection of so instructing.
Q. And then at the back, a couple of pages, that logo appears to have been removed. Did you direct that appearance consent and release forms for the Arvizos be provided without the MJJ Productions logo?

A. I don’t recall instructing that they be presented in one form or the other.
Q. If your file was complete, Mr. LeGrand, then it should have had that fax and those releases in it, true?

A. If the files of my firm were complete, it should be in there.
Q. And if it wasn’t in your file, can you explain that?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; calls for speculation.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: No, I can’t explain it. That portion of the file was kept by Ann-Marie Levy. She was subsequently -- her services at my firm were later terminated.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Is there any reason why Ann-Marie Levy would go through the files and remove those documents, as far as you know?
A. No.
Q. Did you also send the same consent forms to Hamid Moslehi?
A. I don’t know. I’m pretty sure that my firm sent appearance and consent forms to Hamid Moslehi, but I don’t know exactly when or if they were absolutely identical. But -- because I’m not sure we knew where the Arvizos were in order to get the documents executed, and since Hamid was supposed to do the videography, it would not surprise me that we sent them to Hamid.

Q. Well, that’s a good point. They were different, weren’t they? They weren’t the same as the ones you sent to Neverland, correct?
A. I don’t know.
Q. But you agree that your associate sent those to Hamid at your direction?
A. I don’t recall making that instruction today.
Q. Would you agree that your associate would not send those to Hamid on her own without some direction from you?

A. I -- it’s certainly possible that she would have. I mean, she can have been instructed by Mr. Konitzer directly to do so. It’s possible she would have sent them or that she would have interpreted my instruction to prepare and get the consents out as, you know, a broad mandate.

THE COURT: Let’s take a break.

(Recess taken.)

EXHIBITS

PLAINTIFF'S NO.	DESCRIPTION	FOR I.D.	IN EVID.
899	Letter from David LeGrand to Barry Siegel	10193	10194

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. I'd like to show you a few documents. We're in the home stretch here, so I'll be finished in a short period.

If I may approach, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You may.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. First of all, Mr. LeGrand, I show you People's Exhibit No. 899. Can you identify that for me, please?

A. Yes. This is a letter I prepared for Mr. Jackson's signature directed to Barry Siegel.

Q. Okay. And that was a letter turning over the financial reins to you for Mr. Jackson's concerns involving Provident Financial Management; is that correct?

A. I believe the document speaks for itself. It states in one relevant paragraph that, “Mr. LeGrand is engaging a new management company to serve my interests, and you are specifically authorized and instructed to transfer any available funds you are holding on my behalf or for any of my businesses to such management company or Mr. LeGrand’s trust account pursuant to Mr. LeGrand and Miss Brandt’s instructions.”

Q. Okay. Is that Michael Jackson’s signature at the bottom of that document?

A. Yes, it is.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Move to admit People’s Exhibit No. 899 into evidence.

MR. MESEREAU: No objection.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Showing you the People’s Exhibit -- the 400 series. Didn’t mean to scare you.

Okay. Beginning with Exhibit No. 406, it appears to be a Hale Lane fax transmittal sheet on the front page. Can you identify that document for me, please?

A. This appears to be the transmittal between myself and Marisa Fermin of the final agreement for the “Take 2.”

Q. And that agreement calls for Fire Mountain to receive three million dollars on behalf of Mr. Jackson; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you send that document to Miss Fermin at FOX?

A. Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Move to admit People’s Exhibit 406 into evidence at this time.

MR. MESEREAU: No objection.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Showing you People’s Exhibit 412, can you identify that for me, please?

A. This appears to be a transmittal from Hale Lane to Hamid Moslehi containing some appearance consents and a -- yeah. Containing appearance consents and an additional consent for MJJ Productions for the Michael Jackson special.

Q. Did you send that fax transmittal with accompanying documents to Hamid at (818) 224-4664 on -- I’m sorry -- February 10th, 2003?

A. Based on these documents, yes.

Q. And the first document that appears in that group after the fax sheet is entitled “Gabriel Media, Incorporated. Appearance Consent and Release.” Did you send that document to Hamid Moslehi?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you explain to me why the document is entitled “Gabriel Media, Incorporated”?

A. Not today, no. I don’t remember.

And the second document has that whited out, and it has a --

Q. There’s no question pending.

A. Oh. Sorry.

Q. I’m just asking about the first document.

A. No. I don’t know why.

Q. But you admit that you did send that to Mr. Moslehi?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And Gabriel Media had nothing to do with this production, did they?

A. I’m not sure I can say “nothing” to do with this production. At the time, I believe Miss Gabriel was still a consultant on PR-related matters.

Q. But can you -- go ahead.

A. I really don’t remember today why this document had her company’s title on it.

Q. There’s no reason for that, is there?

A. I -- I don’t know of the reason for it. I don’t remember. I’m sure there was at the time, but I don’t remember it today.

Q. Was the reason “Gabriel Media, Incorporated” appears on that appearance consent and release form intended to distance you and Michael Jackson from these consent and release forms?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Argumentative; no foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I don’t remember what the intent was.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Let’s move on.

THE COURT: I want to ask a question. The Exhibit 406, previously I admitted a portion and not admitted a portion, and then he offered it a minute ago and there was no objection. But I just wanted to bring your attention to my previous ruling.

MR. SANGER: Can we have just a moment?

THE COURT: Yes.

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel

table.)

MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, I thought they were complete documents, the ones I saw. Could we hold off a ruling and discuss them?

THE COURT: All right.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you.

THE COURT: All right. I’ll hold off on that.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Showing you page seven of Exhibit No. 413, it also appears to be a Hale Lane facsimile transmittal sheet. Can you identify that for me, please?

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I’m sorry, could we just have that back? Page seven of what exhibit?

THE COURT: 4-1-3.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

THE WITNESS: This is a fax from Hale Lane to Vincent at MJJ Productions of some model releases for the Arvizos; for Gavin, Star, and Janet.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did you send a fax transmittal to -- and we should say, for the record, that you’re looking through -- you’ve removed the document from its sleeve and there appears to be several appearance and consent release forms that are paper-clipped together.

A. I’m sorry, these are different documents with different dates. The paper-clipped transmittal of February 17th appears to be substantially the same as the fax transmittal that we identified earlier to Neverland.

Q. Okay.

A. Whereas these documents that are attached -- that are in this folder that I just referenced are dated February 21. And I don’t know when they were sent or how.

Q. Okay. Let’s talk about that. And why don’t we keep this out for a moment.

A. Oh. Sure.

Q. The first document is dated February 17th, 2003, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And it indicates a number of pages with cover of nine; is that true?

A. Yes.

Q. But there’s only one, two, three, four, five -- six pages paper-clipped together with this.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, did you direct that this document, either with or without nine pages, was to be sent to Vincent at MJJ Productions at (818) 224-4664 on February 17th, 2003?

A. Yes, I did so direct.

Q. Who is Vincent?

A. I think his name is Vincent Amen.

Q. Have you ever talked to him?

A. I think so, but I don’t have a specific recollection of talking to him.

Q. Have you ever met Mr. Amen?

A. I don’t recall.

Q. And was your intent to send those forms to Mr. Amen at that number so that he could get the Arvizos to sign consent and release forms for the “Take 2” video?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, moving on to the next form, page, I guess what we would consider page eight of that same exhibit number, 403. Let me double-check that. 413, I’m sorry.

Calling your attention to page eight, is the language of that model release language that you cleared for use in that consent form?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have a discussion with Vincent Amen at 12 -- looks like 12:57 a.m. in the early morning hours of February 21, ‘03?

A. I think so. I just don’t remember if it was Vincent Amen. But I had -- I think I mentioned in my testimony yesterday that I had one evening a -- late in the evening I had a conversation about the Arvizo releases.

Q. Okay. I’ll come back to that in a moment. I’m showing you People’s Exhibit 807. Have you ever seen that exhibit before?

A. Yes.

Q. What is it, please?

A. This is a document authorizing Theodore Goddard to file, it says, “…this complaint on behalf of my son Gavin Arvizo.”

Q. Was that a document that you had in your file at Hale Lane for Michael Jackson?

A. I don’t know.

Q. Where have you seen that document before?

A. It was filed with the -- well, I don’t know. I’m sorry, let me back up. It was submitted to the law firm in the UK of Theodore Goddard as support for their authorization to file the complaint I referenced with the British Broadcasting Standards Board.

Q. Based on your training and experience, does that document look like it was prepared by an attorney?

A. Well, it looks like it was prepared by somebody who had legal knowledge.

Q. Is that the type of document you would prepare for a release of that nature?

A. I don’t know if I prepared this or not. I remember discussing this matter, and I remember talking to, I believe it’s Ronald Konitzer, who was in Florida at the time, regarding the need to have the authorization for the Broadcasting Standards Board complaint.

Q. Are you aware that Janet Arvizo’s attorney complained that that document was forged around her signature?

A. Yes, I am aware that Mr. Dickerman made that statement.

Q. And were you present when this document was signed?

A. I don't believe so, no.

Q. And where did you get this document from, or a copy of it from?

A. I'm not sure. I believe Mr. Konitzer delivered this document to me. But I -- but I'm not sure.

Q. I'm showing you People's Exhibit 811. It appears to be four pages, if you'd leaf through it. Have you ever seen Exhibit 811 before?

A. Well, Exhibit 811 is a signed version of these other documents that are -- have the February 21, '03, date on them that were faxed under the -- well, I'm not sure they were faxed or not under that. But anyway, yes, I've seen these before, but I don't remember particularly seeing the signed ones.

Q. Okay. Did you have copies of these signed model releases in your file for Michael Jackson?

A. I don't know if I did or didn't. I really -- Ann-Marie was responsible for the release forms.

Q. All right. Going back to the consent forms that were signed ultimately by the Arvizos, the first consent forms were sent by you to Neverland Valley Ranch to have the Arvizos sign them, correct? That was the first time that you attempted to get consent forms signed by the Arvizos, true?

A. Yes.

Q. And they didn't sign them, did they?

A. No.

Q. Were you informed of why the Arvizos did not sign those consent forms to be sent to Neverland Valley Ranch?

A. The conversation I had, which -- based on what you've presented, I believe --

Q. I'm sorry. That's a "yes" or "no" question first.

A. I'm sorry, what was the question?

Q. I just want to know if you were informed of why those consent forms were not signed.

A. Yes.

Q. Who did you receive that information from?

A. Based on what you've just reviewed with me, I think it was Vincent Amen.

Q. All right. And what did Vincent Amen tell you about that?

Well, let me back up. Did Vincent Amen tell you that the Arvizos did not want to sign those forms?

A. Yes.

Q. The next forms you sent were to Hamid Moslehi, identical forms, except for some minor changes. I think the "MJJ Productions" is removed. Is that fair to say?

A. The body of the consents are the same. I'm not sure -- we've looked at a number of these now. I'm not sure -- did we send -- I'm not sure whether the ones that went to Hamid were particularly for the Arvizos or whether they were general forms.

Q. Would you like to see them again?

A. Yeah, if I could. I'm getting a little confused.

Q. Again, I'm just showing you People's Exhibit 412.

A. Yeah, these do not have the names of individual people typed in to the body of the document, so they are similar in form and substance, but they are different.

Q. Okay. And was it your intent to have Hamid obtain signatures from the Arvizo family on those forms?

A. I don't recall that I had any specific intent with respect to the Arvizos in transmitting those to Hamid. It was certainly my intent to have Hamid further assure that we had consents from anybody appearing in the video.

Q. All right. And then is the exhibit that I showed you marked as -- let me check one more thing.

I'm sorry.

A. I’m sorry, I have not been well.
Q. This is the exhibit that was removed from the sleeve. I’ll put it back in. That will necessitate me finding the missing sleeve. Okay. Here it is. Well, I’ll ask my friend Mr. Zonen to find the sleeve for that.
Q. The exhibit that was to Vincent at MJJ Productions dated February 17th, 2003, that one was specifically sent to have the Arvizos sign, correct?
A. Yes. The body of the document included names of the individual members of the Arvizo family.
Q. And the Arvizos did not sign those forms either, did they?
A. No.
Q. And in the early morning hours, you received a phone call several days later that the Arvizos were still refusing to sign these consent forms, did you not?
A. Correct.
Q. From whom?
A. Again, based on what you’ve presented, I believe it was Vincent Amen.
Q. And you revised the release form to the state that we find in People’s Exhibit 811, which has signatures on it; is that correct?
A. Yes.

Q. Mr. LeGrand, did you conceal any documents from your files on Michael Jackson?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; relevance.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: I don’t think so.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Can you tell me where the e-mails are for that file?
A. As far as I know, they’re in the Hale Lane computer system. And to the best of my recollection, there was a CD-rom prepared and delivered to the Katten Muchin law firm.
Q. Can you tell me where your personal notes are regarding your communications with Michael Jackson regarding that period of time of representation for Mr. Jackson that should be in that file?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Argumentative; misstates the evidence.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Can you tell me where your personal notes of Michael Jackson -- involving communications with Michael Jackson during this period of time, early part of 2003, can you tell me where those are?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; misstates the evidence.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I'm not sure today.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You stated that you thought the Martin Bashir film was a hatchet job. Did you ever say in an e-mail that, "Ronald had nothing to do with this. The man did the interview himself. Not good"? Did you ever say that?

A. I don't remember that. It's certainly possible.

Q. If I show you a copy of that e-mail, would that refresh your recollection?

A. It might.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: May I approach?

THE WITNESS: Yeah, I did say that.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Mr. LeGrand, concerning your files in this case, did you ever indicate that you would, "Walk away as soon as I plug a few document holes"?

A. I may have. There were some corporate paperwork pieces that needed to get finished that I had -- you know, that I had the knowledge of that we just hadn't had time to finish everything that needed -- that should have been done, in my opinion, so I wanted to complete some of that paperwork.

Q. Did you ever say, "I am cleaning up documents over the next few days which should help build a strong position for defending our actions if they ever need to be defended"?

A. Could be. Again, there were resolutions, there was some corporate paperwork that was no way a fabrication that would reflect the events as they occurred that, you know, should have been done.
Q. Did “cleaning up the documents” in this case include destruction of documents, Mr. LeGrand?
A. No.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I have no further questions.
THE COURT: Mr. Mesereau?

REDIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. MESEREAU:
Q. Mr. LeGrand, do you have the exhibit book in front of you that you had yesterday?
A. No, sir.
MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor, and --
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. MESEREAU: Oh. Thank you.
Q. Mr. LeGrand, isn’t it true the District Attorney’s Office never subpoenaed documents from you?
A. That’s correct.
Q. Isn’t it true that Prosecutor Auchincloss never once called you and asked you to give him any documents in your files?

A. That’s correct.
Q. Isn’t it true that Prosecutor Sneddon never called you at any time and said, “Could we please have your files?”
A. That’s correct.
Q. Isn’t it true Prosecutor Zonen never called you at any time and said, “Mr. LeGrand, could we just take a look at your files?”
A. That’s correct.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Isn’t it true that no representative of the Santa Barbara sheriffs ever called your office and said, “Mr. LeGrand, please give us your e-mails”?
A. That is correct.

Q. Nobody associated with the prosecution has ever called you or your firm and said, “Please let us see your files,” right?

A. That’s true.

Q. Now, Mr. LeGrand, the prosecutor asked you some questions about you and your partners’ efforts to investigate people who were around Michael Jackson, right?

A. Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And he specifically asked you questions about an attorney named John Branca, right?

A. Yes.

Q. At the time you began an investigation into some of the people around Mr. Jackson that you were concerned about, one of the people you investigated was Mr. Branca, correct?

A. Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And to your knowledge at the time, Mr. Branca had been an attorney in Los Angeles doing music work for Mr. Jackson, right?

A. Yes.

Q. You yourself, as you’ve indicated yesterday, were not a specialist in music law, right?

A. That’s right.

Q. Mr. Branca purportedly was, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you answered some questions yesterday about the Sony/ATV catalog. Remember that?

A. Yes.

Q. And the Sony/ATV catalog was owned 50/50 by Sony and Michael Jackson, correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And at times Mr. Jackson and Sony would have business discussions about their respective ownership interests in the catalog, right?

A. I was never privy to those discussions. It would certainly seem that they would occur, but I don’t have actual knowledge of that.

Q. But you were aware that negotiations went on from time to time between representatives of Michael Jackson and representatives of Sony about their respective interests in that music catalog, right?

A. Well, absolutely, yes, because I obtained files from the Ziffren law firm evidencing the Ziffren law firm and Mr. Branca’s representing Mr. Jackson in just such discussions over a period of time.

Q. And just to clarify, Mr. Branca was a partner at the Ziffren law firm in Los Angeles, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. That firm also represented Sony, correct?

A. I believe the answer is correct. Yes.

Q. And you were concerned that Mr. Branca and that law firm might not be representing Mr. Jackson’s interests properly because of their connection to Sony, correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Didn’t you investigate Mr. Branca because you were concerned that he and Sony had set up an offshore account to funnel money to so they could defraud Michael Jackson?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Same objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Why did you investigate Mr. Branca?

A. I requested -- well, let me back up.

After consultation with my partner, Mr. Gibson, and discussion with I believe Mr. Joss at Paul Hastings, Mr. Gibson and I instructed the firm Interfor to investigate Mr. Branca, because Mr. Konitzer had indicated in several conversations that he was very concerned about Mr. Branca and that Mr. Jackson had expressed concern about Mr. Branca’s loyalty.

Also, there was -- Mr. Schaffel related information that also was negative of Mr. Branca. So we made collectively the decision to ask Interfor to further the background investigation, to conduct investigation into Mr. Branca.

Q. But at the time, Konitzer didn't know that you were also investigating him, right?

A. That's correct.

Q. At the time, Schaffel didn't know you were also investigating Schaffel, right?

A. That's correct.

Q. At the time, Weizner didn't know you were also investigating Weizner, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Leading; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: That's correct. We did not inform them of the scope of -- the full scope of Interfor's actions at our request.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And you also investigated somebody named Tommy Motolla, correct?

A. I'm not sure that's correct.

Q. Do you recall asking Interfor to do some investigation into an offshore bank account?

A. It's kind of the other way around. We asked Interfor to investigate Mr. Branca. They indicated to us that --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm going to object based on hearsay.

MR. MESEREAU: State of mind, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: What was your state of mind when you investigated the possibility that an offshore account had been formed by various people to defraud Michael Jackson?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm going to object as leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: What was your state of mind when you investigated the formation of an offshore bank account?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; assumes facts.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you investigate the existence of an offshore bank account?

A. We requested Interfor to look into that possibility, yes.

Q. Why?

A. Because there was a --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'll object based on hearsay.

MR. MESEREAU: State of mind.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled. You may complete your answer.

THE WITNESS: Because we had -- we, the lawyers, had been given information from a source that appeared to have some credibility that such an account existed.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And why did you want to investigate that account?

A. Be -- well, to me, that's kind of obvious. But if, in fact, there was an offshore account in which money was being deposited for the benefit of Mr. Branca or others, that would indicate very serious violations of Mr. Branca's responsibilities to Mr. Jackson.

Q. Did you think at one point that Sony was paying Mr. Branca money to sell out Mr. Jackson?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Improper opinion; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did your investigation involve anyone you thought was involved in transferring money to that bank account?

A. The best way I can answer that is to say we asked the investigators to do as complete a job as they could with the financial resources we had available for them. And I didn't delineate who they should or shouldn't look into with respect to such an account.

Q. But at your direction, they looked into the existence of that account, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was your direction that they look into that account because you were concerned that Michael Jackson's attorney and Sony were putting money in that account so Mr. Jackson’s lawyer would essentially sell him out, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Leading; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained; foundation.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Where was the offshore account, if you know?

A. I’m sorry, I don’t recall. I believe it was in the Caribbean.

Q. Okay. And did your investigation get far enough to establish that, in fact, this lawyer was a signatory on that account?

A. I don’t believe so, no.

Q. But the investigation did indicate he was somehow involved in the account, correct?

A. The investigator’s report so indicated.

Q. And the investigator’s report indicated it appeared that Sony was involved in that account, right?

A. The investigator’s report indicated that Sony had transferred money to the account.

Q. Sony had transferred money to that account for the benefit of Mr. Jackson’s lawyer, right?

A. That’s what was indicated in the report. It -- I need to be very clear here that that was not verified, with a reasonable degree of certainty, that I would have acted upon that information. And Mr. Branca’s a fine lawyer. And, you know, there is no -- I have no proof of these statements.

Q. You investigated Mr. Branca because, in your words, you thought he was involved in self-dealing, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Improper opinion; no foundation; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Again, you know, I want to be clear. I consulted with my partner and, you know, other lawyers, and we collectively made a decision to -- that it was prudent to have our investigator look into the possibility of such actions being taken by Mr. Branca.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You were concerned that all of the individuals you investigated were involved in self-dealing, right?

A. No. That’s not right. For example, I did not suspect Mr. Malnik of self-dealing in any way.

Q. Then why did you have an entirely separate and more comprehensive investigation done of Mr. Malnik?

A. I had done an Internet search on Mr. Malnik before I met him. That Internet search indicated that he had ties to organized crime; that he was rumored to be the, you know, quote, heir of Meyer Lansky.

There were, you know, sufficient clouds in the public record of Mr. Malnik’s past that, again, we, the lawyers, made a collective decision that it was prudent to further investigate Mr. Malnik. We did not know who he was. And he was becoming a more and more powerful figure in Michael Jackson’s life.

Q. Did you at any point determine that Malnik had ties with Sony?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Foundation; improper opinion; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you know whether or not Mr. Malnik has ever had a position with the Sony corporation?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Same objection. Add relevancy.

THE COURT: Relevancy, sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When you did your investigation, you and your partner, both former prosecutors, were you concerned about Mr. Malnik’s relationship with Sony?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Same objection.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: I really don’t recall that we had any concern over Mr. Malnik’s relationship with Sony. In fact, I’m not aware that he had a significant relationship with Sony.

Our concern about Mr. Malnik was simply based upon the, you know, public records indicating these, you know, vague relationships to criminal figures. And those -- you know, those are all long in the past, but still, you know, in the public domain.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And you were concerned that all of these characters were trying to steal money and take advantage of Michael Jackson, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Leading; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Have you and Prosecutor Auchincloss ever had a discussion about this investigation that you and your partner began?

A. No.

Q. Has Mr. Auchincloss ever tried to approach you to find out why you were investigating all of these people while you were Mr. Jackson’s lawyer?

A. No.

Q. Isn’t it true that you were trying to investigate offshore accounts owned by Branca and someone named Tommy Motolla?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was Tommy Motolla?

A. He was a very powerful figure in the record industry at one time. I believe he was the president of the Sony Entertainment Division in the U.S. I’m not sure of his exact title or position.

Q. Were you concerned that Tommy Motolla and Mr. Jackson’s lawyer, John Branca, were working together to defraud Michael Jackson?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Relevancy; assumes facts; leading.

THE COURT: You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Based on the suspicions that were expressed to me and my partner, we asked Interfor to look into these rumors.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Now, you had known

Konitzer for how many years at that point?

A. I’m not sure. Six, seven, eight maybe.

Q. But you had never investigated Konitzer before you started this investigation, right?

A. Right.

Q. Even though you knew Konitzer all those years, you had never hired an investigative firm to check out his background, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. You were concerned that Konitzer was engaged in self-dealing at the expense of Michael Jackson, true?

A. Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Relevancy; improper opinion.

MR. MESEREAU: I think the prosecutor’s gone through all this, Your Honor.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

THE WITNESS: My answer is yes, I was concerned.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You were also concerned that Dieter Weizner was engaging in self-dealing at the expense of Michael Jackson, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You were -- you asked for an investigation into Konitzer’s background in Canada, right?

A. Canada and Germany, yes.

Q. And you also asked for an investigation into Weizner’s background in Germany, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever met Tommy Motolla?

A. No.

Q. Ever spoken to him?

A. No.

Q. To your knowledge, did Al Malnik have any relationship with Tommy Motolla?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you ever talk to him about that?

A. I don’t believe I ever talked to Al about whether or not he knew or had met Tommy Motolla.

Q. Was it your belief when you started this investigation that Al Malnik, Tommy Motolla, John Branca and people at Sony were trying to find a way to get Mr. Jackson’s interest in that music catalog?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Argumentative; leading; relevancy.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I’m not sure that I would include Al Malnik in that group, but I certainly was concerned that Branca and Motolla, in particular, had set the stage, so to speak, for Sony to be able to obtain Michael’s interest in the Sony/ATV joint venture.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And as a former prosecutor and as Michael Jackson’s attorney, you thought the ethical and professional thing for you and your law firm to do was to investigate these people to protect Mr. Jackson as best you could, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m going to object to the prefatory remarks as argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: The investigation was one of the tools we employed to try to be effective in representing our client’s interest.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: In response to Prosecutor Auchincloss’s questions, you said you wanted -- excuse me, let me rephrase that.

In response to Prosecutor Auchincloss’s questions about why you started this investigation, you said you wanted Michael Jackson to be empowered.

Do you remember that?

A. Yes.

Q. And what did you mean by the word “empowered”?

A. I wanted him to have a higher degree of detail and knowledge about the people who were becoming influential in his business and financial affairs, so that, having that knowledge, he could then make better decisions about those people and the positions they would occupy in his life.

Q. Did you feel that Michael Jackson had made poor decisions in trusting certain people in his life?

A. No disrespect intended to Mr. Jackson, but it’s -- it was apparent from any review of the lawsuits against him and some of his well-publicized history that he’s been taken -- you know, that people have attempted to gain significantly from being associated with him.

Q. And you felt, looking at his history, that he'd been taken advantage of repeatedly, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Leading; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you make a determination whether or not Mr. Jackson had been taken advantage of?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; improper opinion.

THE COURT: Relevancy; sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you feel that one of your responsibilities as Mr. Jackson's new attorney was to try and stop people from taking advantage of him?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have concerns that all of the people that you were investigating were taking advantage of Michael Jackson?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Leading; relevance.

THE COURT: Asked and answered.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you know that Mark Geragos was investigating the Arvizos?

A. I don't know. I don't remember -- as I sit here today, I don't remember specifically that I knew he was investigating them. I'm just not sure about that. I'm sorry.

Q. I'm sorry. Did I stop you?

A. No. I just -- I don't remember.

Q. Well, Prosecutor Auchincloss asked you if you had ever talked to an investigator named Brad Miller, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And I believe you thought you might have, but you weren't sure; is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. At some point, you were one of the lawyers responsible for hiring Mark Geragos, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall ever discussing with Mark

Geragos his decision to investigate the Arvizos' background in extortion and fraud?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Argumentative; assumes facts; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever talk with Mark Geragos about what he learned about the J.C. Penney suit filed by the Arvizos?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Hearsay; exceeds the scope.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When you were communicating with Mr. Geragos, did you ever discuss, you and he, a J.C. Penney suit, that you recall?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Now, Prosecutor Auchincloss asked you some questions yesterday about Janet Arvizo turning down an offer of $25,000 from you. Do you remember that?

A. Yes.

Q. And at the point in time when you offered $25,000 to Janet Arvizo, Janet Arvizo was being represented in England by the same law firm that represented Michael Jackson, right?

A. With respect to the British broadcasting administrative complaint process, yes.

Q. If you know, who was paying Janet Arvizo's legal fees in that action?

A. Ultimately Mr. Jackson. I'm not sure which exactly the source of funds was. But ultimately Mr. Jackson.

Q. Do you have any idea how much money Mr. Jackson spent paying Janet Arvizo's legal fees in England?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevancy.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When you discussed the possibility of giving Janet Arvizo $25,000, you were talking to her new lawyer named Bill Dickerman, right?

A. Yes.
Q. When you spoke to Bill Dickerman, did you know that he had a profit-sharing arrangement with an attorney named Larry Feldman?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Relevancy; hearsay.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: If Janet Arvizo was going to file a lawsuit against Michael Jackson with Attorneys Larry Feldman and Bill Dickerman, it wouldn’t make sense to be joined with him in a suit in England, would it?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; argumentative.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Approximately when did you talk to Attorney Bill Dickerman about your offer of $25,000 to Janet Arvizo?
A. As I think I said yesterday, it was I think spring of ‘04. And whether that was March, April, May or June, I’m not sure. Mr. Dickerman and I corresponded over a period of, I’m not sure whether it was two weeks or six weeks. But there was a little period of time. And I’m pretty sure it was late spring of ‘04.

Q. Did the name Attorney Larry Feldman ever pop up in your discussions with Bill Dickerman?
A. No.
Q. How about Jamie Masada?
A. No.
Q. How about Stan Katz?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Beyond the scope; relevancy.
MR. MESEREAU: I believe counsel explored this issue, Your Honor.
THE COURT: The objection is sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Attorney Dickerman communicated to you his desire that Mrs. Arvizo not be represented by any of Michael Jackson’s attorneys, right?
A. Not exactly. What he communicated was that he wanted the -- the representation with respect to the British Standards Board complaint to be terminated and he wanted the complaint withdrawn.

Q. And that was a complaint that Mr. Jackson and Mrs. Arvizo had filed complaining about Mr. Bashir’s actions and tactics, right?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; assumes facts not in evidence.

THE COURT: Overruled.
THE WITNESS: Originally, as I said yesterday, there was one complaint filed on behalf of the Jacksons and the Arvizos. The Standards Board subsequently instructed the lawyers in the UK that the Arvizo complaint was a separate and distinct matter and needed to be the subject of its own complaint.
So that’s -- I mean, so there were two separate complaints. Ultimately one for the Arvizos and one for Mr. Jackson. And those complaints alleged that Granada and Martin Bashir, as Granada’s agent, had violated various aspects of the British broadcasting standards with respect to their actions in the video presented and produced by Granada.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: At any point, did you feel that you were a lawyer for Janet Arvizo?
A. No.
Q. At any point, did you feel you were giving any legal advice to Janet Arvizo?
A. No.
Q. Now, Prosecutor Auchincloss showed you a couple of model release forms that you had prepared, right?
A. Yes.
Q. And when you prepared those release forms, it was your understanding that Ms. Arvizo and her family would sign them authorizing the family to be filmed in the “Take 2” production, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Leading; assumes facts not in evidence.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Why did you prepare model releases to be signed by the Arvizos?
A. Because we -- because there could not be a broadcast use of any video containing their images without a release.

Q. And at some point, did you learn that Janet Arvizo was bargaining for better terms in those releases?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Hearsay; assumes facts not in evidence; and leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You indicated in response to Prosecutor Auchincloss's questions that there was a point in time where Janet Arvizo didn't want to sign the release you had drafted, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And I believe you said that that refusal to sign was communicated to you by Vincent Amen, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And I believe you said that you then redrafted a release for Janet Arvizo to sign, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Why did you redraft that release for Janet Arvizo to sign?

A. Because I needed -- because it had to be in a simpler, more readable, user-friendly, plain-English format, based on what had been presented to me as the concerns and reservations about executing the more formal release that I think is two big paragraphs of like, you know, one sentence per paragraph. It's very legalese, so to speak, and my understanding was that the Arvizos would sign releases if they were drafted in a fashion that were understandable by them.

Q. And was it your understanding that that was Janet Arvizo's request?

A. Yes.

Q. Who communicated that request to you?

A. I think it was Vincent Amen.

Q. How many drafts did that release go through before you learned that Janet had signed it?

A. I think it was just the one revision process. We went from the more complex document that I described that we looked at in the exhibits earlier to a more simpler document I think titled "Model Release," and it's much simpler, less elegant.

Q. And did you ever learn whether or not the Arvizos had even appeared in the “Take 2” documentary?

A. I’m not sure that they did, to tell you the truth. I mean, I did watch it once, but that was two years ago, and I don’t remember whether they’re in it or not.
Q. Isn’t it true, Mr. LeGrand, that documentary appeared on television, was a great success, and they weren’t even in it?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; argumentative.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Counsel? I have this picture of this lawyer upstairs walking back and forth, pulling his hairs out of his head, wondering why the heck I ordered him up here today under threat of warrant while Mr. Mesereau goes on and on. What’s wrong with that picture?
MR. MESEREAU: It’s pretty accurate, I think, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Can we get on with it?
MR. MESEREAU: Yes. Yes, I will. Okay.
(Laughter.)
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: All right. Prosecutor -- Prosecutor Auchincloss --
THE COURT: Thank you for laughing. That relieves some tension here.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Prosecutor Auchincloss asked you a question yesterday about Mr. Jackson’s music career. Do you remember that?
A. Not precisely, no, sir.

Q. Well, didn’t he say something about you were all working on a “Take 2” documentary because you were trying to shore up a falling music career for Michael Jackson?
A. I think there was a question that had that implicit in it. But I can’t recall the details of the question. It’s been quite a few questions in the last day.
Q. In the Bashir documentary, do you remember Mr. Jackson received a BAMBI award?

A. Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevancy.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: In fact, in that documentary Bashir talks about Michael Jackson as the greatest musical artist of all time, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevancy.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You indicated you spoke to representatives of the Bank of America about the Fire Mountain LLC, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was your understanding they had no objection to money from the “Take 2” documentary being placed in the Fire Mountain account, correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Hearsay; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I had a conversation, I’m not sure which individual at Bank of America. There were two or three that I spoke with. And after discussing with them the overall circumstances, the uses in paying the attorneys and funding the litigation in the UK and such, they indicated that they would not view that as a default under the loan, and to the best of my knowledge, they subsequently extended the loan in negotiations with Mr. Malnik.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And certainly Mr. Jackson was not working with you in any effort to defraud Bank of America, right?

A. That’s right.

MR. MESEREAU: I have no further questions, Your Honor.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Just a few. I’ll be brief.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Mr. LeGrand, you spoke to Attorney Finkelstein at least two times. You testified to that yesterday, correct?

A. I think that's right.
Q. And Mr. Finkelstein was an attorney for Mr. Jackson, true?

A. Today I'm not sure who he was acting for.
Q. That was your understanding, that he was an attorney for Mr. Jackson, correct?
A. It was my understanding he was being engaged to handle the funds with respect to Fire Mountain, which was --
Q. My question is, he was an attorney for Michael Jackson; true or false?
A. I don't know that.
Q. Was that your understanding?
A. I am not aware that Mr. Finkelstein believed he was representing Mr. Jackson as an individual.
Q. Who was he representing?
A. I thought he was acting for Fire Mountain.
Q. And Fire Mountain is completely owned by MJJ Productions?
A. Yes, a corporation.
Q. Which is completely owned by Michael Jackson?
A. Yes. That was my understanding.
Q. So he would be answering to Michael Jackson, true?
A. Ultimately, yes.
Q. Okay. Mr. Finkelstein is a specialist in offshore money, isn't he?
A. I don't know what he specializes in.
Q. Well, isn't it true that you transferred two million dollars to Mr. Finkelstein on Michael Jackson's behalf so that Michael Jackson could establish offshore bank accounts, true, or for deposit in offshore bank accounts for Mr. Jackson?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevancy; foundation.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: True?
THE COURT: Overruled.
THE WITNESS: I have, and had, no knowledge of establishment of offshore accounts for the benefit of Mr. Jackson at that time.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, you were entrusted with this two million dollars, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were entrusted with that two million dollars to act in Michael Jackson's interests, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you transferred that two million dollars to Mr. Finkelstein, Mr. Jackson's interests were what you were serving when you did that, correct?

A. That was my intent, yes, sir.

Q. And are you telling us you had no idea where that two million dollars was going?

A. I thought it was going to be used to pay the expenses that were being incurred on Mr. Jackson's behalf in terms of the Granada litigation, to pay bills, and would be delivered to the money manager once we got the new money manager firmly established. That's what I believed.

Q. But it wasn't, was it?

A. Actually, I believe a significant portion of the funds ultimately were delivered to Allan Whitman.

Q. Do you know that?

A. I'm not sure today, but I thought -- I certainly thought that the residual of the money after that $965,000 was disbursed, I thought that was delivered to Mr. Whitman. But I could be wrong about that.

Q. As far as the John Branca and Tommy Motolla investigation by Interfor, Interfor never found any evidence that Mr. Motolla or Mr. Branca were engaged in any fraud with Mr. Jackson, did they?

A. That's correct. I had no evidence delivered with that report to substantiate those claims.

Q. And in fact, that report only indicate that Sony was depositing money in some offshore account, apparently for Mr. -- on Mr. Jackson's behalf, true?

A. I'm not sure about the "Mr. Jackson's behalf." I would need to see the report.

Q. Okay. But you have no reason to believe that any funds transferred to an offshore account by Sony, you have no reason to believe that those funds were somehow defrauding Mr. Jackson?

A. I was given no credible evidence to support those charges. I would be doing Mr. Branca and Mr. Motolla a great wrong if I said otherwise.

Q. Did you consult with Mr. Jackson before you took two million dollars of his money and sent it to Mr. Finkelstein?

A. I don’t think so.

Q. Did you ever talk to him about that, ever?

A. I believe we talked about it when we were at Al Malnik’s house in Florida later.

Q. And Mr. Finkelstein -- or Mr. Jackson had knowledge of that two million dollars being transferred to Mr. Finkelstein, didn’t he?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: He never indicated that he didn’t know that you had transferred two million dollars of his money to Mr. Finkelstein without his permission or without his agreement, did he?

A. He never indicated to me that he was dissatisfied with what -- with those transfers.

Q. As far as this litigation or complaint, or whatever was going on in England regarding the airing of the Bashir special, Janet Arvizo never authorized her joinder in that action, did she, as far as you know?

A. The only evidence I saw of her authorization for that action was the page you showed me earlier that Mr. Dickerman subsequently stated was a forgery.

Q. And as far as you know, Janet Arvizo has never authorized any law firm in England to represent her, as far as you know today, based on everything?

A. Yeah, that’s true.

Q. And Janet Arvizo was reluctant to sign those consent forms because she felt that she was burned in the Martin Bashir special; that her family was hurt because Gavin appeared in that special without anybody’s consent. Isn’t that one of the reasons why she was reluctant to sign those consent forms?

A. I don’t know what was in Janet Arvizo’s mind.

Q. No one ever communicated to you that that was part of her reluctance in signing those forms?

A. I don’t remember that. I think Mr. Dickerman said words to that effect in 2004. But I don’t remember anybody at the time, the week or ten days or so that we were engaged in getting appearance consents and releases from various people, I don’t believe I heard that kind of statement at that time.

Q. As far as the allegations of double-dealing, self-interest involving the Interfor investigation, Interfor never came up with anything substantial, substantive, about Mr. Konitzer, did they?

A. I’m not sure what you mean by “substantive.”

Q. Well, in terms of his double-dealing with Michael Jackson, was there ever any indication that he was double-dealing with Michael Jackson based upon that report?

A. No, but that wasn’t -- the report wasn’t about that.

Q. Was there ever any indication that he was double-dealing -- that Dieter Weizner was double-dealing with Michael Jackson in any way, shape or form?

A. Not in that report.

Q. That report was basically full of rumors and unsubstantiated allegations, true, because it was incomplete?

A. Ultimately that was my view.

Q. And if Bank of America knew that you were sending two million dollars to Mr. Finkelstein, do you think they would have gone ahead and authorized the handling of these funds through the Fire Mountain account?

A. I don’t know.

Q. Well, didn’t you know that they were concerned about paying bills and not putting money offshore?

A. I don’t know. I can’t speak for Bank of America, I’m sorry, sir.

Q. Janet Arvizo, based upon everything you knew, was going to get nothing for this film, video, of her and her family that was taken at Mr. Moslehi's house, true?

A. I don't know.

Q. Well, you didn't disburse any funds to her from the account that you pulled in three million dollars from FOX on, correct?

A. That's true.

Q. And she didn't get a dime of that, did she?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. And you knew she was a poor individual, indigent, her family did not have money?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; misstates the evidence.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did it ever occur to you that you were engaging in an exploitation of Janet Arvizo along with Michael Jackson?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; leading; misstates the evidence.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Mr. LeGrand, as far as any requests from the People regarding files or any requests from law enforcement regarding files, the reason why no requests were made is because that would have been futile, because there's an attorney-client privilege that protects those files; isn't that accurate?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Misstates the evidence; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I'm not an expert in that area of law, but I think generally you're correct, that the prosecution in this case could not have compelled me to produce those files without Mr. Jackson's consent.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And in fact, you were contacted by the Santa Barbara Sheriff's Office and asked to be interviewed, and you refused; isn't that true?

A. I informed your -- I'm not sure what his title was, but I informed the investigator who called from the office that I would only be able to be interviewed if they obtained Mr. Jackson's consent.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: No further questions.

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Mr. LeGrand, do you know whether or not Mr. Jackson has waived the attorney-client privilege as far as you're concerned?

A. Yes. I received documents signed by Mr. Jackson waiving privilege so that I could appear here today and yesterday.

Q. In fact, you were informed quite a while ago that Mr. Jackson had waived the attorney-client privilege, correct?

A. Well, I was informed that he was prepared to waive it with respect to my testimony, yes.

Q. Nobody from law enforcement has ever asked you if there was any waiver of the attorney-client privilege, right?

A. That's correct.

Q. Nobody from the prosecution has ever asked you if there was any waiver of the attorney-client privilege?

A. That's correct.

Q. Mr. Jackson doesn't even know who Mr. Finkelstein is, right?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Assumes facts; foundation; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.

FURTHER RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. As far as this waiver goes, when did you ultimately obtain a waiver from Mr. Jackson on the attorney-client privilege?

A. I believe it was Wednesday morning, this week.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: No further questions.

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Mr. LeGrand, do you remember learning that we had turned over your files to the prosecution last December?

A. Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; assumes facts.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did they ever ask you to follow up, give them some more documents after they got your files last December?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I had no contact from the prosecutor’s office other than that one phone call from the sheriffs a long -- or investigator a long time ago. But since December, no.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And were you aware that Mr. Auchincloss had your files as of last December?

A. I didn’t even know who Mr. Auchincloss was before yesterday, but I had been informed by you that my files had been delivered to the office headed by Mr. Sneddon.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I have no further questions, Your Honor. But there is one housekeeping matter that I don’t think is appropriate for me to mention in front of the jury.

THE COURT: All right. Then I’ll excuse the jury for lunch. We’ll take our break now, and I’ll remain for a moment.

(To the witness) Just a moment. I’m not sure if this involves you or not.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you.

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, this witness has indicated that he turned over five boxes of documents to the defense. He has indicated that there should have been e-mails in that -- in those files, as well as his personal notes regarding communications with his client.

I would like to state for the record, we have none of those items. We have what I would say would probably be one banker's box of materials.

And I would like this witness ordered back. I would like him ordered to produce the entire file regarding Mr. Jackson. And I would like an opportunity to review those documents and, if necessary, have him brought back on cross-examination concerning those documents.

THE COURT: As I understood his testimony, he's turned over everything that he had to somebody else. I mean, he doesn't claim that he has any of the documents.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And if that is the state of the record, then I'd ask that the Court order the defense to produce the documents that I've mentioned.

THE COURT: Is that your position, that you've already turned over everything you have on this case to someone else?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, with respect -- I am no longer associated with the firm of Hale Lane.

THE BAILIFF: No one can hear you, sir.

THE WITNESS: I'm sorry.

I am no longer associated with the law firm of Hale Lane. And I have no control over any of the files that remain at Hale Lane. I have no access to any of those materials.

I did, when I left Hale Lane, have a few legal pads of notes. I don't know whether those notes include any references to Mr. Jackson or not. And I will be pleased to, you know, look through those and see if there are. But I have no access or control.

THE COURT: Other than that, is it your belief that all the file was turned over, or do you have any way of knowing that?

THE WITNESS: I really have no way of knowing that. I mean, I -- when my representation was terminated originally back in March of 2003, I prepared copies of all the files at that time and delivered them, I believe to Mr. Malnik in Florida, who at the time I understood to be the primary attorney serving Mr. Jackson.

Subsequently, I was re-engaged for the limited purpose of continuing to manage the Granada litigation in the United Kingdom, and continued in that role until -- for quite a while, until the charges were brought against Mr. Jackson in this case, at which time the litigation in the UK was put on hold.

Shortly thereafter, I communicated with Mr. Malnik, asked him what I should do. And I corresponded with, I think it was Steve Cochran, Zia Modabber, whom I knew from the dealings with Mr. Jackson, and indicated that I felt it appropriate to turn over my records to the Katten Muchin law firm, which at the time seemed to have a continuing representation of Mr. Jackson.

I instructed my staff to prepare, you know, copies of files. I -- this discussion of completeness is somewhat baffling to me. Nobody ever requested that I turn over every single piece of paper, e-mail or document, that we make, you know, a thorough search of every crevice and cranny of our firm. We simply did our best to, you know, compile the files and deliver them. A lot of --

THE COURT: Have you turned over everything that you have control of at this point to somebody, other than --

THE WITNESS: Yeah, I think so.

THE COURT: Okay.

THE WITNESS: It's possible I have some boxes that may contain some notes.

THE COURT: I'll ask you to look through whatever records you have, and if you find that you have some, prepare -- notify both sides and give both sides access to those documents.

THE WITNESS: Very good, sir.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: There was one other thing. He mentioned that he delivered a CD of e-mails to the defense, which we have not received.

THE COURT: Well, my recollection of the testimony was that he thought he did.
Did you --
MS. YU: Your Honor, I believe everything was produced. We printed everything from a CD that, it is correct, that Mr. LeGrand -- and we printed it out and we produced them.
THE COURT: All right.
MS. YU: Every page.
THE COURT: So you should have those.
So the Court will -- you may step down.
Thank you.

The Court will go in recess.
THE WITNESS: There's still a binder here.
Somebody -- I'm not sure whose it is.
(Recess taken.)

(The following proceedings were held in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: Call your next witness.
MR. MESEREAU: Yes. The defense will call Mr. Mark Geragos.
THE COURT: Come forward, please. When you get to the witness stand, remain standing.
Face the clerk and raise your right hand.

MARK GERAGOS
Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE CLERK: Please be seated.
THE WITNESS: Thank you.
THE CLERK: State and spell your name for the record.
THE WITNESS: Mark Geragos. G-e-r-a-g-o-s.
THE CLERK: Thank you.
DIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Good morning, Mark.

A. Good morning, Tom.

Q. Would you please give a little summary of your education?

A. I went to college, I went to law school, I passed the bar.

Q. Okay.

(Laughter.)

Q. That was kind of long-winded, wasn't it?

A. It was not a very distinguished undergraduate or graduate career, so....

Q. And you are a lawyer in Los Angeles, correct?

A. I am. I've got a firm in Los Angeles, which I share with my father and my brother, named Geragos & Geragos. We stayed up all night thinking it up.

Q. All right. Do you know the fellow seated at counsel table to my right?

A. Yes.

Q. And who is he?

A. Michael Jackson, who was a client of mine for about 16 months.

Q. And when did you first meet Mr. Jackson?

A. It would have been probably about February -- the first week of February of 2003, I believe.

Q. And at some point, you were retained to represent Mr. Jackson, right?

A. That's correct.

Q. And how did that come about?

THE WITNESS: Although I know you've told me out of court that there is a waiver, Your Honor, I have not seen nor heard it on the record, and I'm more comfortable if I have that first.

THE COURT: Certainly.

MR. MESEREAU: I can represent to the Court there is a waiver of the attorney-client privilege so Mr. Geragos can testify.

THE COURT: You have a written waiver you'll provide him with after court today?

MR. MESEREAU: We will do that, Your Honor, sure.

THE COURT: Is that satisfactory?

THE WITNESS: That is, Your Honor. Thank you.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When were you first retained to represent Mr. Jackson?

A. It would have been sometime shortly before I met him the first time. The first time I met Michael was at Neverland, and I was contacted by somebody from, I think, Paul Hastings. And then was sent -- or there was a series of transactions, I guess, or faxes back and forth, and ultimately I was retained and then went up to Neverland and met Michael for the first time.

Q. And why were you retained?

A. At that point, there were allegations that were being made in the media and there was also, as I remember, complaints that were being made to Child Services about him, his fitness as a parent, as well.

Q. And did you represent Mr. Jackson in those two areas?

A. I did. I was given the role, so to speak, among a cast of thousands, to kind of coordinate and be a person who would look out for his interests in those areas.

Q. And when you began to represent Mr. Jackson, were you reporting to anyone in particular?

A. Well, when I first came on board, there was a gentleman, who I saw in the hallway just a minute ago, David LeGrand, who was there, who was a lawyer who was coordinating a lot of the stuff.

There was a gentleman who he introduced me to named Ronald Konitzer. And there was a gentleman over at Paul Hastings. And I feel awful, I can’t remember his name, because he’s the person who referred me over there in the first place. But there was another lawyer there.

But generally what would happen is, it wasn’t so much reporting as we would have these interminably long conference calls.

Q. And generally who was involved in those calls?

A. It seemed like everyone. There were all kinds of people on the conference calls. There were PR people. Paul Hastings lawyers. David LeGrand would be on the conference call. I would plug into the conference call. Ronald Konitzer would be on the conference call, among others. Those are the ones that come to mind.

Q. And were these conference calls occurring on a daily basis?

A. It seemed like it.

Q. Typically who would initiate the conference call?

A. I think David's office would be my -- would -- but that would be a guess. I really don't know.

Q. Was Michael Jackson usually involved in these conference calls?

A. Usually not.

Q. Was he involved in any of them?

A. He -- there were a couple of calls. You're talking about February of '03.

Q. Sure.

A. There were a couple of calls where Michael would get on the phone for brief periods of time, but generally were not the same as what I'm talking about with these conference calls. Those would be a call where maybe Ronald would put him on the phone, there would a brief discussion. It wouldn't be more than, I don't know, 45 seconds or a minute, usually, it seemed like. It was very quick.

Q. And I believe said your work involved response to the Bashir documentary?

A. Well, the lawyers who were responding to the Bashir documentary, as I understood it, was there was -- I think it was Paul Hastings English barristers who were dealing with the documentary there and dealing with some issue that they kept talking about, some board that was involved that they were making complaints about.

And then here, my role was to see if there was any kind of -- anything that needed to be done to protect him in terms of his parental rights or anything else from the accusations that were being made against him.

Q. Was your firm exclusively involved in the area of child custody, parental rights?

A. No. There was -- he had a -- I don’t know if he still has, but there was a lawyer by the name of -- I think his name was Lance Spiegel, from a firm on the west side of Los Angeles, and he was clearly primarily with the custody issues.

My role was if there was any DCFS involvement, if there was anybody who was trying to do anything else. Basically to see if there was anything else that he needed protection against.

Q. Was a potential DCFS investigation the only investigation you were concerned about at the time?

A. No, no, I was concerned about -- obviously at the same time that the documentary came out, at the time, there were people making all kinds of accusations about Michael, and specifically with one young man who was involved in that documentary, and I was supposed to look into that as well.

Q. And was his name “Gavin Arvizo”?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. At some point, did you ever hear the name “Janet Arvizo”?

A. At the very -- probably before I heard the name “Gavin.”

Q. And how did you hear her name?

A. Initially there was a rundown of exactly what the situation was. And I couldn’t tell you exactly if it was Paul Hastings or if it was the English counterpart or the American counterpart or if it was David, but there was a rundown of the situation. I was told about the Arvizos.

I was also told and the first thing that was done that had any urgency is there was a 60 Minutes taping that was scheduled, and they wanted me to be up there to make sure that Michael didn’t make any statements or questions weren’t asked that were inappropriate.

Q. And was this at Neverland?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Janet Arvizo at Neverland on that day?

A. I remember seeing Gavin at Neverland that day. And then we were there for, I don’t know, maybe 12 hours or so. And during that time there, I was getting downloaded with information as well from a number of people at the ranch itself.

Q. And what was your role as far as your representation of Mr. Jackson went on that occasion?

A. Well, that was really -- they just wanted me, I guess, as a backstop on the interview. And ultimately, after sitting there for about 12 hours, it was my decision, or I told them that, look, if I was going to be involved, I didn’t want him doing the interview, and I pulled the plug on it.

Q. So ultimately that interview with 60 Minutes did not take place, correct?

A. On that occasion in February of 2003, it did not. I -- I said that it was not going to happen, and asked that they -- politely asked Mr. Bradley, and there was another producer, whose name I think was Radotsky, Michael Radotsky, who was there, told them that this was not going to happen.

Q. And you say you were at Neverland approximately 12 hours that day?

A. It seemed like it, yeah.

Q. And did you see Ms. Janet Arvizo there the whole time?

A. Well, portions, is my memory. I remember -- I have vivid memories about Gavin Arvizo talking with Ed Bradley and Gavin Arvizo talking with Radotsky, which I think is his name, the producer, and then seeing what was going on there. And also hearing these stories that people were telling me, and trying to just take it in and sort out whatever it was.

Q. And was it your understanding that the Arvizos wanted to have a role in that 60 Minutes documentary?

A. I watched as --

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as to speculative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Referring only to your state of mind at the time, Mr. Geragos, did you have any knowledge one way or the other whether or not the Arvizos were supposed to be involved in the documentary?

MR. ZONEN: I object as irrelevant to this question.

THE COURT: You have to let him finish the question so I know what you’re objecting to.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Mr. Geragos, just directing my question to your state of mind at the time, did you have any understanding one way or the other whether or not Janet Arvizo and the children were supposed to appear in a 60 Minutes documentary?

MR. ZONEN: Objection to his state of mind as being irrelevant to this proceeding.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: In your capacity as Mr. Jackson’s attorney on that day, did you have any understanding as to why the Arvizos were at Neverland?

A. The -- I saw an interaction between Gavin Arvizo --

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object to any vision of interaction as being irrelevant to this proceeding, and the question is irrelevant and lacking in foundation.

MR. MESEREAU: He’s cutting off the witness, Your Honor, I object.

THE COURT: I think that question can be answered “yes” or “no,” and we can go from there. Do you want the question read back?

THE WITNESS: God, I hate to say “no.” Did I see -- did I see an interaction? Yes.

THE COURT: I’ll have the question read back so you understand it.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: What was your understanding?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: As Mr. Jackson’s attorney,

were you under any instructions to do anything with the Arvizos at Neverland on that particular day?
MR. ZONEN: Objection; vague. Instruction from whom?
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you talk to Janet Arvizo that day?
A. Briefly, I believe. But -- I know that I didn’t talk to her. I watched her interact or converse with Mr. Radotsky, who was the producer. I believe Mr. Bradley.
Q. Did you see Ms. Arvizo talking to Mr. Radotsky for any length of time that day?
A. I don’t know if I would say a length of time. I saw at least on two occasions, I think.
Q. And why were you at Neverland that day?
A. I was asked to come up by Mr. LeGrand specifically to, I guess, monitor the interview.
Q. And were you under the impression, as you arrived, that the Arvizos were going to be there?
A. Yes.
Q. Why?
A. It’s what I was told.
Q. Is that by Mr. LeGrand?

A. I believe it was.
Q. And were you told why they were going to be there?
A. I believe Mr. LeGrand told me that --
MR. ZONEN: That would be “yes” or “no,” Your Honor. I object to any answer beyond that.
THE COURT: Sustained.
“Yes” or “no.”
THE WITNESS: Yes.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And what was your understanding as to why they were going to be there?
MR. ZONEN: Objection. Hearsay; lack of foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you give any advice to the Arvizos on that particular day?
A. No.
Q. Did you talk to Gavin Arvizo on that particular day?

A. No.

Q. Who else do you recall being at Neverland on that particular day, other than the people you’ve identified?

A. Dieter Weizner was there. I think a gentleman by the name of Jack Sussman from CBS was there. There was a woman which -- also with CBS with the last name of Simon, I think was there. There was another lawyer from my office with me. I can’t remember which lawyer it was. And there was a -- I don’t know, a cast of probably 30 or 40 people, production people, who were there as well.

Q. And what time did you arrive there that day?

A. I couldn’t tell you. It was light outside. But I don’t -- I would imagine late morning, early afternoon, but that’s just a guess.

Q. What time do you think you left?

A. Whatever, eight, ten, twelve hours after I arrived.

Q. When you left, do you know whether or not Janet Arvizo was still there?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you know whether or not Gavin Arvizo was still there?

A. I do not. Not as I sit here today.

Q. Did you hear Janet Arvizo say anything to Mr. Radotsky?

A. Not that I can remember as I sit here.

Q. Did you see Janet Arvizo talk to Ed Bradley of 60 Minutes?

A. I believe that I did.

Q. Did you hear what she said?

A. Not that I can remember.

Q. Okay. Did you see either Mr. Bradley or Mr. Radotsky talking to Gavin Arvizo?

A. Yes. I think Radotsky, with Mr. Bradley. I don’t know that he was actively participating, but I do believe Radotsky was talking.

Q. And approximately what date was this, Mr. Geragos?

A. I want to say February 7th, and I just -- I don’t know if that was a Saturday. I don’t believe it was a court day. So it was either a Saturday or a Sunday, but I'd just be guessing again.

Q. Have you seen the Bashir documentary at this point?

A. I have seen it. But not recently.

Q. No, had you seen it at this particular point in time?

A. No, I had not.

Q. Did you ever see Janet Arvizo again?

A. No, I don't believe that I have.

Q. Have you ever spoken to her on the phone?

A. No, I don't believe that I have.

Q. Okay. Following that visit to Neverland, you continued to represent Mr. Jackson, right?

A. That's correct.

Q. And what were the things you were doing as a lawyer for Mr. Jackson?

A. Well, one of the first things that I did after that was to get ahold of the -- a copy of the documentary by Mr. Bashir. I watched it. We were -- on these conference calls, they would talk about what the various allegations were against Michael.

One of the first things I did is involve a private investigator. And I involved a private investigator and I had some associates in the firm do some database searching on various players involved.

Q. Now, was it your understanding at that point that Mr. Sneddon had started any investigation?

A. No. It was not my understanding that he had.

Q. Had you heard of any statements Mr. Sneddon had made anywhere about an investigation into Michael Jackson at that point?

A. In early February, no. The only thing that -- as I remember, in early February, that sticks out in my mind now as I sit here, was something about somebody complaining to DCFS.

Q. Now, you said you started your own investigation, right?

A. That's correct.

Q. And why did you do that?

A. I was -- the things that I was hearing about the Arvizos gave me great pause.
Q. What were you hearing?
MR. ZONEN: I'll object as hearsay and irrelevance and lack of foundation and vague as to time.
THE COURT: I'm going to overrule the objection and I'm going to allow the witness to answer, but I'll caution the jury that at this point, what he states that he heard about the family is not offered for the truth of the matter asserted. But it's offered to explain why he did certain things thereafter.

Go ahead.
THE WITNESS: Thank you.
I had -- when I was up there, sitting up there that day, somebody had told me a story about Gavin being told to refer to Michael as "Daddy," and that -- that Michael was uncomfortable with that; that the person that was telling me was probably one of the people who were -- it was either Weizner or Konitzer or somebody, somebody who was up there, and that that concerned him greatly.
That obviously gave me pause, and so in response to that, I decided to run some database searches on the Arvizos.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you run those database searches on the Arvizos?
A. I did.
Q. And what did you find?
A. The -- a lawsuit against J.C. Penney's and -- a lawsuit against J.C. Penney's and then a purported -- and then I had somebody, and I don't know if it was in-office or not, take a look at the file or do a little bit more due diligence on it.
Q. That was look at the J.C. Penney file?

A. Correct.
Q. Okay. And why did you do that?
A. Well, I had a concern at that point that given what was going on, that somebody might use the situation to manipulate my client.
Q. And when you say "manipulate" your client, what do you mean?

A. It was not unknown to me that my client is frequently the target of litigation, so I -- and you’ve got a whirlwind of activity going around and you’ve got people making accusations. It occurs to me that I want to know if some of the players that are involved have a litigious history, so that’s why I ran the database search.

Q. Now, did you do the database search yourself or did you have an investigator do it?

A. That’s what I said before. I don’t know if it was inhouse or out. I can’t tell you, as I sit here, for sure, whether I had Brad do it, whether I had somebody just run it on either Lexis or West Law in the office, but somebody did it and came up with it.

Q. Who is Brad?

A. Brad Miller is the investigator who I hired to start to do an investigation on the Arvizos.

Q. And approximately when did you start your investigation into the Arvizos?

A. It would have been very shortly after leaving Neverland. So if that was the 7th or the 8th, it would have been within a couple of days.

Q. And when do you think you learned about the J.C. Penney lawsuit that had been filed by the Arvizos?

A. Within a couple of days.

Q. Okay. And what was your reaction to what you learned about that suit?

A. I was gravely concerned.

Q. Why?

A. I thought that given the situation, and I was also given information that they were attempting or that there were rumors that the family was attempting --

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object to any reference to “rumors” or any information from an unnamed source as lacking in foundation, speculative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Was the investigation you did into the J.C. Penney lawsuit the first part of your investigation into the Arvizos?

A. Probably. I mean, to that extent that you run some kind of a database search, I suppose that was -- if it wasn't the first, it was in the top five.

Q. And was Mr. Miller involved in that search into the J.C. Penney lawsuit, to your knowledge?

A. I would imagine that after I -- if he didn't find it, that I quickly brought it to his attention and he did do -- he probably would have -- he probably would have been the guy that I assigned to follow up on it. But I -- I don't know as I sit here.

Q. Is Mr. Miller a licensed private investigator in California?

A. He is.

Q. And had you worked with him before?

A. I had, on, I think, probably three or four occasions.

Q. Okay. And where was his office at the time?

A. You know, I believe at the time it was in Beverly Hills. But I can't -- that's only because I know it was in Beverly Hills at one time and it's no longer in Beverly Hills. I don't know in February of '03 if it still was in Beverly Hills. I couldn't tell you.

Q. Did the investigation into the Arvizos that you started continue?

A. Yes. I had him -- or I asked him to please find out where they were, and to document what they were doing, who they were meeting with, and whether or not they were either trying to sell a story to the tabloids, or meeting with lawyers, or anything even more grave than that, at least from my client's standpoint.

Q. When you say "more grave than that," what are you talking about?

A. Well, I -- I thought at that time that it was a problem that somebody could manipulate the situation. I don't know -- I don't want to run through a parade of horribles in my mind, but I thought that, given what the situation was, somebody could take advantage of it, and I was worried about that. And I -- so I decided I wanted to know, and I told Brad, “Tell me where they are, tell me what they’re doing, and tell me who they’re meeting with.”

Q. Were you concerned that the Arvizos might be planning to extort Michael Jackson?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

THE WITNESS: I was; I was concerned.

MR. ZONEN: There’s an objection.

THE COURT: Just a moment.

THE WITNESS: I’m sorry.

THE COURT: Next question.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: What else did you do to investigate the problem of the Arvizos possibly manipulating Michael Jackson?

A. Well, I -- besides have Brad do that, we investigate -- they were not the only -- they weren’t the sole focus, but for your -- to answer your question, I also told Brad I wanted him to go and take a statement and get a statement from them.

Q. And why did you want Brad Miller to get a statement from the Arvizos?

A. Because I found that -- in the past, at least, with other cases, that if somebody gives a statement right at the time, that it’s much more difficult later for them to make up something and change the story, because you’re locked into it. That’s what the truth was, and that’s why I wanted a statement.

Q. And in your experience, it’s pretty typical for an investigator to try and get statements, correct?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: It’s what investigators do. The reason you have the investigator take the statement and not the lawyer is so that the lawyer doesn’t end up being like I am up here, on the witness stand.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And to your knowledge, did

Mr. Miller take a statement from the Arvizos?

A. Yes, Mr. Miller took a statement. I told him to identify himself. I told him to tell them that he was taking it for me, and I told him that I wanted him to ask questions.

Q. Okay. And did you ever actually see that statement?

A. Later I saw a transcript of it. But I don’t know that I saw -- I think he downloaded it to me in essence saying, “This is what they said, this is what they said, this is what they said,” in a telephone call is probably what he did.

Q. Was it your understanding, Mr. Geragos, that statement would be recorded?

A. I wanted a tape-recorded statement of them, detailing all of -- or as extensively as possible, and I wanted it done -- I probably told Brad something to the effect, “I want it done yesterday. I don’t want to wait. Get it done.”

Q. Did anything else go on in the investigation of the Arvizos?

A. Well, at the same time that that was happening, the -- there was a rebuttal video being made by a gentleman named Schaffel, who seemed to be running that end of things, and that rebuttal video involved the Arvizos as well.

So at one point I instructed Brad, “Go watch when that gets made and sit there, and don’t leave until you get a copy of that videotape. Because I want a copy of the videotape. I don’t want it to disappear into the ether.”

Q. To your knowledge, did he do that?

A. I know that he went there. I don’t know that we ever got a copy of the videotape.

Q. Is there anything else you had Mr. Miller do to investigate the Arvizos?

A. I don’t know. Off the top of my head, the things that I described is what I remember, as I sit here.

Q. Did you ever arrange to have the Arvizos put under surveillance?

A. I told him at one point I wanted to know where they were, what they were doing, who they were meeting with, and to report back to me.

Q. And as far as you know, putting people under surveillance is part of an investigation, and it’s perfectly lawful, correct?

A. I have done it on more than one occasion. I know most lawyers do it with great frequency. I know D.A.s do it. And law enforcement does it.

Q. Okay. And do you know whether or not the Arvizos were actually put under surveillance at some point?

A. I do now, and I did then.

Q. Okay. To your knowledge, was anyone working with Mr. Miller in your investigation of the Arvizos?

A. I know now that they were. He may have told me that a gentleman by the same of Asaf did something for him on one occasion. I know now that he had somebody named Johnny working for him. And I didn’t know that at the time.

Q. Okay. And how long did your investigation of the Arvizos last, if you know?

A. If he started sometime after February 7th, it would have gone through probably the middle or end of March would be my guess.

Q. Okay. Now, you mentioned someone named Schaffel. Did you meet Marc Schaffel at some point?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever speak to him?

A. I’ve spoken to him on the phone.

Q. How often do you think you’ve spoken to him on the phone?

A. I couldn’t tell you. Anytime that anything came up about this video that was being made, I was always told to talk to Schaffel.

Q. How many conversations do you think you had with Schaffel about the making of the video?

A. It would just be a guess. I have no idea.

Q. Okay.

A. I would say five to ten, probably. Maybe more.

Q. Now, was Schaffel typically involved in the conference calls you have described before?

A. Actually, no. He was not typically involved in the conference calls. In fact, at one point, David LeGrand and I had discussed excising Schaffel from the whole situation --

MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object to that portion as being nonresponsive to the question and hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. ZONEN: Motion to strike.

THE COURT: Strike it after, "Actually, no."

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you and Mr. LeGrand have any discussions about Marc Schaffel?

A. Yes.

Q. How many do you think you had?

A. At least three.

Q. Okay. Did you have more discussions with Konitzer than you did Schaffel?

A. Clearly. Clearly.

Q. And why do you say that?

A. Ronald Konitzer was, from my perception, the person who was kind of the backstop or the person who was running things.

Q. And did you meet with him personally?

A. Yes.

Q. On how many occasions, do you think?

A. Probably at least three.

Q. Okay. Did you ever talk to a guy named Dieter Weizner?

A. During the time period of February and March of '03, only the time that I was at Neverland did I speak to Dieter, and it was for just a very brief period of time.

Q. Okay.

A. I later -- in terms of time, I later talked to Dieter maybe a year after that more extensively. But February and March, no, I had very little contact with Dieter.

Q. Now, as part of your investigation into the Arvizos, you described the statement that Mr. Miller obtained, his attendance at the rebuttal video, and you say you learned about some surveillance that went on. Is there anything else that was part of that investigation that you remember?

A. Well, I remember a series of letters with a gentleman named Dickerman. And storage of Janet Arvizo’s things in a storage unit. And I remember going back and forth with Mr. Dickerman as to where he wanted those items and the things that he was claiming.

Q. You mentioned Janet Arvizo’s possessions being in a storage unit. How did that happen?

A. I -- I don’t know, because I wasn’t there. Everything I know was later related to me. If that’s okay, I’ll get into that. You don’t have -- there’s no objection.

Okay. It was later related to me by Brad that she was moving in with her boyfriend who was --

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as to hearsay. Nonresponsive to the question.

THE COURT: Okay. Sustained.

MR. ZONEN: Was that one sustained, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. ZONEN: Thank you.

THE COURT: He gave you the opening line, but you were talking to counsel.

THE WITNESS: I tried to prompt you, Mr. Zonen.

THE COURT: He was prompting you. Go ahead.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you have anything to do with the storage of Janet Arvizo’s possessions?

A. I told Brad at one point, “If you’re going to do this, film it, so that you don’t later get accused of taking something.”

Q. And did you have any understanding as to why Brad was going to store that material?

A. I believe --

MR. ZONEN: I’ll object as hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I believe it was because he was trying to remain in the good graces to get whatever information he could as to what they were up to.

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as speculative, move to strike.

THE COURT: I’ll strike that.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Was it your understanding that Janet wanted Brad to store her possessions?

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Leading and speculative.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you know why those possessions were stored?
MR. ZONEN: Objection; lack of foundation.
THE COURT: Foundation; sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever at any point have any knowledge as to why those possessions were stored by Mr. Miller?
MR. ZONEN: I’ll object beyond “yes” or “no.”
THE WITNESS: Yes.
I’m sorry, I may have jumped the gun.
THE COURT: That’s fine.
Go ahead. Next question.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Why were they stored?
MR. ZONEN: Objection. Lack of foundation; hearsay.
THE COURT: Foundation; sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you know why they were stored?
A. I believe they were stored --
MR. ZONEN: I’ll object to anything beyond “yes” or “no.”
THE WITNESS: Yes.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: How did you obtain your knowledge of how they were stored?

A. Talking with Mr. Miller.
Q. Did he tell you why they were stored?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you give any instructions to him about storing that material?
A. I told him when he did the move --
MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as hearsay.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Were those possessions stored at your request?

A. No.

Q. Were they stored because Mr. Miller wanted to store them?

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Lack of foundation; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever see those possessions at any time?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever go to storage to see those possessions?

A. No.

Q. Now, you had some correspondence with Attorney Bill Dickerman about those possessions, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And what can you tell us about that?

A. That every time I'd get a letter it didn't seem to represent the phone conversation that we had.

Q. And did he start writing to you about wanting those possessions returned?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you know approximately when that happened?

A. I do not. It was sometime after -- it was sometime after February.

Q. And you were still representing Michael Jackson at the time, correct?

A. I represented Michael all the way through, I don't know, whatever -- February to whenever, December, I guess.

Q. Now, at some point, did you try to return those possessions to Mr. Dickerman?

A. Yes.

Q. And please explain what you did.

A. I directed -- when I first got the letter from Mr. Dickerman, I told somebody to fax it over to Brad, somebody in my office to fax it over to Brad. And at some point, then received another letter, and letters kept coming back and forth. And there would be phone calls. And I kept trying to get this stuff over there, suggesting that either they take over the storage unit, that they pay for the storage unit, that they do anything to get it out, so that we could get out of the situation.

Q. Did you say that it was at your direction that the move was videotaped?

A. I believe I'm the one who told Brad, "If you're going to do this, you better videotape the move." I believe that's what I told him. It was almost those exact words.

Q. And did he ever tell you that Janet wanted him to move that stuff?

A. Yes.

Q. When did he tell you that Janet wanted him to move that stuff?

MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object as hearsay. Move to strike.

THE COURT: Overruled. The question, though, now, is, "When did she tell you" -- no. "When did he tell you that Janet wanted him to move the stuff?"

THE WITNESS: Probably in the same conversation I said, "If you're going to do it, you should videotape it."

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And to your knowledge, was that material ever returned to Mr. Dickerman?

A. You know, I assume so. But I know that there was one instance where I got so fed up with what was going on, that I actually told --

MR. ZONEN: I'll object as nonresponsive.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you know if that material was ever returned to Mr. Dickerman?

A. I know at one time I directed that it just be dumped into his law office so that he would take it, and the building wouldn't accept it.

Q. That was done at your request?

A. To return it? Yes. At all times I said, "Return the stuff."

Q. Okay. Do you know someone named Frank Tyson?

A. I've met Frank Tyson.

Q. And when did you first meet him?

A. Probably it would have been mid-February of 2003, would be a guess.

Q. Do you know approximately where you met him?

A. No. I can't tell you where I met him. I think he came to my office once with another guy whose name I can't remember. But I -- but I don't know if that was the first time I met him or not.

Q. Did you have much communication with Frank Tyson?

A. I talked to Frank occasionally.

Q. Would he typically call you?

A. Most always. I wasn't calling him.

Q. How many conversations do you think you had with him?

A. Well, if he would call me, I might call him back. But I don't know how many conversations. I don't know that it was a time. I think he was in communication with Brad more than he was with me.

Q. Okay. Now, at some point did your investigation into the Arvizos terminate?

A. Yeah. I would say probably -- probably about five or six weeks after it started.

Q. And did you reach any conclusions about the Arvizos, based upon your investigation?

A. Yeah. They -- that Michael could have nothing to do with them.

Q. Why is that?

A. I just felt like it was a pending disaster.

Q. And what do you mean by "pending disaster"?

A. I just was not comfortable with what I was finding out, what I was hearing. I just wasn't comfortable with that.

Q. What were you finding out?

A. Well, I --

MR. ZONEN: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Were you ever concerned that the Arvizos were going to try to extort Michael Jackson?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Were the results of your investigation negative or positive when it came to the Arvizos?

A. Negative.

MR. ZONEN: Objection; vague.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: What did you conclude?
A. I concluded that they -- that they should --
MR. ZONEN: Objection; calls for a conclusion.
THE COURT: You should have said “asked and answered.”
He’s already discussed that. Move on.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. As Mr. Jackson’s lawyer at that point in time, did you think it was in his interest to be involved with the Arvizos?
A. I --
MR. ZONEN: Objection; asked and answered.
MR. MESEREAU: No, it wasn’t.
THE COURT: It is. Next question.
MR. MESEREAU: Okay.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. MESEREAU: All right.
Q. Did you ever hear anything about the Arvizos taking a trip to Brazil?
MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, I’m going to object as to hearsay. And vague, “hear anything about.”
BAILIFF CORTEZ: Your microphone’s off again, sir.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever learn whether or not the Arvizos were planning to take a trip to Brazil?

A. I learned later that there were --
MR. ZONEN: I will object to anything beyond “yes” or “no” as nonresponsive.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: What did you learn?
MR. ZONEN: Objection; hearsay.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you have anything to do with any planned trip to Brazil involving the Arvizos?
A. No.

Q. Did you ever learn if anyone did?
A. I learned that someone --
MR. ZONEN: Objection beyond “yes” or “no.”
THE WITNESS: Yes.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: What did you learn?
MR. ZONEN: Objection; hearsay.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever learn that the Arvizos were traveling to any federal buildings to obtain passports or visas for a trip to Brazil?
MR. ZONEN: Objection; beyond the scope.
Objection; lack of foundation and leading.
THE COURT: Sustained on leading.
Sustained.
MR. MESEREAU: Okay.
Q. During the time you represented Michael

Jackson, did you ever do anything involving a potential trip to Brazil with the Arvizos?
A. I didn’t do anything involving a potential trip to Brazil with the Arvizos.
Q. Did you ever learn anything about such a trip?
A. I did, yes.
Q. When did you learn that?
A. Sometime after Michael was arrested.
Q. Okay. And at some point, did you ever have possession of passports of the Arvizos?
A. Yes.
Q. And could you explain that?
A. The passport -- when I was going through all of the materials that we had in our office in order to itemize them for you, in turning over all the files, the passports were located in a locked file cabinet where we kept a lot of Michael’s files.
I then directed one of the lawyers in my office to file the passports with the Court so that I did not give them to you, so that you wouldn’t be in a position where you would have to testify as to them.
Q. And did you, in fact, turn them in to this Court?
A. I directed one of the lawyers in my office to bring them to the Court and file them with the Court as a court's exhibit.

Q. Okay. Is that the last you saw of them?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Were you involved in any business matters related to Mr. Jackson during the first three months of 2003?

A. There probably were times when Mr. Konitzer would ask about certain projects. And then if it was something somebody in the office, one of the other lawyers, could deal with, I would refer him to one of the other lawyers. So, yes, I would say that there were some occasions.

Q. And what kind of projects are you referring to?

A. My understanding of what Mr. Konitzer's relationship was with Mr. Jackson was that he was helping to promote, I don't know, technological applications of various things. And it was usually surrounding those kind of items and usually it was beyond our expertise. So usually I would tell him -- refer him over to somebody else or to some other lawyer. But he would come and seek advice on those things.

Q. Was any of this business-related legal work done in your office?

A. Some could have been. I mean, there could have been -- I could have sent -- probably my brother Matthew would have done some work in connection with various things that they were asking about. Loan refinancing, things of that nature. There was also a marketing idea that they were doing or they wanted to pursue.

Q. And were you having discussions with Mr. LeGrand about Mr. Jackson's business matters?

A. Mr. LeGrand would bring up those issues, but it was really -- that was really Mr. LeGrand's area of -- I guess his purview, so to speak. That was really what his niche was. He's what's called a transactional lawyer who deals with corporate matters, and that was really his expertise.

Q. In the discussions you had with Konitzer and Weizner about Mr. Jackson's business affairs, do you recall Mr. Jackson ever participating?

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Lack of foundation; assumes facts not in evidence as to those conversations.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: It was my understanding that there was -- in fact, it was more than an understanding because I believe that my retainer initially was signed on a power of attorney that --

MR. ZONEN: I'll object as nonresponsive to the question.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you have any discussions with Mr. Konitzer about Mr. Jackson's business affairs?

A. To the extent that Mr. Konitzer represented to me that he was running the business affairs.

Q. Is that what he told you?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have any discussions with Mr. Weizner about Mr. Jackson's business affairs?

A. Not in 2003, in February or March. Like I said, the only contact I really had with Dieter was that first time I saw him briefly, discussed it briefly. But I didn't really have that much contact with him. I really talked mostly with Ronald.

Q. And when you were retained, you had a retainer agreement signed, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And that's your normal practice as a lawyer, right?

A. And the State Bar rules generally encourage that, if not require anything that's going to involve a certain amount of money.

Q. And a retainer agreement basically sets out the terms and conditions under which you'll represent a client as a lawyer, right?

A. Right.

Q. Who signed your retainer agreement?

A. I believe that it was signed by Konitzer and Weizner on a power of attorney, which I also was provided, that was signed by Mr. Jackson.

Q. Okay. Did you ever see Konitzer sign any other documents on behalf of Mr. Jackson while you were representing Mr. Jackson?

A. Not that I can pinpoint. I mean, I -- no, not that I can think of right now.

Q. And did the power of attorney that you saw appear to give Mr. Konitzer the ability to sign documents for Mr. Jackson?

A. It did -- my understanding of it was that it did.

Q. And do you recall at any point in time when that power of attorney was revoked?

MR. ZONEN: I'll object to lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I believe the power of attorney was revoked about the time that David LeGrand got fired. But that's just my memory as I'm sitting here. I don't have anything to pin that on.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And I believe you said, Mr. Geragos, that you were under the impression that Konitzer was trying to take over Mr. Jackson's business affairs?

A. It was my perception of Mr. Konitzer that he was the one who was running the business affairs in terms of hands on, and that Mr. LeGrand was the lawyer that was doing the corporate transactional work.

Q. And based on your involvement in discussions about Mr. Jackson's business, did it appear to you that Mr. Jackson wasn't involved much at all?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. ZONEN: Objection; speculative as well.

THE COURT: Leading; sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever meet Mr. LeGrand in Las Vegas?

A. I met Mr. LeGrand at Neverland. And I met Mr. LeGrand at another -- at Paul Hastings, I believe, downtown L.A. As I sit here, I don't remember Las Vegas. If you've got something to refresh my memory, maybe, but I don’t recall that as I sit here.

Q. Now, obviously, having represented Mr. Jackson, you’re aware of what the charges are in this case, right?
A. I am.
Q. And you’re aware that the prosecutors are claiming there was a conspiracy to commit various crimes on the Arvizos, right?
MR. ZONEN: Objection; leading.
THE COURT: Overruled.
THE WITNESS: I am aware of that.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Were you ever part of any conspiracy to abduct the Arvizo children?

A. No.
Q. Were you part of any conspiracy to extort anything from the Arvizos?
A. Absolutely not.
Q. Were you ever part of any conspiracy to commit any crime against the Arvizos?
A. Absolutely not. I was trying to prevent a crime against my client.
Q. And what crime was that?
A. I thought that they were going to shake him down.
MR. MESEREAU: I have no further questions.
THE COURT: Cross-examine?

CROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. ZONEN:
Q. Mr. Geragos, good afternoon.
A. Good afternoon, Mr. Zonen.
Q. Now, you were retained to represent Mr. Jackson in the early part of February; is that correct?
A. That’s correct.
Q. Could that have been the latter part of January?
A. I don’t think so. But, I mean, if -- I don’t want to quibble with you for a couple of days. I’ve always thought it was -- I’ve always thought it was February 4th and that I went to Neverland on the 7th. I don’t know why, that just sticks in my head.

Q. Now, prior to your being retained, were you familiar or did you know about the documentary “Living with Michael Jackson”?

A. I don’t -- I don’t know.

Q. At the time that you were retained, did you know about the documentary “Living with Michael Jackson”?

A. At the time that the retainer agreement was signed, yes.

Q. At the time that you were first contacted by somebody --

A. I was going to say --

Q. -- for Michael Jackson’s organization about your representing Mr. Jackson, did you know about the documentary “Living with Michael Jackson”?

A. Probably not.

Q. Who was the first person to call you about your representing Mr. Jackson?

A. I think it was a lawyer from Paul Hastings, the same guy I said I’ve got a mental block on the name, who said that one of his partners was an ex-U.S. Attorney who had a case with me and wanted to know if I was interested in it.

Q. All right.

A. I just don’t remember. I just don’t remember the name. And it was -- it could have been -- could he have called me in late January? I suppose he could have. I just don’t remember.

Q. Do you know if that was before the screening of the documentary “Living with Michael Jackson”?

A. I have no idea.

Q. Do you know when “Living with Michael Jackson” was screened?

A. No.

Q. Either in the United States or in England?

A. No.

Q. Do you know -- did you know the content of the documentary “Living with Michael Jackson”?

A. At what time?

Q. At the time that it was aired in the United States.

A. Well, you’d have to tell me when it was aired and then I'd tell you.

Q. I guess you didn't see it, then; is that correct?

A. Well, no, I saw it. But I didn't watch it when it was aired. I --

Q. All right. When you were contacted by somebody --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection, Your Honor. He's cutting off the witness.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Was your answer completed?

A. All I was going to say is, I remember watching it for the first time when somebody sent it -- I asked that they send me a copy of the videotape. I was aware of it before I watched it the first time because it was probably a subject of one of these conference calls.

Q. And -- all right. Now, when is the first time you spoke with your client, Mr. Jackson?

A. Would have been probably that day at Neverland.

Q. There's no question that your client was Michael Jackson; is that right?

A. My client was Michael Jackson.

Q. It was not Ronald Konitzer?

A. No.

Q. It was not Dieter Weizner?

A. Right.

Q. It was not Marc Schaffel?

A. That's correct.

Q. Nor was it Vinnie or Frank?

A. Clearly it was not.

Q. And at all times you understood that you represented Michael Jackson alone?

A. I did.

Q. You did not represent the enterprise Neverland Valley Entertainment?

A. I did not.

Q. Did not represent any of Michael Jackson's corporate interests?

A. I did not.

Q. And you represented Michael Jackson for purposes of assuring that he avoided criminal liability and liability with regards to custody of his children; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.
Q. Your concern was that his children might be taken away from him?
A. That was one of my concerns.
Q. Your concern was that he might be prosecuted for some criminal matter?
A. I think initially my concern was -- were the children and any allegation of the fitness of him as a parent, because that was a subject of a lot of the media firestorm surrounding him at that point.
Q. Was that because of his allegedly dangling his youngest child over a second-story balcony in a hotel in Germany?
A. I think that that’s what started some of that, but then the -- there was -- with the documentary, there was the same usual suspects hurling allegations at him about his fitness once the documentary came out.
Q. All right. But are we talking about simply neglect of his own children, or are we talking about his relationship with other children?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Misstates the evidence; lack of foundation; leading.
THE COURT: Overruled.
THE WITNESS: I was concerned about his children and his maintaining his relationship with his children.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: But the issues that you were dealing with as a consequence of that documentary, “Living with Michael Jackson,” had to do with how he interacted with his own children, correct?
A. The issues dealt with the fact that there were people who were calling for DCFS to take the children out of the house --
Q. All right.
A. -- and to conduct an investigation. That was what -- that was what was the overriding concern initially.
Q. At some point in time, you had an opportunity to either read the transcript of that documentary, “Living with Michael Jackson,” or view it; is that correct?

A. I viewed it. I didn’t read the transcript.

Q. Did you view it before you arrived at Neverland?

A. I couldn’t tell you, as I sit here, whether I did it before or after. It was sometime within a very close period of time.

Q. At the time that you were at Neverland, you saw Ed Bradley there; is that right?

A. That’s right.

Q. Ed Bradley is somebody you recognized as being one of the commentators from 60 Minutes; is that right?

A. That’s right.

Q. You also saw an entire film crew from 60 Minutes?

A. That’s right.

Q. 60 Minutes you were familiar with. You had seen it in the past; is that right?

A. That’s right.

Q. You were a little concerned about Michael Jackson appearing on 60 Minutes; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Had you had a conversation with Michael Jackson prior to your arrival at Neverland on that date?

A. No.

Q. Do you know if that date was the 7th of February?

A. I think I stated before that that date sticks in my mind. If that is a Saturday, that would be my guess. My best guess.

I believe that when you executed the -- or the officers executed the search warrant, they took some gate logs also. I don’t know if the gate logs are accurate, but I later saw where I signed it on the day that I got there.

Q. Did you have a conversation with Mr. Jackson on the 7th?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Did you have a sense of the content of the documentary “Living with Michael Jackson”?

A. At that point, I was more concerned with what -- the fact that he was going to sit down with 60 Minutes and what the content of that was going to be.

I spent most of my time talking with and trying to weasel out the information from the producers as to what was going to be the ground rules, which they said there were none. But the content, where they were headed, what they were trying to do, that was my concern.

Q. Did you ask any questions of Michael Jackson about whether he had been sleeping with boys during your conversation with him on the 7th of February at Neverland?

A. No, I did --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Leading; lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: No, I did not start questioning him about whether he was sleeping with boys when I was up there.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you know, at the time that you were at Neverland on the 7th of February, assuming that is the date, that the issue of him sleeping with boys was, in fact, an issue that had been raised in this documentary?

A. I think that I did know that. I don’t know whether it was through the documentary or whether it was from the download of information. I think I probably had that information.

Q. Did you understand, at the time that you were at Neverland on the 7th of February, that Gavin Arvizo was one of the children it was believed that Mr. Jackson was sleeping with?

A. I don’t know that -- when you say one of the children that he was sleeping with, I’m not clear on what you’re -- what you’re implying there.

I knew that Gavin Arvizo, when I was up there, was somebody who was reputed to be in the documentary. But I don’t know that anybody said, “Hey, Michael Jackson is sleeping with Gavin Arvizo.” I don’t think that that happened.

And I certainly -- as I sit here today, I don’t know if Gavin Arvizo says in the documentary, “Yeah, I was sleeping with Michael Jackson.”

MR. ZONEN: I’ll object as nonresponsive as to what he knows today. The question dealt with on the 7th of February. And move to strike.

THE COURT: All right. I’ll strike from -- well, actually, I won’t. He actually says as he sits here today, he can’t remember what he knew then, so the objection is overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. But on the 7th of February of 2003, you were aware that one of the issues that you were dealing with, as his lawyer, was the issue of whether or not he had been sleeping with a succession of different boys over the last number of years?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. No foundation and misstates the evidence.

THE COURT: I’ll sustain the objection.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you understand that Mr. Jackson, in the interview with Mr. Bashir, said, “I slept with all of them,” in reference to a number or succession of boys?

A. On February --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: On February 7th, I don’t believe -- I know you asked this. I just don’t believe that I can tell you whether I had seen the documentary. I probably had not until after I got back from Neverland is my best guess. So, no, my guess is, as I sit here, but I’m not 100 percent sure of that.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you have a conversation with Michael Jackson about Michael Jackson doing a press conference in Florida?

A. No.

Q. Did you know that Michael Jackson had been scheduled to do a press conference in Florida?

A. On what date?

Q. The 7th of February.

A. On the 7th of February. No, I did not know that.

Q. Did you know that Michael Jackson had brought the Arvizo family to Florida to do a press conference?

A. On February 7th, I did not know that.

Q. Did you know, on the 7th of February, that Janet Arvizo had never had a conversation with Michael Jackson other than a brief conversation back in the year 2000?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Misstates the evidence; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.

A. On February 7th, I can’t tell you what Janet Arvizo did with Michael Jackson. The only thing that I can tell you is I saw the Arvizos interacting with --

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: My question was whether you knew about any conversations between --

A. No.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. He cut off the witness again, Your Honor.

MR. ZONEN: It’s nonresponsive, I’ll object.

MR. MESEREAU: Move to admonish counsel not to cut off the witness.

THE COURT: I’ll strike after the sentence, “The only thing that I can tell you….” From there on, I’ll strike that. Next question.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Mr. Geragos, did you have a conversation with any employee of Michael Jackson or representative of Michael Jackson directing them to have the Arvizos brought to Florida?

A. No.

Q. Did you have a conversation with Michael Jackson or any representative of Michael Jackson directing that the Arvizos be brought from Florida to Neverland?

A. No.

Q. Did you know that they were being brought from Florida to Neverland?

A. On February 7th? No.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. That misstates the evidence. Foundation. They weren't being brought anywhere.

THE COURT: I'm going to sustain the objection as vague.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Were you aware that the Arvizo family was flown from Florida to Santa Barbara County and then driven to Neverland?

A. On February 7th?

Q. Prior to, just prior to February 7th.

A. I'm asking you. Do you mean did I know that on February 7th?

Q. On February 7th did you know that?

A. No.

Q. Did you make any inquiry as to what that family was doing there?

A. Later.

Q. When later?

A. Probably middle February.

Q. Two weeks later? A week later?

A. No, by middle February would have been about a week later.

Q. On the 7th of February, did you recommend to your client, Mr. Jackson, that the family, the Arvizo family, be taken home immediately?

A. No.

Q. A week later, did you tell Mr. Jackson that the Arvizo family should be taken home immediately?

A. No.

Q. At any time during the month of February, did you tell Mr. Jackson that the Arvizo family should be taken home immediately?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Mr. Jackson at any time on the 7th of February about the Arvizo family being there on his property?

A. To the extent that this, "He's calling me daddy," or, "Janet's encouraging him to call me 'daddy'" story was told to me.

Q. Did you talk with Mr. Jackson at any time on the 7th of February about the Arvizo family leaving

Neverland?

A. No.

Q. Did you talk with Mr. Jackson at any time on the 7th of February about whether or not Gavin was staying in his bedroom?

A. No. Not on the 7th.

Q. Did you know on the 7th of February that there was an issue dealing with boys staying in his bedroom --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: -- that had become quite public?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Misstates the evidence; argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

MR. MESEREAU: And foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.

THE COURT: Do you want the question read back?

THE WITNESS: No.

I just don't know what you mean by "an issue." That it was in the public domain? Yes. I knew it was in the public domain.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: And did you discuss it with Mr. Jackson?

A. No.

Q. As his attorney and hopeful of avoiding any criminal liability on his behalf, did you tell Mr. Jackson on the 7th of February that he ought to refrain from having young boys come into his bedroom?

A. No. I didn't give him, as I told you, any advice right then and there. I was -- the first time I met him, I was trying to do an investigation. I was also trying to stop the 60 Minutes interview, once I got a sense that it was not going to be a warm and fuzzy piece.

Q. All right. You've seen 60 Minutes before, haven't you?

A. If it's Morley Safer, you tend to get a different piece than if it's Ed Bradley or Mike Wallace.

Q. So even without knowing the issues, as soon as you saw it was Ed Bradley, you assumed it wouldn’t be warm or fuzzy, right?

A. I’ve watched Ed Bradley do some pieces that weren’t exactly hard-hitting.

Q. Now, at any time within the next seven days after the 7th, the next week after the 7th, did you ever tell Mr. Jackson that he would be well-served by keeping young boys out of his bedroom?

A. I don’t know that I talked directly to him that following week. The only conversations that I had for the next six weeks were usually over the phone and fairly brief.

Q. With Mr. Jackson?

A. If he was on the phone, briefly. But they weren’t extensive.

Q. All right. Do you know if you had any conversations with Mr. Jackson over the next seven days over the telephone?

A. I couldn’t tell you. I don’t think so.

Q. Do you know if you had any conversations with Mr. Jackson over the next 14 days?

A. Probably one.

Q. Just one conversation?

A. Probably one.

Q. Can I assume that that conversation did address the issue of whether or not boys were still sleeping in his bedroom?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: No, I don’t think that the discussion revolved around whether boys sleep in his bedroom.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Can I assume within the next

14 days after the 7th, in other words, up to the 21st of February, that you had by this point seen, personally viewed, the documentary “Living with Michael Jackson,” the Martin Bashir documentary?

A. Yes.

Q. And you had seen at that point Mr. Jackson’s admission to sleeping with boys; is that right?

A. Well, when you say “admission to sleeping with boys,” what are you saying? The statement that boys will stay in his room?

Q. Yes.

A. Okay. Are you implying that’s necessarily something sexual?

Q. I don’t believe it’s appropriate for me to be answering questions, Mr. Geragos. Let’s go back to the question again.

A. I’m confused as to when you say “sleeping,” “boys sleeping in his room,” I didn’t -- I didn’t think -- my concern was, Mr. Zonen --

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as nonresponsive.

THE WITNESS: I was trying to answer it.

MR. MESEREAU: Cutting off the witness, Your Honor. Objection.

THE COURT: Okay. Everyone, we’re going to have a time-out.

MR. ZONEN: Next question?

THE COURT: No. I want you to drop down about two degrees and.... I ride horses, and we wait for the head to relax.
Go ahead. Relax a minute.
All right.

MR. ZONEN: Thank you.

Q. Mr. Geragos, when you watched that film, you did see the portion where Mr. Jackson refers to sleeping with boys; is that right?

A. Mr. Zonen, as I sit here today, I don’t remember seeing in that documentary - I’ll take your word for it - that he said, “sleeping with boys.”
The one thing that I drew from seeing Michael Jackson on February 7th and seeing the kids there was a gentleman who, to my mind, was almost childlike in his love for kids. I didn’t see anything nefarious. I didn’t see anything that struck me as potentially criminal. But I did see somebody who appeared to me to be ripe as a target. And so I took action that I thought was to protect him.

MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object as nonresponsive.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. ZONEN: Move to strike the last part of the answer.

THE COURT: I'll strike after, "I don't remember seeing in that documentary...."

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Mr. Geragos, do you recall the documentary where he said he slept with Macaulay Culkin?

A. No. As I sit here, I don't remember him -- I wasn't fixated on whether or not he slept with Macaulay Culkin. I really -- that was not a concern of mine.

Q. Do you recall him saying he shared a bed with boys?

A. I know that he has said that since then. I know -- I've sat next to him, or in the same room when he said that, so I know that; that I know that he said that.

Q. Do you recall seeing the portion of the documentary where he's sitting next to Gavin Arvizo?

A. That I have a vivid memory of.

Q. And in that portion of that documentary, he's holding Gavin Arvizo's hand?

A. I have a vivid memory of that.

Q. And Gavin Arvizo is resting his head on Mr. Jackson's shoulder?

A. Right.

Q. Gavin Arvizo shared a room with Mr. Jackson; is that correct?

A. I -- you're telling me --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer. Do you want the question read back?

THE WITNESS: No.

If what you're telling is Gavin Arvizo spent the night in his room --

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Were you aware of that?

A. I know that that's one of the things that's been claimed, yes.

Q. Did you ever ask Mr. Jackson if that was true, that Gavin Arvizo shared his bed or spent the night in his room?

A. I think we discussed that.

Q. What did he tell you?

A. That nothing happened.

Q. No, I didn’t ask you that. What did he tell you about whether or not he shared his room or his bed?

A. What he has consistently said the entire time that I represented him, which is that he didn’t do anything; that there was nothing untoward; that there was nothing sexual; and that if somebody spends the night in his room, that that was just an act of unconditional love. That it wasn’t anything that you’re getting in here and --

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to move to strike as nonresponsive.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. He cut off the witness.

THE COURT: You did cut him off. Your question called for the answer he’s giving, so --

MR. MESEREAU: May he continue to give his answer, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes, he may.

THE WITNESS: The problem was, Mr. Zonen, as I saw it, when people say he’s sleeping with somebody in his room, the jump is, with a lot of people, that that is something that is awful, that is something that is really, really bad because it must be sexual.

THE COURT: Just a minute. You’re lecturing the jury. Let’s back up. I’ll strike that. Do you want to go back to the question again?

MR. ZONEN: I’d like to ask a new one.

Q. Mr. Geragos, did you ask Mr. Jackson specifically if Gavin Arvizo had ever spent the night in his room?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Beyond the scope and foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Yes. And he said nothing ever happened.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did he tell you that Gavin Arvizo had spent the night in his room?
A. He said he may have spent the night in the room, like a lot of the other boys did, and nothing happened.
Q. Did he tell you how many nights Gavin Arvizo spent in his room while he was there?

A. No. I didn’t ask him.
Q. Did he tell you whether or not Gavin Arvizo specifically shared a bed with him?
A. I didn’t ask him about sharing a bed. I asked him in the room, I asked him if anything happened. His answer was, “No.”
Based on my observations --
MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as nonresponsive.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. He cut off the witness.
MR. ZONEN: Maybe we better resolve this, I think.
THE COURT: Just a moment.
The ruling is that, “Based on my observations…,” that will be stricken. Next question.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Now, you never asked him at any time whether or not he shared a bed with Gavin Arvizo?
A. I may have later on, after the arrest. I assumed we were still talking sometime in February --
Q. Yes.
A. -- of ‘03.
Q. Yes.
A. February of ‘03, no. After the arrest, yes.
Q. All right. Now, during the next two weeks, did you have any other conversations with Michael Jackson about Gavin Arvizo?

A. Other than the ones we’ve talked about, no. Probably not.
Q. Did you ever tell Michael Jackson that the Arvizo family should be taken home as soon as possible?

A. In February of ‘03, no.

Q. Did you come to learn that the Arvizo family was spending a great deal of time at Neverland during the month of February?

A. No, I came to learn that Janet Arvizo was making accusations about Dieter.

MR. ZONEN: I’ll object as nonresponsive.

THE COURT: Sustained. Stricken.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Mr. Geragos, did you come to learn that the Arvizo family was spending a great deal of time at Neverland during the month of February?

A. Did I learn that in February?

Q. In February.

A. Probably, yes.

Q. All right. Did you immediately call Mr. Jackson and tell him that the Arvizo family should be taken back to their home in East Los Angeles?

A. No. I think I told him that in March, or told Ronald that in March; that they should -- they should cut ties.

Q. All right. Now, at some point in time, you directed that your investigator have an interview with the Arvizo family?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And I think you said, “Do it yesterday,” right?

A. He said, “When do you want it done?” And I said, “Like yesterday.”

Q. As quickly as he can possibly do it?

A. That’s correct.

Q. This is Brad Miller?

A. Yes.

Q. Brad Miller has been your investigator for some number of years; is that correct?

A. I think at that time Brad Miller I had used on three or four other cases. I’ve used him on a number since.

Q. Did you tell Brad Miller to tape-record that interview?

A. I believe I told him to tape-record the interview, that I wanted a taped statement by the Arvizos.

Q. Did you tell him to turn off the tape-recorder and not to record certain pieces of information?
A. Absolutely not.
Q. Did you ever listen to that tape?
A. Yes.

Q. All right. It is true, is it not, that when he asked the question about whether or not Gavin slept in the same bed with Michael Jackson, Gavin did not answer the question and Brad Miller then turned off the tape-recorder?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Misstates the evidence; no foundation.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: I'm not so sure that that's what happened.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What is your recollection of hearing that tape-recording?
A. It appears to me, in listening to that tape, that the tape was turned on, off, at least two or three times. And I can't tell you as I sit here what the question was before each one. But the tape is taped and is turned off and then turned on, so I'd agree with you as to that extent.
Q. Did you ask Brad Miller if he specifically turned off the tape-recorder about the time that he asked the question of whether or not Gavin was sleeping with Michael Jackson?
A. I -- you bet I did.
Q. You're aware that other children have accused Michael Jackson of molesting them. You're aware of that?
A. Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; argumentative; Court ruling; move to admonish counsel.
THE COURT: Just a moment.
The objection is overruled. The answer is, "Yes."
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. You're aware that back in 1993, there were -- there was one lawsuit that was filed against Michael Jackson that was settled on behalf of a child named Jordan Chandler?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; beyond the scope.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. You're aware that there was another incident of a resolution of a claim against Michael Jackson involving a child by the name of Jason Francia?
A. No. Not at -- if you're talking February and March of '03, no.
Q. You didn't learn that until some later time?
A. Right.
Q. All right. But at the time that you were meeting with Mr. Jackson on the 7th, you were aware of the incident involving Jordie Chandler; is that correct?
A. I knew --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. ZONEN: I don't believe the last time I said in February. I may stand corrected if I'm wrong.
THE COURT: Well, that could be. I'll allow the question with that understanding.
MR. ZONEN: All right.
Q. Was that, in fact, something you knew about on the 7th of February?
A. I think so, yes.
Q. All right. Did you ask Mr. Jackson about that allegation?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; beyond the scope.
THE COURT: Overruled.
THE WITNESS: No.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Were you concerned when you saw Gavin Arvizo there, a child of the same age as Jordie Chandler?
A. I don't know that I knew that Gavin Arvizo was the same age as Jordie Chandler. I suppose, obviously, at one point they were the same age, but

I don’t know that that was something that ever went through my mind.

Q. Were you concerned about the presence of this child at Neverland?

A. Well, I was concerned about accusations that were being made, yes.

Q. Accusations by whom?

A. The -- at the time, in February of ‘03, there was a swirl of publicity, and there were accusations that were being made by numerous people that his children should be taken out of the home.

THE COURT: Just a moment.

Let’s take a break.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: Counsel?

MR. ZONEN: Thank you.

Q. Mr. Geragos --

THE BAILIFF: Oh, your microphone.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Mr. Geragos, did you keep copies of notes of conversations with Mr. Jackson?

A. No.

Q. Did you make any notes of your conversations with Mr. Jackson?

A. Probably not.

Q. You didn’t make any notes at all of any of your --

A. Probably not. I generally don’t do that with my clients. I generally just talk to them.

Q. Did you make notes of any of your conversations with any of the other individuals who were working for Mr. Jackson at the time?

A. I don’t think so.

Q. You made no notes of any conversation with Dieter Weizner?

A. Dieter Weizner, as I explained before, I didn’t really talk to in February or March, other than on that one occasion. Ronald I would talk to, but I’m not a big note-taker.

Q. No notes of conversations with Ronald Konitzer?

A. I wouldn’t say “no,” but none that I can remember taking.

Q. Do you think that your file might have notes of conversations with Ronald Konitzer?

A. To be honest, I’d have to look.

Q. Do you think that your file would have notes of conversations with Mark Schaffel?

A. No.

Q. How about Frank Cascio?

A. No.

Q. How about Vinnie Amen?

A. I don’t know that I ever had -- unless he was standing with Frank when I talked with Frank, I don’t know that I ever had a conversation directly with him. Maybe when he was with Frank, but, no, I wouldn’t have notes.

Q. Did you have any e-mail communications with Michael Jackson?

A. No, I don’t believe so.

Q. Did you have any e-mail communications with any of the other named people, the people I just named?

A. Probably Ronald would be on -- e-mails that would come from David LeGrand would have Ronald’s name on them as well.

Q. So you would have kept communications between yourself and David LeGrand through e-mail?

A. No, I wouldn’t have kept them, but I would have had them at one point. I don’t know that I would have kept them. Like I say, I would have had them if they had sent them to me, but probably would have deleted after I got whatever information I wanted.

Q. Is it your habit and custom to print out copies of your e-mails and keep them?

A. No.

Q. Is it your habit and custom to keep your e-mails electronically stored in your computer?

A. No. If it’s something particularly important, I’ll just click over and save it into Word Perfect and then save it in the file, but I generally do not keep the e-mails segregated with whatever else.

Q. Do you have a Word Perfect file on Michael Jackson?

A. I believe that I do.

Q. Does it contain e-mail communications?

A. I don't think I had any e-mails with him. I'd have to double-check to be sure, but I don't think I did.

Q. Did you have e-mail communications with Brad Miller?

A. I think that I did.

Q. Did you save those e-mail communications?

A. I don't think that I did.

Q. You might have?

A. Maybe.

Q. Would it be your habit and custom to title those "E-mail communications" with your investigator and put them in your file as a Word Perfect document?

A. If I looked in Word Perfect, that's -- if it was something important and I saved it into Word Perfect, that would be the way to tell.

Q. Is it the case that you're the only lawyer remaining in Los Angeles County who still uses Word Perfect?

(Laughter.)

A. Probably so. But it's the 11 series, so --

Q. Mr. Geragos, I'd like to show you an exhibit.

Could I approach the witness?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Number 347, would you take a look at that, please?

A. Okay.

Q. That's an exhibit containing two notes; is that correct?

A. Yes. It's got two blue pieces of paper with handwriting on it.

Q. Do you recognize that as your former client's handwriting?

MR. MESEREAU: Excuse me, could I see what this is?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. ZONEN: It’s admitted in evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: He just needs to see what it is.

MR. ZONEN: I understand. Thank you.

Q. Do you recognize that as Mr. Jackson’s handwriting?

A. No.

Q. Were you familiar with Mr. Jackson’s handwriting?

A. Familiar with his signature and familiar with some of the way he signs off. But not -- this does not appear -- there’s nothing about it that I recognize.

Q. All right. Would you read those two notes, please, out loud?

A. “But you have to really be honest in your heart that I am your dad and will take care” -- “good care of you, Dad. I want you to have a great time in Florida. I’m very happy to be your daddy. Blanket, Prince and Paris are your brothers and sisters. Love, Dad.”

Q. All right. Would you be surprised to learn that that is, in fact, a note or two notes written by Mr. Jackson to Gavin Arvizo?

A. I don’t know. Would I be surprised? I don’t know. I probably would be surprised.

Q. All right. Mr. Geragos, if, in fact, those are notes written by the defendant to Gavin Arvizo, that would be inconsistent with what you tell us he told you about not wanting to be called “Dad”; is that right?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Misstates the evidence. He said someone else told him.

THE WITNESS: Yeah --

THE COURT: Just a moment.

And no speaking objections, Mr. Mesereau.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: All right. You may answer. I’m not sure you answered or you were responding to Mr. Mesereau, so --

MR. ZONEN: Should the question be reread, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Reread the question.

THE WITNESS: I believe that the -- that -- I don't know what dates these were written on, and I don't know that it's his handwriting. Are you asking me to assume it's his handwriting? If I assume it's his handwriting, yes, that would be -- that would be surprising to me.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Now, to your knowledge, the only trip that the Arvizos ever took to Florida with Mr. Jackson was the one that they took just prior to arriving in Neverland on the 7th; is that correct?

A. From the discovery, that's my understanding.

Q. You have no other information that the Arvizo family ever took any other trip to Florida with Mr. Jackson?

A. Right. I don't have any other information that they took any other trip.

Q. Do you have any information that the Arvizo family took a trip anywhere with Mr. Jackson other than Florida and Neverland?

A. No.

Q. Now, I asked you a number of questions about your giving counsel to your client about the Arvizo family leaving Neverland.

When did you finally tell your client that it's time for the Arvizo family to go home?

A. I think I told -- I don't know that it was Michael or Ronald, or maybe on the same phone call, but sometime in March that -- in March of '03.

Q. Now, were you aware in March of '03 that the Arvizo family was still at Neverland?

A. I think they had come and gone, was my understanding back then, in March of '03.

Q. At the time of the conversation with Mr. Jackson -- let me strike that and reask that.

Did you finally have a conversation with Michael Jackson about the fact that the Arvizos should not be at Neverland?

A. I had a conversation -- my only hesitancy is when you say was it with Michael Jackson. I don't think it was with Michael. I think the conversation was with either Ronald or Brad saying that, "This is not a good situation." I don't think that the conversation was with Michael.

Q. Well, Brad Miller was working for Michael Jackson at the time?

A. Brad Miller was working for me.

Q. All right.

A. Brad Miller would be a liaison. If I were in trial, I would have Brad communicate messages, but Brad was not talking to Michael. Brad would have been talking to one of the people that I mentioned.

Q. All right. Is there a reason you didn’t call Michael Jackson directly, given that he is your -- was your client --

A. Well --

Q. -- and tell him to send the Arvizo family home? Is there a reason you didn’t do that?

A. Because I don’t believe, at the time when I had that conversation, that Michael was even at Neverland. I don’t think Michael was there then.

Q. Did you make any effort to determine when Michael Jackson would be at Neverland?

A. Well, when you say, “make an effort to determine,” I believe at one point he was out of state and -- in March, and I was informed of that, and so that’s -- that was the basis for my opinion.

Q. Did you --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. He’s cutting off the witness.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. MESEREAU: May the witness complete his answer, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Had you completed your answer?

THE WITNESS: No, but I forgot what I was going to say.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you make an effort to contact Michael Jackson out of state?

A. No -- well, I think that I was told he was out of state. I think it was one of those brief conversations when he was on with somebody else. I was having a conversation with somebody else, he was either in the room or got on for a minute.

But, no, that was not -- I didn’t consider that -- that I was dictating to him what he needed to do. I was there, I thought, to do an investigation. I was there to make sure that nothing unfair happened to him and his kids. That was my role.

Q. At some point in time around the middle of the month of February, did you learn that the family had left Neverland?

A. This was what was objected to before. You want me to answer it now?

Q. I'd like to know if you learned at some time in the middle of February that the family had left Neverland. Yes or no?

A. Yes, I was told by somebody that the family had left Neverland.

Q. All right. Okay. Now, were you aware that there were telephone calls being made from Frank Cascio to Janet Arvizo asking her to return to Neverland?

A. I found that out later. I did not know it at the time.

Q. Are you aware that your investigator, Brad Miller, tape-recorded one or more of those conversations?

A. I'm aware of one. I found that out when the police searched Brad's office and got that tape, and later learned what that was.

Q. Did you direct Mr. Miller to tape-record those telephone calls?

A. I said I was aware of one.

Q. Did you direct Brad Miller --

A. And I did not direct him to tape a phone call surreptitiously. The only tape that I directed him to do that was an audiotape, was the one where I said, "I want you to sit down and interview them." And I also told him, "I want a log of where they are." I did not tell him to tape Frank Tyson or that one phone call.

Q. Did Mr. Miller tell you about the conversation that he tape-recorded between Frank Cascio or Frank Tyson and Janet Arvizo?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Assumes facts not in evidence; no foundation; misstates the evidence as well.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Brad later told me, when we were -- you and I and Mr. Sneddon were litigating this issue, and I asked him about it, that the reason he did it is because Frank had led him to believe --

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object at this time to --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. He’s cutting off the witness.

MR. ZONEN: Well, I --

THE COURT: Overruled.

The question is simply whether or not he told you about tape-recording the conversation.

THE WITNESS: Do you want me to answer “yes” or “no”? Yes.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Now, when was the conversation that you had with Brad Miller where he acknowledged tape-recording that conversation? When was that?

A. It would have been substantially after the tape was seized from his office.

Q. All right. Back during the month of February, was Brad Miller informing you as to the content of his investigation?

A. He was -- he was pretty dil --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Leading, Your Honor. Vague as to time.

MR. ZONEN: I said February.

MR. MESEREAU: Can I assume 2003?

THE COURT: Just a moment. Just a moment.

All right. I’ll overrule the objection.

Do you want the question read back? I’ll order it read back.

THE WITNESS: I remember. I was going to answer.

He was being fairly diligent about telling me. He did not tell me about that one particular call until after it was seized when I started to question him about it.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did he tell you about any conversations that took place between Frank Cascio and Janet Arvizo?

A. That conversation.

Q. Did he tell you that in the middle part of February, Frank Cascio was trying to get Janet Arvizo back to Neverland Ranch?

A. No. That’s not what he told me. Do you want me to tell you what he told me?

Q. Did he tell you that anybody from Neverland Ranch was making efforts to get Janet Arvizo back?

A. No. He told me that he was --

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as nonresponsive.

THE WITNESS: No.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Mr. Geragos, did you have conversations with any employee of Michael Jackson on whether or not the Arvizo family should be tape -- videotaped and whether or not that videotape should be included in a commercial production to be aired on television?

A. I was told that they were going to be videotaped, and it would have been by David and/or Ronald. And I instructed Brad to go to the videotaping and to remain there until he got a copy of the videotape.

Q. Were you consulted at any time by any employee of Michael Jackson as to whether or not waivers would be necessary for such a thing?

A. No.

Q. Were you consulted by anybody employed by Michael Jackson on the question of whether or not any member of the Arvizo family should be compensated for their involvement in this tape?

A. I was told that they wanted to be compensated for the tape.

Q. All right. And did you tell -- who was that who told you that?

A. As I sit here, I would just be guessing. I know that I was told that they wanted to be compensated for the tape.

Q. And did you tell that person that that would be an appropriate thing to do, since it was a commercial interest?

A. No. I don’t think I did -- had anything to do with it. In fact, I think that that was dealt with -- all of the licensing and everything having to do with the rebuttal was handled by, I think, David and Schaffel.

Q. At the time of the conversation with this person about them wanting to be compensated for this tape, did you ask that person if the Arvizo family was still staying at Neverland Ranch?

A. I don’t remember if I did.

Q. Do you know if you told that person that it was not a good idea for these people to be associating with Michael Jackson?

A. Well, I know that I had that conversation.

Q. With whom?

A. I’m sure I’ve had it with Brad. I’m sure I’ve had it with Ronald. And I’m positive that at one point I had that conversation with David.

Q. With who?

A. David LeGrand.

Q. With David LeGrand.

Did any of them tell you that was difficult to do because Mr. Jackson enjoyed sleeping with Gavin Arvizo?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Assumes facts not in evidence; argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: No. Nobody told me that.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: When did you first learn that there was, in fact, a succession of young boys that had been sleeping with Michael Jackson over the last 15 years?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Misstates the evidence; argumentative; no foundation; move to strike.

THE COURT: Argumentative; sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you ever learn about Brett Barnes?

A. Doesn’t ring a bell.

Q. Did you ever learn about Jordie Chandler?

A. The same person you asked me about earlier --

Q. Yes.

A. -- from '93, yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Asked and answered.

MR. ZONEN: All right.

THE COURT: Just a moment.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: And in the process of investigating --

THE COURT: Just a moment. I'm ruling on an objection here.

MR. ZONEN: I'm sorry. I thought you had.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you ever determine whether or not Jordie Chandler had spent many consecutive nights in bed with Michael Jackson?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Beyond the scope; no foundation; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you make any investigation into any of the allegations against Michael Jackson that occurred back in 1993 and prior to '93?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Beyond the scope; no foundation; argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Over the break I was given the written waiver, and the written waiver was up through --

BAILIFF CORTEZ: Microphone, sir.

THE WITNESS: The written waiver was up through the time of arrest. To answer that, I would have to go beyond that.

THE COURT: I didn't understand that the waiver was limited.

MR. ZONEN: Nor did I.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, Your Honor. If I didn't say that, I meant to. We were going to limit it until up to the time of Mr. Jackson's arrest.

THE COURT: That's not what you informed all of us. Take the jury out, please.

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: Counsel, you didn’t inform Mr. Geragos, myself, or anyone else in the courtroom that there was anything other than a waiver of the attorney-client privilege. You didn’t indicate there was any limitations on that waiver.

MR. MESEREAU: That’s my mistake, Your Honor. I was thinking in terms of the period, relevant time period, not after the arrest, the time he was involved with Mr. Konitzer, Dieter, people like that. That’s -- that’s my mistake, and I apologize. I didn’t think anything was relevant after the arrest.

THE COURT: They can’t hear you talking back there.

MR. MESEREAU: I didn’t think anything was relevant after the arrest. And I should have been clear about that. That’s my mistake.

THE COURT: Well, I consider you’ve made a total, complete waiver on the record. You know, I’m not going to allow you to give with one hand and take away with the other.
